This is an injunctive proceeding instituted by plaintiff to enjoin and restrain defendants from prosecuting suit against it in the state of Kansas by attachment, and the garnishment of debts due it by various of their customers and debtors in that state, the plaintiff and defendants being residents of this state. From a judgment for defendants on demurrer, plaintiff took the case to the Kansas City court of appeals by writ of error, where the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed in an opinion by Smith, P. J. The case was then certified to this court because of a conflict in the opinion with the decisions of the St. Louis court of appeals in Keating v. American Refrigerator Co. 32 Mo. App. 293; Green's Bank v. Wickham, 23 Mo. App. 663; Fiedler v. Jessup, 24 Mo. App. 91. The opinion in this case is reported in 54 Mo. App. 147. The statement of facts, and that part of the opinion necessary to a disposition of the case by this court, are as follows: "The petition in this case, which is for an injunction, alleged that both plaintiff and defendants were business corporations organized and existing under the statutes of this state. It was further alleged that the defendants had sued the plaintiff by attachment in one of the courts of the state of Kansas, and had procured the process of garnishment in said suit to be served upon certain debtors of the plaintiff, who were its customers, and had become indebted to it for merchandise sold by it to them in this state where such indebtedness, by the terms of the sale of such merchandise for which it was incurred, was made payable; that the plaintiff here, who was the defendant in the attachment suit, was notified thereof by publication, and that judgment had been severally pronounced against the defendant and the garnishees therein. The petition fails to disclose the nature of the claim upon which the attachment proceedings were grounded. It appears that the plaintiff is a solvent corporation, and that the defendants are about to take steps to compel, by execution, the garnishees, to satisfy the amount of the judgments against them; that the garnishees, who are plaintiff's customers, are in great danger of having to pay their indebtedness to plaintiff twice, which would frustrate the trade relations between the former and the latter, to the great injury of the latter, etc. The prayer was that defendants be enjoined and restrained from enforcing and collecting the judgments against plaintiff and the garnishees, etc. The defendants interposed a demurrer to the petition, on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The court sustained the demurrer, and, the plaintiff electing to abide by its petition, judgment was given accordingly. The plaintiff's insistence is that the proceedings of the Kansas court are void for want of jurisdiction, for the reason that the debts garnished had no situs in that state, and that consequently they were not liable to be attached there. Contracts respecting personal property and debts are now universally treated as having no situs or locality, and they follow the owner in point of right. They are deemed to be in the place and are disposed of by the law of the domicile of the owner, wherever, in point of fact, they may be situate, in accordance with the maxim, 'mobilia non habent situm.' Story, Conf. L. §§ 362, 399; State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 820, 21 L. ed. 187; Renier v. Hurlbut, 81 Wis. 24, 14 L. R. A. 562; Wallace v. McConnell, 88 U. S. 18 Pet. 186, 10 L. ed. 95; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet, 182 U. S. 485, 83 L. ed. 402; American Bank v. Rollins, 99 Mass. 818; Troubridge v. Means, 5 Ark. 185, 89 Am. Dec. 868.

It has been ruled, in effect, that a debt, without reference to where payable, is deemed attached to the person of the owner, so as to have its situs at his domicile; yet this fiction always yields to laws for attaching the property of a nonresident, because such laws necessarily assume that the property has a situs distinct from the owner's domicile. Whenever the creditor might maintain a suit to recover the debt, there it may be attached as his property, provided the laws of such place authorize it. Harvey v. Great Northern R. Co. 50 Minn. 405, 17 L. R. A. 84; Nichols v. Hooper, 61 Vt. 295; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Orans, 102 Ill. 258, 40 Am. Rep. 581; Berry Bros. v. Davis, 77 Tex. 191; Wabash R. Co. v. Dougan, 142 Ill. 248; Boyd v. Vanderbilt Ins. Co. 90 Tenn. 212; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 81 27 L. R. A.

Kan. 180, 47 Am. Rep. 497, and cases there cited; Pitnpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592. According to the rulings in the cases just cited, it would seem quite obvious that the Kansas court had the requisite jurisdiction to impound the plaintiff's credits there by the attachment proceedings. And this doctrine seems just and reasonable; for, if the defendant cannot reach the plaintiff's credit by the attachment process in Kansas because they have a situs in this state, he cannot reach them in this state, because there can be no service of notice had on the garnishees in this state, so that it results that plaintiff's credits cannot be attached at all. But we are confronted with contrary rulings of the St. Louis court of appeals, to the effect that the situs of the debt is the place where the debtor resides, unless the debt by the terms of the contract is made payable elsewhere, and in the latter event such situs is at the place where the debt is payable. Keating v. American Refrigerator Co. 82 Mo. App. 298; Green's Bank v. Wickham, 28 Mo. App. 663; Fielder v. Jessup, 24 Mo. App. 91. And to the exception to the rule, as indicated by the italicized words thereof, we cannot agree, for the reasons already stated. We think the rule declared in Harvey v. Great Northern R. Co., and the other cases cited which are in accord with it, will better subserve interstate trade and business relations than that embraced in the foregoing exception."

That part of the opinion of the Kansas City court of appeals herein quoted is adopted as the opinion of this court, being, as we think, supported by reason and the weight of authority.

All concur.

George S. DRAKE et al., Repts.,

v.

Gerard A. CRANE et al., Appts.

(.....Mo.....)

A donation from trust funds to aid in building a hotel when this is necessary to secure its location near real property belonging to the trust estate, the value of which will be largely enhanced thereby, is not beyond the power of trustees under a will where it creates a trust to continue until the death of all of certain annuitants and of testator's children and of his grandchildren living at his death, after which the estate is to be divided among his descendants then living, and which provides after paying certain annuities for a division of three fourths of the net income between testator's children, and for a reserve fund to be made of the remaining one fourth as security against losses by shrinkage, and where the trustees can pay the subscription from the reserve fund without disabling the performance of other provisions with respect to that fund, and the will expressly empowers them to invest and reinvest this fund, as well as to do all that the testator could lawfully do if living with respect to a part of the real estate and the management thereof, and the investing and reinvesting of the proceeds thereof.

NOTE.—The above case seems to be a novel one. While the doctrine which approves a donation of trust property is a dangerous one, it is applied in the above case to peculiar facts which the court regards as showing that the so-called donation was in fact a profitable investment.

(March 5, 1895.)

APPPEAL by part of the defendants from a judgment of the St. Louis Circuit Court in favor of plaintiffs in a proceeding brought to obtain a construction of the will of Gerard B. Allen, deceased, which would permit the trustees to subscribe part of the trust property for the erection of a hotel in the city of St. Louis. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Everett W. Pattison and John F. Green, for appellants:

The power of the court, sitting as a court of equity, is to construe the will, not to make a new will.

Marshall v. Hadley, 50 N. J. Eq. 547; Adams Female Academy v. Adams, 6 L. R. A. 785, 65 N. H. 225; 1 Perry, Tr. § 460.

A court of equity can no more authorize an act to be done which is in excess of the powers conferred by the will than can the trustees do such act.

Missouri Historical Soc. v. Academy of Science, 94 Mo. 459; Ex parte Adameon, L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 817; Traphagen v. Levy, 45 N. J. Eq. 451; Griggs v. Veghite, 47 N. J. Eq. 181; Marshall v. Hadley, supra; Mullany v. Mullany, 4 N. J. Eq. 16, 31 Am. Dec. 238; Richardson v. Knight, 69 Me. 288; Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co. v. Glover, 90 Ky. 855.

The words "invest," "reinvest" and "manage" as used in the will, and in the former decree of the circuit court, are words of ordinary import, and the testator will be presumed to have used them in their ordinary sense, a contrary intention being nowhere indicated in the will.

Kean v. Roe, 2 Harr. (Del.) 103, 29 Am. Dec. 836; Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 231, 77 Am. Dec. 671; Sinking Fund Comrs. v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143, 38 Am. Dec. 438.

The words "invest" and "reinvest" ex vi termini import a placing of funds where the principal will be safe and will produce an income.

Neel v. Beach, 92 Pa. 226; Una v. Dodd, 39 N. J. Eq. 186; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 392, 8 Am. Dec. 248; People v. New York Tax Comrs. 28 N. Y. 244; Black, Law Dict. p. 567.

The uniform construction which has been placed upon like provisions in a will is that they impose upon trustees the duty to so place the funds of the estate that they shall be, first, safe, and, secondly, productive.

Kimball v. Reding, 81 N. H. 352, 64 Am. Dec. 383; Dickinson's App. 9 L. R. A. 279, 152 Mass. 185; Mason v. Bank of Commerce, 16 Mo. App. 275, 90 Mo. 452; Powell v. Hurt, 108 Mo. 520; Haydel v. Hurck, 72 Mo. 253; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Peckham v. Newton, 15 R. L. 321; Budge v. Gummow, L. R. 7 Ch. App. 719; Tomkinson v. South Eastern Railway Co. L. R. 35 Ch. Div. 675; 1 Perry, Tr. §§ 452, 456, 459.

The discretion vested in the trustees is not an unlimited discretion. They are bound to exercise such care, skill, and diligence as reasonably prudent persons give to their own affairs when seeking to reach similar results. 37 L. R. A.

Powell v. Hurt, 108 Mo. 507.

The words "as I might lawfully do if living," do not confer any additional power, nor extend the powers expressly granted.

Price v. Courtney, 87 Mo. 387, 56 Am. Rep. 458.

Messrs. Boyle & Adams for respondents.

Burgess, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit instituted by the plaintiffs, trustees under the will of Gerard B. Allen deceased, against all the parties interested therein to obtain a construction of said will. The will devised all the testator's real property to the trustees named in the will, with certain powers therein mentioned. Among other powers given the trustees by the will were the following:

"To enter into the possession thereof, immediately after my death, collect the rents, with full power, subject to the limitations hereinafter imposed, to sell, lease, manage, and dispose of the same, and to invest and re-invest the proceeds of the sale thereof, and to do all and singular with respect to said real estate and the management thereof, and the investing and re-investing the proceeds of sales thereof, as I might lawfully do if living.

"2. My said trustees shall have no power to sell the real estate to me belonging, which is situated in the limits bounded by Walnut street on the south, Ashley street on the north, so far west as Ashley street extends and then Biddle street on the north, Twelfth street on the west, and the Mississippi river on the east.

"All the real estate in the second item of the seventh clause of my will being in the city of St. Louis and state of Missouri.

"3. All my real estate, wherever situated, and not herein disposed of otherwise, except mentioned in the last preceding item (item 2 of seventh clause) I give my said trustees full power to sell, lease, incumber or improve."

Then, after providing for the payment of certain annuities out of such rents, he directs as follows:—

"This trust shall cease on the happening of the three following events, to wit:—

"First, the death of the last surviving life annuitant mentioned herein; second, the death of the last survivor of my three children, Mary Frances Crane, George L. Allen, and Grace Dickson; and third, the death of the last survivor of my grandchildren living at the time of my death, by my said three children, Mary F. Crane, George L. Allen, and Grace Dickson.

"During the existence of this trust, from the time of my death until its termination by the happening of the three events as above provided, the net rents, issues, and profits arising from this trust estate, after paying taxes, insurance, for repairs and improvements, and the life annuities above mentioned, shall be annually divided into two portions, one of which shall consist of twenty-five per cent, as near as may be, of said net rents, to be called a reserve fund, and the other shall consist of the remaining seventy-five per cent of said net rents, to be called the surplus fund. The said reserve fund my said trustees shall retain to guard against losses by shrinkage, or other contingencies, and they shall invest and re-invest the same from time to time, until the termination of this trust, and out of said reserve fund they may, if their judgment so approve, make advances from time to time, to any one or more of the male descendants of my said three children, Mary F. Crane, George L. Allen, and Grace Dickson, after said male descendants shall have arrived at the age of twenty-five years and given satisfactory evidence of industry, general morality, business habits and ability, to enable them to embark in business. And in like manner, should any of the female descendants of my said three children marry, then said trustees may make reasonable advances to said females so marrying to enable their husbands, if they have given satisfactory evidence of industry, general morality, business-like habits and ability, to embark in business or place the same in trust for the sole use and benefit of said female descendant so marrying. The amount, however, of advances thus made, to any one person, for such purpose, shall not exceed twenty thousand dollars. All such advances shall be regularly charged against the beneficiary, and equalized in the general settlement at the termination of this trust. From the time of my death until the termination of this trust as hereinbefore provided, I give and bequeath the surplus fund above specified, being seventy-five per cent of the net rents, issues, and profits arising from this trust estate to my three children, Mary Frances Crane, George L. Allen, and Grace Dickson, share and share alike, during their natural lives respectively."

Then, after making provisions in case of death of said beneficiaries, he directs as follows:—

"On the termination of this trust, at the happening of the three events as hereinbefore provided, all the real estate held in this trust and reserve fund, if any, on hand after equalizing the advances made therefrom, shall be divided, share and share alike, per stirpes, between the descendants of my said three children, Mary F. Crane, George L. Allen, and Grace Dickson, and if there be no descendants of either of my said three children then living, then the said real estate and reserve fund shall be divided equally, share and share alike, per stirpes, among the descendants of such of my said three children as having descendants then living."

A part of the estate vested in the trustees is denominated by the will as a "reserve fund" and it is with respect to this fund that this controversy arose. In 1888 the trustees filed a similar bill to obtain the same object that is a proper construction of the seventh clause of the will. In that case the court did construe the clause in question, and declared the powers of the trustee thereunder.

At the time of the execution of the will the testator was the owner of a large amount of real estate situate in the city of St. Louis, a large portion of which was situated in close proximity to the site of the old Planters' House, on Fourth street between Chestnut and Pine streets.

In 1892 a corporation by the name of the Commonwealth Realty Company had determined to construct somewhere in said city a large hotel to cost at least a million dollars. There was much rivalry among the property owners in different localities to secure the location of this hotel, and to this end they offered the company which was proposing to build it sums of money of various amounts to induce the company to erect the hotel in their respective localities. The site of the old Planters' House was one of the points the company had in consideration, but were unwilling to erect the hotel there, unless the property owners on Fourth street would subscribe a sufficient amount. That sum was fixed at $200,000 which was at the rate of $100 a front foot for the property on Fourth street, between Washington avenue and Market street. The hotel company had already received from the Fall Festivities Association a bonus of $100,000.

Of the real estate held by the trustees under the will, some of that which is on Fourth street is directly opposite the old Planters' House. The trustees were requested to donate from the reserve fund $100 a front foot for all the trust property on Fourth street aggregating about 225 feet. Doubting their power under the will to do so, they declined, but decided to apply to the court for instructions.

Two of the trustees Allen and Holliday (the other one being absent from the city) were then consulted and as a result of the conference with them a paper was drawn up in which George Allen personally subscribed toward the hotel fund the sum of $5,600 on condition that if the court should construe the will as conferring power in the trustees to make the donation he Allen should be released from his individual subscription. The other adult life tenants did not subscribe. In the same paper Allen and Holliday agreed to at once institute a suit to obtain a construction of the will and if it should be held that the trustees had the power under the will to make the donation out of the reserve fund, that they would at once do so and pay the sum subscribed.

The subscription paper begins as follows: "Subscription to the Commonwealth Realty Company as bonus or donation towards the building of hotel."

It contains the following language: "That they (the subscribers) will, each respectively pay into the said Commonwealth Realty Company, as contributions and donations to aid in the erection of said hotel building, the several sums subscribed for below and set opposite their respective names."

The hotel company accepted the subscription of George L. Allen and the promise of himself and his co-trustees to institute this suit, and proceeded at once to select and purchase the site of the old Planters' House, and with the erection of the hotel building.

After the site had been selected the trustees instituted this action and in their petition set out substantially the foregoing facts: "The bill alleges that the frontage of property belonging to the Allen estate on Fourth street is 235 feet. The petition further alleges that it is the belief of the trustees that the building of a hotel, such as contemplated, on the Planters' House site, would largely increase the real value and the rental value of the property on Third and Fourth streets belonging to the trust estate, and would be a potent factor in preventing any further shrinkage in said real estate; and aver that they "know of no other way of investing that amount of the reserve fund that would have so favorable an effect in keeping up and enhancing the rental and permanent value of said estate." The prayer of the bill is that the trustees have authority to subscribe $23,400, payable out of the reserve fund.

The answers of the infant defendants denied any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in the bill, and prayed that their rights be protected. They also set up the former decree as a full adjudication of the matter.

The court held that the will gave the trustees the power to make the donation, and directed that they pay the Commonwealth Realty Company out of the reserve fund, the sum of $23,400. Judgment by default was rendered against the life tenants from which they did not appeal.

The infant defendants who alone made defense are the grandchildren of the testator, some of whom were living at the time of his death, others have been born since that time. Those born since the testator's death are Allen R. L. Crane, Kenneth Dickson, and Isabel C. Allen, and are remaindermen. The case is in this court upon the appeal of the infant defendants.

The court made a finding of facts, which in so far as necessary for a determination of this case are as follows:

"And the court doth further find that said trustees undertook the trust aforesaid and are now acting as such trustees under the provisions of said will; that a large part of the real estate so devised is situated on Third and Fourth streets in said city and otherwise near to the site hereinafter described, for the location of a hotel, and that much of said real estate is situated on Fourth street in said city immediately opposite to said site.

"That for some time prior to the month of February, 1892, the value of said real estate last above referred to had depreciated, and the rents thereof had lessened and that a contingency hereby arose requiring said trustees, under the requirements of said will, to take some action to guard against such losses and shrinkage in values.

"That for some time prior to said month of February, 1892, the general tendency of improvements in the city of St. Louis had been in a westward direction, away from the location of said real estate so held by the plaintiffs as trustees aforesaid, and away from the proposed site of said hotel, and that thereby and by reason of the facts last aforesaid a contingency had arisen requiring said trustees, the plaintiffs herein, under the requirements of said will, to take some action to guard against the losses and shrinkage in the value of said real estate, and the rents and profits to arise therefrom.

"That at or about the month of March, 1892, a certain corporation known as the Commonwealth Realty Company determined to erect a hotel in the city of St. Louis, to cost one million dollars, and to be in every way of first-class construction and appointment; that it was believed by owners of real estate lying in different portions of said city, that the location of such a hotel near to their property would largely enhance its value and availability, and for that reason such owners offered to pay the Commonwealth Realty Company certain large sums of money, providing it, the said company, would locate its said hotel in near proximity to their property; that, among the localities under consideration by said company for the purpose of constructing its hotel as aforesaid, and to secure the selection of which the neighboring owners of property were offering contributions, was that known as the Planters' House site, situated on Fourth street, between Pine and Chestnut streets, in said city.

"That at or about March 10, 1892, property owners who had interested themselves in and offered contributions to secure the location of said hotel on said Planters' House site, refused to proceed further by way of competing with property owners in different localities, which were being considered by said Commonwealth Realty Company and which were competing for said hotel, unless the plaintiffs herein as trustees as aforesaid would make a contribution commensurate and proportionate to the real estate so held by them as aforesaid and located near to said proposed site.

"That at that time the said trustees, plaintiffs herein, had reason to believe and did believe, that the location of said hotel on said Planters' House site would be largely beneficial to their said trust estate and would stay the shrinkage in the value thereof and in the rentals therefrom, and would have a great tendency to increase the values of said real estate, as well as the rentals thereof; that acting on such belief and also believing at the time that some action on their part was then absolutely necessary in order to secure the location of said hotel on said Planters' House site, two of these plaintiffs executed a paper in words and figures as follows:

"St. Louis, March 10, 1892.

"The undersigned, having read the subscription paper signed by the Laclede Building Company and others, the general purport of which is to contribute a bonus for the construction of a hotel provided the same is located on the Planters' House site, hereby undertakes and agrees as follows:

"To subscribe, and he does hereby subscribe, the sum of ($5,600) five thousand six hundred dollars, on the conditions specified in said paper.

"The undersigned does also undertake, as one of the trustees under the will of Gerard B. Allen, to forthwith institute a suit in conjunction with his co-trustees, to secure a construction of the said will, and a direction that out of a certain "reserve fund" therein provided, the said trustees proceed to make the subscription and to pay the sum contemplated in the paper so signed by the Laclede Building Company and others. And the undersigned agrees to proceed with all reasonable dispatch to secure the service upon the necessary parties, and to get the decree above specified at the earliest possible day. And the undersigned believes and has been so advised, that the court will give the direction to make the subscription and to pay out the money by the trustees. In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand, at St. Louis, Missouri, this 10th day of March, 1893.

"(Signed) Geo. L. Allen.

"The undersigned, Samuel N. Holliday, being one of the trustees under the will of the late Gerard B. Allen, agrees to so much of the foregoing as relates to the action of the trustees under said will, and also believes, after a careful consideration of the matter, that the court will make a decree directing the subscription to said bonus and payment thereof.

"(Signed) Sam'l N. Holliday.

"Trustee under the will of Gerard B. Allen.

"In the event the said trustees be authorized to make, and do make the subscription above contemplated, the above subscription by Geo. L. Allen is to be inoperative.

"(Signed) Geo. L. Allen."

"That the paper therein referred to, as signed by the Laclede Building Company and others, is in the words and figures as follows:

"Subscription to the Commonwealth Realty Company as a bonus or donation towards the building of hotel.

"Know all men by these presents:

"Whereas, The Commonwealth Realty Company, a corporation created and existing under the laws of the state of Missouri, is about to erect a building adapted and to be used as a first-class hotel in the city of St. Louis, and

"Whereas, the undersigned subscribers hereto and hereafter designated as the parties of the first part, corporations, property owners, merchants, and citizens of and in the city of St. Louis, being desirous of securing a site, to wit:

"A parcel of land situated in block No. 101 of the city of St. Louis, fronting 230 feet four and one half inches on the west side of Fourth street, by a depth of one hundred twenty-five feet, bounded north by Pine street, east by Fourth street, south by Chestnut street and west by private alley.

"Now, therefore, this agreement made and entered into by and between the undersigned subscribers hereto, as parties of the first part, and said Commonwealth Realty Company as party of the second part

"Witnesseth: That in consideration of the sum of five dollars unto each of said subscribers, parties of the first part, as aforesaid, paid by said party of the second part, receipt whereof they do each hereby acknowledge, and in consideration of the benefits, advantages, and profits accruing to said parties of the first part and each of them, in event of the location and erection upon the property aforesaid of said hotel building, and in further consideration of the mutual promises of the subscribers hereto, said parties of the first part by these presents covenant and agree with said party of the second part and with each other as follows, to wit:

"Section 1. That they will each respectively pay unto said Commonwealth Realty Company, as contributions and donations to aid in the erection of said hotel building, the several sums subscribed for below and set opposite their respective names, said amounts to be payable in twenty equal installments of five per cent, each of said subscriptions to be represented by twenty promissory notes of said subscribers, each for one twentieth of their several subscriptions, payable to said Commonwealth Realty Company, bearing date July 1, 1893, and maturing in one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen and twenty months, after date. Said notes to be executed by the respective subscribers hereto and delivered into the custody of a trust company or bank of said city of St. Louis, designated by a majority in amount of the subscribers hereto, as soon as the site aforesaid is finally chosen for said hotel building, in trust, to be collected for said Commonwealth Realty Company as herein-after provided. If no trust company or bank be selected by a majority in number of said subscribers within thirty days from the final selection of said site as location of said hotel, then said Commonwealth Realty Company may nominate a bank or trust company of said city as depository of said notes, where same shall be payable.

"Section 2. Said subscriptions are made subject to the following conditions, to wit:

"First. That said site shall be chosen as the location of said hotel building, and in event that said Commonwealth Realty Company shall select another and different site therefor, all liability on the part of said parties of the first part and the said party of the second part towards each other respectively shall cease and determine.

"Second. That after the selection of said date for said hotel building and construction of a modern substantial first-class hotel building thereon of not less than ten stories in height and at a cost of not less than one million dollars, shall proceed with all reasonable dispatch, in good faith, to be completed within two years from the beginning of the building.

"Third. Each subscriber hereto shall only be liable for the amount of his own subscription and for no more.

"Fourth. After said site shall have been finally selected and said subscription notes delivered unto the trust company or bank selected in manner aforesaid, said trust company or bank shall proceed to collect said notes as they mature and shall disburse and pay over unto said Commonwealth Realty Company the proceeds thereof, in installments as follows: As the work on said building progresses, as rapidly as fifty thousand dollars shall be expended towards the construction thereof (and of which expenditure the certificate of the supervising architect shall be conclusive evidence) for each installment of fifty thousand dollars so expended in said building, said company shall be entitled to receive and said trust company or bank shall pay over to it, five per cent of the total amount subscribed by the undersigned until the full subscription has been received and paid over.

"If said building be not commenced within six months from the selection of the site, or if by the first day of the year 1894 the sum of five hundred thousand dollars has not been expended towards the construction of said hotel, then said trust company or bank, custodian of said notes and of the proceeds of same, shall return the same or such portion thereof as has not become payable to said Commonwealth Realty Company under the provisions hereof, unto the subscribers, parties of the first part, each receiving his or its own subscription or such portion remaining thereof not payable to said Commonwealth Realty Company.

"In witness whereof, said parties of the first part have hereunto set their hands and seals in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, this — day of —, 1893'.

"That said two trustees, George L. Allen and Samuel N. Holliday, induced the said Commonwealth Realty Company to accept the said paper as and in lieu of an absolute contribution; that on the strength of said paper other owners of real estate located in the neighborhood of said site joined in the offer so made by said Laclede Building Company and others, and as a result thereof the requisite amount of contributions were secured and the said hotel was located on said Planters' House site.

"And the court doth further find that said trustee George S. Drake, upon being informed of the facts aforesaid, approved the action of his co-trustees in signing said paper.

"And the court doth further find from the evidence that the signing of said paper and the engagement to pay the contribution aforesaid to said Commonwealth Realty Company was a necessity in order to secure the location of said hotel on said Planters' House site as aforesaid, and that the location of said hotel on said site was largely beneficial to the estate so in the hands of said trustees as aforesaid, and that the location thereof on said site had a direct tendency and effect in the way of stopping the shrinkage in value of real estate in the neighborhood of said site, belonging to said trustees as aforesaid and in guarding against losses by shrinkage in the rentals and income arising from said real estate.

"And the court doth further find that a contingency arose within the meaning of said will, requiring said plaintiffs, as trustees as aforesaid in the proper management of the real estate in their hands as trustees, to make the contribution aforesaid for the purposes aforesaid.

"And the court doth further find from the evidence that the subscription aforesaid can be paid out of the reserve fund provided for in said will, without in any manner disabling said trustees from conforming to any other provisions of said will, with respect to said reserve fund.

"And the court doth further find that the amount of money required to pay the contribution according to the true intent and meaning of said papers is $22,400."

It may be conceded that a court of equity has no power to make a new will for a testator, and that the extent of its power is to construe the will as presented to it. And further, that such court can no more authorize an act to be done which is in excess of the powers conferred by the will than can the trustees therein do such act. As to these propositions there is or can be no question or doubt.

The questions to be determined in this case are, as to the duties and powers of the trustees as expressed by the testator in the will with respect thereto, to be gathered from the whole instrument, and not alone from some particular word, expression, or clause of the will, and, in passing upon these questions the condition of the property disposed of by the will, and surrounding circumstances, as well also as the scope and context of the will in all its provisions, may be taken into consideration. Noe v. Kern, 98 Mo. 867; Long v. Timms, 107 No. 512; Schorr v. Carter, 120 Mo. 418.

The will provides that the reserve fund shall be retained by the trustees in the will to guard against loss by shrinkage or other contingencies, and that they shall invest and re-invest the same from time to time until the termination of the trust.

Technical words when used in a will are to be interpreted in their established legal sense, and as the testator is presumed to employ them, unless a contrary meaning is plainly intended by the context of the will. Kean v. Roe, 2 Harr. (Del.) 103, 29 Am. Dec. 886; Sims v. Conger, 39 Miss. 281, 77 Am. Dec. 671. Invest has been judicially defined as follows, "To surround with or place in, as property in business." "To place so that it will be safe and yield a profit. It is commonly understood as giving money for some other property." Neel v. Beach, 92 Pa. 226.

Investment: "In its most comprehensive sense, it is generally understood to signify the laying out of money in such a manner that it may produce a revenue, whether the particular method be a loan, or the purchase of stocks, securities, or other property. In common parlance, it means putting out money on interest, either by way of loan, or the purchase of income producing property." Una v. Dodd, 39 N. J. Eq. 173; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 892, 8 Am. Dec. 243.

To give the words "invest," and "investment" their legal meaning as thus defined in which the testator must be presumed to have employed them the trustees had no power under the will to donate to, or subscribe to the hotel fund any amount of money to be paid from the reserve fund of the estate, unless, a contrary intention is clearly indicated by its context, when construed in the light of and in connection with the situation and condition of the property of the testator and circumstances surrounding him at the time of its execution. At that time that portion of the city near the site of the old Planters' Hotel in which the testator owned large real estate properties, was being deserted by business, rents shrinking, and property rapidly depreciating in value. By this will he directed that out of the rents, issues, and profits derived from his real estate there be paid annuities to the amount of nine thousand dollars, and also to make provisions for his children Mary F., George L., and Grace during their natural life and to make provision for advances from time to time to the descendants of said children, and for that purpose he purposed creating a trust fund which would in all probability continue for sixty or seventy years. He did not want that part of his property situated east of 12th street, north of Walnut street, and south of Ashley street, sold or mortgaged, but wanted it kept until the expiration of the trust, then to vest in the descendants of his children.

His purpose was to secure income from rents, and to that end by the seventh clause of the will he empowered the trustees:

"1. To enter into the possession thereof, immediately after my death, collect the rents, with full power, subject to the limitation hereinafter imposed, to sell, lease, manage, and dispose of the same, and to invest and re-invest the proceeds of the sale thereof, and to do all and singular with respect to said real estate and the management thereof, and the investing and re-investing the proceeds of sales thereof, as I might lawfully do if living.

"2. My said trustees shall have no power to sell the real estate to me belonging which is situated within the limits bounded by Walnut street on the south, Ashley street on the north, as far west as Ashley street extends, and then Biddle street on the north, Twelfth street on the west and the Mississippi river on the east. All the real estate in the second item of the seventh clause of my will being in the city of St. Louis and state of Missouri.

"3 All my real estate, wherever situated, and not herein disposed of otherwise, except mentioned in the last preceding item (item 2 of seventh clause) I give my said trustees full power to sell, lease, incur or improve."

It will be observed that the first clause of the will just quoted is very broad with respect to the general powers conferred upon the trustees in that they are vested with power to sell, lease, manage, and dispose of the real estate and to do all and singular with respect thereto and the management thereof, and investing and re-investing the proceeds of the sales as the testator might do if living. It would have been difficult to have employed language conferring larger and more general powers upon the trustees, and where their powers are intended to be restricted it is done in apt and no unmeaning terms. To guard against loss by shrinkage the trust fund was created, not it seems alone from decay and the ravages of time, but to prevent from depreciation from any other cause, that might be in the power and foresight of the trustees in the exercise of that degree of care, skill, and diligence that reasonably prudent persons similarly situated give to their own affairs, and such as the testator would in all probability have exercised had he been living. The property on Fourth street was rapidly depreciating in value, rents falling off, business going west, which the trustees could stay, if not in fact restore this property to its former prosperous and more desirable condition, if they had the power under the will to do so.

The "reserve fund" was to be created from the net rents, issues, and profits arising from the trust estate which remained after payment of taxes, insurance, for repairs and improvements and the life annuities before mentioned, and to this end it was necessary that the rental property be kept in condition, and its surroundings, such that it would be in demand, and readily rented at fair prices. Had the trustees the power under the will to prevent the decrease in values, and increase the revenues, that would be derived from the rents of the property to be affected by the hotel enterprise, by subscribing to, and paying out of the reserve fund to the Commonwealth Realty Company $100 per front foot? The question is one not of expediency but of power.

We quite agree with counsel for defendants, and as abundantly shown by the authorities cited by them, in their brief that, where by the provisions of a will trustees therein named are empowered to invest and re-invest the funds of the estate a duty is imposed upon them to so place the money as it shall be safe and productive. Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. 259, 22 Am. Dec. 508. And "the investment of trust property should be made with a view of permanency, and not in a spirit of speculation." New England Trust Co. v. Eaton, 140 Mass. 532, 54 Am. Rep. 493; Emery v. Batchelder, 78 Me. 233; Peckham v. Newton, 15 R. I. 321; Kimball v. Reding, 81 N. H. 352, 64 Am. Dec. 333; Dickinson's App. 152 Mass. 184, 9 L. R. A. 279; 1 Perry, Tr. §§ 245, 456, 459.

While the subscription to the Commonwealth Realty Company for the purpose of building the hotel was in a sense an investment, the estate by reason thereof acquired no interest in the hotel property, but in consideration of the location of the hotel on the site of the old Planters' Hotel, the benefits, and advantages which would accrue to the trust property by reason thereof, plaintiffs as trustees proposed to subscribe, to be paid out of said trust fund, the sum of $22,400.

The increase in business, rents, and values of the trust property near the hotel which has already been constructed, as shown by the evidence, has greatly redounded to the interest of the estate, and evinces the foresight, good judgment, and management of the trustees, in their desire to contribute to the fund for the erection of the hotel. The result of the investment has been a direct benefit to the estate by way of increasing the value of its property, and the increase in rents, and as shown by some of the witnesses the best that could possibly have been made, but for which the hotel would have gone to some other point, and the trust property would have derived no benefit therefrom.

By item 2 of the seventh clause of the will it is provided that the trustees shall have no power to sell the real estate therein described, while by item 1 of the same clause they are given "full power to enter into the possession thereof, with full power to sell, lease, manage, and dispose of the same, and to invest and re-invest the proceeds of the sale thereof and to all and singular with respect to said real estate and the management thereof" as the testator might do if living, so that it seems clear that item 1 has no application to the property mentioned in item 2 which cannot be sold at all, while as to the property referred to in item 1 unlimited power is conferred upon the trustees as to the property to which that item has reference.

While the duty of the trustees to collect and disburse the income to the life tenants is no greater than their duty to preserve the corpus including the reserve fund for the remaindermen, yet the will provides that that fund shall be retained by the trustees to guard against losses by shrinkage or other contingencies, and that they shall invest and re-invest the same from time to time until the termination of the trust and out of said reserve fund to make certain advances, and if there be any of it remaining after equalizing the advances made therefrom it is to be equally divided among the three children named in the will. It thus appears that the trustees were vested with full power to use the whole amount of said fund if necessary to guard against losses by shrinkage and other contingencies, and in making the contemplated advances, in doing which it might be entirely consumed.

Our conclusion is that by the provisions of the will power was conferred upon the trustees therein named to make the subscription to the Commonwealth Realty Company, to be paid out of said reserve fund for the purpose of procuring the location and erection of the hotel on the site of the old Planters' Hotel and that the court below correctly so held; but it has been with much hesitancy that we have arrived at this conclusion.

It is claimed that the matter in issue here is res adjudicata.

That the former bill filed by the same parties was for the same purpose that the bill in the case in hand is for, that is to "construe the will of said Gerard B. Allen in regard to the powers of said trustees under said will, and among other things, in regard to their power over said twenty-five per cent net rents, called the reserve fund in said will." Upon the other hand it is contended: first, that the decree rendered in that case does not relate to the first source of power claimed by plaintiffs under the will; second, that it does not deal with the power conferred "to retain the reserve fund to guard against losses by shrinkage or other contingencies." From an examination of the decree in that case we are satisfied that the contention of plaintiffs with respect thereto is correct, and that the matter in issue here is not by reason of the decree in former case res adjudicata.

From what has been said it follows that the judgment should be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

All concur.

Rehearing denied.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

George B. GUILD, Impleaded, etc., Appt.,

J. E. GOODWIN.

(.....Tenn.....)

The mayor of a city is not liable for malicious prosecution in attempting to enforce an unconstitutional ordinance which has not yet been judicially declared invalid, although opinion as to its validity is divided, if he acts in good faith in the discharge of his duty as he understands it and in the absence of any malice, oppression, or wanton disregard of the rights of the person prosecuted.

(March 1, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant Guild from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Davidson County in favor of plaintiff in an action

NOTE.—For rule as to liability of mayor for punishment or prosecution of accused person, see also Boutte v. Emmer (La.) 15 L. R. A. 63.

For liability of judicial officer for acts, see Austin v. Vrooman (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 128, and note, also Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) ante 92, and note. 27 L. R. A.

brought to recover damages for alleged false arrest and malicious prosecution. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Smith & Dickinson, Barthell & Keeble, and J. D. Wade for appellant.

Messrs. Colyar, Williamson & Colyar and J. W. Gaines for appellee.

Wilkes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution. It was tried before a special judge in the court below, without the intervention of a jury, and a judgment rendered for $1,500,—$1,000 of which was awarded as actual and $500 as exemplary damages,—and defendant has appealed, and assigned many errors, which need not be treated in detail. A short statement of the facts in the case is that plaintiff entered into a contract with the board of public works and affairs to construct a sewer in the city of Nashville. This contract, while dated April 14, 1892, appears to have been executed on the part of the board on April 18, 1892, and was in pursuance of a public letting to the lowest responsible bidder had before that date, and about April 2, 1892. The plaintiff secured the contract, and expected and intended to use convict labor in its execution, and there is proof tending to show that this fact was known to the board of public works and affairs at the time the contract was let to the lowest bidder. After the public letting on the 2d of April, the mayor and city council of Nashville, on the 14th day of April, 1892, passed an ordinance making it unlawful for any person to use or employ convict labor on any work to be executed under contract with the city of Nashville, under a penalty of $50 for each violation. Defendant Guild was mayor of Nashville, and, being notified that plaintiff was using convicts upon the work under his contract with the city, on 23d of April, 1892, went before the recorder, and procured Mr. Cleary, street overseer, to make the necessary affidavit that plaintiff was violating the city ordinance by working convicts in the city limits under his contract, and thereupon the recorder and judge of the city court, at the suggestion of the said Guild, issued a warrant for plaintiff's arrest, which was given to a member of the police force, who met the plaintiff, read the warrant to him, and cited him to appear before the recorder on the next morning, which he agreed to do. No actual arrest was made by touching the plaintiff or taking him into custody, and no bond for his appearance was required. He did appear, was fined $50, appealed to the circuit court, and was in that court tried and acquitted December 15, 1892, on the ground that the city ordinance was in contravention of an act of the general assembly, and hence was void, and gave no authority for plaintiff's arrest. Thereupon, November 16, 1893, plaintiff brought this action for damages for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution against the defendant personally and against the members of the board of public works individually and the mayor and city council of Nashville. On demurrer the action as to the mayor and city council was dismissed. The cause was tried, and resulted in the acquittal of the members of the board of public works, and in judgment against defendant Guild, as before stated.

It is conceded that the ordinance of the city under which the mayor proceeded was in contravention of the law, and was therefore void; but at the time these proceedings were taken it had not been so declared by any judicial tribunal, and defendant insists that he acted in perfect good faith in attempting to execute the ordinance as it was passed and stood upon the books of the city, and was actuated by no malice. The circuit judge, in his written opinion, found that defendant was actuated by no feelings of malice. It is said, however, that previous to this time the board of public works had considered this ordinance, and came to the conclusion that it was illegal, and had declined to enforce it, and so notified the mayor, and such is the fact. It is also said that the city attorney had given an opinion adverse to the legality of the ordinance, and that this had been sent by the board to the mayor, along with a record of their action declining to enforce the ordinance. The proof in regard to this opinion is quite indefinite. It appears that such opinion was prepared by J. C. Bradford for the city attorney, Anderson, who felt himself incompetent to pass upon the matters; but at whose instance it was prepared, or to whom it was given, or by whom it was called for, does not definitely appear from the record. The defendant states emphatically that it was not called for by him or given to him, and that he never saw it; but, on the contrary, that he applied to the city attorney for an opinion, which the regular city attorney, Anderson, declined to give, because of relationship to some party indirectly interested. The opinion of the board of public works had no judicial force, but was merely the expression of a divided board upon a legal question, which they could pass upon for themselves, but could not settle for any one else, and the record wholly fails to fix the defendant with the receipt of the opinion of the city attorney or the special attorney, whose opinion appears to have been given, and afterwards lost in some unexplained manner. It does appear that there was a division of opinion as to the validity of the ordinance, and defendant states that his only object was to test the law, and execute it if valid, and that he had no other motive. It does not appear that he took any part in the proceedings after they were first instituted, but merely set on foot the proceedings to test and execute the ordinance. It is evident that this void ordinance could not justify the arrest of the plaintiff and his prosecution; still it was the duty of the mayor, as the chief executive of the city, to see its ordinances enforced, and, so long as he acted in good faith, and with no malice or improper motive, he cannot be held personally liable for a mere error in judgment. If he took advantage of his official position to oppress the plaintiff, either from ill will towards him or because of any other improper motive, he would be liable. The doctrine is tersely stated in Kendall v. Stokes, 44 U. S. 8 How. 87-98, 11 L. ed. 506-512, by Chief Justice Taney, in these words: "A public officer is not liable to an action if he falls into an error in a case where the act to be done is not merely a ministerial one, but is one in relation to which it is his duty to exercise judgment and discretion, even though an individual may suffer by his mistake." In Bishop on Non-contract Law (section 787) it is said: "By the express or implied terms of an officer's authority he is to act honestly, carefully, and after the dictates of his own judgment, which, of necessity, being a human judgment, may err; therefore, when he has done what is thus commanded, whether the result is correct or not, he has exactly discharged his duty, and the law which compelled this of him will protect him, whatever harm may have befallen individuals." In 14 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 41, it is held that public officers called upon to act officially may be held liable for a malicious prosecution upon the same grounds as other persons. But malice and want of probable cause ought very clearly to appear in such cases. The presumption being strongly in their favor mere ignorance of the law or overpersuasion by others is not sufficient. While we would not be understood as going to this length still it will not do to apply the same strict rules of liability to an executive officer whose duty it is to see the laws executed if he makes a mistake in judgment, that would be applied to an individual who has no public duty to perform in executing its laws. To hold this strict rule would paralyze the arm of every executive and peace officer; and while such officer, for any wanton or malicious abuse of legal process which is set on foot for the oppression of a citizen, must be held liable to the same, or possibly a greater, extent than a private individual, still there must be undoubted evidence of malice, oppression, and wanton persecution, with the absence of all probable cause or excuse, to hold a public official liable for errors in the execution of his official duties.

We cannot concur in the suggestion that the control of the police and the enforcement of this ordinance against convict labor rested exclusively with the board of public works. While it was made their immediate duty to execute the ordinance, the mayor was not thereby relieved, as chief city executive, from his duty under the charter to see this as well as all other ordinances enforced. The management of the penitentiary is vested in the superintendent, warden, and other officials in immediate charge, and it is their primary duty to see the laws enforced; but the governor of the state, as chief executive, is not thereby relieved from the duty of seeing that the laws in regard to the penitentiary and its convicts are enforced. He can neither delegate this duty to the prison officials nor can they take it from him. The action taken by the mayor was not in the strict, technical sense a criminal prosecution against the plaintiff. As was said in Sparta v. Lewis, 91 Tenn. 874, it is not a trial between the state and defendant, nor on a presentment or indictment by and before a jury. But it is in the nature of a suit for debt. It is not a prosecution, but a suing in court to recover a penalty for the violation of a city ordinance. It in no sense imputed to the plaintiff any corrupt, infamous, or degrading act, or any moral turpitude, but simply a disregard of an ordinance standing upon the records of the city; and, while the warrant was in form an order for the arrest of plaintiff, still it was executed by simply reading it to him, and citing him to appear before the recorder the next morning, which he agreed to do. He was not taken into custody, was subjected to no indignity, was not required to go to jail, or even give a bond for his appearance before the recorder. He was not restrained of his liberty, or hindered in going where he pleased. He was virtually unknown to defendant, who had no personal ill will towards him. While this is not necessary, still it is a circumstance throwing light upon the question whether defendant had any improper motive of any kind in doing what he did. We do not mean to be understood as holding that this ordinance was valid. It has already been held to be invalid. But while it stood among the ordinances of the city the mayor cannot be held liable personally if in good faith he attempted to execute the same in the discharge of his duty as he understood it, and in the absence of any malice, oppression, improper motive, or wanton disregard of the plaintiff's rights; and we are unable from this record to find any evidence of such malice, oppression, or improper motive on the part of the defendant.

For these reasons the judgment of the court below is reversed, and the cause dismissed, at plaintiff's cost.

William BUSH & Wife, Appls.,

v.

Benajah McFARLAND, Exr., etc., of
S. T. McFarland, Deceased.

(.....Tenn.....)

The signature of a witness who does not make any mark on the instrument, or touch the pen which makes the signature, although written for him at his request and in his presence, cannot be sufficient as that of a subscribing witness to a will of real property.

(March 7, 1895.)

A PPEAL by contestants from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Williamson County in favor of defendant in a proceeding brought to set aside an instrument which had been set up as the will of Mrs. S. T. McFarland, deceased. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Baxter Smith and H. P. Fowlkes, for appellants:

A subscribing witness cannot have someone else to sign his name, and not touch, or hold the pen, or make his mark, and have no hand in, nor take any actual or physical part in, the signature of his name.

Simmons v. Leonard, 91 Tenn. 188.

One witness cannot subscribe for another.

Schouler, Wills, § 839; 1 Jarman, Wills, 218-215; 1 Greenl. Ev. 569a.

It was necessary that something should occur and that the subscribing witness should do some act (and that according to law), which, if remembered, would thereafter enable him to swear to the identity of the paper.

Simmons v. Leonard, 91 Tenn. 190.

Messrs. William House and J. H. Henderson, for appellee:

When an attesting witness is unable to write, his name may be written for him by another, at his request, in his presence and in the presence of the testator.

Lord v. Lord, 58 N. H. 7, 42 Am. Rep. 565; Pritchard, Wills, § 218; Jesse v. Parker, 6 Gratt. 68, 52 Am. Dec. 103; Upchurch v. Upchurch, 16 B. Mon. 103; Horton v. Johnson, 18 Ga. 396.

A party subscribes an instrument if his name is underwritten by another person by his direction, and by him recognized as his signature.

Ford v. Ford, 7 Humph. 96.

NOTE.—For signature to wills by mark, see note to Re Guilfoyle's Will (Cal.) 22 L. R. A. 370.

Wilkes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case presents an issue of deviseavit vel non, over the will of Mrs. S. T. McFarland. There was a verdict in favor of the will in the court below, and the contestant has appealed and assigned errors.

The only question involved is as to the attestation of the will by one of the subscribing witnesses,—James R. Barnes. The will purports to convey both personalty and land. It is admitted to be good and valid as to the personalty, but it is claimed to be inoperative as to the land, because one of the subscribing witnesses (James R. Barnes) did not write his name, nor did he make his mark, or touch the pen in the hands of the other subscribing witness, Battle, who signed his name for him in his presence and at his request, and in the presence and at the request of the testatrix. All other requirements as to request by the testatrix, and the other formalities necessary to make the execution of the instrument valid and perfect as a will, were complied with; the sole question being whether the attesting witness must make a mark upon the will to answer for and stand in place of his signature, where he is unable to write or sign his name himself, and requests another party to write it for him. Barnes was examined as a witness on the trial, and stated that while he could neither read writing, nor write, still he could recognize his name, when written, and he did identify the paper in controversy, as the paper to which he authorized his name to be subscribed. He made this identification both from the appearance of the name and the general appearance of the paper. The court was requested to charge the jury that if they found the paper writing in question was witnessed by one witness (Battle), subscribing his own name as a witness, at the request of the testatrix, and that this witness subscribed the name of another party (Barnes), at his request and that of the testatrix, the said Barnes not touching the pen, nor guiding the hand of the party signing the same, or making his mark, this would not be sufficient attestation to pass real estate. But this was refused. We think this was error. It has been held by this court in Ford v. Ford, 7 Humph. 96, that a person whose name is written by another, and who makes his mark thereto, is a good attesting witness to a will. This practice, however, is not to be encouraged or extended. 1 Jarman, Wills, 218. This case is apparently based on the idea that not only is the witness' name written by his authority, but in addition he takes a part in the signing similar to that where another person guides his hand, and he thus makes his own signature through another. But we are not inclined to extend the rule any further than it has already gone, and it has been expressly held that a writing of the name by authority is not sufficient unless it is accompanied by some mark or sign of the person who thus makes it his own signature. Simmons v. Leonard, 91 Tenn. 188. It is said this decision is a dictum on this point, the argument being that there were other questions involved in it, upon which the decision could have been and would have been rested. Grant this to be so. It does not make the holding and opinion in that case a dictum. The question was fairly and directly involved, fully considered, and deliberately passed upon. The fact that the decision may have been rested on a different ground, even though one more satisfactory, does not place the decision in the category of a dictum, if the question was fairly raised and duly considered and decided, as was the case in Simmons v. Leonard. See Clark v. Thomas, 4 Heisk. 422; Bates v. Taylor, 87 Tenn. 824, 825, 8 L. R. A. 816; Porter v. Lee, 88 Tenn. 791. Two or more questions properly arising in a case under the pleadings and proofs may be determined, even though either one would have disposed of the entire case on its merits without the other, and neither holding will be a dictum so long as it is properly raised and considered. It is said that making a mark thus "X," and touching the pen, are of practically no importance, and do not serve to aid the witness in identifying the paper in any way. This may be so, and it would be an argument against allowing marksmen to be attesting witnesses at all; but this is not the question before us, that having been decided in Ford v. Ford, and recognized in Simmons v. Leonard. But the witness must make some kind of mark upon the instrument, in order to make it his signature, and in place of his signature.

The judgment must be reversed and remanded, and the costs will be paid out of the estate.

NASHVILLE TRUST CO.

v.

J. C. SMYTHE et al.,

C. L. S. CROWNINSHIELD et al., Petitioners, Appts.

(.....Tenn.....)

1. The whole or any part of the mortgage or vendor's lien which secures negotiable notes may be assigned to secure any part of the notes which may be assigned, whether they be the first or last maturing, or the intermediate notes of the series.
2. Bona fide holders of promissory notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien may hold the security as well as the notes unaffected by equities between prior holders and the mortgagor.
3. An agreement for preference in the security given to an assignee of a part of a series of negotiable notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien is valid as against subsequent assignees of other notes in the series.
4. Assignees of several notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien share pro rata, if there is nothing in the contract of assignment, or in the intention of the parties, to vary the rule.
5. The assignment of notes secured by vendor's lien is governed by the same rule as the assignment of notes secured by mortgage.

NOTE.—For priority of notes secured by mortgage, see also note to Horn v. Bennett (Ind.) 24 L. R. A. 800.

6. An assignee of negotiable notes is not a bona fide purchaser as between himself and a prior assignee of other notes secured by the same mortgage or vendor's lien, with respect to rights in such security.

(March 3, 1886.)

APPEAL by petitioners from a judgment of the Chancery Court for Davidson County, disallowing their claim to a preference out of the proceeds of certain property which was sold under a trust deed securing promissory notes; petitioners claiming the preference by reason of a contract made at the time some of the notes were assigned by the payee to them. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. S. Pilcher, for appellants:

A vendor of lands who holds a series of notes given for the purchase money, where a lien is expressly retained upon the face of the deed, or a mortgagee who holds a number of notes which are secured by mortgage, in assigning one or more of such notes has the power by parol contract to give to the assignee of such note or notes a preference as to payment out of the proceeds of the property, and the subsequent assignees of the other notes can take no higher rights than the vendor himself had.

Menken Bros. v. Taylor, 4 Lea, 446; Hicks v. Smith, Id. 459; Hill v. McLean, 10 Lea, 107; Christian v. Clark, Id. 630.

The right and power of a vendor or mortgagor to give a preference as to the vendor's or mortgagee's lien by parol contract, in the assignment of a part of the secured notes made at a time when the vendor or mortgagor is the owner and holder of all the other notes, is a rule of property in Tennessee.

Nichol v. Levy, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 433, 18 L. ed. 596; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 176, 17 L. ed. 520; Lee County v. Rogers, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 181, 19 L. ed. 160; Chicago v. Sheldon, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594.

The rule adopted in Tennessee is that the assignees of the several notes share pro rata, if there is nothing in the contract of assignment, or in the intention of the parties, to vary the rule.

Graham v. McCampbell, Meigs, 53, 38 Am. Dec. 126; Roberts v. Francis, 2 Helsk. 133; Smith v. Cunningham, 2 Tenn. Ch. 569; Andrews v. Hubbard, 1 Lea, 693; Ellis v. Roscoe, 4 Baxt. 418; Ewing v. Arthur, 1 Humph. 587; Wicks v. Caruthers, 18 Lea, 353; Bank of Bristol v. Bradley, 15 Lea, 279.

The rule that the contract or intention of the mortgagee, vendor, or other lien holder, and the assignee of one of the lien debts, will control the equities of the parties, is nowhere more distinctly held than in Tennessee.

White v. Blakemore, 8 Lea, 49; Whitby v. Whitby, 4 Sneed, 478; Gass v. Hawkins, Thomp. Tenn. Cas. 243; Perry v. Central Southern R. Co. 5 Coldw. 138; Mourey v. Davenport, 6 Lea, 80; Ruggles v. Williams, 1 Head, 141; James v. Fields, 5 Helsk. 394; Jones v. Jones, 1 Head, 108; Treevant v. Bettis, 1 Tenn. Legal Rep. 48; Williams v. Loos, 2 Head, 80, 78 Am. Dec. 191.

Menken Bros. v. Taylor, supra, is conclusive of the question involved here.
21 L. R. A.

Whatever may be the general rule on the subject, there can be no doubt that a mortgagee may assign part of his debt and stipulate that the assignee may have the prior right of satisfaction.

Hicks v. Smith, 4 Lea, 464; Hill v. McLean, 10 Lea, 114; Christian v. Clark, Id. 637; Bank of England v. Turliton, 23 Misc. 173.

In Tennessee it is expressly held that the agreement to give the holder of one note preference may be implied.

Christian v. Clark, supra. See Wright v. Parker, 2 Aik. 213.

An assignment of a debt and lien to secure it may be by parol.

White v. Downs, 40 Tex. 232; McAlpin v. Burnett, 19 Tex. 500.

The agreement made the lien in favor of the assignee superior to that of the other note.

Whitehead v. Fisher, 64 Tex. 642.

In assigning one of the lien notes preference might be given as to the lien and this might be by parol.

Miller v. Washington Sav. Bank, 5 Wash. 200; Jones, Liens, §§ 1119, 1120; Jones, Mortg. § 823; Penel v. Brookmire, 51 Ark. 105; Outlum v. Erwin, 4 Ala. 453; Graffan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 20; McLean & Jackson's App. 103 Pa. 258; Foley v. Rose, 123 Mass. 557.

The assignee of a mortgage or deed of trust does not occupy the position of an assignee of commercial paper, but takes and holds the same subject to all the equities that could be urged against it in the hands of the original owner.

Olds v. Cummings, 81 Ill. 188; Walker v. Dement, 42 Ill. 272; Oramer v. Willette, 61 Ill. 431; Haskell v. Brown, 65 Ill. 29; Shippen v. Whittier, 117 Ill. 232.

The privileged character of negotiable paper does not extend to a mortgage by which it is secured.

Oster v. Mickleby, 35 Minn. 245; Johnson v. Carpenter, 7 Minn. 176; Hostetter v. Alexander, 22 Minn. 559; Blumenthal v. Jassoy, 29 Minn. 177; Richardson v. Woodruff, 20 Neb. 133; Crane v. Turner, 67 N. Y. 437; Horstman v. Gerker, 49 Pa. 233, 38 Am. Dec. 501; Twitchell v. McMurtrie, 77 Pa. 383; Atchison v. Butcher, 3 Kan. 104; Shippen v. Whittier, supra; Fernon v. Farmer, 1 Harr. (Del.) 32; Edwards, Prom. Notes, 165; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 433.

An assignee of notes secured by mortgage takes them subject to any equities between the mortgagor and mortgagee.

Abele v. McGuigan, 78 Mich. 415; Harrison v. Burlingame, 48 Hun. 213.

Where one of several mortgage notes is assigned, the mortgage lien passes as an incident, but this incident is nothing but an equity.

Anderson v. Baumgartner, 27 Mo. 80.

Where the vendor or mortgagee assigns a part of the mortgage debt, giving preference to the holder of the assigned note, a subsequent assignee of other notes can stand on no higher ground than the mortgagee or vendor, because the latter can convey to his assignee no higher right than he himself possessed.

Menken Bros. v. Taylor, 4 Lea, 445; Foley v. Rose, 123 Mass. 557; Bank of England v. Turliton, 23 Miss. 173.

Messrs. Smith & Dickinson for Fourth National Bank.

Messrs. Granbery & Marks for the other appellees.

Snodgrass, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in this case arises under a bill filed July 30, 1892, by the Nashville Trust Company, as agent of Mrs. Martha M. Reed, against J. C. Smythe et al., to enforce a lien for the purchase money evidenced by negotiable promissory notes executed as consideration for certain real estate sold and conveyed on the 20th of December, 1890, by defendant Everett to Mrs. Marlin. There were 126 of these notes, for $20 each, except the last, which was for $25, payable by Marlin and wife to Everett. They bore interest from date, and matured, respectively, on the 1st day of each succeeding month after their date, until the end of 126 months. They were secured by lien expressly reserved on the face of the deed of Everett to Mrs. Marlin. The complainant alleged that Mrs. Reed became the owner of forty of said notes maturing on and after April 1, 1893. The bill was filed on her behalf and that of all other holders of said notes, and sought to sell the real estate for the amounts due on all. Other note holders came in by petition, among them Miss C. L. S. Crowninshield, as guardian of C. G. and Caroline Underhill, and James S. Pilcher. They alleged that thirty of said notes, the thirteenth to the forty-second inclusive, were assigned by said Everett to C. L. S. Crowninshield, as said guardian, on the 22d day of January, 1891, to secure the payment of $366.67, she, on that day, lent Everett; that at that time Everett was the owner of the entire series of notes; and that in the assignment of said thirty notes a preference was given over the other notes as to the vendor's lien to secure the same. The instrument giving the preference was in writing, and was as follows: "Nashville, Tenn., Jany. 22, 1891. Twelve months after date, we promise to pay to the order of Miss C. L. S. Crowninshield, as guardian of C. G. and Caroline C. Underhill, three hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-sevenths ($366.67), for value received, having pledged on deposit, as collateral security for the payment of this note, thirty notes out of the series of one hundred and twenty-six notes given by A. J. Marlin and Ella May Marlin for lot number 81 in B. F. Brown's subdivision; said thirty notes being numbers 13-42, inclusive, of said series, and preference is given to said thirty notes over the other notes of the said series as to the vendor's lien to secure the same. [Signed.]"

These petitioners show that the remainder of said sixty-five notes held by said guardian and James S. Pilcher were also held as collateral on said loan for $366.67, and that all of said sixty-five notes, after satisfying said loan of $366.67, were the property of James S. Pilcher; and they asserted priority for the thirty notes. Proof was taken, and it appeared that, at the time of the execution of this instrument, Everett was the owner of all the notes of the series, all of which were transferred by him before maturity, for valuable considerations, after January 22, 1891, the date of the assignment quoted, and no other preferences were attempted to be given. The assignees of the other notes had no actual notice that the preference had been given as to the thirty notes assigned to Miss Crowninshield. The property was sold, and the amount brought was insufficient for the payment of all the notes. The chancellor decreed that no preference should be allowed to petitioner Crowninshield, guardian, and that all the note holders were entitled to share equally in the proceeds of the sale. Petitioners Crowninshield and Pilcher appealed, and assign as error that the court did not decree that, as to so much as was due to C. L. S. Crowninshield on said note for $366.67, she was entitled to be first paid out of the proceeds of the property, basing said assignment on the following propositions of law: "First. A vendor of lands who holds a series of notes given for the purchase money, where a lien is expressly retained upon the face of the deed, or a mortgagee who holds a number of notes which are secured by mortgage, in assigning one or more of such notes, has the power by parol contract to give to the assignee of such note or notes a preference as to payment out of the proceeds of the property and the subsequent assignee of the other notes can take no higher rights than the vendor himself had; and citing Menken Bros. v. Taylor, 4 Lea, 445; Hicks v. Smith, Id. 459; Hill v. McLean, 10 Lea, 107; Christian v. Clark, Id. 630. Second. The right and power of a vendor or mortgagee to give a preference as to the vendor's or mortgagee's lien by parol contract, in the assignment of a part of the secured notes made at a time when the vendor or mortgagee is the owner and holder of all the other notes, is a rule of property in Tennessee; citing Nichol v. Levy, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 483, 18 L. ed. 596; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 176, 17 L. ed. 520; Lee County v. Rogers, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 181, 19 L. ed. 160; Chicago v. Sheldon, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594, and averring that the assignment of the notes in question, made January 22, 1891, when Everett held all other notes wherein the preference was given to Miss Crowninshield, guardian, etc., was a contract which, in effect, embodied the rule established in the cases in 4 and 10 Lea cited above, and the same was and is a rule of property as to all such contracts made since said decisions."

The question of the case, therefore, involved in this assignment, is whether the assignee of the last assigned notes, they being negotiable promissory notes taken before maturity without actual notice of prior assignment and lien contract, and for valuable considerations, took them subject to any equity between the vendor and vendee of the land or the prior assignee of the first notes assigned. The assignment of error treats it as though it were only a question whether the assignor passed his rights; and it is assumed, that being settled affirmatively, the subsequent assignee takes no higher right than the assignor himself had. In support of this assumption and contention, appellants lay down two propositions: That the assignee of a mortgage or deed of trust does not occupy the position of an assignee of commercial paper, but takes and holds the same subject to all the equities that could be urged against it in the hands of the original owner; citing Olds v. Cummings, 81 Ill. 188; Walker v. Dement, 42 Ill. 272; Cramer v. Willette, 61 Ill. 481; Haskell v. Brown, 65 Ill. 20; Shippen v. Whittier, 117 Ill. 282; Abels v. McGuigan, 78 Mich. 415; Harrison v. Burlingame, 48 Hun, 212; and that the privileged character of negotiable paper does not extend to a mortgage by which it is secured; citing Oster v. Mickle, 85 Minn. 245; Johnson v. Carpenter, 7 Minn. 176 (Gil. 120); Hostetter v. Alexander, 23 Minn. 559; Blumenthal v. Jassoy, 29 Minn. 177; Richardson v. Woodruff, 20 Neb. 133; Orane v. Turner, 67 N. Y. 437; Horstman v. Gerker, 49 Pa. 283, 88 Am. Dec. 501; Twitcheil v. McMurtrie, 77 Pa. 388; Achtson v. Butcher, 3 Kan. 104; Shippen v. Whittier, supra; Fernon v. Farmer, 1 Harr. (Del.) 32; Edwards, Prom. Notes, 165; 2 Dan. Neg. Inst. 432. These propositions will be found advanced and maintained in many of the cases cited, to which more could be added if necessary. They are based to some extent on a failure to discriminate between the case of a mortgage to secure a debt expressed merely in the face of the mortgage, or to secure accounts or other non-negotiable debts, and that of a mortgage to secure negotiable paper. Respecting those which hold that the same rule prevails where the debts secured are negotiable notes, they are based upon the theory that, although the mortgage notes are negotiable, the mortgage itself is only assignable in equity, and therefore the assignee, having to resort to equity to enforce his rights, is compelled to do equity towards the mortgagor, and allow him all the rights of defense he had against the mortgagee. Courts so holding make no distinction between mortgages securing negotiable and nonnegotiable paper. But this view, Mr. Jones, in his work on Mortgages (5th ed. § 838), says and shows is contrary to the general doctrine, and that the assignment of negotiable paper carries with it the security of the mortgage, and is unaffected by the equities between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. This latter he declares to be the generally accepted doctrine. Section 840. This has been recognized and declared by the Supreme Court of the United States. Carpenter v. Longan, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 813. In that case, Judge Swayne, who delivered the opinion of the court, calls attention to the distinction between the assignment of claims secured which were negotiable and nonnegotiable, and to the confusion which has resulted from ignoring the character of claims secured by lien or mortgage. He thoroughly explodes the fallacy that an assignment of such negotiable paper for a valuable consideration, before maturity, without notice, does not carry to the assignee a right superior to that of the assignor. "The transfer of the note," he says, "carries with it the security, without any formal assignment or delivery, or even mention of the latter. If not assignable at law, it is clearly so in equity. When the amount due on the note is ascertained in the foreclosure proceeding, equity recognizes it as conclusive, and decrees accordingly. Whether the title of the assignee is legal or equitable is immaterial. The result follows irrespective of that question. The process is only a mode of enforcing a lien. All the authorities agree that the debt is the principal thing, and the mortgage an accessory. Equity puts the principal and accessory upon a footing of equality, and gives to the assignee of the evidence of the debt the same rights in regard to both. There is no departure from any principle of law or equity in reaching this conclusion. There is no analogy between this case and one where a chose in action standing alone is sought to be enforced. The fallacy which lies in overlooking this distinction has misled many able minds, and is the source of all the confusion that exists. The mortgage can have no separate existence. When the note is paid, the mortgage expires. It cannot survive for a moment the debt which the note represents. This dependent and incidental relation is the controlling consideration, and takes the case out of the rule applied to choses in action where such relation of dependence exists. 'Accessorium non ducit sequitur principale.'" This case was followed and approved by the same court in the case of Kenicott v. Wayne County Supra. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 452, 21 L. ed. 819. The whole subject will be found treated and cases collected in the nineteenth chapter of Mr. Jones' work on Mortgages, before referred to. We do not deem it necessary to go into a more extended citation or discussion. It is sufficient to say that we have no hesitation whatever in holding that such assignee of such notes does stand on higher grounds than the assignor, both in respect to the note assigned and to its mortgage security. If this were a question, therefore, merely between the assignee of the note and the payor of the note who has paid it to the assignor before the assignment, there would be no question that the right of the assignee would be superior, although the assignor's right would, of course, be inferior, or rather the assignor's right to collect the note out of the payor would not exist. It remains to inquire later on whether this concession is a settlement of the question involved in this case. Before reaching that question, however, it is proper to consider the rights of parties generally under such assignments of debts secured by vendor's lien or mortgage.

Counsel for appellants treats, properly, the assignment of notes secured by vendor's lien as governed by the same rule as the assignment of notes secured by mortgage; the two being analogous, and governed by the same principles, so far as the question under consideration is concerned; but, as has been shown, he erroneously treats the question as though there were no distinction in the character of claims assigned. On the general subject, the law of the case is very fully cited, and the observation is just that there is, perhaps, no question on which there is greater conflict of authority than that relating to the rights of different assignees of a series of notes which are secured by mortgage, vendor's or other liens. There are three different views taken by the courts, and many decisions can readily be found to support each view. The supreme court of Arkansas has clearly set forth this matter in the following language and citations: "One class holds that the notes shall be paid in the order of their assignment (McClintic v. Wise, 25 Gratt. 448, 18 Am. Rep. 694; Cullum v. Erwin, 4 Ala. 452; Griggsby v. Hair, 25 Ala. 327; Waterman v. Hunt, 2 R. I. 298); another, that the notes should take precedence in the order of their maturity (Mitchell v. Ladew, 86 Mo. 526, 530, 88 Am. Dec. 156; Sargent v. Hove, 21 Ill. 148; Vansant v. Allmon, 28 Ill. 30; Koester v. Burke, 81 Ill. 436; State Bank of Indiana v. Tweedy, 8 Blackf. 447, 46 Am. Dec. 486; Doss v. Ditmars, 70 Ind. 451; Marine Bank of Buffalo v. International Bank, 9 Wis. 57, 64; M'Vay v. Bloodgood, 9 Port. (Ala.) 547; Richardson v. McKim, 20 Kan. 846, 850; Hinds v. Mooers, 11 Iowa, 211; Walker v. Schreiber, 47 Iowa, 529; Wilson v. Hayward, 6 Fla. 171, 190; Kyle v. Thompson, 11 Ohio St. 616; Winters v. Franklin Bank of Cincinnati, 38 Ohio St. 250); and a third class, that the proceeds should be applied pro rata in part payment of the several notes, irrespective of their dates of maturity or assignment (Donley v. Hays, 17 Serg. & R. 400, 404; Couden's App. 1 Pa. 278; Mohler's App. 5 Pa. 418, 420, 47 Am. Dec. 413; Perry's App. 22 Pa. 43, 45, 60 Am. Dec. 68; Grattan v. Wiggins, 23 Cal. 16; Dixon v. Clayville, 44 Md. 575, 578; English v. Carney, 25 Mich. 178, 181; McCurdy v. Clark, 27 Mich. 445, 448; Parker v. Mercer, 6 How. (Miss.) 320, 324, 33 Am. Dec. 488; Cage v. Her, 5 Smedes & M. 410, 48 Am. Dec. 521; Pugh v. Holt, 27 Miss. 461; Andrews v. Hobgood, 1 Lea, 698; Paris Exchange Bank v. Beard, 49 Tex. 363; Delespine v. Campbell, 53 Tex. 4; Wilson v. Egenbrodt, 30 Minn. 4; Penzel v. Brookmire, 51 Ark. 105.

The rule adopted in Tennessee is that the assignees of the several notes share pro rata, if there is nothing in the contract of assignment or in the intention of the parties to vary the rule. Graham v. McCampbell, Meigs, 52, 33 Am. Dec. 126; Roberts v. Francis, 2 Heisk. 133; Andrews v. Hobgood, 1 Lea, 698; Ellis v. Roscoe, 4 Baxt. 418; Ewing v. Arthur, 1 Humph. 587; Wicks v. Caruthers, 13 Lea, 353. This rule is in accord with the great weight of authority. Among the cases above cited, to which many others might be added, in affirmance of the rule as to equality of lien of note holders, we call special attention to Parker v. Mercer, 6 How. (Miss.) 320, as reported in 33 Am. Dec. 488. To this case, the editor of the American Decisions appends a most valuable and elaborate note, in which many cases are collected. The question and cases are thus stated: "Several notes may be secured by one mortgage or deed of trust, and, when so secured, may be assigned to different persons. The question, then, arising is, Which note is entitled to precedence in payment out of the proceeds of the security? The answers to this question are irreconcilable, and may be arranged under three classes: (1) Those which, like the principal case, affirm that the proceeds should be applied pro rata to the several notes, irrespective of their dates of maturity or of assignment, on the ground that each note, according to the proportion it bears to the whole debt, is secured by the whole mortgage, and continues so secured, whether assigned or not, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary: Keyes v. Wood, 21 Vt. 331; Pattison v. Hull, 9 Cow. 747; Phelan v. Olney, 6 Cal. 478; Donley v. Hays, 17 Serg. & R. 400; Bets v. Heebner, 1 Penr. & W. 280; Hancock's App. 34 Pa. 155; Cooper v. Ulmann, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 251; English v. Carney, 25 Mich. 178; McCurdy v. Clark, 27 Mich. 445; Wilcox v. Allen, 36 Mich. 160; Dixon v. Clayville, 44 Md. 573; Cage v. Her, 5 Smedes & M. 410, 48 Am. Dec. 521; Henderson v. Herrod, 10 Smedes & M. 631; Jefferson College Trustees v. Prentiss, 29 Miss. 46; Bank of England v. Tarleton, 23 Miss. 173; Stevenson v. Black, 1 N. J. Eq. 338; Page v. Pierce, 26 N. H. 817; Ewing v. Arthur, 1 Humph. 587; Andrews v. Hobgood, 1 Lea, 698; Smith v. Cunningham, 2 Tenn. Ch. 568; Tinsley v. Boykin, 46 Tex. 592; Paris Exchange Bank v. Beard, 49 Tex. 358. (2) Those which affirm that in the event of the assignment of the notes, or of any of them, the assignees take precedence over the assignor with respect to the notes retained by him, and that, as between several assignees, they are entitled to precedence in the order of their several assignments: McClintic v. Wise, 25 Gratt. 448, 18 Am. Rep. 694; Griggsby v. Hair, 25 Ala. 327; Saleman v. His Creditors, 2 Rob. (La.) 241; Barkdull v. Herwig, 30 La. Ann. 618; Waterman v. Hunt, 2 R. I. 298. (3) Those which treat several notes secured by one mortgage as having precedence in the order in which such notes mature: Richardson v. McKim, 20 Kan. 846; Wilson v. Hayward, 6 Fla. 171; Vansant v. Allmon, 28 Ill. 30; Punk v. McReynolds, 33 Ill. 481; State Bank of Indiana v. Tweedy, 8 Blackf. 447, 46 Am. Dec. 486; Murdock v. Ford, 17 Ind. 52; Isett v. Lucas, 17 Iowa, 503; Grapengether v. Fejerovary, 9 Iowa, 163, 74 Am. Dec. 336; Mitchell v. Ladew, 86 Mo. 526, 88 Am. Dec. 156; Thompson v. Field, 38 Mo. 820; Ellis v. Lamme, 42 Mo. 153; Wood v. Trask, 7 Wis. 566, 76 Am. Dec. 230; Marine Bank of Buffalo v. International Bank, 9 Wis. 57; Lyman v. Smith, 21 Wis. 674. "Of course, there may be special equities arising out of the assignments, or out of the intention of the parties as manifested therein; and, when this is the case, the general rule of law will be considered inapplicable, and the special equities will be recognized and enforced. It will be seen from the foregoing citations that the conflict of decisions on this subject is remarkable, that the cases falling within the first and those falling within the third class are so nearly equal that no decided preponderance appears. Those belonging to the second class are less numerous."

It will be observed that all these cases recognize the right of the vendor in the one case, or mortgagee in the other, to give a priority among notes secured by liens in a vendor's deed or in a mortgage, accordingly as he may contract with any assignee. This doctrine is well recognized in Tennessee.

Here it is also held that such an assignment is good as between the assignor and the assignee, and that it need not be in writing, as appears to be the general rule. Hicks v. Smith, 4 Lea, 459. In this connection, it is proper to say that to the extent noted, and only to that extent, have the Tennessee cases gone. It has not been established as the law of this state, and therefore, of course, not as a rule of property, that the transfer of a negotiable promissory note secured by mortgage, made in connection with contract giving to such assignee a prior lien, will vest in such assignee an equity superior to that of a subsequent assignee of one of said notes, who is a purchaser for value, and without notice of the former assignment and lien contract. The two cases cited in 4 Lea, and urged as holding that doctrine, were not cases of assignments to purchasers for value, but were assignments to pay pre-existing debts. So far, therefore, the question here presented is an open one in this state.

We return now to a discussion of that question. Without regard to conflict or difference of opinion in cases cited, it appears that several questions are definitely settled, the principal one with which we are concerned being that the vendor or mortgagee may by contract, in writing or parol, assign the whole or any part of the mortgage or vendor's lien to secure any part of the notes assigned, whether they be the first or last maturing or the intermediate notes of any series. It has been seen, also, that without respect to the question of the effect of the assignment of a portion of one note, or a part of a series of notes, secured in a mortgage (conditions involving other and different considerations), many cases assert the proposition that an assignment, when made of a single note, though negotiable and the entire debt secured, does not carry the equity of the mortgage security, so as to prevent an assertion of the equities between the original parties. We have, however, shown that the weight of authority is, and the clear rule of reason is, that, as between the original parties,—the vendor and the vendee, and the mortgagor and mortgagee,—the assignment of such a negotiable note by vendor or mortgagee may vest in the assignee a right superior to that of the assignor, the vendor, or mortgagee. There is, however, a different condition of fact, which requires the assertion of a different equity, between the subsequent assignee of one of a series of negotiable notes without actual notice of a prior assignment, with lien of contract priority, as between the two assignees, than that which would prevail between such an assignee and the mortgagor. It does not follow that because the assignee of one of a series of mortgage notes, which had been transferred and delivered to him by the mortgagee, and which had been paid by the mortgagor before such transfer and delivery, takes such note freed of all equities of the mortgagor, that he would therefore take it free of all equities of a prior assignee of another note of the same series, which had been transferred with a preference lien contract. In the first case the assignee's right would undoubtedly be superior to that of the mortgagor, because, as between these parties, the note itself is a single and perfect obligation. If the mortgagor had paid it off, he should have taken it up, and not left it in the hands of the mortgagee, with power to transfer to one who might be a bona fide purchaser before maturity upon a valuable consideration; thus enabling the mortgagee to give to such bona fide purchaser a perfect title, secured by the mortgage, upon which the purchaser had a right to rely, without actual notice of anything to the contrary, and without any condition of facts which would put him upon inquiry and charge him with notice. When the assignee found such note, so secured, still in the hands of the mortgagee, apparently unpaid, he had the right to assume that it was unpaid, and no duty devolved upon him, as between him and the payor, to make further inquiry. But such is not the rule if conditions of facts requiring its application do not exist, as between a subsequent and a prior assignee of one of a series of negotiable notes secured by the same mortgage. If the mortgagee holding any part of said notes proposed to assign them to another assignee, and at the same time to give to such assignee a preference over the lien of all other notes to the amount of those to be assigned, and the assignee has notice that the note proposed to be indorsed to him is one of a series of notes secured by the same deed, he is presumed to know the law that the mortgagee can give to another assignee priority of lien. As a matter of fact, he knows that the mortgagee either has the other notes in his own hands unassigned, or that they are out of his possession, and in the hands of others claiming them, with or without preference of lien. He may not know the actual fact that any such notes have been assigned, or he may not be informed of it at the time by the assignor; but the mortgage deed itself, securing a number of notes, gives him notice that all are outstanding. He is charged, therefore, with constructive notice of another prior assignment, if one has been made, for he can demand of the mortgagee the production of the other notes of the series; and, if the mortgagee cannot produce them, he will know that they either have or may have been assigned, and, being presumed to know the law, will know that they may have been assigned under contract giving preference of lien. He is therefore charged with constructive notice of what, upon such investigation, he might have discovered. If, for instance, he calls upon the mortgagee to know where the other notes are, and the mortgagee produces them unassigned, he could, of course, then buy those of the series proposed to be sold to him, without danger of subjecting himself to loss on account of prior equity. If the mortgagee failed to produce the other notes, but insisted that they were not transferred to others, and that no prior liens had been given, the assignee could, but only at his peril, take the notes proposed to be assigned to him. The mortgage itself was notice of the existence of the other notes, and his presumed knowledge of the law is that some of them may have been assigned with lien preferences. These conditions require him, so far as the equities between him and the prior assignees are concerned, to ascertain before purchasing whether any prior assignment has been made, and whether, in connection with it, a superior lien had been by contract given to any prior assignee. A failure to make such inquiry is at the peril of such assignee. If he purchases one or more of the series of such notes without such inquiry, and loses the benefit expected therefrom by reason of prior assignment of lien, it is his own fault. He was not, as between himself and a prior assignee, about whose rights the facts and the law require inquiry, a bona fide purchaser. Wilson v. Eigenbrodt, 80 Minn. 4; Moore v. Ware, 88 Me. 496; Phelan v. Olney, 6 Cal. 478; Keyes v. Wood, 21 Vt. 881; Roberts v. Halstead, 9 Pa. 82, 49 Am. Dec. 541.

Upon the theory, therefore, that the assignees of such of the one hundred and twenty-six notes as were assigned after the transfer of the thirty-two notes and prior lien to Miss Crowninshield were not bona fide purchasers without notice of such assignment, we hold that her equity is superior to theirs, and she is entitled to have these notes fully paid before any portion of the proceeds of the sale is applied in satisfaction of the other notes. The argument that this holding impairs the negotiability of paper is not well founded. The conclusion itself is based upon the fact that purchasers of such notes (parts of a series secured in a mortgage) are charged with notice that the others may have been or may be assigned under a special contract giving priority. Such a result may be avoided by mortgage drawn in such form as to prevent preferential assignments. Where this is not done, however, it is clear that the courts, under the rules of law established, are compelled to give these assignments effect according to the contract and intention of the parties.

The decree of the chancellor is therefore reversed, and decree will be entered here in accordance with this opinion. The costs of the court below will be apportioned between the parties according to their respective interests in the notes, and the costs of this court will be paid by the appellees.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

B. W. FLINN, Appt.,

v.

PRAIRIE COUNTY.

(.....Ark.....)

Compensation for expert testimony on behalf of the state in a criminal case includes only the usual witness fees unless further provision is made by statute.

(January 23, 1895.)

APPEAL by claimant from a ruling of the Circuit Court for Prairie County affirming the disallowance by the county officers of his

NOTE.—Compensation of expert witnesses.

- I. As to matters of fact.
- II. As to requiring examination or preparation.
- III. Cases denying the right to additional compensation.
- IV. Cases affirming the right to additional compensation.
- IV. Reasons given for the different rulings.
- VI. Statutory provisions.
- VII. By whom paid.
- VIII. The English rule.
  - a. In common-law courts.
  - b. In courts of chancery.
  - c. The modern rule.

I. As to matters of fact.

The professional witness in the discharge of his duty as a good citizen, is, like any other person, compellable to attend court in obedience to process, and testify as to what he may know, for the same statutory fees as other witnesses. Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 8 Colo. App. 177; Walker v. Cook, 83 Ill. App. 561.

As to facts within his knowledge, a physician or surgeon, or other scientific or professional witness stands upon an equality with other witnesses. Buchman v. State, 59 Ind. 1, 28 Am. Rep. 75.

And professional men are entitled to no extra compensation under statutes providing therefor when they are called to testify to an opinion founded upon special study or experience, or to state the result of scientific or professional examinations, where they are called simply because they happen to know facts respecting which any one else would be equally competent. Snyder v. Iowa City, 40 Iowa, 648.

37 L. R. A.

Thus, a physician called to testify as to the reasonable value of professional services rendered cannot recover from the person in whose behalf he was subpoenaed on a promise to pay him more than the regular fee allowed by law for attendance as a witness, as the value of such services is a question of fact and not of science calling for a professional opinion. Walker v. Cook, supra.

A physician employed professionally to attend an injured person, who in the ordinary practice of their profession acquire knowledge of the facts as to the nature and extent of his injuries and who are called upon to testify as to such nature and extent and as to their probable effect, do not testify as experts within the meaning of the Minnesota statute providing for the allowance of extra compensation to expert witnesses. Le Mere v. Mohale, 30 Minn. 410.

And surveyors attending court as witnesses are entitled to no higher compensation than ordinary witnesses, unless there has been a view. Lyon v. Wilkes, 1 Cow. 581.

As to the English rule, which is different, see infra, under heading, The English rule.

II. As to requiring examination or preparation.

An expert witness meets the requirements of a subpoena if he appears in court and gives impromptu answers to such questions as may there be put to him, but he cannot be required to examine the case and use his skill and knowledge to form an opinion, or to attend, hear, and consider the testimony given so as to be qualified to give a deliberate opinion on a question of science arising thereon without compensation in addition to claim to compensation as an expert witness for the county in a criminal case in which it was interested. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. G. Thwest and John D. Shackelford, for appellant:

No rule or reason, based on justice and common sense, can be given for requiring a man, as an expert, to draw on his fund of knowledge and information, which has cost him toil and money to acquire, without proper compensation.

The learning and skill of any professional man is as much his property and capital stock as is the store of the merchant or the money of the banker. Who would expect or even think a merchant or banker should be required to give up their property for the public good without proper compensation?

St. Francis County v. Cummings, 55 Ark. 419; Allegheny County v. Watt, 8 Pa. 462; Northampton County v. Innes, 26 Pa. 156; United States v. Howe, 12 Cent. L. J. 193; Webb v. Page, 1 Car. & K. 23; Re Roelker, 1 Sprague, 276; People v. Montgomery, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. 207; 1 Taylor, Med. Jurisp. p. 19; Buchman v. State, 59 Ind. 1, 26 Am. Rep. 75; Blythe v. State, 4 Ind. 525; Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 18.

Riddick, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, B. W. Flinn, who is a physician, was summoned to testify on the part of that allowed an ordinary witness. People v. Montgomery, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. 207.

Thus a physician called upon as a witness cannot be legally required to do any particular thing, as to analyze the contents of a stomach or perform a post mortem examination, by the ordinary process of subpoena and the payment of an ordinary witness fee. Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 3 Colo. App. 177, dictum.

And while a medical expert who has made a post mortem examination may, under the Texas rule, be compelled to testify as to the results thereof on a criminal trial though compensation in addition to that allowed ordinary witnesses is refused him, he could not have been compelled to make the examination unless paid for it. Summers v. State, 5 Tex. App. 374, 32 Am. Rep. 573.

So in St. Francis County v. Cummings, 55 Ark. 419, holding that a coroner may when necessary to ascertain the truth concerning the death of a person over whose body he is required to hold an inquest, employ a physician to make an autopsy rendering the county liable for a reasonable compensation therefor, the court said that "he may summon a physician to testify and compel him to swear to his opinion on a superficial view of the body, but cannot compel him to touch it, or do the more nauseous and dangerous work of opening it, because such an act is not within the office of a witness.

III. Cases denying the right to additional compensation.

A number of the American cases have adopted the rule of the principal case, holding that a professional witness who attends in obedience to an ordinary subpoena may be compelled to express his opinion on hypothetical questions or on general medical or toxicological questions as an ordinary witness is compelled to testify on questions of fact within his knowledge, and for the same statutory fees. Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 3 Colo. App. 177; Summers v. State, 5 Tex. App. 374, 32 Am. Rep. 573.

And that he is punishable as for a contempt for refusing to testify as an expert without being paid for his testimony as for a professional opinion. Ex parte Dement, 53 Ala. 339, 25 Am. Rep. 611.

And that the court in a criminal case cannot, in the absence of express legislative enactment, bind the county chargeable with the costs thereof by an order allowing compensation in excess of the statutory fees of ordinary witnesses to an expert to be called as a witness therein. Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, supra.

Thus the refusal of a physician sworn as a witness at a coroner's inquest to give his opinion as to the effect of medicines administered and to describe the decedent's condition and symptoms, is held to be a contempt for which the coroner can hold him to bail to answer and which is indictable as an obstruction of justice, but that the coroner cannot compel him to enter bail before a justice, in Com. v. Higgins, 5 Kulp, 269.

And in Gaston v. Marion County Comrs., 3 Ind. 497, it was held that a physician is entitled to no compensation for traveling and giving evidence in obedience to a subpoena at a coroner's inquest beyond that of an ordinary witness.

But see Indiana cases cited, supra, under heading, Cases affirming the right to additional compensation.

So in Attorney-General, Petitioner, 104 Mass. 537, it was held that a medical expert who attends a criminal trial and testifies on behalf of the defendant is not entitled to an allowance of additional compensation therefor, under Mass. Gen. Stat., chap. 171, § 24, providing that the prisoner is entitled to process to summon witnesses necessary to his defense at the expense of the commonwealth as the fees for witnesses are fixed by chapter 157, section 8, thereof, and no authority is given for a further allowance.

Nor can the expenses and fees of experts appointed in capital cases by the counsel for the prisoner without the authority or approval of the attorney-general be allowed under Mass. Gen. Stat., chap. 115, § 17, authorizing it to receive, examine, and allow accounts for services and expenses incident thereto, or under Mass. Stat. 1880, chap. 191, providing for the taxation of certain specific fees including fees of witnesses and none other except such as the court shall deem reasonable not therein specifically provided for, but may allow a reasonable compensation approved by the attorney-general to experts so employed with his assent to make investigations, give opinions, or testify on the trial. Ibid.

So in Faulkner v. Hendy, 79 Cal. 265, which was an action for dissolution of a partnership in which an expert accountant was employed to examine the books of the firm and render a statement of their condition, it was held that the expense of an expert employed by and who acts for one of the parties to an action should not be charged against the losing party as a part of the costs of the action.

But it was said that if the services of an expert are necessary for the proper presentation and determination of the case, he should be appointed by and act under the direction of the court in order to secure his fair and disinterested service, thus implying that in such case the expenses would have been allowed. Ibid.

And in Smith v. McLaughlin, 77 Ill. 596, holding that a physician subpoenaed by a coroner to attend an inquest and make a post mortem examination cannot recover therefor against the estate of the deceased person, it was said that a witness or officer of the law has no right to recover on a quantum meruit for services rendered under the require-the state, as an expert, in a criminal case pending in the Prairie circuit court. He obeyed the summons, but, on being called as a witness, he asked the court to allow him his fees as an expert before compelling him to testify. The court refused to make such allowance, and required him to testify. Flinn afterwards presented to the county court of said county a claim against the county for the sum of $150 for his attendance and testimony in said case. The court rejected his claim, and on appeal to the circuit court the judgment of the county court was affirmed. An appeal was taken to this court.

The only question for us to determine is whether an expert who testifies as such on behalf of the state in a criminal case may demand compensation in addition to the usual fees allowed witnesses in such cases. We have no statute authorizing the payment of extra compensation to experts. Our statute makes no distinction between different classes of witnesses. In the absence of a statute regulating it, the question is one of some doubt, for the decisions of the courts of the different states upon it are very conflicting. "In this country," says Prof. Rogers in his work on Expert Testimony, "the cases are nearly balanced, and the question must be regarded as still an open one, although the weight of authority rather inclines to the theory that the expert may be required to answer without ad-ments of the law. For such services he is limited to the fee or compensation fixed by the statute.

A physician called as a witness in Illinois who states the condition of a patient whom he had visited professionally without objection cannot then refuse to give his opinion as to the cause of the symptoms he had described unless a professional fee is paid or secured to him on the ground that a professional opinion was called for, as the opinion asked for was pertinent to the subject about which he had voluntarily testified. Wright v. People, 112 Ill. 540.

In Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 8 Colo. App. 177, the court distinguishes the cases previously decided allowing additional compensation to experts, upon the ground that in all of them the question was as to the right of the witness to refuse to express his professional opinions until he is paid a greater compensation than that fixed for ordinary witnesses, while in the case at bar the testimony was given without objection in reliance upon an order of the court for additional compensation, and the question arose upon presentment of the claim therefor to the board of county commissioners for allowance, but said that the authorities adjudging the contrary were much more satisfactory.

IV. Cases affirming the right to additional compensation.

The right of expert professional and scientific witnesses to compensation in addition to that allowed ordinary witnesses is upheld, however, in at least an equal number of the American cases on the subject, including those of the federal courts.

Thus, that a physician or surgeon cannot be called upon as a witness and compelled to give a professional opinion without compensation other than the ordinary fees of witnesses was held in Buchman v. State, 59 Ind. 1, 28 Am. Rep. 75; Dills v. State, 59 Ind. 15; United States v. Howe, 12 Cent. L. J. 133.

And that the refusal of a physician or surgeon to testify as an expert concerning letters of medical science unless he is first compensated by a reasonable fee cannot be punished as a contempt of court, in United States v. Howe, Buchman v. State, and Dills v. State, supra.

And in United States v. Howe, and Dills v. State, supra, it was held that he is entitled to his professional fee before testifying.

But see State v. Teipner, 36 Minn. 535, decided under the Minnesota statute set forth under heading, Statutory provisions.

So the district attorney has power to procure the attendance of skilled witnesses to testify in criminal actions in appropriate cases for a special compensation. People v. Montgomery, 13 Abb. Fr. N. S. 207; People v. Cortland County Supra, 39 N. Y. S. R. 313.

And bind the county court by an agreement to pay such compensation. People v. Cortland County Supra, supra.

27 L. R. A.

The test of the right to do so being the necessity thereof. Ibid.

Such an employment and agreement to compensate is authorized by 1 N. Y. Rev. Stat. (Birdseye's ed.), p. 732, providing for the allowance of all expenses necessarily incurred by him in criminal cases arising within the county and of moneys necessarily expended by any county officers in executing the duties of his office when no specific compensation is provided by law. Ibid.

So a verdict against the defendant in a criminal action is not affected by the fact that a medical expert attended the trial and gave testimony thereon under agreement with the district attorney, for a considerable compensation which was not known to the defendant. People v. Montgomery, supra.

And the amount paid cannot, in the absence of anything to show bad faith, affect the regularity of the trial though it might affect the credit of the witness with the jury. Ibid.

A physician or surgeon when giving his professional opinion in court does not occupy the position of a witness testifying to facts and is not embraced within the term "witness" as used in section 12 of the Indiana Bill of Rights, providing that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor. Buchman v. State, 59 Ind. 1, 28 Am. Rep. 75.

So the court will not compel the attendance of an interpreter or expert who has neglected to pay a subpoena unless in case of necessity. Re Roelker, 1 Sprague, 276.

And an allowance may be made for a reasonable number of expert witnesses as to the extent of gold deposits upon gold sought to be condemned by the United States under a statute providing that the attendance fees of witnesses shall be paid by the United States as a cost incident to the condemnation. United States v. Cooper, 21 Wash. L. Rep. 182.

An agreement by which a person qualified to testify as an expert is to be paid a stipulated sum for giving his testimony on condition that it enables the other contracting party to win the suit, besides his traveling expenses and the usual per diem allowance of an expert, however, is illegal and wholly void, and the expert cannot recover even his traveling expenses and fees as an expert. Pollak v. Gregory, 9 Bosw. 116.

V. Reasons given for the different rulings.

In Ex parte Dement, 53 Ala. 389, 25 Am. Rep. 611, the court stated as a reason for the rule that additional compensation should not be allowed, that the same principle which justifies the bringing of the mechanic from his workshop, the merchant from his storehouses, the broker from change, or the lawyer from his engagements, to testify in regard to some matter which he has learned in the exercise of his art or profession, authorizes the summoning of a physician or surgeon or skilled apothecary to testify to a like matter when relevant ditional compensation." Rogers, Expert Testimony, 2d ed. 486. In a recent case decided by the Colorado court of appeals, the rule was stated as follows: "The professional witness, in the discharge of his duty as a good citizen, is like any other person, whether he be laborer, merchant, broker, manufacturer, or banker, compellable to attend in obedience to process, and to testify as to what he may know, whether it be observed facts or accumulated knowledge, acquired by study and experience." Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 3 Colo. App. 177. This view is supported by the following cases: Ex parte Dement, 58 Ala. 389, 25 Am. Rep. 611; Summers v. State, 5 Tex. App. 374, 33 Am. Rep. 578; State v. Teipner, 36 Minn.

to a cause pending for determination in a judicial tribunal.

Summers v. State, 5 Tex. App. 374, 33 Am. Rep. 578, follows Ex parte Dement, supra, quoting the above reason and placing its decision upon the ground that the law allows no excuse for withholding evidence which is relevant to the matters in question before his tribunals, and that the administration of justice being a source of mutual benefit to all the members of a community, each is under obligation to aid in furthering it as a matter of public duty.

So in Larimer County Comrs. v. Lee, 3 Colo. App. 177, it was said that the authorities which adjudge additional compensation to be the right of the expert and which assert his privilege to refuse to testify until paid, are not in harmony as to the basis on which their conclusions are rested, some declaring that he is entitled to the extra pay because his professional opinions are his own property which cannot be extracted from him except for an honorarium which shall be satisfactory to the witness and others being placed on the ground that the time of a professional witness called as such has a value beyond that of a witness who is called to testify to a fact regardless of his business or his status.

And in Ex parte Dement, supra, it was said that the English cases on the subject only indicate that persons summoned to testify as experts ought to receive compensation for their loss of time and that it had not been adjudged in any of the cases cited that a physician or other person examined as an expert is entitled to be paid for his testimony as for professional opinions.

On the other hand, the rule allowing additional compensation is placed upon the ground that one's skill and professional experience are so far his individual capital and property that he cannot be compelled to bestow them gratuitously upon any one, and that services in the line of his profession or trade cannot be expected from him without adequate compensation, in United States v. Howe, 12 Cent. L. J. 193.

And in Re Roelker, 1 Sprague, 276, the decision was placed upon the ground that to compel a person to attend merely because he is accomplished in a particular science, art, or profession, would subject the same individual to be called upon in every cause in which any question in his department of knowledge is to be solved, and that the most eminent physicians might be compelled merely for the ordinary witness fees to attend from the remotest part of the district and give their opinion in every trial in which a medical question arose.

These reasons of Re Roelker, supra, were repeated in Buchman v. State, 50 Ind. 1, 25 Am. Rep. 75, and the further reason given that in giving a professional opinion a witness is performing a particular service within constitutional prohibitions against demanding particular services without compensation.

VI. Statutory provisions.

Several of the states have enacted statutes regulating the question of the compensation of expert witnesses and authorizing or restricting the right to additional compensation beyond that allowed ordinary witnesses, most of them conferring or upholding the right thereto.

37 L. R. A.

Thus Louisiana Code of Practice, section 453, specially empowers the court to determine, in a civil matter growing out of a criminal proceeding, whether the witnesses had been heard as experts and what compensation they were entitled to receive. See State v. Cole, 33 La. Ann. 1856.

And Iowa Code of 1873, section 3814, provides that witnesses called to testify only to an opinion founded on special study or experience in any branch of science or to make scientific or professional examinations and state the result thereof, shall receive additional compensation to be fixed by the court with reference to the value of the time employed and the degree of learning or skill required. See Snyder v. Iowa City, 40 Iowa, 645.

And North Carolina Act of 1870-71, chap. 129, § 133, provides that experts, when compelled to attend and testify, shall be allowed such compensation and mileage as the court may, in its discretion, order.

And Minn. Gen. Stat. 1878, chap. 70, § 8, provides that the judge of any court of record in the state before whom any witness is summoned or sworn and examined as an expert in any profession or calling may, in his discretion, allow such fees or compensation as in his judgment may be just and reasonable.

And R. I. Pub. Stat. 1882, § 15, p. 723, provides that in addition to the fees allowed to ordinary witnesses, persons summoned and testifying as experts in behalf of the state before any justice of the supreme court, trial justice, or coroner may be allowed and paid such sum as such justice or coroner may deem just and reasonable, provided that the allowance so made by any trial justice or coroner shall be subject to the approval of a justice of the supreme court.

Physicians or other professional persons by whom testimony is given are not entitled to extra compensation under Iowa Code, section 3814, when it is not made to affirmatively appear that they were called because they were professional persons for the purpose of testifying to an opinion founded on their special study and experience. Snyder v. Iowa City, supra.

The Minnesota statute leaves the matter of allowing or disallowing extra compensation to expert witnesses wholly to the discretion of the trial judge and an order refusing such an allowance will not be reversed on appeal unless there has been a most palpable and gross abuse of discretion. Le Mere v. McHale, 30 Minn. 410.

And applies where the witnesses are called upon to testify to an opinion founded on special study or experience in any profession or calling or to make a scientific or professional examination of some matter connected with the issues involved in the case and then state the results, and not to cases where a witness, skilled in some profession or calling, is called upon to testify as to facts within his personal knowledge, though he may have acquired the knowledge while in the ordinary practice of his profession, and though his professional skill may have enabled him to observe such facts more intelligently and narrate them more correctly. Ibid.

And a physician and surgeon on the stand as a witness cannot under that statute refuse to answer a question on the ground that his answer will be what is known as expert evidence as that statute 535; Allegheny County v. Watt, 8 Pa. 462; Northampton County v. Innes, 26 Pa. 156; Isval v. State, 8 Ind. 467.

The question has never been directly determined by this court, but there are dicta in some of the cases which seem to support the theory that the expert cannot lawfully demand of the county extra compensation. In one case it was held that an attorney may be compelled, without compensation, to defend persons charged with crime, who are unable to employ counsel. Arkansas County v. Freeman, 31 Ark. 266. In another case the court, in discussing the power of a coroner while holding an inquest, said: "He may summon a physician to testify, and compel him to has reference to an allowance to be made after the witness has been summoned and dismissed without examination, or after he has been sworn and examined. State v. Teipner, 36 Minn. 535.

So under the North Carolina statute one summoned to give evidence in a criminal action is entitled to extra compensation therefor. State v. Dollar, 66 N. C. 622.

And the compensation of witnesses in a criminal case who testified as experts may be fixed by the trial judge in an ex parte proceeding under the Louisiana statute. State v. Cole, 33 La. Ann. 1356.

In Indiana, however, the Statute (Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 504, p. 94) provides that a witness who is an expert in any art, science, trade, profession, or mystery, may be compelled to appear and testify to an opinion as such expert, in relation to any matter whenever such opinion is material evidence, relevant to any issue or trial before a court or jury, without payment, or tender of compensation other than the per diem and mileage allowed by law to witnesses, under the same rules and regulations by which he can be compelled to appear and testify to his knowledge of facts relevant to the same issue.

This statute was enacted since the decision of Buchman v. State, 59 Ind. 1, 26 Am. Rep. 75, and Dills v. State, 59 Ind. 15, set forth under heading, Cases affirming the right to additional compensation, and evidently changes the rule therein laid down.

VII. By whom paid.

The liability for additional compensation to expert witnesses would seem to rest solely with the party employing them.

Thus the compensation of experts called by a party in his own behalf cannot be taxed under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 823, 938, as costs, extra allowances, or disbursements against the losing party, as the liability is not incurred through any action of the court. The William Brantfoot, 8 U. S. App. 129, 52 Fed. Rep. 390.

And sums paid to expert witnesses as compensation in excess of the fees allowed by law to ordinary witnesses are not taxable under the New York code as "necessary disbursements." Mark v. Buffalo, 37 N. Y. 184.

And the compensation of experts properly and necessarily employed by the district attorney in criminal cases is a county charge under N. Y. Rev. Stat. (Birdseye's ed.) p. 732, making the county chargeable with the fees of the district attorney and all expenses necessarily incurred by him in such cases. People v. Cortland County Suprs. 39 N. Y. S. R. 313.

So in Louisiana where the trial judge in a criminal case has determined that certain witnesses therein testified as experts and fixed the amount of their compensation, the parish in which the case was tried is bound therefor and the judge has power by mandamus to require the payment thereof by the parish treasurer. State v. Cole, 33 La. Ann. 1356.

So in Faulkner v. Hendy, 79 Cal. 265, it was held that it is not proper to charge the expenses of an expert against the losing party as a part of the costs of the action where the expert is employed by and acts for one of the parties to the action.

In Smith v. McLaughlin, 77 Ill. 508, it was held that physicians subpoenaed by a coroner to attend an inquest and make a post mortem examination of a body cannot recover as upon a quantum meruit or otherwise against the estate of such deceased person where the statute makes no provision for the payment of witnesses' fees in such a case.

But it is to be observed with reference to this case that it belongs to the class of cases holding that expert witnesses are not entitled to additional compensation, and that, therefore, it would probably not have been regarded as recoverable from any source. See Illinois cases cited supra, under heading, Cases denying the right to additional compensation.

As to the English rule under which such compensation would seem also to be usually taxable as costs, see infra, under heading, The English rule.

VIII. The English rule.

a. In common-law courts.

The common-law rule as laid down by some of the cases was that a witness called in an action to depose in a matter of opinion depending on his skill in a particular trade had before he was examined a right to demand from the party calling him a compensation for his loss of time. Webb v. Page, 1 Car. & K. 23.

And that an expert witness was not bound to attend and give testimony as such upon being served with a subpoena, though as to matters of fact within his knowledge he might be compelled to attend and testify. Betts v. Clifford, Warwick Lent Assizes, 1866.

And that professional witnesses had the right to demand compensation for loss of time before the commencement of the examination, as otherwise inducements might be held out to influence their testimony by threats to withhold it. Clark v. Gill, 1 Kay & J. 19, 23 L. J. Ch. 711, 2 Week. Rep. 652.

In Webb v. Page, supra, the decision was placed upon the ground that there is a distinction between a case of a man who sees a fact and is called upon in a court of justice to prove it, and of one who is selected by a party to give his opinion on a matter with which he is peculiarly conversant from the nature of his employment in life, as without the testimony of the former justice must stop, but there is no such necessity for the evidence of the latter and therefore the party who selects him must pay him.

And in Turner v. Turner, 5 Jur. N. S. 830, it was said that the right of a professional witness to additional compensation was founded upon the fact of his being abstracted from his functions, the court holding that a barrister was prima facie entitled to the expenses of a professional man when called upon as a witness without proof of his being in practice.

And under the Statutes of 5 Eliz., chap. 2, requiring the attendance of witnesses in payment according to their calling of their reasonable costs and charges, regard being had to the distance of the places, a professional witness was held to be entitled to his expenses on the scale allowed to persons of his professions although not called upon to give professional evidence. Parkinson v. Atkinson, 31 L. J. C. P. 190.

In this case the court by Mr. Chief Justice Earl disapproved of the rule said to prevail in criminal cases that a surgeon called to give evidence which is not of a professional character is only entitled to the expenses of an ordinary witness. Ibid.

swear to his opinion on a superficial view of the body." St. Francis County v. Cummings, 55 Ark. 421. All persons who, by study or practice in an occupation or profession, have become skilled therein, and possessed of knowledge peculiar to the same, are, in law, called "experts." There is not an art, trade, profession, or vocation that does not have them. It is evident, therefore, that if all such witnesses are entitled to extra compensation when

But compensation for loss of time by scientific witnesses should be allowed, not according to the number of fees they may obtain in one day, but according to the average rate. Severn v. Olive, 3 Brod. & B. 72, 6 J. B. Moore, 235.

In William v. Peckham, 1 Brod. & B. 515, 4 J. B. Moore, 300, how- it was held that a witness attending a trial under subpoena is not entitled to a compensation for loss of time, although the party requiring his attendance had expressly promised to pay him for such loss.

And in Collins v. Godefroy, 1 Barn. & A. 681, 1 Dowl. P. C. 323, it was held that one subpoenaed as a witness cannot recover compensation for loss of time in an action against the party who subpoenaed him although such party has promised to pay for it.

This apparent conflict of authority was noticed and commented on in a later case. Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J. Ch. 208, 3 Jur. N. S. 232, 5 Week. Rep. 216, the court saying that the principle was that a witness was not entitled to anything for loss of time, but that he was entitled to his traveling expenses and expense of maintenance if kept away from home for some time, and that the amount of such expenses were to be ascertained with reference to the witnesses' position in life, a larger allowance being made to the professional man than the laborer.

But such compensation for loss of time to scientific witnesses, where permitted, was allowed to physicians and attorneys only. Severn v. Olive, 3 Brod. & B. 72, 6 J. B. Moore, 235; Lowry v. Doubleday, note to 5 Maule & S. 159; Moor v. Adam, 5 Maule & S. 159; Lopes v. DeTastet, 7 J. B. Moore, 120, 3 Brod. & B. 232.

And not to merchants and others. Lowry v. Doubleday, supra.

Or to merchants coming from abroad as witnesses. Moor v. Adam, supra.

Or to brokers attending court as witnesses. Lopes v. DeTastet, supra.

Though in Loneragan v. Royal Exch. Assur. Co., 7 Bing. 729, 1 Dowl. P. C. 233, 5 Moore & P. 805, upholding an allowance in the costs for the loss of time of a foreign witness necessary to the success of the cause who is not accessible by subpoena, it was said by Tindal, Ch. J., that there is no reason for assuming that the time of medical men and attorneys is more valuable than that of others whose livelihood depends upon their own exertion.

The table of fees framed by the common-law judges under 15 & 16 Vict., chap. 76, however, allows different sums to different witnesses according to their vocation and station in life. Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J. Ch. 208, 3 Jur. N. S. 232, 5 Week. Rep. 216.

And under that scale of fees the amount of the allowance for the expenses of a witness did not depend upon the value of the particular witnesses' time. Ibid.

Thus costs on the higher scale were required to be allowed in patent cases where scientific witnesses were necessarily called. Ellington v. Clark, 58 L. T. N. S. 818; Mosely v. Victoria Rubber Co., 57 L. T. N. S. 142.

And a solicitor who was summoned as a witness before the registrar of a county court in a bankruptcy proceeding and received only his traveling expenses was held entitled to recover against the official receiver by whom he was summoned for the amount allowed by the appendix to the county 37 L. R. A.

court rules to a professional witness. Chamberlain v. Stoneham, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 112.

And an attorney who was subpoenaed by both parties and remained in London eleven days in consequence of the subpoena of the loser who refused to pay his fees which were paid by the winner upon the understanding that he would pay back such part thereof as were not taxed, might after disallowance of a part of his fee on the ground that he had been told by the winner that he could go home at the end of five days and after his repayment of the amount disallowed, maintain an action against such loser party for the balance thus disallowed. Hale v. Bates, 22 Bl. & El. 373, 23 L. J. Q. B. 14, 4 Jur. N. S. 1106.

So in Duke of Beaufort v. Earl of Ashburham, 11 Week. Rep. 267, 13 C. B. N. S. 598, 32 L. J. C. P. 97, 9 Jur. N. S. 822, 7 L. T. N. S. 710, an allowance for the costs of an expert in searching for and translating old documents which related to matters in the case and were pertinent to the issue was upheld.

And in Clark v. Gill, 1 Kay & J. 19, 23 L. J. Ch. 711, 2 Week. Rep. 652, it was said that a medical witness residing in London was entitled to require for his expenses for attending to give evidence in London one guinea a day and no more. If the witness has to come to London from a distance then three guineas a day, and what is paid for traveling expenses.

And in Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J. Ch. 208, 3 Jur. N. S. 232, 5 Week. Rep. 216, an engineer was held entitled to one guinea per day while giving testimony.

But in taxing cost between party and party the master did not allow expenses incurred by scientific or skilled witnesses in qualifying themselves to give evidence. May v. Selby, 4 Mann. & G. 142, 4 Scott, N. R. 727, 1 Dowl. N. S. 708, 6 Jur. 52; Mackley v. Chillingworth, 36 L. T. N. S. 514, 46 L. J. C. P. Div. 484, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 273, 25 Week. Rep. 650.

Thus the sums paid to witnesses for inspecting, measuring, and valuing improvements upon lands would not be allowed in addition to the charges for the affidavit made by them. Murphy v. Nolan, 7 Ir. Eq. Rep. 493.

And a plaintiff would not be allowed for the time of scientific persons who had been sent to a distant place to inspect a building though he could not safely proceed to trial without their testimony grounded upon such examination. Bayley v. Beaumont, 11 J. B. Moore, 497, following Severn v. Olive, 6 J. B. Moore, 239, 3 Brod. & B. 72.

Nor should an allowance be made for sums expended in making experiments and compensating scientific and professional men employed in making them to ascertain the increased risk or advantage in a new process of boiling sugar by means of heated oil, who were called as witnesses in an action in an insurance policy upon a building in which such new process was used. Severn v. Olive, 3 Brod. & B. 72, 6 J. B. Moore, 235.

And a plaintiff in an action involving an inquiry into a mass of accounts, who pays an accountant who makes an examination of the matters in question under order of the court or arbitrator, was not entitled upon final award in his favor to have the costs of the accountant taxed against the defendant, though the investigation and the report of the accountant to the arbitrator resulted in saving much expense. Nolan v. Copeman, 43 L. J. Q. B. 44, L. R. 8 Q. B. 84, 27 L. T. N. S. 799, 21 Week. Rep. 263; Hawkins v. Rigby, 59 L. J. C. P. N. S. 223, 6 Jur. N. S. 1208, 8 C. B. N. S. 271.

they testify as experts, the cost of criminal trials, in cases where such testimony is needed, will be much increased. In the case at bar the witness attended six days, and claims $150.

If the legislature had intended that such a large class of witnesses should receive additional compensation, it seems reasonable to believe that some provision would have been

Nor would a plaintiff in an action for the agreed price of plans for a railway, who has the ground examined by engineers and calls them as witnesses to prove that the plans were correct, be entitled to the expenses of the journey and surveys of the engineers, as they are mere expenses of preparing witness to give evidence and not costs of litigation chargeable to the losing party. Small v. Batho, 21 L. J. Q. B. 254, 16 Jur. 529, 1 Bail Ct. Cas. 43.

And the same rule was applied when the defendant sent engineers to examine the ground to prove that the work was badly done, in Gravatt v. Attwood, 21 L. J. Q. B. 215, 1 Bail Ct. Cas. 27, the court allowing their costs of attendance, but rejecting the costs of the journey and surveying.

So a surgeon could only be allowed the usual fees for attendance at the trial of an indictment for manslaughter and not for his fee for opening the body by order of the coroner. Rex v. Taylor, 5 Car. & P. 301.

b. In courts of chancery.

In courts of chancery the practice has been to allow expenses for qualifying witnesses in taxing costs as between party and party. Mackley v. Chillingworth, 46 L. J. C. P. Div. 484, L. R. 8 C. P. Div. 273, 25 Week. Rep. 650.

Order XL, Rule 22 of Chancery Consolidation Orders of 1860 authorized the allowance of taxation of costs between party and party of all such just and reasonable expenses as seemed to have been properly incurred in procuring evidence and the attendance of witnesses. Ibid.

The taxing master decided upon the sum to be allowed to a scientific witness attending before an examiner in equity in each case according to its circumstances. There was no positive rule in equity as to the amount. Smith v. Buller, L. R. 19 Eq. 473, 31 L. T. N. S. 873, 45 L. J. Ch. 69, 23 Week. Rep. 332.

And the rules of taxation in force in the common-law courts were not binding upon courts of equity though they were regarded as a useful guide. Batley v. Kynock, 44 L. J. Ch. 565, L. R. 20 Eq. 682, 33 L. T. N. S. 45.

Though under the scale of fees framed by the common-law judges under 15 & 16 Vict., chap. 76, practically the same scale was allowed in courts of chancery and of common law. Nokes v. Gibbon, 26 L. J. Ch. 208, 3 Jur. N. S. 282, 5 Week. Rep. 216.

Thus a fair claim for remuneration for loss of time by a medical witness attending during the examination of other witnesses may be paid to him and charged to the opposite party on taxation of costs. Ryan v. Dolan, 7 Ir. Eq. Rep. 82.

And expenses of an expert properly employed will not be disallowed merely because he was not called as a witness. Churton v. Frewen, 15 Week. Rep. 559.

So a defendant in a patent suit was held entitled to an allowance in respect to the charges of scientific witnesses not limited by the rules of taxation at common law where the plaintiffs after the briefs were delivered but before the hearing took the common order dismissing their bill with costs. Batley v. Kynock, L. R. 20 Eq. 682, 44 L. J. Ch. 565, 33 L. T. N. S. 45.

And an allowance to a skilled person for deciphering and translating ancient documents with relation to the matters in controversy and for journeys and reports of other experts upon dismissal of the bill with costs should not be set aside on summons to review, especially where the dismissal was caused by the evidence thus produced. Churton v. Frewen, supra.

27 L. R. A.

So an auctioneer summoned as a witness in a chancery proceeding was held to be entitled to receive one guinea a day for loss of time as a professional witness and first-class railway fare from his residence to the place of examination, and to refuse to give evidence until a sufficient sum is tendered him, in Re Workmen's Mut. Soc. L. R. 21 Ch. Div. 331, 30 Week. Rep. 933, 51 L. J. Ch. 350; Wiltshire v. Marshall, W. N. 1866, p. 80.

And the daily fee allowed to a professional witness on taxation between party and party was not necessarily limited to 23s. In this case a fee of 25s. a day was allowed to an engineer and architect of eminence employed under direction of the court. Robb v. Connor, 9 Ir. Eq. Rep. 873.

So in Sollery v. Flewker, 27 L. J. Exch. 11, it was held that the master might disallow the claim of an agent who charges more than the ordinary charge of a witness for his attendance on a taxation between attorney and client or between attorney and agent where there was no reservation of the question of liability, unless there is some special agreement to pay a reasonable remuneration, in which case it is for him to say what is reasonable.

And in Re Lafitte & Co. L. R. 20 Eq. 650, 33 L. T. N. S. 91, 24 Week. Rep. 7, 44 L. J. Ch. 633, the master disallowed the costs, charges, and expenses of an accountant employed in an action for breach of contract of sale of a business for recasting the books and balancing the profit and loss account for many years and translating and rendering the result in a supplemental book of account on the ground that it was wholly unnecessary.

This case distinguishes Smith v. Buller, L. R. 19 Eq. 473, 31 L. T. N. S. 873, 45 L. J. Ch. 69, 23 Week. Rep. 332, on the ground that there was no occasion for a scientific witness and that an accountant could hardly be considered one.

c. The modern rule.

Rule 8 of V.L. Order of Council of 1875, adopted pursuant to the Judicature Act of 1875, directs that such reasonable charges and expenses as appear to have been properly incurred in procuring evidence are to be allowed on taxation of costs. Mackley v. Chillingworth, 33 L. T. N. S. 514, 46 L. J. C. P. Div. 484, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 273, 25 Week. Rep. 650.

This rule is said to be a reproduction of Order XL, Rule 22 of Chancery Consolidation Orders of 1860, set forth supra, under heading, In courts of chancery. See Mackley v. Chillingworth, supra, and note.

It gives the master a discretion as to what allowances should be made for the attendance of scientific witnesses in court untrammelled by the old scale of charges. Turnbull v. Janson, L. R. 8 C. P. Div. 264, 47 L. J. C. P. 384, 23 Week. Rep. 815.

Which discretion will not be interfered with without good ground for so doing. Ibid.

And authorizes him to allow, for expenses of procuring skilled and expert witnesses and qualifying them to give evidence, such sum as in his discretion he shall deem reasonable according to the old rule of the court of chancery. Mackley v. Chillingworth, supra.

Thus under that rule the expenses of procuring surveyors and a builder to inspect a house before the trial of an action between the lessor and lessee thereof with a view to qualify them to give evidence as to its state of repair should be allowed. Ibid.

The term "procuring evidence," used in Rule 8, is not confined to procuring the attendance of witnesses but includes the going to examine when the thing in dispute is incapable of removal to the court. Ibid.

F. H. B.

made for it in the statute. After considering the matter, we have concluded that under our statute a physician who testifies as an expert in a criminal case is not entitled to extra compensation from the county. It is the duty of every citizen to assist, within reasonable limits, in enforcing the criminal law of the state; and it is not unreasonable that he should be required, on behalf of the state, to give such information as he may possess towards the elucidation of any question arising in a criminal trial, whether that information be in the nature of expert evidence or not. He cannot be required to make any examination or preliminary preparation, nor can he be compelled to attend the trial, and listen to the testimony, that he may be better enabled to give his opinion as an expert. For any service of this kind he may demand extra compensation. But such information as he already possesses, that is pertinent to the issue, he can be made to give, whether such information is peculiar to his trade or profession, or not. There is very little probability of any great hardship being imposed on physicians by reason of this rule. The subpoenas for witnesses are under the control of the court, and, as there are physicians in almost any town or village in the state, it cannot often be necessary for a court to compel one to attend beyond the limits of the county in which he practices, for the purposes of testifying as an expert, unless he is also a witness to other facts material to the case.

The appellant did not ask the court to excuse him on the ground that it was any special hardship for him to attend and testify in said cause. He only claimed extra compensation for the reason that he testified as an expert. In giving the state the benefit of such information as he possessed, he performed a service which every citizen may be required to render for the public good. In the absence of a statute allowing it, the only compensation, beyond the usual witness fees, a physician who thus testifies can get, is that approbation which comes to all who "have done the state some service." Finding no error, the judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

John BROWN

v.

Charles H. EPPS.

(.....Va.....)

The right to a jury trial on appeal from a justice of the peace or a police justice, with an absolutely free and untrammelled right to such appeal, satisfies a constitutional provision that "a man hath a right . . . to a speedy trial by an impartial jury" in a criminal case, at least when the accused has the right to elect whether he will be tried in the first instance before the justice or in the higher court.

(February 14, 1895.)

PETITION for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain the release of petitioner from the custody of defendant, the sergeant of Richmond, to which he had been committed for violation of a city ordinance. Refused.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Coalter & Wise and Charles W. Dunston for petitioner.

Mr. R. Taylor Scott, Atty-Gen., for respondent;

The argument and authorities relied upon by respondent will be found in 15 L. R. A. p. 442, in connection with the case of Miller v. Commonwealth.

Keith, P., delivered the opinion of the court:

John Brown filed a petition complaining that he was unlawfully detained in custody by Charles H. Epps, serjeant of the city of Richmond, and praying for a writ of habeas corpus from this court, which was awarded. The serjeant answers that he holds Brown by virtue of a mittimus from J. J. Crutchfield, police justice for the city of Richmond, which is appended to the return, and made a part thereof. Brown, by counsel, demurs to this return as insufficient in law, and for cause of demurrer claims that section 4106 of the Code of Virginia of 1887 (as amended by Acts Leg. 1893-94, p. 490) and sections 4107 and 4108 of the Code are null and void, as being repugnant to section 10 of article 1 of the Constitution of Virginia, which declares "that in all capital or criminal prosecution a man hath a right to demand the cause and nature of his accusation, to be confronted with his accusers and witnesses, to call for evidence in his favor, and to a speedy trial by an impartial jury of his vicinage, without whose unanimous consent he cannot be found guilty; nor can he be compelled to give evidence against himself; that no man be deprived of his liberty, except by the law of the land or the judgment of his peers." The case of Miller v. Com., reported in 88 Va. 618, 15 L. R. A. 441, was decided upon the law as set out in sections 4106-4108 of the Code, and the amendment to section 4106 found in Acts Assem. 1893-94, was designed to cure the defect which this court declared to exist in that section on account of its repugnancy to the constitutional provision just quoted. The amendment consists in inserting after the words "conservators of the peace" the words, "whenever the person charged with any of the offenses hereinafter mentioned elects to be tried by such justice," so that the act now reads: "The several police justices and justices of the peace of this commonwealth, in addition to the jurisdiction exercised by them as conservators of the peace, whenever any of the persons

NOTE.—For jury trial on appeal as satisfying the constitutional right to trial by jury, see note to Miller v. Com. (Va.) 15 L. R. A. 441, which case is disapproved if not overruled by the present decision.

27 L. R. A.

hereinafter mentioned elects to be tried by such justice, shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the county and corporation courts of the state of all cases of assault and battery not felonies, petit larceny," etc. Counsel for the petitioner contends that this amendment does not cure the vice, and therefore it will be proper to examine first into the true construction of the statute prior to its amendment, and then to consider the effect of the words introduced by the legislature in the amendment referred to.

Cases involving the jurisdiction of justices of the peace under this and similar statutes have been frequently before this court, and in every instance, save in the case of Miller v. Com., supra, the validity of the judgment based on the statute has been upheld. See Thomas' Case, 22 Gratt. 912; Read's Case, 24 Gratt. 618; Wolcorton v. Com. 75 Va. 910; and Harrison v. Com. 81 Va. 491. Inasmuch, however, as it does not appear that the constitutional question here under consideration was presented to the court in any of those cases, it is contended that they are not authorities binding upon us, and it is conceded that their weight as authority is impaired for the reason stated. It does appear, however, that the question of jurisdiction was considered by the court, and, indeed, underlies the exercise of jurisdiction by all courts in all cases, whether specifically presented or not; so that, where it appears that courts of all grades in the state from justices of the peace to this court have gone on uninterruptedly for many years to exercise jurisdiction under a statute, and that during all that time there has been no doubt entertained nor question raised as to the constitutionality of the law, when all this has been done in the presence of an able and inquisitive bar, a strong presumption is raised that the attack has not been made upon the constitutionality of the law, because, in the judgment of the courts and of the profession, no such ground of objection existed. The same class of cases has been considered in our sister states, notably in the cases of Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 829; Shafer v. Mumma, 17 Md. 381, 79 Am. Dec. 656; Beers v. Beers, 4 Conn. 535, 10 Am. Dec. 186; Moundsville v. Fountain, 27 W. Va. 205; Emporia v. Volmer, 12 Kan. 622; Wong v. Astoria, 18 Or. 538; Moore v. State, 22 Tex. App. 117; Byers v. Com. 42 Pa. 89; McGinnis v. State, 9 Humph. 43, 49 Am. Dec. 697. The states whose decisions are here quoted base their jurisprudence upon the common law derived from the same fountains from which ours flows, and their decisions, which are evidence of the common law among them, are strongly persuasive, at least, of the common law as it exists here. Contemplating for a moment the situation in the colonies at the time of the Revolution, we find that the evils complained of by them were the same, the means taken to redress them and guard against their recurrence were identical; therefore their adjudications are entitled to great influence in the construction of similar statutes in our own states. In some of the cases cited prosecutions were for petit larceny, in some for keeping houses of ill fame, and in others for less serious violations of the law. The case from 22 Tex. App. is a very curious one in this: that the court reversed the judgment of the lower court because it had compelled the accused to go before a jury when the statute authorized a trial by a court without a jury, and the prisoner had demanded to be tried in accordance with the statute. The Texas constitution is almost identical in its terms with ours. The offense charged there was an aggravated assault and battery and the court was unanimous. The principle of all these cases is that a statute which confers jurisdiction upon a justice of the peace to try such offenses as are embraced in section 4106 of the Code are constitutional, provided, by a simple procedure, a trial by a jury can be had on appeal to a higher court. 3 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 781, and 4 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, pp. 812, 818. The law is so stated by Bishop on Criminal Procedure, § 893; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, chap. 497. In the case under consideration, not only is the procedure simple, but it is an absolutely free and unfettered right of appeal. The prisoner is brought before the justice. The warrant makes known to him the cause and nature of the accusation against him. He is confronted with accusers and witnesses. He is permitted to call for evidence in his favor. He is not compelled to give evidence against himself, and a judgment is rendered against him. If he feels that that judgment is just, he submits to it; if aggrieved by it, he appeals; and by the assertion of his right of appeal the whole force and effect of the judgment is destroyed. That which, by his assent, implied from his silence, would have been a final judgment, pleadable in bar to any future prosecution for the same offense, has, by his act, become of no effect, and he stands as free as before his arrest, subject only to the requirement that he must give bond for his appearance in the appellate court. Now, what is the substance of all this? Does not the determination of the defendant—in which determination he is an absolutely free agent—wholly set at naught the judgment just rendered against him, and transfer the controversy to another forum, and convert the proceedings before the justice into a proceeding preliminary to a trial which is thereafter to take place in the appellate court, and devert it of all similitude to a final trial? It seems to me that, looking to the reality, and not the form, of things, to their substance, and not to the names by which they are called, that is the conclusion to which we are inexorably driven. Follow the accused one step further, when in obedience to his recognition, he presents himself before the trial court, under section 4108, and there we find that the language of the statute is, "The accused shall be entitled to a trial by a jury in the same manner as if he had been indicted for the offense in said court;" that is to say, he has the same guarantees thrown around him to secure to him a fair trial by an impartial jury as is given to all other persons accused of crime, and he stands before that jury innocent until his guilt is proved. But it is said that the prisoner is entitled to a speedy trial, and in the

87 L. R. A.

Miller Case, so often cited from 88 Va. the word "speedy" would seem to be considered as equivalent to "immediate," which would have a tendency to limit the discretion of the legislature in prescribing the stages through which a prosecution should pass from the arrest to the conviction of the prisoner. I do not understand the word to have been so used in the constitutional provision which is now being inquired into.

Up to a recent date the procedure in the enforcement of criminal law, beginning with the arrest of the accused, and passing through the various stages to his final trial before a jury, has been more elaborate, and therefore more dilatory, than at present. Until recently the initial step was either the warrant of arrest from the justice of the peace, or a bench warrant from a court, issued upon an information, or upon a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. The office of the bench warrant was to cause the apprehension of the accused, who was then to be taken before a justice of the peace to be examined. By the justice he was sent on to an examining court, and by the examining court was acquitted or remanded for trial. Compare this elaborate procedure with the simplicity of the present day. The accused is arrested, is examined by a justice, is sent to a grand jury, and is then put upon his trial; or, if the prosecution begins with the indictment or presentment, he is tried at once, without an examination before a justice. The utmost simplicity prevails, while every constitutional right is carefully preserved, and the prisoner is secured a "speedy trial before an impartial jury of his vicinage, without whose unanimous consent he cannot be found guilty." To my mind, the legislature has taken ample and most satisfactory steps to secure to the accused his constitutional right of a "speedy trial," not by limiting or confining the legislation as to the mode of procedure by which it has been thought wise to guard at once the rights of the prisoner and the interests of the commonwealth, but by providing that there shall be no undue delay in taking the successive steps in the procedure. Thus, in section 4001 the accused is discharged from imprisonment "if a presentment, indictment, or information be not found or filed against him before the end of the second term of the court at which he is held to answer," unless the failure is due to certain causes set out in the statute, and which need not be here enumerated; and, "if he be charged with a felony he shall be forever discharged if four terms of the county, corporation or hustings court shall pass without a trial," unless the failure to try be for reasons specified in the statute, and which must be made to appear of record. These are means which the legislature has thought sufficient to secure a "speedy trial" within the meaning of the constitution; that is, a trial without delay. If it be said that the statute last cited refers only to felonies, the reply is that that statute, almost in its present form, may be traced back to the birth of our constitutions, and gives much color to the idea that runs through many adjudged cases that the protection of the constitutions was intended only to apply to the graver classes of offenses, such as treason and felony.

I should have no difficulty in declaring section 4106 of the Code of 1887 constitutional were it a case of first impression; but, as I before observed that statute came under judgment before this court in the very recent case of Miller v. Com., Judge Lewis delivering the opinion, and was held to be repugnant to the constitutional provision above cited. I entertain for the learned judge who delivered that opinion the greatest respect, and I differ from him with a most unaffected distrust in the correctness of my own judgment; and when his position appears to be fortified by the Supreme Court of the United States, always entitled to the highest consideration, and its force in this case heightened, to me at least, by the estimation in which I hold the justice who delivered its opinion in Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 83 L. ed. 223, I feel that distrust greatly intensified. Callan v. Wilson passes upon the constitutionality of an act of congress which conferred upon the police justices of the District of Columbia powers very similar to those granted justices of the peace by section 4106, but there, to my mind, the similarity between the two cases ends. The Constitution of the United States is a source and grant of power to the congress of the United States. It is an enabling, and not a restraining, instrument. Congress can do nothing except what the constitution, either directly or by reasonable construction, authorizes it to do; while the legislature of Virginia possesses all legislative power not prohibited by the fundamental law. By the Constitution of the United States (article 3, sec. 2, subsec. 3) it is declared that "the trial of all crimes except in cases of impeachment shall be by a jury." A jury, therefore, is an essential, an indispensable requisite, an integral part of every court held under the authority of the government of the United States for the trial of all crimes. There can be no trial in those courts of a person accused of crime without a jury, by virtue of the plain and unambiguous language above quoted. The presence of a jury becomes, then, a jurisdictional question, and Justice Harlan was well warranted in saying in Callan v. Wilson "that a judgment of conviction not based upon a verdict of guilty by a jury is void," under the laws of the United States. The case of Callan v. Wilson refers also to article 6 of the Amendments of the Constitution, and the learned judge seems to find a sufficient support for the conclusion reached in the language there used, which is as follows: "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense." It may be well to inquire here why the sixth amendment to the constitution was adopted. Certainly it was not necessary in order to secure a trial by a jury; that had already been done, as we have seen, by article 3, sec. 2, subsec. 3, of the Constitution, as originally framed, in language plain and emphatic. "The trial of all crimes except in cases of impeachment shall be by a jury" is the direct and positive mandate of article 3, sec. 2, subsec. 3, while the sixth amendment says "that in all criminal prosecutions a man shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury;" the provision first quoted putting it beyond the power of congress to create a court for the trial of criminal offenses without a jury, while the language of the amendment recognizes the right of the accused to the enjoyment of a trial by a jury, a right which he could waive if congress saw fit by law to permit him to do so and this amendment stood alone. He could waive the right either expressly or by conduct upon his part necessarily implying a purpose to do so. The sixth amendment, therefore, could not have been intended to secure a trial by a jury.

It is equally certain that it was not the intention of those who insisted on its adoption to weaken or impair the right of trial by a jury. The motive for its adoption is therefore to be looked for in the other provisions of the amendment. For instance, that the accused shall enjoy the right to a jury trial in the state or district in which the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law; the right to be confronted with witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense. It was to imbed these rights into the organic law—rights not less sacred than that of a trial by jury; rights, indeed, necessary to the complete enjoyment of all the benefits of a trial by jury—that the sixth amendment was adopted. It does not alter or affect in any way the construction of article 3, sec. 2, subsec. 3. It is a part of the constitution, it is true, entitled to the same weight as other provisions of the constitution, "to be construed and applied in harmony with all the provisions of that instrument." See Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 286, 29 L. ed. 191. The language of our bill of rights differs from each and both of these provisions. It does not declare that "the trial of all crimes shall be by a jury;" it does not declare that "the accused shall enjoy the right to a trial by an impartial jury," but its language is "that a man hath a right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury,"—that is, he has a legal claim to a trial by a jury. A trial by a jury is his privilege. The existence of the presence of a jury is not made a jurisdictional fact without which a court is not duly organized for the trial of criminals, as is the case in all courts of the United States.

Hitherto I have considered this case upon the law as found in the Code of 1887, and it has seemed to me that prisoners had not been denied, under the law as it then existed, any of their constitutional rights; that the proceeding against them before the justice was in the nature of the jurisdiction exercised by an examining court, unless acquiesced in by them, and it was merely a preliminary, and not an unreasonably dilatory preliminary, to the final trial by jury, to which the prisoner had a free and unfettered right, with every guaranty and protection thrown around him to enable him to submit his case to an impartial jury of his country; that, in its essence, the judgment of the justice rested upon the implied assent of the accused, because one word of objection upon his part annulled the judgment rendered, and transferred the controversy to another forum; and I have been constrained to the conclusion that this statute in no wise denied or abridged the constitutional rights of the citizen. If this effect is to be attributed to the failure upon the part of the prisoner to make objection to the exercise of the jurisdiction by the justice by appealing therefrom, a fortiori would his express election to be tried by the justice have that effect. That a prisoner may waive many of his constitutional rights is beyond a doubt. The right to a trial by a jury is only one among the several rights enumerated in section 10 of article 1 of the Constitution. They all stand upon an equal footing. They are all necessary to the complete enjoyment of that personal liberty which is our birthright, and which it is the duty, not only of the courts, but of every citizen, to jealously guard. They are all designed, the one not more than the other, to safeguard the accused in all criminal prosecutions, so that no man may "be deprived of his liberty except by the law of the land or the judgment of his peers." He cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself, and the law which would require him so to do would be unconstitutional. And yet it is clear that he may waive this immunity. See Cullen's Case, 24 Gratt. 624. And so, also, it is declared by text-writers and adjudged cases that a prisoner charged with a misdemeanor may waive a trial by a jury, where the waiver is expressly authorized by the legislature. I therefore have no difficulty in holding that the act as it now stands is constitutional. It is for those who question the validity of the statute to show that it is invalid. It is not denied that there is a strong presumption in favor of the constitutionality of the law, and in every case, if the law admits of two constructions, by one of which its constitutionality may be sustained, while upon another it would be declared unconstitutional, the courts are held down to accept that construction which maintains its validity. It is said "that to accord to the accused a right to be tried by a jury in an appellate court after he has been once fairly tried otherwise than by a jury in a court of original jurisdiction, and sentenced to pay a fine, or be imprisoned for not paying, does not satisfy the requirement of the constitution." This language is used by Justice Harlan in the case of Cullen v. Wilson, and is cited with approval by Judge Lewis in Miller v. Com., 88 Va. 618, 15 L. R. A. 441. For the reasons already given I do not consider this judgment as authority in construing the constitution of Virginia, and I must say, also, that to my mind it does not show a full appreciation of the value of a jury as an instrumentality in the administration of justice. Long experience with juries has satisfied me that all the encomiums passed upon them have done them no more than justice, but, if it be true that the judgment of the justice, rendered, it may be, upon other evidence than that adduced before them, in the face of the law which requires them to try the prisoner as though upon an indictment, and to consider him innocent until he is proven guilty; if I say, in the face of that plain duty under the law, a jury is so easily swayed and influenced in its judgment, and is so incapable of being controlled by the law and evidence before them,—then my estimate of the value of jury trials must be reconsidered. My experience, however, is that, while juries have faults, those faults do not lie in the direction of ready subservience to authority. They are very much more apt to disregard the direct instructions of the court presiding at the trial than to attribute any, even the slightest, weight to the judgment of the justice. But, even if it were so, grant that the jury is prejudiced by the judgment of the justice, is that the fault of the law? The law declares that the prisoner shall not be so prejudiced. If a jury, in disregard of the law, visits upon the prisoner the consequences of the judgment from which he has appealed, it is due, not to any vice in the law, but to the infirmity of human nature; but I think those who have had a large experience with juries would be ready to acquit them of any such imputation, and would decline to share the distrust in the integrity, intelligence, and impartiality of juries manifested by those who indulge the apprehension which seems to be indirectly expressed in the paragraph last quoted from Callan v. Wilson. The former conviction could not be said to constitute an impairment of the right of trial by jury, unless it worked a prejudice to the prisoner; and with a free and unfettered appeal to a jury it could work no prejudice to the accused unless the jury, recreant to its sworn duty under the law, disregarding the plain mandate of the statute, heedless of the instructions of the court, should try him, not upon the law and evidence before them, but upon the judgment of the justice which had been annulled and effaced. This apprehension appears to me to be strained and fanciful in the extreme, and must rest as its ultimate support upon a distrust in the integrity of that tribunal which has been for centuries regarded as the great bulwark of the liberties and immunities of the citizen against encroachment from any quarter. A weak defense it would prove were it so ignorant, so feeble, or so corrupt.

We are therefore of opinion that the writ of habeas corpus should be denied, and that the prisoner should be remanded to the custody of the serjeant of the city of Richmond.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

Nannie SHIELDS, App't.,

v.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R. CO.
(Two Cases).

(.....Ky.....)

The obstruction of a highway by an excursion train on a side track is not the proximate cause of injury to travelers on the highway from insulting and terrifying misconduct of the passengers on such train, or of another injury received in jumping from their buggy in fear of being turned over when passing over a rough road in the dark, which was made necessary by the delay.

(March 9, 1905.)

APPEALS by plaintiffs from judgments of the Circuit Court for Spencer County, in favor of defendant in actions brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—The relation of an obstruction to a crossing as the proximate cause of an injury resulting is illustrated also in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Prescott (C. C. App. 8th C.) 23 L. R. A. 654.

As to liability in general for obstruction of crossings see also Sellick v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (Mich.) 18 L. R. A. 154, and note.

27 L. R. A.

Mr. G. G. Gilbert, for appellants:

This obstruction of the public highway was a public nuisance.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 18 Bush, 388; Tennessee & A. R. Co. v. Adams, 8 Head, 596; Angel v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 38 N. J. Eq. 53.

Plaintiffs were especially damaged and may sue.

6 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2959, and cases cited; Wood, Nuisances, p. 736, and cases cited.

The special damage if it exists need not be considerable to enable him who suffers to have an injunction against a nuisance.

Forty-Second Street & G. Street Ferry R. Co. v. Thirty-Fourth Street R. Co. 20 Jones & S. 252, Mills v. Hall, 9 Wend. 315, 24 Am. Dec. 160.

Where the nuisance is proved the law imports damages and nominal damages are recoverable without proof.

6 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2978; Lippincott v. Lasher, 44 N. J. Eq. 120; Ellis v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 63 Mo. 181, 21 Am. Rep. 486; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 103 U. S. 317, 27 L. ed. 789; Duncan v. Hayes, 29 N. J. Eq. 26; Rhodes v. Dunbar, 67 Pa. 275, 98 Am. Dec. 231; Davidson v. Isham, 9 N. J. Eq. 186; Dennis v. Eckhardt, 8 Grant, Cas. 390.

Nominal damages should have been awarded to appellants at all events.

It is sufficient to show the violation of the right.

Bonworth v. Brand, 1 Dana, 877; Paul v. Slason, 32 Vt. 281, 54 Am. Dec. 75; Brent v. Kimball, 60 Ill. 311, 14 Am. Rep. 35; Hood v. Palm, 8 Pa. 289; Seat v. Moreland, 7 Humph. 575.

Whenever the common law gives a right or prohibits any injury it also gives a remedy by action.

Sedgw. Damages, p. 29; 3 Bl. Com. chap. 8, p. 123.

The plaintiffs have shown special injury.

Carley v. Lancaster, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 40; Cosby v. Owensboro & R. R. Co. 10 Bush, 288; Allen v. Ormond, 8 East, 4; Storv v. Hammond, 4 Ohio, 876; Williams' Case, 5 Coke, 72; Rose v. Miles, 4 Maule & S. 101; Greasy v. Coaling, 2 Bing. 263; Lansing v. Wiswall, 5 Denio, 213; Paine v. Partrich, Carth. 191.

An obstruction placed across the public street is a public nuisance for which the offender may be indicted and fined. But such an obstruction is also a particular injury to the shop keeper in the immediate vicinity, and he may maintain an individual action for diverting his trade, while another person living on another street could not do so.

Wilkes v. Hungerford Market Co. 2 Bing. N. C. 281; Quincy Canal Proprs. v. Newcomb, 7 Met. 276; Hughes v. Heiser, 1 Binn. 463, 2 Am. Dec. 459; Pittsburgh v. Scott, 1 Pa. 309.

For any damage different from that suffered by the general public a private citizen may sue.

Stone v. Fairbury, P. & N. W. R. Co. 68 Ill. 394, 18 Am. Rep. 556; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 88 Mich. 62, 31 Am. Rep. 306; Severy v. Central Pac. R. Co. 51 Cal. 194; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 511; Brewer v. Boston, C. & F. R. Co. 113 Mass. 52; Callanan v. Gilman, 20 Jones & S. 112; Patterson v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 56 Mich. 173; Young v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. Id. 480; Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. 10 Rich. L. 227, 70 Am. Dec. 219.

No rule of law requires the mental suffering of the plaintiff or the misconduct of the defendant to be disregarded.

Meagher v. Driscoll, 99 Mass. 281, 93 Am. Dec. 759; Detroit Daily Post Co. v. McArthur, 16 Mich. 447; Hawes v. Knowles, 114 Mass. 518, 19 Am. Rep. 888; Emblen v. Myers, 6 Hurlst. & N. 54; Sutherland, Damages, p. 72, and cases cited; Adams v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Ky. L. Rep. 758; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Logan, 3 L. R. A. 80, 88 Ky. 232.

The circumstances of indignity attending this wrong should be considered.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wiley, 5 L. R. A. 855, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 420; Tyson v. Booth, 100 Mass. 238; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ballard, 3 L. R. A. 694, 88 Ky. 159; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Welsh, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 773; City Transfer Co. v. Robinson, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 555; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Grundy, Id. 293.

Mental suffering is to be taken into consideration in assessing damages in two general classes of cases: (1) Whenever the mental suffering is connected with bodily pain caused by the negligence of the defendant; and (2) whether there is any bodily pain or not whenever the injury is accompanied by circumstances showing malice, insult, oppression, or a reckless disregard of the rights of others.

Pierce, Railroads, 802; Field v. Chicago & R. I. R. Co. 71 Ill. 462; Muldowney v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. 36 Iowa, 462; Fairchild v. California Stage Co. 13 Cal. 599; McKinley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 44 Iowa, 814, 24 Am. Rep. 748; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Flagg, 43 Ill. 364, 92 Am. Dec. 138; Hamilton v. Third Ave. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 25; Masters v. Warren, 27 Conn. 293; Oraker v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Wis. 658, 17 Am. Rep. 504.

A railroad company will be held liable for injuries inflicted on the cars by disorderly persons, or for injuries resulting from the disorderly conduct of passengers while under the charge of the conductor, and which the conductor makes no effort to prevent.

Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Hinds, 53 Pa. 512, 91 Am. Dec. 224; 2 Rorer, Railroads, 960; Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745.

The injury sustained from driving home after night is not too remote.

King v. Shanks, 12 B. Mon. 420; Munford v. Taylor, 2 Met. (Ky.) 600; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wade, 89 Ky. 255; Harrison v. Berkley, 1 Strobb. L. 526, 47 Am. Dec. 578; Bonworth v. Brand, 1 Dana, 878; Patoh v. Covington, 17 B. Mon. 722, 66 Am. Dec. 186.

Mr. Edward W. Hines, for appellee:

No individual can maintain a private action for damages on account of a public nuisance unless he alleges and proves special damage to himself distinct from that suffered by the public.

Seifried v. Hays, 81 Ky. 330, 50 Am. Rep. 167.

The fright suffered by plaintiffs by reason of the disorderly conduct of persons on the highway was not the proximate consequence of the obstruction which caused the delay.

Dubuque Wood & Coal Assn. v. Dubuque City & County, 30 Iowa, 176; 1 Sutherland, Damages, p. 49; Selleck v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 58 Mich. 195; Lewis v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 54 Mich. 55, 52 Am. Rep. 790; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Staley, 41 Ohio St. 118; Pain v. Patrick, 3 Mod. 289; South Carolina S. B. Co. v. South Carolina R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 209, 30 S. C. 539; Barr v. Stevens, 1 Bibb, 293.

There can be no recovery for the fright alone. 8 Sutherland, Damages, p. 664; Chapman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 90 Ky. 265.

The rule that plaintiffs were entitled to recover nominal damages on account of the invasion of their right cannot apply when an individual seeks to recover damages on account of a public nuisance.

1 Sutherland, Damages, p. 766; Elliott, Roads & Streets, p. 501; 16 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 976; Wood, Nuisances, § 674; Barr v. Stevens, supra; Houck v. Wachter, 34 Md. 265, 6 Am. Rep. 332; Orook v. Pitcher, 61 Md. 515; San José Ranch Co. v. Brooks, 74 Cal. 468; South Carolina S. B. Co. v. South Carolina R. Co. supra.

Messrs Ashton & Harcourt also for appellee.

Grace, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These two suits, by mother and infant daughter, arise upon the same state of fact, grow out of the same transaction, and involve the same issues, and were heard together in the court below, and may be considered together by this court. Mrs. Nannie Shields and her daughter Mamie, residents of Spencer county, had on Sunday, the 9th day of July, 1893, been visiting some relations; and when returning home on that day, along a public turnpike road, and not being long before sundown, approached a crossing of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and this turnpike road, at Wakefield, where they found the turnpike obstructed by the passenger coaches of defendant corporation, who it seems on that day was running an excursion train for the colored people of Louisville down to Bloomfield, south of the point indicated, and that, on returning to Louisville, it found a southbound passenger train late, and had side-tracked the excursion train to allow the passenger train to go by on the regular track; and it appears from the evidence that in this way these plaintiffs were delayed some thirty minutes, possibly more, by reason of the obstruction; that plaintiff Mrs. Shields saw no conductor, nor any of the servants of appellee, near by; that, being so delayed, many of the negro passengers on the accommodation train got off of same, and were wandering about, near the station, up and down the track, and up and down the turnpike, where the plaintiff was delayed, cursing, swearing, using obscene, vulgar language, fighting, throwing rocks, one of which came near her and her little daughter in her buggy, a pistol being fired off in the mêlée, and all this to the terror and alarm and annoyance and insult of herself and little girl; that after being delayed for quite a while in this way, and under these circumstances, for between half an hour and an hour, and just as the sun was setting, or a little after, and when the trains passed, and this accommodation train passed out, off of the turnpike, plaintiffs, proceeding on their way home, found a nearer way barred by a locked gate, and being then compelled to go around a greater distance, some two and a half miles, to their home, darkness came on them, and, the road being rough, she became alarmed at the danger of turning over, and in jumping from her buggy (the mother) injured her knee, and that then, and since to the trial, it had been inflamed, swollen, and had greatly pained her, and was to some extent stiffened; that, by reason of the alarm and fright from the conduct of the negroes at the station, both she and her little daughter had been made nervous, and suffered greatly, the little girl not being able to sleep soundly for some nights; and all this plaintiffs say was by reason of the negligence and wrongful acts of the defendant in obstructing said public passway, and in suffering and permitting the drunken, vicious negroes to go at large, on and near its roadway, and on and near the turnpike, where she was detained, and all to the great damage of both plaintiff and her little daughter; wherefore, in appropriate separate suits, they claim damages. Defendant, after demurring, filed its answer, denying that by gross negligence it obstructed the turnpike; denied that it wholly obstructed it at all; denied that its officers abandoned the train, or the control or management of same; denied that it had any knowledge of the misconduct of the negro passengers, as complained of by plaintiffs, in any particular; in a second paragraph charging that plaintiffs by their own negligence contributed to any injury they may have sustained, and in a third paragraph charging that this delay and obstruction of the turnpike were rendered necessary by the approach of the southbound passenger train, and that this was the only place in that vicinity where it could side-track this train, and allow the other to pass, and that all this was well known to plaintiffs, and that they only stopped on this turnpike a short time and for this purpose. Of course defendant denies liability. A jury having heard the evidence of plaintiff sustaining substantially her petition, the court, on motion of the defendant, gave a peremptory instruction to find for defendant. Exceptions were taken by plaintiffs, motion for a new trial overruled, and appeal filed. Defendant corporation, by its attorneys in their brief, contends that if it did obstruct the turnpike road, and travel on the same, it was a public nuisance, and for which it is subject to indictment, but that the private citizen, unless he has sustained special damage, other than mere detention, cannot sue; that any injury he sustained, by delay only, being common to all travelers, will not support an action. And again it says that any possible damage or injury by reason of the misconduct of any of its passengers (if such there was) while off its train was beyond its control and beyond its authority or duty or power to restrain or prevent; neither was the same of any damage to plaintiffs or either of them, nor the necessary or natural result of such delay or obstruction; or, in other words, that any negligence of the railroad company in obstructing the turnpike was not the proximate cause of the injury to plaintiffs, but that the misconduct of its passengers towards plaintiffs caused such injury. Neither was the negligence of defendant the proximate cause of plaintiff Mrs. Shields' injury on her way home. Defendant cites numerous authorities along this line and in support of its contention; an early case in Kentucky being Barr v. Stevens, 1 Bibb, 293, in which the court says: "Upon general principles, that common interest, which belongs equally to all, and in which the parties suing have no special or particular property, will not maintain a suit. Thus a public nuisance is not the subject of a suit by a private individual, unless he has sustained some special injury thereby. As if a man fell trees in a highway, whereby it is stopped up, to the annoyance of the passengers, it is a nuisance common to all,—a public nuisance,—for which, at common law, he might be prescribed by the commonwealth, and punished; but a suit against him could not be maintained by a private individual, who had only sustained the injury, common to all, of being turned out of the way; but that if, in attempting to ride over the trees fallen in the road, and individual's horse should be thrown, whereby himself or his horse is wounded, he can maintain an action for the special damage. The reason why he cannot, without special damage, maintain his suit for the nuisance against the wrongdoer, is that, if one could sue, all might, and this would be ruinous." This doctrine, then, clearly and early announced, seems to have been kept steadily in view in Kentucky, and the following cases may be cited in support or recognition of same: Seifried v. Hays, 81 Ky. 380, 50 Am. Rep. 167, was a slaughter-house case, damages being allowed only to those showing special damage. 1 Sutherland, Damages, p. 766, maintains the same general principle. Elliott, Roads & Streets, p. 501, says mere delay, caused by an obstruction, unaccompanied by any special damage or injury, does not, as a rule, give any right to an action for special damage. And in 16 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 976, it is said that for mere delay in a journey, or from being compelled to take a circuitous route, by reason of an obstruction in a river or a road, it would seem, from the weight of authority, that a cause of action does not arise. Wood, Nuisances, § 674, is cited to the same effect.

On the other question, as to whether any injury to the feelings, or by reason of any alarm or fear excited in either of the plaintiffs, by reason of the misconduct of the negro passengers, was so connected with any negligence in defendant, in obstructing the turnpike way, as that it may be fairly said to be the proximate cause of the same, and so to hold defendant liable, we find the general doctrine on this subject announced (16 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 428) to be that "it is a maxim that the law looks at the proximate, and not at the remote, cause of an injury, and that out of the application of this maxim grows the liability or nonliability of a defendant charged with the infliction of an injury by his negligence, and, unless the alleged negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of the injury of which plaintiff complains, there can be no recovery. For consequences of which his act or omission was only a mere condition or remote cause the defendant is not liable." The same work also recites (page 481) that there is no fixed, unbending rule that in every case will clearly distinguish proximate and remote causes, and discriminate between active, efficient causes, and apparent causes, that are merely conditions, and not causes of the injuries that follow. It follows that, to constitute actionable negligence there must not only be a causal connection between the negligence complained of and the injury suffered, but the injury must be by a natural and unbroken sequence, without intervening efficient causes, so that, but for the negligence of the defendant, the injury would not have occurred; that it must not only be a cause, but the proximate—that is, the direct and immediate efficient—cause of the injury.

In Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 74 27 L. R. A.

U. S. 7 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 65, Justice Miller said: "We have cited to us a general review of the doctrine of the proximate and remote causes, as it has arisen and been decided in the courts in a great variety of cases. It would be an unprofitable labor to enter into an examination of these cases. If we could deduce from them the best possible expression of the rule, it would remain, after all, to decide each case largely upon the special facts belonging to it, and often upon the very nicest discriminations." So that, after all, we can but return to the facts of this case, and say whether any negligence of the defendant in obstructing this passway, at the time and place, was the proximate cause of any alarm, fright, or injury arising or growing out of the misconduct of the passengers on said railway train at the time. This obstructing train was but a thing,—an inanimate thing, a physical fact, or force, or power,—barring the passing of plaintiff. It was not a person,—not a thing of life. The injury of which plaintiff complains was committed by persons, free moral agents, sentient beings, yet drunk as charged and offending the moral feelings of plaintiff by blasphemy and card playing and affrighting her by fighting, throwing rocks, and firing pistols. How can it be said that the railroad train was doing any or either of these things? It is not claimed that defendant's agents were employed in or participating in these wrongful acts. It should further be considered that these officers of the railway train were not civil officers. They had no right or power to arrest or imprison or determine the guilt or innocence of any particular individual, nor to inflict punishment on the guilty, if identified. Why, then, should it be said that they did themselves the things complained of, or that they suffered and permitted them to be done, to the injury of the plaintiffs, or so as to hold the railway company liable to plaintiffs for any damage sustained thereby? We recognize the fact that in certain limited cases these railway officers have a certain limited power or authority in the protection of the property of their employer, and in protecting from injury, violence, or annoyance the passengers on their trains, under their immediate custody and control, but beyond this we know of no such authority or power. If plaintiff's moral sensibilities were outraged, or if she was put in fear by the wrongful acts of others, her remedy is against those who injured her, and not against the railway company. As to the injury sustained by plaintiff Mrs. Shields by jumping out of her buggy, this is still further removed from any possible connection with the negligence of defendant in obstructing the passway. This negligence was not the proximate cause of either injury complained of. This was doubtless the view taken by the judge below in dismissing the petition of plaintiffs.

The judgment is affirmed.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

STATE of New Jersey; TIDE WATER PIPE CO., LIMITED, Prosecutor,

STATE BOARD OF ASSESSORS.

(.....N. J.....)

- *1. "Partnership associations" organized under the Pennsylvania Statute of June 2, 1874 are invested with the essential characteristics of corporations, and may be taxed as corporations in this state.
2. Such an association doing business in New Jersey is taxable under our corporation tax act.
3. The tax imposed by our corporation tax act on foreign pipe-line companies engaged in the transportation of oil from points in Pennsylvania and New York to points in New Jersey is not an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce.

(February 21, 1895.)

CERTIORARI to the State Board of Assessors to review an assessment which had been levied by them upon the property of prosecutor as a foreign corporation. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion. Before Magie, Lippincott, and Dixon, JJ. Mr. A. A. Clark for prosecutor. Mr. William Y. Johnson for defendant.

Dixon, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The Tide Water Pipe Company, Limited, having been taxed in the year 1888, under our Corporation Tax Act (Supp. Rev. p. 1016), has sued out this writ of certiorari to have the tax set aside. Its first contention is that it is not a corporation. It was organized under a statute of Pennsylvania entitled "An act authorizing the formation of partnership associations, in which the capital subscribed shall alone be responsible for the debts of the association, except under certain circumstances," approved June 2, 1874. Although associations formed under this act are called in Pennsylvania "joint-stock companies," and as such are probably included in the term "corporations" for the purposes of article 16 of the Pennsylvania Constitution, yet they do not seem to be regarded by the courts there as corporations, for in Tide Water Pipe Co. v. Kitchenman, 108 Pa. 680, the supreme court speaking of the present prosecutor, said, "It is not a corporation, but a limited partnership, organized under the Act of June 2, 1874." Even if this view be entertained in the domestic forum, it is not conclusive upon foreign jurisdictions; and, if the association is invested, by the laws under which it came into being, with the essential characteristics of a corporation, it may be treated as one in other states where it assumes to exercise corporate powers. Liverpool & L. L. & F. Ins. Co. v. Oliver, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 566, 19 L. ed. 1029. This association exists under legislative authority. It has a name of its own, under which it can hold, own, and convey real and personal property, transact business, sue and be sued. It can adopt and use a common seal. It can make by-laws and appoint officers for the management of its affairs. Its members are not responsible for its obligations, except to the extent of their unpaid subscriptions to its capital. Their interest in the association is personal estate, whatever be the nature of the company's property, and can be transferred to strangers without dissolving the association; and the association will continue during the term mentioned in its certificate, unless sooner dissolved by the vote of its members. Purd. Dig. p. 987. These powers comprise the substance of the general powers of corporations under the laws of Pennsylvania (Purd. Dig. p. 835), and also under the laws of New Jersey (Rev. p. 175). The association having come into this state to exercise its statutory privileges, it should be deemed a corporation within the meaning of our corporation tax act. State v. Berry, 52 N. J. L. 808.

The next objection to the tax is that the statute provides for a tax only against corporations doing business in this state, and the prosecutor, it is insisted, does no business in New Jersey, because its principal office is in Pennsylvania, and all the pecuniary proceeds of its business are received in Pennsylvania or New York. But, plainly, the company does business in New Jersey. Here it owns, maintains, and operates a pipe line across the state, a pumping station at Changewater, storage tanks, distributing apparatus, and a business office in Bayonne. All this it does as an artificial entity, distinct from the personal members who brought it into being, claiming the attributes which its Pennsylvania charter confers, and which, in our opinion, give it a corporate character. By taxing it as a corporation, the authorities of New Jersey acquiesce in this claim, but require the company to comply with the condition of such acquiescence. In this respect the company clearly comes within the intent and meaning of the statute. The last objection is that the imposition of the tax is an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce. According to the facts agreed upon, the entire business of the company consists of the transportation of oil or petroleum from points in New York and Pennsylvania to points in New Jersey, and of matters incidental thereto, and consequently it seems to be merely interstate commerce. The tax

*Headnotes by DIXON, J.

NOTE.—For the general subject of limited partnership, see notes to Jenning's Appeal (Pa.) 2 L. R. A. 43; Imperial Ref. Co. v. Wyman (C. C. N. D. Ohio) 3 L. R. A. 503; Fifth Ave. Bank v. Colgate (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 712.

For distinction between joint-stock company and corporation, see People v. Coleman (N. Y.) 16 L. R. A. 183; People v. Wemple (N. Y.) 6 L. R. A. 808.

For exclusion of and restrictions upon foreign corporations, see notes to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole (S. C.) 24 L. R. A. 222.

97 L. R. A.

See also 38 L. R. A. 225.

levied is designated by the statute as "an annual tax, for the use of the state, by way of a license for its corporate franchise," and consists of eight tenths of 1 per centum of "the gross amount of its receipts from the transportation of oil or petroleum through its pipes or in and by its tanks and cars in this state" during the year preceding the levy, the said gross amount being such proportion of its gross receipts for transportation of oil or petroleum over its whole line as the length of its line in this state bears to the length of its whole line. The question thus raised is one to be decided according to the views of the Supreme Court of the United States. Those views have been recently expressed in a case which appears to be on all fours with the present case. I refer to Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada, 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, which is so apposite for present purposes as to preclude the need or the utility of further investigation. Upon the authority of that decision I think the objection stated must be overruled.

The tax should be affirmed, with costs.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

Mary KROESSIN, Resp't.,

v.

Wilhelmina KELLER, App't.

(.....Minn.....)

"In this state a married woman cannot maintain an action simply in the nature of crim. con. against another woman.

(March 5, 1895.)

A PPEAL by defendant from an order of the District Court for Stearns County overruling a demurrer to the complaint in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged alienation of the affections of plaintiff's husband from her. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Theodore Bruener and D. T. Calhoun, for appellant:

The law never has and does not now secure to wives power to bring this kind of action.

Doe v. Roe, 8 L. R. A. 833, 82 Me. 508; Duffies v. Duffies, 8 L. R. A. 420, 76 Wis. 874.

Mr. Geo. H. Reynolds, for respondent:

Under section 1, chapter 207, of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1887, the wife "shall receive the same protection of all her rights as a woman which her husband does as a man, and for any injury sustained to her reputation, person, property, or any natural right, she shall have the same right to appeal in her own name alone to a court of law or equity for redress or protection that her husband has to appear in his name alone."

A married woman can maintain an action for the alienation of her husband's affection.

Warren v. Warren, 14 L. R. A. 545, 89 Mich. 128; Foot v. Card, 6 L. R. A. 829, 58 Conn. 1; Seaver v. Adams, 66 N. H. —; Westlake v. Westlake, 84 Ohio St. 633, 82 Am. Rep. 397; Bennett v. Bennett, 6 L. R. A. 553, 116 N. Y. 584; Jaynes v. Jaynes, 89 Hun. 40; Mehrhoff v. Mehrhoff, 26 Fed. Rep. 18; Bigelow, Torts, 8d ed. 158; Haynes v. Nowlin, 14 L. R. A. 787, 129 Ind. 581; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 267, note 2, *p. 223; Holmes v. Holmes, 138 Ind. 886; Wal- dron v. Waldron, 45 Fed. Rep. 815; Reed v. Reed, 6 Ind. App. 817.

Collins, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by a married woman against one of her own sex to recover damages, following, in a general way, the common-law form of declarations in crim. con. A general demurrer to the complaint was overruled in the court below, and by this appeal we are required to determine whether such an action can be maintained; the right to recover being based solely on alleged adulterous acts between plaintiff's husband and the defendant. It is to be noticed here that it is not alleged that the defendant was the seducer of the husband, or that plaintiff has been deprived of her support; nor is it an action for enticing the husband away, or for inducing him to abandon or desert his wife. We are quite safe in saying that at common law no such action could have been maintained. The injured husband alone brought crim. con., and he could sustain the action by simply showing adulterous intercourse. The grounds on which the right to recover was based are well stated in Cooley on Torts, 224, and the principal elements were the disgrace which attached to the plaintiff as the husband of the unfaithful wife,—and no such disgrace has ever rested upon the wife, if there was one, of the guilty defendant,—and, of more importance, the danger that a wife's infidelity might not only impose on her husband the support of children not his own, but, still worse, cast discredit upon the legitimacy of those really begotten by him. Because of these elements, the man was always conclusively presumed to be the guilty party. In the eye of the law, the female could not even give her consent to the adulterous acts, and, as a result, it was no defense in this form of action that the defendant had been enticed into criminal conversation through the acts and practices of the woman. From this statement as to the grounds or elements constituting this action, it will be seen that the principal ones cannot possibly exist or be involved in a similar action brought by a wife. And what has been said about the unavailability of the defense that the defendant himself was the victim, and not the seducer, is suggestive of what the courts might have to hold to be the rule of pleading, and what they might have to inquire into, upon the trial of an action of this kind. Would it be held, following the old rule we have mentioned, and for which the reason seems well founded, that it was no defense for the female sued to allege and prove that she was the party seduced, and that the greater wrong and injury had been inflicted upon her, not upon the plaintiff wife? or would the contrary rule prevail? But we need not consider the subject further, for a moment's reflection will suggest the remarkable results flowing from the adoption of either rule.

*Headnote by COLLINS, J.

NOTE.—The above case presents a novel question and makes an important distinction between it and cases of enticing away a husband, such as that of Hodgkinson v. Hodgkinson (Neb.) 27 L. R. A. 120, and cases mentioned in footnotes thereto. 27 L. R. A.

We have been cited to quite a number of cases, determined in the courts of last resort in this country, in which it has been held, without much stress being laid on statutes concerning the rights of married women, that an action may be maintained by a wife against one who wrongfully induces and procures her husband to abandon or send her away. Westlake v. Westlake, 34 Ohio St. 621, 32 Am. Rep. 897, the court being divided in opinion, is a leading case on this view of the subject. A later one, announcing the same doctrine, but made to rest much more on the married woman's acts in the state of Michigan and similar to our own, is Warren v. Warren, 89 Mich. 128, 14 L. R. A. 545. The plaintiff's counsel has been industrious in collecting this class of cases in his brief, and to them we add Price v. Price (Iowa) 60 N. W. Rep. 202. But even on this proposition, and despite broad statutory enactments affecting the rights of married women, the courts are not entirely agreed, for in Maine and Wisconsin it has been held that such an action cannot be maintained. Doe v. Roe, 83 Me. 503, 8 L. R. A. 883; Duffles v. Duffles, 76 Wis. 874, 8 L. R. A. 420. But we need not decide, as between these cases, for the exact question raised by the demurrer here was not the one under consideration in any we have cited. They were brought for enticing away the husband; causing him to withdraw his support from the wife; to abandon or desert her,—an entirely distinct and separate cause of action from that set out in the plaintiff's complaint. At common law this form of action was wholly different in pleadings and proof, as well as parties, from crim. con. It proceeded, and still proceeds, upon different grounds, and we do not regard cases of that nature as authority in this. We are not unmindful of the fact that plaintiff's counsel has presented two cases—Seaver v. Adams, 66 N. H. —, and Haynes v. Nowlin, 129 Ind. 581, 14 L. R. A. 787,—in which it is held that an action by a wife against another woman, based on a complaint very much like this, will lie. But in these cases the authorities before referred to are cited and relied on as directly in point. The courts rendering these decisions do not seem to have considered that there is, and inevitably must be, a marked distinction between an action charging a defendant with having induced and enticed a husband to withdraw his support from his wife and to abandon and desert her and one similar to crim. con. We think the difference noticeable and material, although we do not wish to be understood as holding that the one first mentioned will lie. That question is not before us, and we simply express our conviction that a wife cannot maintain an action in the nature of crim. con. Such actions would "seem to be better calculated to inflict pain upon innocent members of the families of the parties than to secure redress to the persons injured." The power to bring such actions would furnish wives "with the means of inflicting untold misery upon others, with little hope of redress for themselves." We find nothing in our statutes in respect to the rights of married women which indicates that the power to proceed in this form of action was intended to be conferred. Attention has been called to Gen. Laws 1887, chap. 207, § 1. We have heretofore had occasion to comment upon that act, and have not changed our views as then expressed. Althen v. Tarbois, 48 Minn. 18.

Order reversed.

NORTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of North Dakota

v.

Myron R. KENT, Plff. in Err.

(.....N. Dak. ....)

*1. When a person on trial for felony presents to the judge of the district in which the indictment is pending his affidavit stating that he cannot have an impartial trial by reason of the bias and prejudice of such judge, it is the absolute duty of such *Headnotes by CORLISS, J.

NOTE.—The subject of the employment of private counsel to aid the prosecution in a criminal case is treated with unusual fullness in the present case. The same is true also of the subject of indictments against principals who employ agents in the commission of crimes.

27 L. R. A.

judge to call in another judge to try the case. For him to refuse to do so is error. The word "may" in the Statute (Comp. Laws, § 7312) must be construed as "must" under a familiar rule of construction.

2. It is not error for the trial judge to permit an attorney who is neither a resident nor a member of the bar of his state, but is a non-resident of this state, and who is employed solely by relatives of the person for whose murder the accused is being tried, to assist the prosecuting attorney on the trial, the latter having requested the judge that such counsel be permitted to aid him in the case.

3. Under section 7260, Compiled Laws, it is proper to charge as principal in the homicide one who counsels and directs a murder, and who therefore would have been an accessory before the fact at common law. The information or indictment may aver that he himself fired the fatal shot which was in fact fired by the one he instigated to commit the crime.

4. Great latitude should be allowed in the cross-examination of an accomplice. Hence it was error for the court to refuse to allow counsel for the accused to ask the accomplice who had by his own testimony made out a case of murder against himself whether he expected to be hung.
5. Held, further, that it was error to refuse to permit counsel for the accused to prove as bearing upon the credibility of the accomplice that no proceedings whatever had been instituted against him for the murder he had confessedly committed, although several months had elapsed since the crime was perpetrated.
6. In this state no person can be convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Comp. Laws, § 7812. The corroboration must come from some source independent of the accomplice. But it is not necessary that the corroborating evidence should be sufficient in itself to support a conviction. It is enough if it tends to connect the accused with the commission of the offense. It must, however, tend to connect the accused with the commission of the crime. Evidence corroborating the accomplice as to the fact that a crime has been committed or with respect to the fact that the accomplice is guilty thereof will not satisfy the requirements of the statute.
7. Instructions given by the accused to the accomplice touching the story the latter was to tell in explanation of the killing may be sworn to by the accomplice, and it is not error for the court to receive in evidence a book in which such instructions were written down by the accomplice, when the latter swears he wrote them down as they were given to him by the accused and under his direction.
8. Nor was it error for the court to allow the accomplice, who was a Bohemian, to translate into English these written instructions which he himself had written in the book in the Bohemian dialect, he having testified to his ability to make the translation correctly.

(March 20, 1895.)

ERROR to the District Court for Morton County to review a judgment convicting defendant of murder. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. M. A. Hildreth, J. E. Campbell, and J. G. Perrault, for plaintiff in error:

The motion for change of judges should have been granted.

State v. Henning, 3 S. Dak. 492; Goldsbey v. State, 18 Ind. 147; Mershon v. State, 44 Ind. 598; Manly v. State, 52 Ind. 215; Duggins v. State, 66 Ind. 850; State v. Neuner, 49 Conn. 233; Ticknor v. McClelland, 84 Ill. 471; Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 587; Worcester County v. Schlesinger, 16 Gray, 168; Com. v. Smith, 111 Mass. 407; Rez v. Barlow, Carth. 293; Rez v. Derby, Skin. 370; Potter's Dwar. Stat. p. 220, and cases cited; Endlich Interpretation of Statutes, § 306, p. 416; State v. Palmer (S. Dak.) Jan. 13, 1894.

There was no authority for the courts permitting Mr. Frank M. Nye, of the bar of Hennepin county, Minn., and district attorney of that county, to appear in this case.

1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. §§ 988, et seq.; Meister v. People, 81 Mich. 99; State v. Russell, 83 Wis. 330.

27 L. R. A.

A conspiracy having been prima facie established by competent evidence, to commit a wrongful act, conduct of a co-defendant leading up to the commission of the act, is admissible; but subsequent conduct on the part of the co-defendant cannot bind the defendant, and is not admissible.

People v. Bleeker, 2 Wheel. Crim. Cas. 256; People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401; People v. Moore, 45 Cal. 19; Com. v. Crowninshield, 10 Pick. 497; Greenl. Ev. 14th ed. § 111.

Any statement made by Swedensky which was not a part of the criminal enterprise, and made after the homicide was consummated, was inadmissible, and it was error to admit it.

Stone v. People, 18 Hun, 265; 8 Rice, Crim. Ev. p. 902, and cases cited.

It did not appear that Swedensky was competent to translate the writing offered in evidence. He was not sworn as an interpreter; he was not shown competent; and he was directly interested.

The defendant's guilt must be established by evidence of his own acts.

People v. Thoms, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 256; People v. Courtney, 28 Hun, 589; Cuyler v. McCartney, 40 N. Y. 221; Ormsby v. People, 53 N. Y. 472; Stephen's Dig. Crim. Ev. art. 39; 8 Rice, Crim. Ev. §§ 50, 70.

To make the acts and declarations of the alleged confederate competent evidence against Kent, it was necessary to prove prima facie that he, Kent, had conspired with Swedensky to murder the deceased.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 8; People v. Bennett, 49 N. Y. 144.

It was therefore error to permit him to testify as to the book and to translate it.

Ormsby v. People, supra; McKenzie v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 569; Brown v. United States, 150 U. S. 93, 87 L. ed. 1010; State v. Green, 40 S. C. 323; State v. Beaulaugh, 92 Mo. 490; Willey v. State, 23 Tex. App. 408; State v. Melrose, 98 Mo. 594; People v. Pavlik, 3 N. Y. Supp. 232; People v. Sharp, 107 N. Y. 425; Crook v. State, 27 Tex. App. 198.

A confession by a co-conspirator after the crime is accomplished binds him but not his co-conspirators.

State v. Green, supra; People v. White, 62 Hun, 114; Brown v. United States, 150 U. S. 93, 87 L. ed. 1010.

When the defendant sought to show, by the clerk of the court, that no steps whatever had been taken looking to the prosecution of Swedensky, the court erred in shutting out the testimony and in refusing to allow the defendant to make such proof.

Abbott, Crim. Trial Brief, § 884, and cases cited; People v. Whipple, 9 Cow. 708; People v. Langtree, 64 Cal. 256.

Messrs. John F. Cowan, Atty-Gen., and H. G. Voss, for defendant in error:

The word "may" in its ordinary and grammatical sense is permissive merely.

State v. Holt County Court Justices, 39 Mo. 521; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Ex parte Simonton, 9 Port. (Ala.) 395, 33 Am. Dec. 350; Gaines v. Harvin, 19 Ala. 492; Newburgh & C. Turnp. Road v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. 113, 1 L. ed. 1027; Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 587.

In the case before us we do not perceive that the public as such have any interest, nor is the duty imposed upon any officer, nor do the rights of the parties demand, that "may" shall be made to mean "shall" in order that the jury may be enabled to render a just verdict. It is discretionary with the court to give this direction to the jury.

Healy v. Dettra (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 168; Williams v. People, 24 N. Y. 405; Malcolm v. Rogers, 5 Cow. 188, 15 Am. Dec. 464; Re Buffalo & B. Pl. Road Co's Application v. Lancaster Highway Comrs. 10 How. Pr. 237; Outler v. Howard, 9 Wis. 809; Kelley v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 83; Market Nat. Bank of New York v. Hogan, 21 Wis. 818; Hungerford v. Oushing, 2 Wis. 897.

The charge of prejudice or bias is too loosely made to merit any consideration.

Burke v. Mayall, 10 Minn. 287; People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 81; Whart. Crim. Pl. & Pr. §§ 602-605.

The court permitted no error in permitting Mr. Frank M. Nye to appear to assist the state's attorney in the prosecution of this case.

Poin v. State, 14 Neb. 540; Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147; State v. Crafton (Iowa) Oct. 7, 1898; State v. Shreve, 81 Iowa, 615; Com. v. Williams, 2 Cush. 582; 5 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 718; Gardner v. State, 55 N. J. L. 17; People v. Powell, 11 L. R. A. 75, 87 Cal. 343.

A person charged in the indictment with the commission of a felony may be convicted upon proof and although absent when the crime was committed that he advised and procured its commission.

People v. Biven, 112 N. Y. 79; Campbell v. Com. 84 Pa. 187; State v. Hessian, 58 Iowa, 68; State v. Phelps (S. Dak.) June 18, 1894; People v. Roselle, 78 Cal. 84; People v. Outeveras, 48 Cal. 19; Yoe v. People, 49 Ill. 410; State v. Duncan, 7 Wash. 886.

Corliss, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was convicted of the crime of murder. The jury, under the statute, decided that he should suffer death. Comp. Laws, § 6449. Having been sentenced to be hung he obtained a writ of error and the whole case is now before us for review.

The first point we will consider relates to the information. In it the accused is charged as principal. The information alleges that he himself held and discharged the gun by which the victim was killed. It contains no averment that he counseled and directed any third person to commit the crime. The undisputed fact is that the murdered person, who was Kent's own wife, was shot and killed by another and that Kent's connection with the homicide, if any, was as the instigator of the accomplice. At the time the fatal shot was fired Kent was many miles away. At common law Kent would have been an accessory before the fact. He could not legally have been indicted as principal. Under such an indictment he could not at common law be convicted. This rule, however, was purely technical, and was limited in its scope to felonies. In cases of misdemeanors all the guilty persons were, at common law, principals, as well those who counseled and directed the crime as those who personally committed the offense. 1 Bishop, Crim. L. §§ 681, 685, 686. There was a single exception to this rule in felonies in that there were no accessories in cases of high treason. An accessory after the fact could not be convicted in advance of the conviction of the principal and he could not be indicted as a principal. The specific facts showing his subsequent connection with the traitorous project must have been set forth in the indictment. 1 Bishop, Crim. L. § 701. In misdemeanors and high treason the pleader was always at liberty to charge the accessory as principal in the indictment. It was however, entirely proper to set forth that the accused had counseled or directed the commission of the crime by another; but this was not necessary. As the law regarded all who were implicated as principals, they might all be proceeded against as principals. 1 Bishop, Crim. L. §§ 681, 685. This distinction between misdemeanors and treasons on the one hand and felonies on the other with respect to the allegations of the indictment and the necessity of first trying the actual principal never had any substantial foundation in principle. 1 Bishop, Crim. L. § 678. There is therefore no reason why we should hesitate giving to our statute to which we will now refer a construction which will place felonies in the same category with misdemeanors and treason as far as these questions are concerned. The statute provides that, "the distinction between an accessory before the fact and a principal, and between principals in the first and second degree, in cases of felony, is abrogated, and all persons concerned in the commission of a felony, whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid and abet in its commission, though not present, must hereafter be indicted, tried, and punished as principals, and no additional facts need be alleged in any indictment against such an accessory that are required in an indictment against his principal." Comp. Laws, § 7260. The language of this statute is too explicit to leave room for doubt as to the intent of the law-making power. The purpose it was framed and passed to accomplish was the abrogation of this purely arbitrary distinction between felonies and other offenses, and the placing of all criminal as well as all civil pleading under the same general rule, which, regarding the act of the agent as the act of the principal himself, permits the averment to be made against him that he himself did what in fact was done by his agent for him. See 1 Bishop, Crim. L. § 675. The authorities are numerous which hold that under this same or similar statutes the one who would at common law be a mere accessory before the fact may be indicted as principal,—as though he had himself fired the shot, or administered the poison or struck the fatal blow. Some of the statutes which have been so construed are by no means as explicit in their language as section 7260. Kronek v. People, 184 Ill. 139, 8 L. R. A. 837; People v. Biven, 112 N. Y. 79; Baxter v. People, 6 Ill. 868; Dempsey v. People, 47 Ill. 838; Spies v. Pe- ple, 122 Ill. 1; People v. Outeveras, 48 Cal. 19; State v. Hessian, 58 Iowa, 68; State v. Duncan, 7 Wash. 336; People v. Roselle, 78 Cal. 84; Griffith v. State, 90 Ala. 583. See also State v. Phelps (S. Dak.) 59 N. W. Rep. 471.

This section it is urged is unconstitutional. We discover no provision of our constitution which it violates. Our organic law does not require that the accused shall be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation. The Federal Constitution does (article 6 of Amendment to Constitution), but this provision of the Constitution of the United States does not relate to proceedings in the state courts. Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 26. We are referred to sections 7241 and 7242, Compiled Laws, as being repugnant to 7260. If they were repugnant they would to that extent have to yield to the latter section. But we are unable to find in these two sections anything which forbids the indicting of an accessory as if he were principal. Under them it would be proper to charge an accessory before the fact in the case of a misdemeanor as though he were principal had section 7260 never been enacted. This latter section merely places felonies in the same class. Section 7241 declares that the indictment must contain "a statement of the acts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language and in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended."

What are the facts constituting the offense? They are the shooting of the deceased with a gun with the premeditated design to effect her death and the killing of her by such instrumentality used with such a motive. Counseling and directing this criminal enterprise is not a part of the crime itself. By proof of such counseling and direction the plaintiff in error is so connected with the criminal act that in contemplation of law he himself performed it. But the crime itself is entirely distinct from his connection with it. The killing of Mrs. Kent would have been murder if Kent had never participated in it at all. He is charged with having himself performed these acts, and this charge can be made good by evidence that he counseled and directed the murder because such conduct on his part makes him in the eye of the law a participant in the physical act of taking the human life, the same as if he had himself fired the fatal shot. The fact that he counsels and directs is an evidential fact whose utmost scope is to establish that the accused was a principal in the crime. It in no manner tends to prove the crime itself. Evidential facts should never be pleaded as a general rule. It is certainly not necessary to plead them. All the pleader need do is to aver the ultimate facts which the evidential fact is proved to establish. That ultimate fact in this case was the connection of the accused with this murder as a principal in the crime. That was pleaded, and could be proved by evidence that he fired the shot or hired an assassin to fire it. Our statute imposes upon the criminal pleader no more onerous duty in framing an indictment than did the common law. And yet with respect to treason and misdemeanors it has always been regarded as proper pleading to aver that the accessory before the fact committed the crime himself. Such form of pleading has been universally considered as amply protecting the accused from surprise on the trial. Indeed as we have seen there was no reason why felonies should not have been included in the general rule. Our statute merely abrogates a distinction that had no foundation in reason. The argument that the accused will not be fairly apprised of the charge against him has been considered of no force with respect to treason and misdemeanors for centuries; and indeed as is asserted by the court in People v. Bliven, 112 N. Y. 79, and is satisfactorily established by the reasoning of the court in State v. Duncan, 7 Wash. 336, the argument is more "fanciful than real." We therefore hold that it was proper to charge Kent in the information as principal. We now approach a very interesting question. The state's attorney was assisted on the trial by Mr. Nye, a citizen of Minnesota and a member of the bar of that state. He was retained by the brothers of the murdered woman to assist in the prosecution. He stated to the trial judge that, while he had been paid nothing by his clients and had had no talk with them on the subject of fees, he presumed that they would compensate him for his services in the case. He was not employed by the county of Morton in which the crime was committed or by the state's attorney of that county to assist in the prosecution; but the latter stated in open court that he desired to have Mr. Nye assist him for the reason that he, the state's attorney, was unable because of physical ailments to stand the labor and strain of the case without aid. Mr. Nye was allowed, despite the objection of the counsel for the accused, to assist in the trial of the case, taking a very active part therein. Counsel for the accused insists that this was prejudicial error. There are two grounds on which he assails the action of the trial judge in permitting Mr. Nye to participate in the trial.—first that he was employed by private persons and not by the public; second, that he was neither a resident nor a member of the bar of this state. We will discuss these two points in the order in which they are stated. In England criminal prosecutions were generally carried on by individuals interested in the punishment of the accused and not by the public. The private prosecutor employed his own counsel, had the indictment found and the case laid before the grand jury and took charge of the trial before the petit jury. 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 9, 825. This system does not prevail in this state. Here in each court there is a public prosecutor called the state's attorney for that county. It is his duty to prosecute all criminal offenses triable in that county. He is paid a salary for that purpose out of the public funds. He is not allowed to receive any fee or reward from or on behalf of any prosecutor or any individual for services in any prosecution or business to which it is his official duty to attend; nor be concerned as attorney or counsel for either party other than for the state or the county in any civil action depending on the same state of facts upon which any criminal prosecution commenced but undetermined shall depend. Comp. Laws, §§ 427-433. We do not think that this change in policy indicates a purpose to exclude the counsel for interested persons from all participation in the prosecution. Such counsel cannot initiate the proceedings or conduct them. The control of criminal prosecution has been taken from private hands and transferred to public functionaries, chosen for that express purpose. But there is nothing in the statute to justify the conclusion that counsel employed by interested persons may not assist the public prosecutor in case he and the trial judge deem this course proper. The fact that the state's attorney who controls criminal cases is not allowed to receive any compensation from private prosecutors for the prosecution of a criminal case does not warrant the conclusion that no counsel paid by private persons shall be permitted to assist in the trial of such a case. It is one thing to have the prosecution entirely in the hands of one who may be influenced because of a retainer by the strong desire of his client to secure a conviction, but it is an entirely different thing to allow such an interested counsel to aid in the prosecution one who stands affected by no other motive than that of securing the punishment of guilt, and who has absolute control over the case. The law has removed criminal prosecutions from the control of private interests; but it has not excluded such interests from all participation therein. If no error is committed on the trial we fail to see how an accused can be prejudiced by the fact that those personally interested have employed private counsel to aid the public prosecutor. Certainly he should not be heard to complain of the zeal of the private counsel, if such counsel has not allowed his zeal to hurry him into errors. The best mode of reaching the truth is by the strenuous contentions of opposing counsel each animated by the conviction that the case that he has espoused is just. The public have some interests at stake in a criminal prosecution. May all the zeal be displayed on one side and none be tolerated on the other? The public interests demand that a prosecution should be conducted with energy and skill. While the prosecuting officer should see that no unfair advantage is taken of the accused, yet he is not a judicial officer. Those who are required to exercise judicial functions in the case are the judge and the jury. The public prosecutor is necessarily a partisan in the case. If he were compelled to proceed with the same circumspection as the judge and jury, there would be an end to the conviction of criminals. Zeal in the prosecution of criminal cases is therefore to be commended and not condemned. It is the zeal of counsel in the court-room alone of which the accused can complain. No decision can be found which questions the right of the prosecuting officer to consult with and receive all manner of aid even during the trial from the counsel for private parties outside of the court-room. And if such zeal in the court-room on the trial does not result in error what conceivable difference can it make whether such assistance was employed by the public or by private persons? May not cross-examination of witnesses be conducted and arguments to court and jury be made by one who is as much convinced of the guilt of the accused as his counsel is persuaded of his innocence? The manner of conducting the cases in the court-room cannot work legal prejudice to the accused without resulting in error for which the conviction will be set aside. It is therefore of no legal importance what inspires the zeal of the attorney who assists in the trial. Whatever is done to the injury of the prisoner by private counsel for which he can have no redress is done out of court; for instance by concealing or fabricating evidence. At just this point where the zeal of counsel employed by private parties may be deadly to the accused, no kind of safeguard is or can be thrown around him. The prosecuting officer may consult with and be entirely governed by the advice of such private counsel and yet the accused has no remedy if the private counsel does not participate in the trial. If he does so participate his zeal works no more prejudice to the accused than the zeal of any other equally able counsel who may be employed by the public. The cases agree that an assistant hired by the public may engage in the trial without giving the prisoner any legal cause for complaint. Of course the latter may think he is prejudiced because of being compelled to confront an exceptionally able and experienced prosecutor; but this furnishes no legal ground for overthrowing the conviction. The question can be placed in a clear light by the following statement of it. Can a defendant in a criminal case who is obliged to submit to the zeal of an assistant prosecutor employed by the public insist that the zeal of an assistant counsel employed by interested parties shall not be displayed against him although it results in no error on the part of the prosecution in the management of the case? We think there is only one answer to this question and that is against the right of the accused to complain in either case so long as no error has been committed by the assistant on the trial. The rule is different, however, in Michigan and Massachusetts under statutes very similar to ours. Meister v. People, 31 Mich. 99; Sneed v. People, 88 Mich. 251; People v. Hurst, 41 Mich. 338; People v. Bemis, 51 Mich. 422; Com. v. Gibbs, 4 Gray, 146.

The reasoning of Judge Campbell in Meister v. People, while very plausible, does not convince us that there should be interpolated into the statute an implied prohibition against counsel employed by interested parties assisting in the prosecution. We are unable to discover in the statute any other policy than that of transferring the control of criminal prosecutions from private to public hands. We think that the control of the public prosecutor over the proceedings is a sufficient guaranty that the accused will not be made the innocent victim of over-zealous prosecution by private persons. While aware that Judge Campbell has made out a strong case in support of his view, we cannot discover in the legislature of this state the evidence of a policy hostile to the quite general practice of allowing the prosecuting officer to be assisted by counsel retained by those having a personal interest in the prosecution distinct from that of the general public. In support of our ruling on this point we cite the following cases: State v. Helm (Iowa) 61 N. W. Rep. 846; Keyes v. State, 123 Ind. 537; Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540; State v. Bartlett, 55 Me. 230; State v. Fitzgerald, 49 Iowa, 260, 81 Am. Rep. 148; State v. Wilson, 24 Kan. 189; Burkhard v. State, 18 Tex. App. 599-618; Gardner v. State, 55 N. J. L. 17; Bennysfield v. Com. 18 Ky. L. Rep. 446; People v. Tidwell, 4 Utah, 506; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 281; Whart. Crim. Pl. & Pr. § 555. See also People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 848, 11 L. R. A. 75; Jackson v. State, 81 Wis. 127; United States v. Hanway, 2 Wall. Jr. 189. See particularly the reasoning of Judge Elliott in Keyes v. State, 123 Ind. 537, and Judge Brewer in State v. Wilson, 24 Kan. 189, 86 Am. Rep. 257.

The decision of the Wisconsin supreme court in Biemel v. State, 71 Wis. 444, sustaining the Michigan and Massachusetts doctrine, appears to be based upon legislation in that state authorizing the trial judge to appoint an assistant whenever he thinks the public interests require it and providing that such assistant shall be paid out of the public funds. See pages 444 and 445. The case of Lawrence v. State, 50 Wis. 507, is distinguished in the Biemel Case on the ground that it was decided before the new statute was passed giving the trial judge power to appoint an assistant to be paid out of the public treasury. The Lawrence Case is more in harmony with than opposed to our views. We hold that it was not error to assist in the prosecution at the request of the state's attorney because of his having been employed by the brothers of the murdered woman. Does the fact that he was not a member of the bar of this state render him an improper person to participate in criminal prosecution? This precise question was decided in favor of the contention of counsel for the accused in Wisconsin. State v. Russell, 88 Wis. 330. But the decision was founded on the wording of the statute of that state authorizing the trial judge to appoint counsel to assist in the prosecution. The court held that the word "counsel" meant a member of the bar of that state. We have no such statute in this state. On the contrary our legislation seems to voice a different policy. The act which regulates the admission of attorneys to practice provides that, "any member of the bar of another state actually engaged in any case or matter pending in any court of this state may be permitted by such court to appear in and conduct such case or matter while retaining his residence in another state without being subject to the foregoing provisions of this act." Laws 1891, chap. 1199, § 7. Our legislature so far from being inimical to the employment of nonresident counsel to assist in criminal prosecutions seems to place them on the same footing in this respect as resident attorneys. The statute in express terms dispenses with the necessity of the foreign counsel taking any oath. Therefore one of the main arguments against allowing a foreign attorney to assist the prosecution in a criminal trial, put forth by the court in the Russell Case, does not have any application in this state with its policy as shaped by legislation, of permitting foreign counsel to try causes without taking any oath. Whether such counsel does or does not take an oath is practically of little moment to the accused. Every attorney of high character is acting under the restraint of a more sacred oath than that which is formally administered to him in court,—the oath which through his whole career he constantly administers to himself in secret before the solemn tribunal of his own conscience. A mere formal, lip-uttered oath will never control the conduct unless it is the echo of an oath taken within. The fact that the foreign attorney is not amenable to the court before which he appears, as is a resident attorney, cannot prejudice the rights of the accused. The trial judge can always at any stage of the prosecution refuse to permit him longer to remain in the case; and if the judge considers that his conduct has been prejudicial to the accused, he can always grant the accused a new trial. It is safe to leave these matters to the sound judgment of an impartial magistrate.

We come now to what we regard as a fatal error. Section 7312 of the Compiled Laws provides as follows: "A criminal action, prosecuted by indictment, may, at any time before trial is begun, on the application of the defendant, be removed from the court in which it is pending, if the offense charged in the indictment be punishable with death, or imprisonment in the territorial prison, whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court by affidavit, or if the court should so order by other testimony, that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in such county or subdivision, in which case the court may order the person accused to be tried in some near or adjoining county, in any district where a fair and impartial trial can be had; but the party accused shall be entitled to a removal of the action but once, and no more. and if the accused shall make an affidavit that he cannot have an impartial trial, by reason of the bias or prejudice of the presiding judge of the district court where the indictment is pending, the judge of such court may call any other judge of a district court to preside at said trial, and do any other act with reference thereto, as though he was presiding judge of said district court."

On the very threshold of the trial the counsel for the accused presented to the court an affidavit sworn to by the accused stating that he could not have a fair and impartial trial by reason of the bias, prejudice, and partiality of Judge Winchester, who was the judge of the district in which the information was pending; and thereupon counsel for the accused moved under the above-quoted section of the statute that Judge Winchester call in another judge of the district court to preside at the trial. This motion was denied. In so doing the learned trial court erred. The error is fundamental and because of it we are obliged to reverse the conviction. It is true that the statute declares that the trial judge "may" call in another judge. But permissive language is often construed as mandatory. If a comprehensive survey of a statute leads to the conclusion that the legislative purpose was to confer authority on one for the benefit of another, then the donee of such power has no discretion about exercising it. Said Chief Justice Dixon in Outler v. Howard, 9 Wis. 809, at page 812: "The cases fully establish the doctrine that when public corporations or officers are authorized to perform an act for others which benefits them, then the corporations or officers are bound to perform the act. The power is given to them not for their own but for the benefit of those in whose behalf they are called upon to act; and such is presumed to be the legislative intent. In such cases they have a claim de jure to the exercise of the power." Mr. Sutherland in his work on Statutory Construction at page 597 says that permissive words are "peremptory when used to clothe a public officer with power to do an act which ought to be done for the sake of justice or which concerns the public interest or the rights of third persons." In Rock Island County Suprs. v. United States, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 485, 18 L. ed. 419, the court says at pages 446 and 447: "The conclusion to be deduced from the authorities is, that where power is given to public officers, in the language of the act before us, or in equivalent language—whenever the public interest or individual rights call for its exercise—the language used, though permissive in form, is in fact peremptory. What they are empowered to do for a third person the law requires shall be done. The power is given, not for their benefit, but for his. It is placed with the depositary to meet the demands of right, and to prevent a failure of justice. It is given as a remedy to those entitled to its aid, and who would otherwise be remediless. In all such cases it is held that the intent of the legislature, which is the test, was not to devolve a mere discretion, but to impose a positive and absolute duty." In the light of the rule which the foregoing authorities recognize,—a rule thoroughly settled,—we will proceed to construe the statute in question. For whose benefit was it enacted? Obviously for the sole benefit of those accused of crime that they might be protected against even the unconscious leaning of a biased judge in favor of the prosecution. By expressions of countenance, by tone of voice, by gesture—in a multitude of ways, a prejudiced judge may unwittingly suffer his feeling against the prisoner to so express itself in conduct that the bias of the magistrate passes into the minds of the jury thus depriving the accused of a fair trial before an impartial tribunal. When his prejudice exists the law intends that another judge shall try the case. It cannot admit of doubt that the act we are interpreting was passed to give the prisoner the right to insist on a trial before a different judge when the judge of the district in which the indictment is pending is biased. From this proposition there flows the corollary that on the presentation of an affidavit stating such bias the right of the accused to have another judge called in to try the case is absolute. If not, then the judge who is so attacked for prejudice sits in judgment on the question of his own bias. It is true that no property interests of his own are involved. Neither is his life or his liberty at stake. But the mind that cannot decide that it is biased without at the same time admitting by such decision that it was willing in that condition to enter on the trial of the man against whom the prejudice is entertained without disclosing such bias and that it would have carried on such trial to its close conscious that it was not impartial, a mind placed in a position where a decision against its own freedom from bias will bring it such humiliation, is not that free, calm, disinterested mind with respect to that question which the law requires and the honest administration of justice demands. This consideration renders it impossible for us to impute to the legislature the purpose to permit the judge so assailed to pass upon his own bias. The language of the statute confirms our view that he is not to try this question. This section contains two distinct provisions: one relating to a change of venue on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the criminal action is pending; and the other referring to a change of judges because of the bias or prejudice of the judge of the court in which the indictment is pending. The question whether a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the action is triable must be settled by the judge. It must be made to appear to his satisfaction by affidavit that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in that county. Having no interest in the question the law very properly leaves it to him for decision. That he may decide the statute provides that affidavits may be used before him to prove or disprove this fact. The judge in his discretion may hear testimony on this subject. But when we come to that branch of the statute which relates to his own bias nothing is said of his being satisfied of it; nor is there any provision made for the use on the application for a change of judges of any other affidavit than that of the accused stating that by reason of the bias and prejudice of the judge he cannot have an impartial trial. Neither does the statute call for or permit the use of any other evidence than such affidavit. These considerations make it clear that the judge is not to try the question of his own bias. The accused need not prove it to the satisfaction of the judge. He is not even allowed to introduce evidence on that point aside from his own affidavit. Although he might have a score of witnesses to whom the judge had stated his prejudice, he, the prisoner, is powerless to use, on this application, the testimony of one of them. These observations lead us inevitably to the following conclusions touching the rights under this statute of a defendant in a criminal action. When the judge of the court in which the indictment is pending is biased, the defendant may insist that another judge shall be called in to try the case. The judge so attacked cannot try the question of his own bias. Unless therefore the right to a change of judges is absolute on making the statutory affidavit, the protection of this salutary law is lost to the defendant, and its enactment was an idle deed. The nature of the power vested in the trial judge to call in another judge to try the cause; the circumstances under which it is to be exercised; the fact that its exercise is beneficial to one accused of crime; the question that no one shall decide a question in which he is interested; and finally the very language of the statute itself, aside from the word "may,"—these all unite to bring this law within the scope of that established rule which transmutes the permissive word "may" into the imperative word "must." The supreme court of South Dakota has reached the same conclusion under the same statute. State v. Henning, 8 S. Dak. 492; State v. Palmer (S. Dak.) 57 N. W. Rep. 490. A single sentence in the opinion of the court in Hungerford v. Oushing, 3 Wis. 397, will suffice to show that that decision turned on the language of a statute radically different from the one we are construing. Said the court: "It will be seen by a reference to the statute that the prejudice of the judge is classified with the other facts of the existence of some one of which the judge must be satisfied in order to justify him in changing the venue." We might pause here as our conclusion on this point leads us to a reversal. But we deem it our duty to settle certain questions which are sure to arise on another trial and some of which we are of opinion were erroneously decided by the trial court. The murder that was committed was so atrocious in its character that it is to be hoped that the accused, if again found guilty of instigating it, will not be in position to secure a third trial because of errors occurring on a second trial.

On the trial the theory of the prosecution was that the murdered woman was slain in pursuance of a conspiracy in which her husband, the accused, figured as the originator of the criminal scheme and the instigator of the homicide, and a Bohemian named Swedensky played the part of a venal tool. This theory the testimony of the accomplice fully supported. He told the story of this conspiracy from the time that the accused first unfolded it to him, about a month before the murder, to its horrible consummation in the death of the unsuspecting wife. He testified that when Kent first broached the subject, he refused to aid him because of fear; but that Kent was persistent in his importunities constantly dangling before the eyes of the Bohemian the wages he could earn by executing for Kent his fell purpose. The price Swedensky was to be paid for this deed, was, according to his testimony, the sum of $18,000. Finally about four days before the fatal shot was fired, Swedensky says that he yielded being assured by Kent that there was no danger; that he could claim that the shooting was accidental and that after being in jail for a few days he would be liberated. To give the semblance of truth to his story that the killing was unintentional he testified in substance that Kent told him what course to pursue. He was to awaken Mrs. Kent in the night and tell her that there was some one outside the house looking in the window; Kent stated to him that the boy (the son of the accused and the murdered woman, about ten years of age) would think that he saw some one around the house; that he would see some one in every window, and that he would be Swedensky's best witness that his story about burglars was true. He further in substance instructed Swedensky that Mrs. Kent in going about the house from room to room endeavoring to see some one outdoors, should get in a certain position he (Swedensky) was to shoot her in the head and be sure to kill her. He was to tell people that there were burglars around the house and that Mrs. Kent had told him to get the gun and shoot through the window; that the gun went off accidentally and in that way he shot her. Swedensky further testified that Kent dictated to him a story to tell before the coroner's jury; that he wrote it down in a book as Kent told him what to write. On the trial this book was offered in evidence by the state and was received in evidence despite the objection of counsel for the accused. In this there was no error. The book contained nothing connecting Kent with the homicide. It was not an unsworn narrative of past events implicating the accused. Behind every word of it was the oath of the accomplice. His testimony was that what he had set down in that book fell from the lips of the prisoner, and that he wrote it there at his dictation. Certainly what Kent said to him he might testify to. Had nothing been written in the book and had Swedensky been able to remember the story Kent told him to tell, his testimony narrating that story would have been competent. It cannot be any the less competent to prove what Kent said to Swedensky by a written memorandum of it so long as the latter swears that the memorandum does in fact set forth the explanation of the killing as dictated to him by Kent. The counsel for the accused treats the book as containing a mere declaration by Swedensky, unsupported by his oath; whereas in fact every word which this book contains has the oath of the witness behind it. He swears that the story written in this book was written there before the homicide and is the very story which Kent dictated to him to write. In allowing this book to be received in evidence in connection with Swedensky's testimony the court merely permitted the state to prove by the latter just what Kent said to him in connection with and in furtherance of the criminal scheme. If the fact that this story was written down by Swedensky before the murder tends to corroborate his testimony it will not be because of his declaration of fact that he is corroborated but for the reason that it is improbable that he could write this story without the aid of Kent. If for instance it contains facts which Swedensky could not have known in advance without receiving information of them from Kent, then the fact that he knew such matters before the murder is a very pertinent fact and one that it is entirely competent to prove. One way of proving it is by showing that the witness had written down such facts before the murder.

If, on the other hand, the story is one which Swedensky could have fabricated himself without the aid of Kent, then the mere fact that it was reduced to writing will not prejudice him any more than proving it by the lips of Swedensky without any writing. The jury may regard it as a fabrication of his own and may look upon his evidence that Kent told him to write it, as perjury. If the fact that Swedensky wrote this before the murder lends any support to his testimony touching the alleged conspiracy to kill the woman and Kent's connection therewith, it is not because of any unsworn declaration of the accomplice but because the circumstances of the case make it improbable that he could have known of facts stated therein unless Kent had told him of them. We fully agree with counsel for the accused that the accomplice cannot corroborate himself by his own words or deeds. The corroboration to satisfy the statute must come from some independent source and must tend to connect the accused with the crime. Mere corroboration as to immaterial matters testified to by the accomplice, or as to the fact that a crime had been committed or as to the connection of the accomplice therewith, or as to all these combined, will not suffice. The rule is very accurately stated in People v. Platt, 100 N. Y. 590, 58 Am. Rep. 286: "There must be some fact, too, independently altogether to the evidence of the accomplice which taken by itself leads to the inference not only that a crime has been committed but that the prisoner is implicated therein." It is not necessary that such corroborating evidence be sufficient of itself to warrant a conviction. The requirements of the statute making it necessary to corroborate the testimony of an accomplice are met if the evidence tends to connect the prisoner with the commission of the crime. Said the court in People v. Everhardt, 104 N. Y. 591: "The law is complied with if there is some evidence fairly tending to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime so that the conviction will not rest entirely upon the evidence of the accomplice." See People v. Cloonan, 50 Cal. 449; State v. Van Winkle, 80 Iowa, 15; State v. Hicks (S. Dak.) 60 N. W. Rep. 66, and cases cited; State v. Russell (Iowa) 58 N. W. Rep. 890; State v. Townsend, 19 Or. 218.

The language of our statute is so plain that no room is left for interpretation. It provides that "a conviction cannot be had upon the testimony of an accomplice unless he be corroborated by such other evidence as tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense, and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely show the commission of the offense, or the circumstances thereof." Comp. Laws, § 7384. It was objected that the accomplice was allowed to translate the story he had himself written in Bohemian in this book at the dictation of Kent, as he claims.

His evidence shows him to have been qualified by his knowledge of the English language to make the translation. The translation itself confirms his testimony in this respect. It was originally given to him in English and by him set down in Bohemian. Certainly he is qualified to translate it back into English. The fact that he was an accomplice might affect the weight to be given to his translation but the danger of deception from a false translation of a writing is slight when compared with the danger of deception from allowing an interested person to act as interpreter of words spoken on the witness stand in a foreign tongue which leave behind them no fixed record by which the untruth of the interpreter's rendering of the testimony of the witness can be determined. And yet it has been held not to be error to permit a person sustaining quite close relations with one side of the cause to interpret for a witness who was sworn on the same side of the cause. Swift v. Applebone, 23 Mich. 252. See also Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Shenk, 181 Ill. 288; Com. v. Kepper, 114 Mass. 278. The defense had a right to prove that Swedensky's translation was not correct. Any qualified person might have been called for that purpose.

On the cross-examination of the accomplice Swedensky counsel for the accused asked him whether he expected to be hung for his crime. This question being objected to by counsel for the state the court sustained the objection. In this the court committed error. One who is on trial for his life should be allowed great latitude in the cross-examination of the witness who by his own confession can have no hope of escaping the death punishment save through the indulgence of those who under the law have his life in their hands. An accomplice in such a case in implicating another with him in guilt is under the influence of the most powerful motive that can shape human conduct. For this reason the law looks with such distrust on his testimony that as a general rule it will not suffer another to be convicted on his evidence in the absence of corroboration. True the principle has often been stated that one may be convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. But this principle has been regarded with such disfavor that even in the absence of a statute courts have generally cautioned juries against convicting where the story of the accomplice stood unsupported by other evidence. Sometimes they have advised the jury to acquit; and in some instances they have directed an acquittal. After conviction new trials have been granted because the accomplice was uncorroborated. The practice has not been uniform, but the whole trend of it shows unmistakably that the law regards the testimony of the accomplice with distrust. See 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 76, and note 2; note to Com. v. Price, 71 Am. Dec. 671; Com. v. Holmes, 127 Mass. 424, 84 Am. Rep. 391. In many jurisdictions because of statutory enactments the accomplice must be corrobored by evidence that tends to connect the accused with the crime. Testimony coming from such an untrustworthy source should be thoroughly sifted. The rule is to allow great latitude in the cross-examination of the accomplice. Whart. Crim. Ev. § 444; 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 78; Lee v. State, 21 Ohio St. 151. Certainly he who is on trial for life may inquire of the accomplice who has sworn against him whether the testimony is not given with the hope of escaping death. The only object of proving that the accomplice has or has not been promised total or partial immunity is to strengthen or weaken his credibility by showing that his testimony is given possibly without hope or that in giving it he may be influenced by an expectation of total or partial exemption from punishment as a reward for such testimony. Even if no express promise of immunity is made, the accomplice may be led to believe by something in the conduct or speech or tone of voice of some one connected with the prosecution that nevertheless his testimony involving another in guilt with him will earn him some consideration at the hands of those who control his fate. We are therefore clear that even when all the positive evidence is against the proposition that any express promise has been made, it is competent to ask the accomplice as affecting his credibility whether he expects to have full punishment meted out to him. Even when the accomplice has nothing in the way of word or conduct from any one connected with the prosecution on which to build an assurance he may have some expectation, leading all the way from a faint glimmer of hope to confident belief, that if his testimony results in the conviction of another he himself will reap some reward. One whose life he is swearing away has a right to discover if he can by the admission of the accomplice himself that his testimony is given under a hope of life which he cannot entertain unless he looks for indulgence. The accused has a right to have such fact laid before the jury on the question of the accomplice's credibility. Whether he is justified in cherishing such hope is immaterial. The only evidence in the case that Swedensky had not been promised immunity was his own. Counsel for the accused offered to prove that no complaint had ever been made against him for this murder; that he had had no preliminary examination on such charge and that no information had been filed against him to put him on trial for this offense. This evidence was excluded. In this the court erred. It bore directly on the question whether he was not testifying under hope. Without any express promise he might infer from the fact that no proceedings had been taken against him, but that the whole strength of the prosecution was directed against Kent alone, that he was to be the recipient of some favor. So long a period had elapsed at the time of the trial since Swedensky had confessed, three months, that the failure to proceed against him might cause him to expect indulgence. In ruling out this evidence the trial judge made a statement that must have been prejudicial to the accused. He said: "It is evident from the record in this case that the witness Swedensky is a criminal and it would be the duty of the judge of this court to see that he is prosecuted." Such a remark might well lead a jury to believe that they were to look upon the testimony of Swedensky as the testimony of a man swearing without hope; and therefore not to be distrusted as the evidence of a person who expected to gain some personal advantage by giving it. At the time this remark was made by the court Swedensky had already testified. In weighing his credibility the jury were to consider, not the fact that the court said he would be punished at a time when the remark could have no effect on his testimony, but the actual hope which he himself entertained at the time he gave his testimony. The prejudicial effect of this error must have been augmented by what the trial judge stated to the jury on this subject in his charge. He said: "The witness Swedensky is not on trial and the fact that he is or is not on trial should not influence you in the least degree in passing upon the guilt or innocence of this defendant whom you have in charge." The case of People v. Hare (Mich.) 7 Crim. L. Mag. 196, is a direct authority on the point that excluding his evidence was error.

The accused interposed a challenge to the panel of the special jury summoned by the sheriff under a special venire issued by the court after the regular panel had been exhausted. The ground of the challenge was the bias of the sheriff. It was made under Comp. Laws, section 7847, which provides as follows: "When the panel is formed from persons whose names are not drawn as jurors a challenge may be taken to the panel on account of any bias of the officer who summoned them which would be good ground of challenge to a juror." "Such challenge must be made in the same form and determined in the same manner as if made to a juror." The test of the sheriff's qualification to summon such special jury is whether he would be qualified to sit as a juror in the case. It has been so held in California under the same statute. People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 592; People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174. On his examination under this challenge the sheriff testified that he had expressed to others his opinion that the accused was guilty and it is apparent that this opinion was very strong. It would seem that it was derived from statements made to him by the accomplice Swedensky. If so, it is very doubtful whether the sheriff would have been competent as a juror in the case, notwithstanding the fact that he testified that if summoned as a juror he would give the accused a fair and impartial trial according to the law and the evidence. Greenfield v. People, 74 N. Y. 277; Jackson v. Com. 23 Gratt. 919; Armistead v. Com. 11 Leigh, 657, 37 Am. Dec. 633; Black v. State, 42 Tex. 377; Goodwin v. Blachley, 4 Ind. 488; Frazier v. State, 23 Ohio St. 551; Woods v. State, 134 Ind. 85; People v. Wells, 100 Cal. 227; Walker v. State, 102 Ind. 502; Comp. Laws, § 7861.

It is, however, unnecessary for us to settle this question as the person who was sheriff at the time this case was tried is no longer sheriff of Morton county.

The judgment and order are reversed, and a new trial is ordered.

All concur.

Messena B. ERSKINE, Appt.,

NELSON COUNTY, Resp.

(.....N. Dak.....)

*To legalize void evidences of municipal indebtedness, the purpose to validate them must be clearly expressed by the legislature, or be deducible from the statute by necessary implication. The statute referred to in the opinion examined, and held to so far validate void county warrants theretofore issued that the plea of ultra vires could not thereafter be interposed as a defense thereto.

(Corliss, J., dissents.)

(December 2, 1908.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the District Court for Nelson County denying him a portion of the relief demanded in an action brought to enforce payment of certain county warrants. Modified.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

*Headnotes by BARTHOLOMEW, Ch. J.

NOTE.—Statutes legalizing invalid municipal contracts.

The great majority of the cases hold that the legislature has power to validate contracts which a municipal corporation has attempted to make but which are invalid for lack of power or informality in its execution. Most of the cases seem to have dealt with the question of power and few have discussed the question raised in ERSKINE v. NELSON COUNTY, how far legalization has been accomplished by the statute which is claimed to have that effect.

General rules.

Where a municipal corporation has done an act beyond its statutory powers but within the powers which it is competent for the legislature to confer upon it, the act may be validated by a curative statute. Baker v. Seattle, 3 Wash. 576.

If the legislature possessed power to authorize the act to be done it could by retroactive act cure the evil which existed because the power thus conferred had been irregularly executed. The question with the legislature was one of policy and the determination made by it was conclusive. Thompson v. Lee County, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 327, 18 L. ed. 177.

A healing statute is not bad for unconstitutionality, if it gives validity to an act irregularly done which the legislature could have authorized to be done in the irregular way in the first instance. Lockhart v. Troy, 48 Ala. 579.

The legislature may subsequently legalize any contract or agreement of a municipality if it could have authorized the making of it in the first place. Single v. Marathon County Supra, 38 Wis. 364. In that case the court says that it may be observed that if ratification of the validating act on behalf of the county is essential for any purpose, such act was ratified in that case by a resolution of the board of supervisors. 37 L. R. A.

Messrs. Newman, Spalding & Phelps, for appellant:

The bonding act was mandatory in fact, although permissive in form. Its object was to enable the county to pay outstanding warrants for which it had received consideration. The holders of these warrants were to be benefited by the provisions of the law.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 598; Rock Island County Supra v. United States, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 485, 18 L. ed. 419; Mason v. Fearson, 50 U. S. 9 How. 259, 18 L. ed. 180.

The contention that the act covers only valid outstanding warrants is not tenable:

1. Because there were no valid outstanding warrants.

2. All valid outstanding warrants, if any, were necessarily provided for by the tax levy made, as it was the issue of these warrants in excess of the tax levy that rendered them invalid.

3. The words, "outstanding bounty warrants" must be construed according to their common meaning in the community.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 248.

The legislature is presumed to have acted upon evidence and to have had a full knowledge of all facts involved in their action, and not to have done a vain thing.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 831; Brown v. New York, 68 N. Y. 239; Shaver v. Eldred, 114 N. Y. 248.

The provision for payment of the warrants validates them by implication and is as effectual for that purpose as though the statute expressly declared the warrants valid.

The legislature may dispense with the formalities contained in the charter and give the contractors their equitable right to compensation for services rendered or for materials furnished in good faith for the public benefit. State v. Jersey City Board of Finance and Taxation, 38 N. J. L. 265.

A legalizing statute is not a prohibited retroactive law. Read v. Plattsburgh, 107 U. S. 568, 27 L. ed. 414.

Where there is no defect of constitutional power such legislation is valid. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 69 U. S. 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520; St. Joseph Twp. Champaign County v. Rogers, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 644, 21 L. ed. 323; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 666, 23 L. ed. 227; Ritchie v. Franklin County, 89 U. S. 23 Wall. 67, 23 L. ed. 825; Otto County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1, 23 L. ed. 331; Grenada County v. Brown, 112 U. S. 261, 23 L. ed. 704; Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp., 116 U. S. 354, 29 L. ed. 632; Bolles v. Brimfield, 120 U. S. 759, 30 L. ed. 786; Putnam v. New Albany, 4 Biss. 365; Dows v. Elmwood, 84 Fed. Rep. 114.

But the legislature could not validate an unconstitutional act. State v. Whitesides, 3 L. R. A. 777, 30 S. C. 581.

Subsequent ratification by the state of a contract made by one of its own agencies is equivalent to a previous authorization. State v. Miller, 66 Mo. 322; Kenosha v. Lamson, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 477, 19 L. ed. 725.

Failure to record a contract is a technical defense which the legislature may remedy. Com. v. Marshall, 60 Pa. 323.

There are, however, a few cases which seem to be in conflict with the doctrine held by the majority of the cases, although the exact limits of the rule which they seek to establish have not yet been defined.

In Choliser v. People, 140 Ill. 31, a county under Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 884; United States v. Babbitt, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 55, 17 L. ed. 94; Beloit v. Morgan, 74 U. S. 7 Wall, 619, 19 L. ed. 205; Brown v. New York, 63 N. Y. 239; Nelson v. New York, Id. 535; Campbell v. Kenosha, 72 U. S. 5 Wall, 194, 18 L. ed. 610; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806, 26 L. ed. 612; Pompton Twp. v. Cooper Union for Advancement of Science and Art, 101 U. S. 196, 25 L. ed. 808; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1, 28 L. ed. 831; Grenada County Suprs. v. Brown, 112 U. S. 261, 28 L. ed. 704; Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp. 116 U. S. 856, 29 L. ed. 638; Gelpeke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. 1 Wall, 175, 17 L. ed. 520; State v. Jersey City Board of Finance and Taxation, 38 N. J. L. 265.

Mr. William H. Standish, for respondent:

The powers of the boards of commissioners are subordinate to existing restraints made by the legislature and constitution of the state.

Crampton v. Zabriskie, 101 U. S. 601, 25 L. ed. 1070; United States v. Macon County Ct. 98 U. S. 582, 25 L. ed. 831; Anthony v. Jasper County, 101 U. S. 698, 25 L. ed. 1005; Ogden v. Daviess County, 102 U. S. 684, 26 L. ed. 263; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 27 L. ed. 288; Hopper v. Covington, 118 U. S. 148, 30 L. ed. 190; Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657, 29 L. ed. 1026; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360; Marah v. Fulton County Suprs. 77 U. S. 10 Wall, 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Lake County Comrs. v. Rollins, 180 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. ed. 1890, § 25, p. 44.

proper authority voted to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company. The county court, however, transformed the proceeding into a donation of county bonds to the railroad. The legislature then passed a curative act and the court held that the only proposition which was, or could lawfully be submitted to the voters, and the only one therefore, to which they gave their assent, was the proposition to subscribe for stock so that the donation of bonds was void. The court then states that the question is, Had the general assembly power to validate a contract which was utterly void and thus impose upon the county an indebtedness to which it had never assented? The court holds that it has never been held to be within the power of the legislature to compel a municipal corporation without its own consent legally expressed to assume obligations of this character.

That conclusion would be inevitable if the only way in which the consent of the county could be given was by vote of the people, but in Williams v. Roberts, 88 Ill. 11, the court had held that county boards might be authorized to make contracts for the county, and that their illegal acts might be ratified. Why would not that rule apply in the Choiser Case? In fact the authority relied upon in the Choiser Case was one dealing with township bonds. But in such a case it had been expressly held that there was no one who could be authorized to represent the township in the making of contracts except the voters themselves.

The United States Supreme Court has held that a curative act was not prohibited by the Illinois Constitution of 1848. Quincy v. Cooke, 107 U. S. 549, 27 L. ed. 542; Jonesboro v. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. 110 U. S. 122, 28 L. ed. 116.

But in Elmwood v. Marcy, 92 U. S. 229, 23 L. ed. 710, the court followed Illinois decisions holding that a validating act violated the constitution of that state.

27 L. R. A.

The supreme court of this state in Capital Bank of St. Paul v. Barnes County School Dist. No. 53, 1 N. Dak. 479, settles the inability of a county board to indebted a county beyond its taxing powers for the year and its current funds, and silences the claim that a county warrant is a judgment against the county or that any benefits received from warrants issued in excess of power can in any way obligate or estop the county.

Capital Bank of St. Paul v. Barnes County School Dist. No. 53, supra; Goose River Bank v. Willow Lake School Twp. 1 N. Dak. 26; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 457, p. 528; Wall v. Monroe County, 108 U. S. 74, 26 L. ed. 430; Nashville v. Ray, 86 U. S. 19 Wall, 468, 22 L. ed. 164.

Where there is no power given in the statute to the commissioners to issue county warrants they are null and not the obligations of the county, and they remain void in the hands of all purchasers regardless of what statements the county commissioners or other county officers may make as to the validity in the sale of them to innocent purchasers.

Ouachita County v. Wolcott, 103 U. S. 559, 26 L. ed. 505; People v. Eldorado County Suprs. 11 Cal. 170; Goodnow v. Ramey County Comrs. 11 Minn. 31; Gould v. Sterling, 23 N. Y. 463; Bissell v. Michigan, S. & N. I. R. Cos. 22 N. Y. 280; Bard v. Chamberlain, 3 Sandf. Ch. 82, 7 L. ed. 759; Perrine v. Chesapeake & D. Canal Co. 50 U. S. 9 How. 172, 18 L. ed. 92; McCullough v. Moss, 5 Denio, 567; Williams v. Lash, 8 Minn. 496; Brady v. New York, 20 N. Y. 312; Wright County School Dist. No. 7 v. Thompson, 5 Minn. 280; Clark v. Des

So in a Wisconsin case the court asked: "Can the legislature by recognizing the existence of a previously void contract and authorizing its discharge by the city or in any other way coerce the city against its will into a performance of it or does the law require the assent of the city as well as of the legislature in order to make the obligation binding and efficacious?"—and it answered, the latter act as well as the former is necessary for that purpose and without it the obligation cannot be enforced. A contract void for want of capacity in one or both of the contracting parties to enter into it is as no contract and to admit that the legislature of its own choice and against the wishes of either or both of the contracting parties can give it life and vigor is to admit that it is within the scope of the legislative authority to divest settled rights to property, and take the property of one individual or corporation and transfer it to another. Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 37, 30 Am. Dec. 718.

And that case was recognized as correctly decided in the subsequent case of Mills v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 400, 9 Am. Rep. 578, which was an attempt to validate an invalid tax assessment.

So in Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 512, commissioners who were not town officers and had no authority to act for the town, but who had been appointed to issue bonds in accordance with the vote of the people, failed to act in accordance with such vote, and that court held that the bonds issued by them were void and could not be validated by the legislature, since validation would be imposing a liability on the town without its assent.

But the Supreme Court of the United States refused to follow the doctrine of that case in Thompson v. Perrine, 106 U. S. 539, 27 L. ed. 266.

Bonds.

The most numerous class of contracts which have been before the courts are bonds irregularly is-Moines, 19 Iowa, 199; Field, Ultra Vires, 449.

A municipal corporation is not estopped after a warrant upon its treasury has been issued to set up the defense of ultra vires, fraud, or failure or want of consideration.

Hodges v. Buffalo, 2 Denio, 110; Hailestead v. New York, 8 N. Y. 480; Anthony v. Adams, 1 Met. 286; People v. Eldorado County Supra, supra; Sturtevant v. Liberty, 46 Me. 457; Smith v. Cheshire, 18 Gray, 818; Dalrymple v. Whittingham, 26 Vt. 845; Taft v. Pittsford, 28 Vt. 286; People v. Gray, 28 Cal. 125; Hubbard v. Lyndon, 29 Wis. 674.

County warrants are a valid investment only when the board of commissioners had legal authority to issue them or contract the obligations under which they are founded, and are not binding when issued in violation of law or in fulfillment of a contract with the board which they are prohibited from making.

Sault Ste. Marie Highway Comrs. v. Van Dusen, 40 Mich. 429; Nash v. St. Paul, 11 Minn. 174; People v. Flagg, 17 N. Y. 589; Brady v. New York, 20 N. Y. 812; Hess v. Pegg, 7 Nev. 28.

The special purpose named in the bill claimed as a validating act was to authorize bonding to fund a debt, and there was nothing disclosed to the legislature, so far as the bill shows, that the commissioners of Nelson county in 1883 and 1884 had issued over $21,000 of warrants in excess of statutory power, which were void and therefore not a debt; that it was desired that the legislature should validate them; nor did the legislature give any authority to the commissioners to ratify them.

The fact of ratification must be shown by evidence as clear as would be required to show an original authority in the agent to take the conveyance in his own name and execute a mortgage.

Wisconsin Bank v. Morley, 19 Wis. 72; Rochester v. Alfred Bank, 18 Wis. 483, 80 Am. Dec. 746; Dodge v. McDonnell, 14 Wis. 553; Savage v. Davis, 18 Wis. 608; Curtin v. Patton, 11 Serg. & R. 806; Hinely v. Margaritz, 8 Pa. 428; Owings v. Hull, 84 U. S. 9 Pet. 607, 9 L. ed. 246; 1 Parsons, Cont. 6th ed. § 52, p. 54; Gillis v. Bailey, 17 N. H. 18; Dickinson v. Conway, 12 Allen, 487; Haeltton v. Bachelder, 44 N. H. 40; Holderness v. Baker, Id. 414; Brace v. Worth, 40 Barb. 648; Johnson v. Craig, 21 Ark. 539.

Did the legislature pass this funding bill for the express purpose of validating void claims against Nelson county, or only to enable its commissioners to issue bonds to pay off the actual and legal indebtedness of the county? If the latter, then the commissioners could not validate a dollar of warrants issued in excess of power if they sought to.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 544, p. 687; Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120, 29 L. ed. 81.

No recovery can be had, even when the county or municipality obtained an equitable benefit from the issue and delivery of void warrants and void bonds.

Capital Bank of St. Paul v. Barnes County School Dist. No. 53, 1 N. Dak. 479; Litchfield sued, and the courts have for the most part applied the principles announced above.

General power to validate.

The legislature may legalize a defective execution of power given a municipality to issue bonds. Belo v. Forsythe County Comrs. 76 N. C. 499.

Where bonds issued by a county are invalid merely for want of legislative authority to issue them they can be made valid by a subsequent act. Nolan County v. State, 58 Tex. 182.

The legislature may confirm the issuance of the bonds. State v. Charleston, 10 Rich. L. 491.

If the consent of the legislature was wanting when the bonds were issued merely because the act giving it had not then been published the legislature can with the consent of the municipal authorities legalize the bonds. Knapp v. Grant, 37 Wis. 147.

If the legislature has power to authorize the bonds in the first instance the act to legalize them will give validity to them notwithstanding any informality or illegality in their issue. Rogers v. Keokuk, 18 L. ed. 74.

In Jefferson City Gas-Light Co. v. Clark, 95 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 521, the question is stated as follows, whether it was competent for the legislature to legalize the issue of the bonds if for any cause they were originally invalid; or more properly to compel their payment by the city,—and it was held that there was power to compel such payment.

The congress of the United States may legalize bonds of a territorial county issued in aid of a railroad company. First Nat. Bank of Brunswick v. Yankton County, 101 U. S. 129, 25 L. ed. 1046.

In Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806, 26 L. ed. 612, it was held that the legislature could ratify and confirm an exchange of town bonds for railroad stock which was illegal so as to make the bonds 37 L. R. A.

binding obligations on the town in favor of all who then held them or thereafter acquired them in good faith, or for a valuable consideration; and the court expressly refused to follow the doctrine of Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 512, and the decision of the supreme court was adhered to upon a subsequent appeal in Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 589, 27 L. ed. 293.

In Cooper v. Thompson, 13 Blatchf. 494, it is said the power of the legislature to validate such bonds is established by repeated adjudication and is not contested here.

Municipal bonds issued without authority of law and therefore void may be validated by an act of the legislature passed for that purpose, if the legislature of the state could authorize the issuing of similar bonds. Deyo v. Otes County, 37 Fed. Rep. 246.

Bonds bearing semi-annual interest issued under authority of an act granting permission to issue bonds bearing annual interest may be ratified by the legislature. Outler v. Madison County Supra, 56 Miss. 115.

Making bonds payable in a manner not authorized by the legislature may be remedied by subsequent legislation. Brownell v. Greenwich, 4 L. R. A. 585, 114 N. Y. 512, affirming 44 Hun. 611.

The legislature may cure defects in the exercise of power previously given to issue bonds. McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa, 304; McMillen v. Lee County Judge & Treasurer, Id. 393.

The legislature may authorize the issuing of valid bonds for the void ones which were issued without authority. Steines v. Franklin County, 48 Mo. 167, 8 Am. Rep. 87; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Marion County, 36 Mo. 294.

The issuance of bonds at a discount may be ratified. Atcholson v. Butcher, 8 Kan. 104.

But if the bonds have not been issued in accord-v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132; Rickardson v. Grant County, 27 Fed. Rep. 495.

A board of county commissioners in Dakota while it was a territory did not possess judicial power, and their orders and findings and warrants issued have no conclusive effect either for or against the county except that until it is shown the board had exceeded its authority prior to the issuing of the warrant, the warrant furnishes prima facie evidence of liability.

Spencer v. Sully County, 4 Dak. 474; Rupert v. Alturas County Comrs. 2 Idaho, 31; Hedges v. Lewis & Clarke County Comrs. 4 Mont. 280; Ferris v. Higley, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 375, 23 L. ed. 383.

The act did not direct the board to issue any bonds, nor use the words "may, must or shall," or the words "are directed," nor did any part of the act say any warrants "are hereby legalized," as had been done in all theretofore Dakota legalizing acts.

Quincy v. Cooke, 107 U. S. 549, 27 L. ed. 549.

The person who undertakes to ratify must do so with a knowledge of all material circumstances or with an intent to take all liability without such knowledge.

1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 432, note 8.

Bartholomew, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff sought to hold the defendant liable upon certain county warrants. These warrants were regular in form, and purported to be issued for debts incurred by the county; but it is uncontroverted that, in so far as the trial court refused to give judgment upon these warrants against the defendant, the warrants were originally illegal and void. The debts which they represented were obligations which the board of county commissioners had no authority to create, because the expenditures at the time were in excess of the amount which could be provided for by the current revenue of the county from the tax levy of the year. It is unnecessary to refer to the statute or other authority which renders void these warrants representing such expenditures. The counsel for plaintiff makes no contention against their original invalidity, but strenuously urges here that they have been transmuted into legal obligations of the county by an act of the legislature passed March 18, 1885, which provides as follows: "An act to authorize the county commissioners of Nelson county, Dakota, to fund the outstanding indebtedness thereof.

"Be it enacted by the legislative assembly of the territory of Dakota:

"Section 1. That the board of county commissioners of the county of Nelson, in the territory of Dakota, be empowered, and are hereby authorized, to issue bonds for not less than five hundred (500) dollars each, the total amount of such issue not to exceed thirty thousand (30,000) dollars; said bonds to draw interest at a rate not to exceed eight (8) per cent per annum, payable annually at the county treasurer's office of said Nelson county. Said bonds shall specify on their face the date, amount, for what purpose issued, the time and place of payment and rate of ance with the consent given by the tax-payers it is not lawful for the legislature to validate them since a liability cannot be imposed upon the tax-payers by the legislature without their consent. Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 513.

Validating elections.

If the legislature could permit the issuance of bonds without requiring the consent of the tax-payers it can validate an issuance which has been made without procuring such consent. Hardenbergh v. Van Keuren, 4 Abb. N. C. 42.

Irregular elections for issuance of bonds may be legalized. Gardner v. Haney, 86 Ind. 17.

In Gibbons v. Mobile & C. R. Co., 36 Ala. 410, before the bonds were issued an act was passed providing that the vote that had been taken should be sufficient to authorize the issuance of the bonds, and the court held that under the provisions of that act the bonds were valid although the vote had not been taken in accordance with the statute which first authorized the aid to the railroad.

A defect in the notice as to the election under which bonds are to be issued may be cured by a subsequent statute recognizing the validity of the bonds. Cumberland County Suprs. v. Randolph, 69 Va. 614.

In Duanesburgh v. Jenkins, 57 N. Y. 177, the court says that the legislature may dispense with the requirement of the consent of taxpayers to the issuance of bonds and make the validity of their issuance depend upon the consent of the town commissioners. In that case the case of People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 123, 13 Am. Rep. 480, which held that a town could not be compelled to take stock against its will, was limited and it was held that the consent of the tax-payers was not necessary, but that the consent of the representative of the town was sufficient, and that his assent might be ratified although it was not sufficient when given. And the authority of that case was recognized in Williams v. Duanesburgh, 66 N. Y. 129.

Authorizing bonds for past debt.

The legislature may authorize the issuance of bonds to pay for bridges theretofore contracted for and built. Bradley v. Franklin County, 65 Mo. 638.

Form of statute.

Bonds cannot be validly issued under a law which has been passed but not published, and it seems that the subsequent publication of the law will have no effect to render the bonds valid. Rochester v. Alfred Bank, 13 Wis. 433, 30 Am. Dec. 746.

A statute directing bonds to be paid is in all respects equivalent to original authority and cures all defects of power and all irregularities in its execution. Beloit v. Morgan, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. ed. 205.

Where a second act was passed to modify the terms fixed by the first act, it was contended that the bonds were invalid because they purported to have been issued under the first act alone and hence could not be sustained by a resort to the provisions of the second act, but the court held that there was no necessity that the bonds should in terms refer to either act, that the important question was whether or not the authority existed, not whether it was properly stated in the bonds. Gould v. Sterling, 23 N. Y. 456.

Constitutional provisions.

The legislature cannot validate bonds issued in violation of constitutional provisions. Quaker City Nat. Bank v. Nolan County, 59 Fed. Rep. 860.

In Sykes v. Columbus, 55 Miss. 119, it was held that after the adoption of a constitution forbidding the legislature to authorize the issuance of bonds by a town without the authority of a cer-interest. Said bonds and coupons thereto attached shall be severally signed by the chairman of the board of county commissioners of said Nelson county, and attested by the clerk or auditor of said Nelson county, said bonds to be payable at the office of the county treasurer of Nelson county, or such other place as the board of county commissioners may designate.

"Sec. 2. Said bonds shall be dated the first day of July, A. D. 1885, and shall be payable in twenty (20) years, with the privilege of calling in said bonds at any time after ten (10) years.

"Sec. 3. The board of county commissioners of said Nelson county is hereby authorized, and it is made their duty to levy a sufficient tax for each year, besides the ordinary tax authorized by law, to be levied for the purpose of paying the interest of said bonds; provided further, that seven (7) years after the time of issue of said bonds, it is made the duty of said board of county commissioners to levy a sinking fund for the purpose of paying off and redeeming said bonds, said tax not to exceed two (2) mills on the dollar of the valuation of said county in any one year.

"Sec. 4. It is hereby made the duty of the county treasurer of Nelson county to negotiate the sale of said bonds, and to call in all outstanding county warrants whenever the bonds are sold, and he, said county treasurer, shall be allowed two (2) per cent commission as his fees, and no more, for negotiating said bonds, and paying out said money; provided further, said bonds shall not be sold for less than par.

"Sec. 5. That after issuing the bonds mentioned in section 1 of this Act, no warrants shall be issued by the county board unless at the time of issuing the same there is money enough in the county treasury of Nelson county to pay the warrants so issued.

"Sec. 6. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and approval.

"Approved March 18th, 1885."

Respondent's counsel contends that there was no intent or purpose on the part of the legislature, in the enactment of this statute, to validate any invalid warrants. His position may be thus stated in brief: To legalize void evidences of municipal indebtedness, the purpose to validate them must be clearly expressed by the legislature, or be deducible from the statute by necessary implication, and that in the statute in question there is neither a clearly expressed nor necessarily implied intention to validate any invalid warrants of Nelson county. The legal proposition involved in this position is sound, both upon principle and authority. Dill. Mun. Corp. § 544; Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 180, 29 L. ed. 81; Beloit v. Morgan, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. ed. 205; Brown v. New York, 68 N. Y. 289. But we encounter here the ever-recurring difficulty of applying recognized legal principles to the facts of a given case. It might greatly lessen the labor of courts if the legislative intent were always expressed in clear and unequivocal tain portion of the tax-payers, the legislature could not ratify bonds issued before the adoption of the constitution without such authority.

The Illinois doctrine.

In Keithsburg v. Frick, 84 Ill. 406, the question of the power of the legislature to confirm the issuance by a municipality of bonds was raised, but the court says that it was foreign to the case.

In Marshall v. Sullivan, 61 Ill. 218, where the election under which the bonds were voted was void, the court held that an act which attempted to validate it and which imposed a debt upon the town without its consent was void, directly under the Constitution of 1870, and by construction of the clause of the Constitution of 1848, which provides that the corporate authorities of municipalities may be vested with the power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes. It being held that this implied a limitation upon the power of the legislature to directly impose a debt upon the corporation.

And that ruling was followed in Wiley v. Sullivan, 62 Ill. 170; Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Sparta, 77 Ill. 506; Barnes v. Lacon, 84 Ill. 461.

But in Williams v. Roberts, 88 Ill. 11, it was held that county boards and the municipal authorities of incorporate cities, towns, and villages may, when empowered so to do by proper legislation, subscribe for the corporate stock of railroad companies without first submitting the question to the electors of the municipality, hence it has been held where a vote of the electors has been required as a condition precedent to the making of a subscription for stock and the law prescribing the mode of calling and holding the election has not been observed inasmuch as the legislature might have empowered the municipal authorities to make the subscription without first submitting the question 27 L. R. A.

to the electors, it may by a subsequent enactment declare the noncompliance with the law in the holding of the election of no consequence and validate the election. But under the Illinois system of township organization there is no officer or board representing the corporate authority of the town, the electors only represent it and they in doing so must necessarily act through town meetings or town elections.

In Cholsser v. People, 140 Ill. 31, where a subscription to stock was authorized and a donation of bonds made, the court held that the only proposition which had been submitted to a vote of the people was that of making a subscription, and when the county officers made the donation they did an act to which the people had not and could not give their assent. It is not within the power of the legislature to compel a municipal corporation without its own consent legally expressed to enter into or assume obligations of subscription to a railroad company. Declaring the void contract to be valid and binding, and providing that it shall be carried into effect in good faith, was an attempt to impose upon the county an obligation in aid of a railroad without its own consent expressed in any lawful form. And it was further held that a constitutional prohibition against making subscriptions will prevent the legislature from ratifying a donation.

The legislature cannot validate bonds without the consent of the proper municipal authorities. Gaddis v. Richland County, 98 Ill. 119.

And one federal court followed that rule.

Where a county with power to subscribe to the stock of a railroad makes a donation of its bonds, the act being void the legislature cannot afterwards validate it by a curative act since that would be an imposition upon the county of an obligation without its own assent expressed in any lawful vocal language. It might benefit the taxpayers and the state if validating acts were always couched in express and unmistakable terms. But it is not the province of a court to dictate the language that shall clothe legislative enactments. Courts may say in certain cases, as they do in this, that they will accept no doubtful construction, but, when that which it is clearly provided shall be done cannot be done without accomplishing a certain result, it must be presumed that it was the legislative purpose to accomplish such result, and courts cannot excuse their failure to give effect to this legislative purpose by saying that the legislature might have used more apt terms in which to declare it. It must then be our sole purpose, in this case, to ascertain whether the legislature, by the enactment in question, clearly and necessarily evinced the legislative intent and purpose to validate the invalid warrants of Nelson county.

At the time of the passage of said act, certain facts existed,—some of them notorious, and others of them of record, and brought to our attention by the abstract in this case—of which we must not lose sight, if we would correctly measure the legislative purpose. The defendant county was organized in June, 1883, without funds in its treasury, and the act in question was passed at the first session of the legislature thereafter. The total assessed valuation of the county for the year 1883 was $280,830, and the total levy for all county purposes and for roads and bridges was 10 mills on the dollar, making the total revenue for that year $2,808. The assessed valuation of said county for the year 1884 was $771,823. There was no levy whatever for that year, and consequently no authorized revenue for that year. The statute was passed prior to the time fixed by law for the assessment and levy in 1885, and hence dealt with the fiscal affairs of the county as they were left by the tax proceedings for the years 1883 and 1884. Under the law of the then territory of Dakota, the county commissioners of the defendant county were without power to issue warrants in excess of the amount that could be raised from the tax levy of the current year. All warrants in excess of that amount were ultra vires and void. As we have seen, that amount for the year 1883 was $2,808, and for 1884 it was nothing. Prior to March 18, 1885,—the date of the approval of said act,—the defendant county had executed and delivered its warrants to the full amount of $32,789.16. Of this sum, warrants to the amount of $30,436.16 were in excess of the limit fixed by law, and hence invalid. But the county had actually paid upon its warrants the sum of $4,411.53. This the county had been able to do, because, although the trial court found that there was no levy in 1884, yet there was a pretended levy; and the sums voluntarily paid as taxes under such pretended levy, added to the amount realized from the levy for 1883, enabled the county to make such payments. And, as the amount thus paid exceeded the authorized revenue for the two years, it follows that all unpaid warrants were in excess of the limit, and form. Post v. Pulaaki County, 9 U. S. App. 1, 49 Fed. Rep. 628.

Although another one held that a donation of bonds to a railroad under legislative power to subscribe for stock may be ratified by an act authorizing a tax to pay interest on the bonds and provide a sinking fund for the ultimate redemption of the principal. Denison v. Columbus, 62 Fed. Rep. 775.

So in Kansas it was held that where a county board having power to issue warrants for the payment of the contract price of buildings which they undertook to erect, without power issued bonds at high interest for the amount, the legislature has no right to attempt to validate such bonds so as to make them binding on the county. Shawnee County Comrs. v. Carter, 2 Kan. 115.

Subscriptions to internal improvements.

The legislature may ratify a subscription to stock of a railroad company. Winn v. Macon, 21 Ga. 275. Such an act is not unconstitutional as being retroactive. Bass v. Columbus, 30 Ga. 845.

The legislature may legalize stock subscriptions by counties to railroad companies. Bartholomew County Comrs. v. Bright, 18 Ind. 93.

The legislature may validate subscriptions to stock of corporations. First Municipality of New Orleans v. Orleans Theatre Co. 2 Rob. (La.) 209.

In Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Morris, 84 Ill. 412, it was held that if the municipality had regularly voted to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company without power from the legislature to do so, the legislature might subsequently authorize such subscription and the bonds might then be issued under such vote, by reason of a special schedule annexed to the constitution providing for the issuance of the particular bonds in question in that case.

37 L. R. A.

Where a city voted aid to a railroad without statutory authority and then the legislature confirmed the act and such confirmation was accepted by the city, the court held that the legislature had power to make the confirmation and that the act was not void as a retroactive statute. Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co. 15 Conn. 475.

And that is true although the property of individual members of the municipality is rendered subject to execution for payment of judgments recovered upon the bonds. Beardale v. Smith, 16 Conn. 368, 41 Am. Dec. 148.

Where a legislature has power to authorize a municipality to take stock in a railroad company it can by retroactive legislation cure the evils arising from an irregular execution of such power. People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551.

Where after a city had subscribed for stock of a railroad company under the belief that it had authority to do so under the laws of the state, the supreme court held that it had no such authority and the legislature then passed a statute to enable cities which had subscribed for stock in the companies incorporated to construct works of public utility to ratify such subscriptions, the court held that such statute was valid, saying that "such laws when they do not impair any contract or injuriously affect the rights of third persons are generally regarded as unobjectionable and certainly are within the competency of the legislative authority. Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 65 U. S. 24 How. 287, 16 L. ed. 664.

Defective subscriptions may in all cases be ratified where the legislature could have originally conferred the power. Redd v. Henry County Supra, 31 Gratt. 696; Cumberland County Supra v. Randolph, 80 Va. 614.

A subscription authorized by an election held without legislative authority, when the constituvoid. But the outstanding warrants, all of which were unauthorized, with the accumulated interest thereon, amounted, at the date of the passage of said act, to the sum of $29,955. The act authorized funding bonds to the amount of $80,000, barely sufficient to cover all outstanding warrants. If, as has been suggested, the act, in speaking of county warrants, meant valid warrants, and no others, then it is clear that there were no warrants whatever upon which the act could take effect. No single step could be taken under the act, and it becomes a useless blot upon the statute book. If, on the other hand, by the use of the terms "county warrants," the legislature meant all instruments that were such in form, which had been put forth by the county, purporting on their face to be valid obligations of the county, and if it was the purpose to validate all such instruments, and provide for their payment, then every sentence of the act becomes instinct with life and purpose and usefulness.

The claim is made, however, that there were some valid outstanding warrants; that it is almost universal that there are some delinquent, uncollectible taxes; and that, to the extent of such delinquency, the outstanding warrants would be valid. It seems a sufficient answer to say that there is no claim in the record that there was any delinquency in 1885. But granting the usual percentage of delinquency upon a total tax but little in excess of $2,000, the amount thereof, when compared with the amount of bonds authorized by the act, is too insignificant to affect the rule of construction.

It is urged upon us that these facts which we have been considering were not known to the legislature; that a bill was presented to that body entitled "An act to authorize the county commissioners of Nelson county, Dakota, to fund the outstanding indebtedness thereof," and that such bill was passed without investigation by the legislature as to whether or not Nelson county had any indebtedness, and, if any, how much; that such matters were left entirely to the discretion of the county commissioners. We are not allowed to cast upon the popular branch of government this imputation of ignorance and negligence. On the contrary, we are bound to presume that it performed its duty intelligently and faithfully; and, unless the contrary appear from its own records, we think such presumption ought to be conclusive here. At section 881, Sutherland, Stat. Constr., it is said: "It is not to be presumed that the legislature have assumed the existence of a fact upon which an act of legislation is based, without evidence. On the contrary, courts are bound to presume that they act upon good and sufficient evidence, and that presumption is conclusive on the question of the validity of the act. It was so held on an objection to the validity of an act organizing a new county,—that it did not contain the population required by the constitution. It is presumed, as well on the ground of good faith as on the ground tion required such authority, will not be validated by a subsequent statute validating subscriptions, which were not made in violation of the constitution of the state. Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120, 29 L. ed. 81.

An invalid subscription cannot be validated without the consent of two thirds of the voters under a constitutional provision that the legislature shall not authorize any county, city, or town to become a stockholder or loan its credit to any company, association, or corporation unless two thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city, or town has at a special election or regular election to be held therein assented thereto. Katsenberger v. Aberdeen, 121 U. S. 172, 30 L. ed. 911.

If the legislature has no constitutional power to authorize the subscription it cannot validate it by subsequently recognizing it as valid. Folsom v. Township of Ninety-Six, 59 Fed. Rep. 67.

Contracts to pay bounties.

The legislature may confirm a resolution of a municipality to pay a bounty to men who were drafted for military service. Bartholomew v. Harwinton, 38 Conn. 408; Potter v. Canaan, 37 Conn. 224; Stuart v. Warren, Id. 225.

And the legislature may authorize the town to confirm a vote of money to pay drafted men. Booth v. Woodbury, 32 Conn. 125.

Where after the passage of an act authorizing the levying of a tax to pay bounties to persons volunteering to enter the military service of the United States persons advanced the money on the faith of the act, the legislature could subsequently require the town to levy the tax to refund the loan. Johnson v. Campbell, 49 Ill. 816; State v. Sullivan, 43 Ill. 412.

The legislature may validate a loan to obtain bounties to pay persons enlisting in the military service. Weister v. Hade, 53 Pa. 474.
97 L. R. A.

The legislature may validate bonds issued by towns without authority for the payment of bounties to soldiers. Kunkle v. Town of Franklin, Wright County, 13 Minn. 127, 97 Am. Dec. 228; Comer v. Folsom, 13 Minn. 219.

But a contract by a town to pay the fees paid by drafted men for substitutes is a contract to donate money to individuals in which the public has no interest and it is beyond the power of the legislature to validate it. Thompson v. Pittston, 50 Me. 545; Freeland v. Hastings, 10 Allen, 570.

Land grants.

The legislature may validate void grants of swamp lands belonging to the county. Barton County v. Walseer, 47 Mo. 169.

The legislature had authority to validate acts of the city of San Francisco disposing of pueblo lands. Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530.

But if a vote of the people is required to donate the property of a county to a corporation for public improvements, the donation cannot be validated by the legislature if made by the county authorities without such vote. Palmer v. Howard County, 45 Iowa, 61.

So where property has been conveyed to a city for its purposes and it is authorized to convey it by an ordinance which did not receive the required vote to pass it, the legislature cannot validate the attempt because since the property belonged to the city, and it had never consented to part with it, it was not within the power of the legislature to divest the city of its property without its consent which the validating statute in effect amounts to. Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590.

Other contracts.

The legislature may validate a street improvement contract which was not made according to the mode pointed out by the legislature. San that the legislature would not do a vain thing, that it intends its acts, and every part of them, to be valid, and capable of being carried into effect." In Phint & F. Pl. Road Co. v. Woodhull, 25 Mich. 99, 13 Am. Rep. 283, Judge Cooley says: "The legislature will not only choose its own modes of collecting information to guide its legislative discretion, but, from due courtesy to a co-ordinate department of the government, we must assume that those methods were the suitable and proper ones, and that they led to correct results. And, if the records show no investigation, we must still presume the proper information was obtained; for we must not suppose the legislature to have acted improperly, unadvisedly, or from any other than public motives, under any circumstances, when acting within the limits of its authority." Again, in De Camp v. Eveland, 19 Barb. 81, it is said: "It is not to be presumed that the legislature have assumed the existence of a fact upon which an act of legislature is based without evidence. On the contrary, courts are bound to presume that they acted upon good and sufficient evidence, and this presumption is conclusive." See also Lusher v. Sciles, 4 W. Va. 11; Humboldt County v. Churchill County Comrs. 6 Nev. 80; Farmers Loan & T. Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. R. Co. 89 Fed. Rep. 143. Under these authorities, we are bound to say that, when the legislature authorized the issuance of the bonds of Nelson county to the extent of $30,000 for the purpose of funding outstanding indebtedness, it did so with full knowledge of the financial condition of Nelson county. And, knowing that the outstanding warrants amounted to nearly or quite the full amount of bonds authorized, it also knew that such warrants were beyond any limit allowed by law, and were necessarily invalid. We say the legislature knew this, because it knew that Nelson county was but just organized, and its resources were limited. Its assessed valuations for the years 1883 and 1884 were of record in the territorial auditor's office, and the total tax that could have been realized on such valuations under the highest levy permissible to the county would not have equaled, in both of said years, one third of the amount of the bonds authorized, and the ordinary percentage of delinquency would not have equaled one-tenth of such amount. Hence, we say that the legislature knew that Nelson county had outstanding warrants amounting to nearly $80,000, and knew that all such warrants were beyond the limit allowed by law, and consequently void. Yet the legislature, after authorizing the issuance of bonds to the amount of $30,000, in express terms declared: "It is hereby made the duty of the county treasurer of Nelson county to negotiate the sale of said bonds, and to call in all outstanding county warrants whenever the bonds are sold." But it was not possible that the treasurer should perform this duty thus unequivocally thrust upon him without paying warrants issued in excess of au-

Francisco City and County v. Certain Real Estate, 42 Cal. 517.

In People v. Livingston County Suprs., 68 N. Y. 114, an unauthorized contract by road commissioners for the building of a bridge was ratified and the ratification held to be valid.

A statute permitting a contract for water to be made upon vote of a majority of the persons voting at an election held for that purpose is not modified by a subsequent emergency statute permitting the borrowing of money for the purpose of building a bridge, constructing a sewer, or carrying out some other proper village object, so that a contract for the water will be valid without a prior vote of the tax-payers. Squire v. Preston, 82 Hun, 88.

The legislative sanction of a contract which a city had no power to make granting the exclusive right to furnish the city with water will render the contract valid and binding. Citizens' Water Co. of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 55 Conn. 1.

A contract to gutter, curb, and flag a street made under authority to grade it may be ratified by a subsequent statute, and the fact that it was not let to the lowest bidder after advertisement may be dispensed with. Brown v. New York, 68 N. Y. 239.

A contract for materials which contrary to the law exceeds in amount the sum appropriated to cover the cost of the work may be ratified by subsequent legislation so that the contractor may recover the amount due him. Nelson v. New York, 68 N. Y. 535.

A street paving contract entered into and the work performed thereon, pursuant to a legislative act subsequently declared unconstitutional, is legalized by a subsequent remedial statute authorizing the assessment of frontage property to pay the amount remaining unpaid on the contract. Dunbar v. Williamsport, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 451.

The legislature may validate an attempted contract granting power to collect tolls on a canal. Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 723.

In Nolan County v. State, 88 Tex. 182, it is said if at the time of the attempted creation of a contract the legislature could not have authorized it, it may be doubted whether the legislature can make it valid, although in the mean time by a change in the constitution the restriction upon its own power may have been removed.

In Campbell v. Kenosha, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 194, 18 L. ed. 610, it is said the act is not in terms a curative act but it has that effect by fair implication. It is not doubted that the legislature could by a direct act of confirmation legalize the issue of this scrip, notwithstanding the submission of the question to the vote of the people was under a wrong law. If by a direct act so equally in any other way, if the intention of the legislature to legalize clearly appears.

Excessive Indebtedness.

The legislature cannot give effect to indebtedness contracted in excess of the constitutional limit. Mosher v. Ackley Independent School Dist. 44 Iowa, 122.

Where a city in a territory exceeded the limit of indebtedness fixed by act of congress and subsequently the territory became a state, the state legislature could validate the indebtedness although it could not have authorized it at the time it was constructed, since it has succeeded to all the power of congress in the premises. McBryde v. Montezano, 7 Wash. 69.

For the purpose of determining whether or not the indebtedness incurred by the subscription of aid to a railroad exceeds the constitutional limit, such subscription being invalid at the time made, but subsequently validated by the act of the legislature, the time of the passage of the act and not thority. Hence, the intention of the legislature that such warrants should be paid is unmistakable and unavoidable.

Thus far in this discussion, we have not stopped to inquire whether section 1 of the Act was mandatory upon the county commissioners, or directory-only, for the reason that, before the warrants upon which this action was brought were last presented for payment, the commissioners had in fact issued bonds under the act to the full amount of $30,000, and said bonds had been negotiated, and the proceeds thereof were in the treasury of the defendant county. But, upon a ground not heretofore mentioned, the learned counsel for respondent claims that there were certain legal warrants outstanding upon which the act could take effect. It is urged that, although not appealed from, yet the finding of the court that there was no levy in 1884, should be disregarded, as a matter not in issue, and contrary to the admissions in the pleadings. Let this be conceded pro argumento, and it will but strengthen our conviction. If the levy for 1884 was as high as the law permitted, the county revenue arising therefrom would be $7,718. To this add the sum of $2,803,—the revenue for 1883,—and we have a total for the two years of $10,521. As heretofore stated, the county had paid during said time $4,411.53, leaving a possible balance of $5,609.47 in valid, outstanding warrants. Under the authorities already cited, the presumption is conclusive here that the legislature knew that the outstanding warrants of Nelson county, valid and invalid, amounted to nearly $30,000. Did it authorize bonds in that sum for the purpose of paying less than one fifth of the amount? To so hold compels us to say that the legislature did an unadvised, useless, and utterly incomprehensible thing. This the authorities sternly forbid. We are then forced to say that the legislature intended to provide for the payment of all outstanding warrants, or it intended to cloth the county commissioners with power to say what warrants should be paid and what should not. But the power to validate invalid evidences of municipal indebtedness is a purely legislative power, and cannot be delegated. If the act sought to throw such power into the hands of the county commissioners, it is unconstitutional and void. But, as between a construction that upholds and one that defeats the statute, the canons of construction leave us no choice. We must uphold the law. Further, how can we say that the legislative mandate to the treasurer to call in "all outstanding warrants" means "all such warrants as the county commissioners may direct?" The interpolation is wholly inadmissible. Let it be granted that certain outstanding warrants were valid. As to such warrants the first section of the act, while in form permissive, was in fact mandatory upon the board of county commissioners. Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 588; Rock Island County Supra. v. United States, 71 U.S. 4 Wall. 435, 18 L. ed. 419; People v. Niagara County Supra. 49 Hun, 82; People v. Otsego County Supra. 51 N. Y. 401; People v. Livingston County Supra. 68 N. Y. 114. But there is no discrimination in the act itself. All outstanding warrants are treated in the same manner, unless, indeed, it was the purpose to clothe the commissioners with power to declare outstanding evidences of municipal indebtedness invalid. But that power is purely judicial, as the power to validate when invalid is purely legislative, and neither power can be exercised by a board of county commissioners. It would seem to follow that the act was entirely mandatory or entirely directory, and in our judgment it was mandatory. Had the act in terms validated all outstanding warrants, its mandatory character would not be questioned; but, if the warrants were validated by necessary implication, they were none the less valid, and the act not less mandatory. Viewing the action of the legislature in the light of the existing facts and circumstances conclusively presumed to have been known to the legislature, and the legislative purpose to validate and provide for the payment of all outstanding warrants cannot be doubted or evaded. Nor did that purpose work any injustice to the taxpayers of the defendant county. The county officials had incurred indebtedness for services, and in constructing roads, bridges, and improvements, far in excess of their legal powers. The county commissioners (the fiscal agents of the county) examined the bills and accounts, and declared them meritorious, and issued their warrants in payment therefor. The county had the benefit of the services and improvements. The moral obligation to pay was complete. The legislature added the legal obligation, but, instead of imposing the that of the subscription is to be regarded. Massachusetts & S. Constr. Co. v. Cane Creek Twp. 45 Fed. Rep. 386.

Construction of statutes.

In Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Jefferson County Comrs., 17 Kan. 29, the act in question was construed as not intended to legalize illegal votes, but merely to cure irregularities in proceedings.

Legislative authority to a municipality to fund its floating debt will validate the debt, if it was contracted without authority. Smith v. Stephan, 66 Md. 381.

In Roberts v. Bolles, 101 U.S. 119, 25 L. ed. 880, the bonds were held valid without the aid of the curative act.

A statute authorizing and directing a city to provide the means of paying the interest on its debt will not have the effect of ratifying or legitimating bonds which were illegally issued since it can and will be applied to legal debts and will not be extended by mere construction. Memphis v. Bethel (Tenn.) Dec. 4, 1875.

A statute giving the county authorities permission to exchange invalid conditional bonds which they had issued to a railroad for coupon bonds is such a recognition of the bonds as to validate them. Bell v. Farmville & P. R. Co. (Va.) Feb. 7, 1893.

A legislative direction that scrip issued by a city under a statute which was unconstitutional because it had not fixed the limit of the amount of such scrip which could be issued, be paid will not validate the scrip. Fisk v. Kenosha, 28 Wis. 33.

A mistake in referring to the date of an ordinance which the legislature is attempting to validate will not defeat the validation, if there is sufficient in the act and its preamble to identify the ordinance. Com. v. Marshall, 50 Pa. 326.

H. P. F.

burden of payment on the infant county, it was extended through a long series of years, until, presumably, the financial condition of the county would be such that payment could be accomplished without hardship. Certainly, no fair-minded tax-payer could object to such a course.

The learned trial court, as appears by its findings of fact and conclusions of law, decided this case exclusively upon the ground that the warrants upon which the action is based were void because issued in excess of the amounts of the current revenues of the years in which they were issued. We hold, upon grounds hereinbefore fully stated, that the Act of March 13, 1885, cured that defect, and deprived the county of the defense of ultra vires. The legislature had power to authorize the issue of warrants to the amount issued before they were issued, and hence it likewise possessed the power to subsequently ratify and validate those actually issued. If the county had any defense to the warrants on the merits,—such as a want of consideration to support them, or fraud in their issuance,—and such facts had been established at the trial, and found by the court, a very different question would have been presented to this court for determination. In the supposed case it would have devolved upon this court to decide whether the legislature could constitutionally legalize warrants issued fraudulently or without consideration, in whole or in part. There are no such findings in the record, and the legal presumptions are that the warrants were issued upon sufficient consideration, and without fraud. The sole ground upon which respondent endeavors, in this court, to uphold the action of the trial court, is that the warrants sued upon, and which appellant admits were originally ultra vires, were not validated by the subsequent legislative enactment. This ground failing, it follows that plaintiff is entitled to judgment for the full amount of such warrants. The trial court is directed to so modify its judgment as to award judgment in plaintiff's favor for the amounts prayed in the complaint. Appellant will recover costs in this court.

Modified and affirmed.

Corliss, J., dissenting:

The plaintiff sought to hold the defendant liable upon certain alleged county warrants. These instruments were county warrants in form, and it appears to be in the main undisputed, so far as this record is concerned, that these warrants were issued for debts incurred by the county. It is also uncontroverted that, in so far as the trial court refused to give judgment upon those warrants against the defendant, the warrants were originally illegal and void. The debts which they represented were obligations which the board of county commissioners had no authority to create, because the expenditures at the time were in excess of the amount which could be provided for by the current revenue of the county from the tax levy of the year. It is unnecessary to refer to the statute or other authority which renders void these warrants representing such expenditures.

The counsel for the plaintiff makes no contention against their original invalidity, but strenuously urges here that they have been transmuted into legal obligations of the county by an act of the legislature passed March 13, 1885, which provides as follows: "An act to authorize the county commissioners of Nelson county, Dakota, to fund the outstanding indebtedness thereof.

"Be it enacted by the legislative assembly of the territory of Dakota:

"Section 1. That the board of county commissioners of the county of Nelson, in the territory of Dakota, be empowered, and are hereby authorized, to issue bonds for not less than five hundred (500) dollars each, the total amount of such issue not to exceed thirty thousand (30,000) dollars; said bonds to draw interest at a rate not to exceed eight (8) per cent per annum, payable annually at the county treasurer's office of said Nelson county. Said bonds shall specify on their face the date, amount, for what purpose issued, the time and place of payment and rate of interest. Said bonds and coupons thereto attached shall be severally signed by the chairman of the board of county commissioners of said Nelson county, and attested by the clerk or auditor of said Nelson county; said bonds to be payable at the office of the county treasurer of Nelson county, or at such other place as the board of county commissioners may designate.

"Sec. 2. Said bonds shall be dated on the first day of July, A. D. 1885, and shall be payable in twenty (20) years, with the privilege of calling in said bonds at any time after ten (10) years.

"Sec. 3. The board of county commissioners of said Nelson county is hereby authorized, and it is made their duty to levy a sufficient tax for each year, besides the ordinary tax authorized by law, to be levied for the purpose of paying the interest of said bonds; provided, further, that seven (7) years after the time of issue of said bonds, it is made the duty of said board of county commissioners to levy a sinking fund for the purpose of paying off and redeeming said bonds, said tax not to exceed two (2) mills on the dollar of the valuation of said county in any one year.

"Sec. 4. It is hereby made the duty of the county treasurer of said Nelson county to negotiate the sale of said bonds, and to call in all outstanding county warrants whenever the bonds are sold, and he, said county treasurer, shall be allowed two (2) per cent commission as his fees, and no more, for negotiating said bonds, and paying out said money; provided, further, said bonds shall not be sold for less than par.

"Sec. 5. That after issuing the bonds mentioned in section 1 of this act, no warrants shall be issued by the county board unless at the time of issuing the same there is money enough in the county treasury of Nelson county to pay the warrants so issued.

"Sec. 6. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and approval.

"Approved March 13th, 1885."

At the outset we are informed by the title to the act, not that its purpose is to validate void county warrants, but to fund "the outstanding indebtedness" of the county. It is true that the title of a statute is not necessarily controlling; but something very convincing in the body of the act to the contrary of this avowed object of the law must be found, to overthrow this clearly expressed purpose merely to provide means for paying the outstanding indebtedness of the county. I find nothing to warrant me in construing this as a statute to validate void warrants, in that portion of the statute which makes it the duty of the county treasurer to sell the bonds, and call in all the "outstanding warrants." These words, "outstanding warrants," are more naturally applicable to valid warrants than to void warrants. When we find them employed in a statute whose sole purpose, as disclosed by its title, is to fund the "outstanding indebtedness" of the county, is there any escape from the conclusion that they relate only to such warrants as represent county indebtedness? In no proper sense is a paper in the form of a county warrant, but issued without authority, and against the commands of a statute, an indebtedness of the county. It is urged, however, that if only valid warrants were to be provided for there was no occasion for the enactment of the statute, as all such warrants would be paid out of the annual revenue. But it is well known that, while in theory the revenue from taxation should equal the total tax levied, yet in practice it often falls short of it, because of the failure to collect all taxes due. Sales of property to enforce collection will not bring cash to the treasury when no purchasers can be found. Because of inability to obtain cash for taxes, it might well happen that it would be necessary to provide another mode of payment for valid county warrants. In some of the counties (and Nelson county was not more fortunate than other counties), many farmers found themselves unable, through repeated crop failures, to pay their taxes. Nor does it necessarily follow that, because all legal warrants would be paid out of current revenues if the affairs of the county were lawfully managed, the legislature was bound to assume that all of them had been so paid. It might easily happen that the county treasurer would pay the warrants in their numerical order, and in this way the illegal warrants of one year might be paid out of the revenue of the next year; completely exhausting such revenue, and leaving the valid warrants of that year entirely unprovided for. It is not utterly impossible for it to have been a fact that very few of the legal warrants of either year had been paid at the time the act in question was passed. The revenues of these years might have been improperly spent. Valid warrants to the amount of over $10,000 could have been issued during these two years. It seems to me an extraordinary doctrine that the legislature inquired whether a strictly legal levy had been made during the year 1884 before passing this law. Nor is it important whether they made such inquiry or not. It is not controverted that there were some steps taken towards a legal levy. If the power of a county to incur debts depends upon there being in fact a valid tax levy for the county,—if the validity of tax proceedings are indispensable,—then very few valid warrants, in such cases, have been issued. The county may contract an indebtedness equal to the amount of taxes it can collect during the year, on the theory that the taxes are legal. Whether the taxes are legal or not is entirely immaterial, provided there are some steps taken towards the levy of a tax.

The prevailing opinion in this case, in assuming that there were no valid warrants outstanding at the time of the passage of this act, assumes a fact which I am unable to find in this record. I know it was possible for there to have been valid warrants outstanding at that time, for the reasons already stated, and it appears from this record that such was the fact. The court expressly finds that at the time the act was passed only $4,411.53 of over $32,000 of warrants had been paid. As valid warrants to the amount of over $10,000 might have been issued during the years 1883 and 1884, how can it be said that the legislature was bound to know that all of these unpaid warrants were void, when over $5,000 of them might have been valid? But what I regard as a conclusive argument against this reasoning is that it embodies still another unwarranted assumption. It assumes that the legislature was as fully in possession of all the facts regarding the illegality of these warrants as this court, after careful judicial investigation. This assumption is unreasonable, because it nowhere appears upon the face of the bill that the question whether these warrants were illegal was called to the attention of the legislature, or was in their minds, when the act in question was passed. This act does not pretend to legalize illegal warrants, or to deal with them in any way. On the contrary, its provisions relate to such warrants as constitute indebtedness of the county, i. e. valid warrants. When the legislature was asked to pass a law to fund the outstanding indebtedness of the county, and was informed that there were warrants outstanding to about the amount of $30,000, there was nothing in the circumstances of the case, or in the nature of the legislation asked at their hands, to call their attention to the question whether these warrants were illegal, or to lead to an investigation of the matter. They were merely asked to give the county authority to fund such of them as constituted indebtedness of the county, not exceeding $30,000. They did not give power to fund 80,000 of warrants and pretended warrants. It is only on the theory that they are presumed to have made a careful investigation of this question, which was not before them, so far as this act shows, that it can be said that they intended to legalize void warrants on the ground stated in the prevailing opinion, that it was only for void warrants that such funding measure was necessary. If they did not make such investigation, they knew nothing of the validity or invalidity of the warrants. To support the contention that the legislature investigated the question of their legality, it is necessary to assume, in the first instance, that the act relates to illegal as well as valid warrants. This is the very question to be determined. It is hardly logical to assume it in order to prove it. It is a rational assumption that they took it for granted that these alleged warrants which were outstanding were valid warrants, there being nothing in the statute to raise the question of invalidity, and the act being limited to valid warrants. The absence of all language showing a purpose to legalize the warrants is to my mind conclusive that the question of their illegality was not before them, and had not occurred to them. It would have been easy to have expressed such a purpose, had such been the legislative will. Whenever the legislature has wished to legalize county warrants, they have not found it difficult to express this purpose in unmistakable language. In one instance we find the contrast sharply presented between the funding of outstanding indebtedness and the legalizing of county warrants. The title of an act passed in 1881 is "An act authorizing the board of commissioners of Hutchinson county to fund certain outstanding indebtedness and legalizing warrants issued by the commissioners of Armstrong county." The act declares "that the board of commissioners of Hutchinson county are hereby authorized to fund such indebtedness of said county as may exist on the first day of March, 1881, and also to fund the outstanding warrants issued by authority of the commissioners of Armstrong county prior to the date of the delivery of the books of said Armstrong county to the officers of said Hutchinson county, which warrants issued in the regular order of business of said acting commissioners of Armstrong county are hereby legalized." Laws 1881, chap. 16. The act in question in this case embraces only the funding feature. It does not also "legalize" the warrants. Power to incur indebtedness binding upon a municipal corporation must be clearly conferred. No doubtful implication will suffice. Shall the act which is to ratify an illegal exercise of authority be less explicit?

I regard it as a dangerous doctrine that after extravagance has issued pretended obligations of municipality in excess of authority, and in the very face of statutory prohibition, cunning can outwit the wise and salutary restrictions upon municipal expenditures, by concealing, in artfully framed statutes, its purpose to legalize the void obligations, and then secure from the courts a construction of the law which the language of the act not only did not reveal, but studiously buried from sight. When a bill is introduced to legalize void indebtedness, it must disclose its purpose upon its face, to the end that every legislator may act intelligently, — may meet that issue upon its merits. A court which, after a measure, whose real purpose to legalize is concealed by its author from the legislature, has skulked through the legislative halls in disguise of ambiguous and doubtful language, aids in throwing off the cloak of deception, will find that it has encouraged like practices in the future. I do not say that deception was in the mind of the one who framed this statute.

27 L. R. A.

But I venture the prediction that practically every member who voted for it will be dumfounded at finding such radical consequences wrapped up in this simple funding law. Whatever rule may elsewhere obtain, in my judgment, we should lay it down as a rule to be rigidly enforced that the purpose to validate a void obligation must be expressly declared, or be deduced from the law by the clearest necessary implication. The case of Brown v. New York, 68 N. Y. 239, is one in which the purpose to validate was necessarily embraced in the act. In that case the commissioner of public works had entered into a contract with plaintiff "for regulating, grading and setting curb and gutter stone in Tenth avenue from Manhattan to 155th street, and flagging the sidewalks thereof." The contract was held void because it was not founded upon sealed proposals, and was not let to the lowest bidder after advertisement, as required by the statute. The court, however, held that the contract had been validated by a subsequent act of the legislature, which provided as follows: "The board of the assessors of the city of New York are hereby authorized and directed to assess upon the property intended to be benefited, in the manner provided by law for making assessments for local improvements, the expense which has been, or shall be actually incurred by the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York for regulating, grading, and setting curb and gutter stones and flagging the sidewalks in the Eighth avenue, from Fifty-Ninth street to One Hundred and Twenty-Second street, in said city; also in the Tenth avenue, from Manhattan street to One Hundred and Fifty-Fifth street in said city." "The law required all expense connected with this particular work, whether incurred or to be incurred, to be assessed upon the property benefited by the improvement. Here was a legislative declaration that the amount of expenses already incurred and to be incurred under any contract relating to the improvement to these parts of streets should be raised by assessments upon the property benefited. The money so raised was clearly intended to be used in paying these expenses, and this would involve payment of the expenses under the void contract. I do not wish to be regarded as expressing my approval of this case. I think the doctrine that a void claim against a municipality can be legalized by anything short of a very clear manifestation of such purpose is fraught with danger, — is repugnant to sound policy. Let it once be understood that the courts demand an unequivocal expression of the purpose to validate the void obligation, and there will be found no difficulty in so framing statutes as to express this purpose in unmistakable language. Let the contrary rule prevail, and funding statutes will become the stalking horses to cover the secret wish of interested parties to secure the legitimization of void debts, when it would not be safe to reveal such purpose to the legislature; and to the surprise of legislators, the innocent funding bill for which they voted will be found to be a wide-reaching and radical measure, to create, and not merely to fund, legal obligations.

The case of Beloit v. Morgan, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. ed. 205, which is relied upon by plaintiff's counsel, is, in my judgment, distinguishable from the case at bar. The town of Beloit having issued certain bonds in payment for railroad stock, which were void, the legislature created out of a portion of the territory embraced within the limits of such town the city of Beloit. No other bonds had at that time been issued for railroad stock by the town of Beloit, except those already referred to. Under these circumstances the legislature declared that "all principal and interest upon all bonds which have heretofore been issued by the town of Beloit for railroad stock or other purposes, when the same, or any portion thereof shall fall due, shall be paid by the town and city of Beloit in the same proportions as if said town and city were not dissolved." The court laid stress on the fact that the act could have no effect, as to bonds issued for railroad stock, unless it was held to apply to those void bonds, as they were the only bonds which had been issued for that purpose by the town, and that the act declared that such bonds should be paid. Said the court: "No bonds were issued in payment for railroad stock, but those to a part of which this controversy relates. The language used by the legislature is clear and explicit. No gloss can raise a doubt as to its meaning. It distinctly affirms, and the affirmation is repeated, that the bonds shall be paid." The more recent decision of the Federal Supreme Court fully sustains my conclusion. Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120, 39 L. ed. 81. The facts of that case are as follows: The constitution of Mississippi declared that the legislature should not authorize any county, city, or town to become a stockholder in, or to lend its credit to, any company, association, or corporation, unless two thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city, or town, at a special election or regular election to be held therein, should assent thereto. A city in that state subscribed for stock in the Selma, Marion & Memphis Railroad Company, after an election held to vote on that question, but neither the election nor the subscription was authorized by the legislature. There being a vote of more than two thirds in favor of the proposition to subscribe for the stock, the subscription was made, and bonds to pay for the stock were issued. They were, of course, void. But subsequently the legislature passed an act which declared that "all subscriptions to the capital stock of the said Selma, Marion & Memphis Railroad Company, made by any county, city, or town of this state, which were not made in violation of the constitution of this state, are hereby legalized, ratified, and confirmed." Laws 1872, chap. 75, p. 313. This act more strongly indicates a purpose to validate the void subscription and bond than does the act relied on in this case indicate a purpose to legalize void warrants; and yet the court was clearly of the opinion that it had no such effect, and there was no dissent in the case. Counsel for plaintiff seeks to distinguish this case on the ground that the legalizing statute was not applicable to the subscriptions and bonds in question, for the reason that it validated only such subscriptions as were not made in violation of the constitution. This reasoning of the counsel assumes that the subscription in question did violate the constitution. But it did not. The subscription was not void because the constitution prohibited it, but because there was no statute authorizing it. The case was one of a want of power, and not of the violation of the fundamental law. The subscription was such a one as the constitution permitted the legislature to authorize. The only trouble with it was that the legislature had failed to authorize it. The case was in no manner different from what it would have been, had the constitution been silent on the subject, and there had been no statute authorizing the subscription; and yet, in such a case, it would not be pretended that the subscription would have been in violation of the constitution. The constitution merely restricted the legislature in the exercise of its power to authorize such subscriptions, and it is only with reference to such subscriptions as the legislature were prohibited from authorizing that it could be said that the subscription would be in violation of the constitution. But the subscription made was one which the legislature might have authorized. The following language of the court in that case embodies my conception of the true doctrine: "The intention of the legislature to confirm and ratify the subscription in question cannot be ascertained with certainty from the language of the act, which is too vague to form the basis of so important an authority as that sought to be deduced from it. As is said in South Carolina v. Stoll, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 425, 436, 21 L. ed. 655, if the legislature intended to do what is claimed, 'it was bound to do it openly, intelligently, and in the language not to be misunderstood;' and, 'as a doubtful or obscure declaration would not be justifiable, so it is not to be imputed.'"

The argument that the legislature should not be presumed to have passed an idle act has but little weight, under the circumstances of this case. There might have been several thousand dollars of valid warrants outstanding when the act was passed. I believe that there were. If so, the act would have force when construed as a mere funding law. The legislature does not declare that the county shall bond to the amount of $30,000. It says that this shall be the limit. Whatever amount, under this sum, shall be needed to pay warrants, may be raised by the issue of bonds. Suppose that the legislature had said in terms that only valid warrants should be paid. Would it be argued that illegal warrants must be paid because to hold otherwise would render the act of no effect? Had the statute in terms spoken of valid warrants, it would not have been clearer. We have seen that the legislature knew what language to employ when they desired to legalize void warrants. They used explicit language in such a case, but in this act they refrain from the use of such language, and expressly limit the law to valid warrants by describing it as a law to fund the indebtedness of the county. It seems to me that the fallacy of the reasoning that the legislature must be presumed to have known all the facts is twofold: Their attention was not called by the prepared bill to any matters connected with the validity of these warrants, and we have no means of knowing that they had evidence that all of these warrants were void. We do not know it ourselves. There is nothing in the language of the cases cited in the prevailing opinion warranting the rule that this court must assume that the legislature had investigated a mass of facts which were entirely foreign to the measure they were about to pass,—a measure to provide for the funding of the county indebtedness by the issue of bonds to the necessary amount, not exceeding $30,000. I know of no decision which holds that the legislature must be presumed to have investigated acts not suggested by a bill before them, for the purpose of forcing into the act, by a strained construction, a meaning not apparent on the face of the act itself,—a meaning directly opposed to the terms of the statute; a meaning which finds no support, except upon the theory that the legislature, without any hint as to their relevancy from the act itself, have examined into these facts. What right have we to say that such an investigation, even if made, convinced the legislature that there were nothing but void warrants to be funded? It is said that the provision requiring the treasurer to call in all outstanding warrants, etc., is conclusive that void warrants were intended to be legalized. But the treasurer is not directed to call in pretended warrants. He has no power or right to do so. The instruments he is to call in are warrants, and warrants are instruments which represent the indebtedness of some municipality; and he is distinctly informed that it is only warrants of that kind—only real warrants, and not pseudo warrants—that he is to pay, by the very title of the act, which speaks of the funding of the indebtedness as being the sole purpose of the statute. It cannot be said that to hold that the county commissioners were to pay only valid warrants out of the proceeds of the bonds sold would vest them with judicial power. Not at all. They were not to determine this question finally. Should they refuse to pay a valid warrant, they could be compelled to pay it. Should they undertake to pay a void warrant, they could be restrained from doing so. They would merely determine, as the officers of any other corporation would determine, what were valid claims against the corporation. No one ever dreamed that the decision of such a question as the basis of business action was the exercise of judicial power. It is a decision that is being made thousands of times every day by business men, when asked to pay some claim or some pretended obligation. They do not decide it finally. They merely decide it for the purpose of governing their conduct in paying or refusing to pay the claim presented. So with reference to these outstanding warrants. The county commissioners could not finally determine which were to be paid and which were not to be paid. They could only decide the matter as other business men decide similar questions in determining whether they will pay a claim or contest it in the courts.

27 L. R. A.

The statute, upon its face, is simply a funding law. Nothing else can be made of it, unless extrinsic circumstances are to be considered. Now, there is no rule better settled than that which forbids an examination of extrinsic facts,—which prohibits an inquiry as to consequences when the act, upon its face, is unambiguous. Courts look to consequences, and investigate circumstances, not to introduce doubt and uncertainty into an act, the meaning of which is plain upon its face, but to aid in solving doubts which the very terms of the act itself create. When the legislature has passed a statute which in terms is clearly a mere funding law, what right have we to construe it as a legalizing statute because investigation may lead us to the conclusion that the outstanding legal warrants against the county were less in amount than the sum for which the county might issue its bonds to fund its indebtedness? What right have we, at all, to look beyond the language of the act itself? For my part, I believe we have no right to fix the judicial eye upon anything but the words of the plain statute itself. The rule which I invoke is ancient, and it is universally recognized. "If the meaning of statutes is doubtful, the consequences are to be considered in the construction of them; "but, if the meaning is plain, no consequences are to be regarded, for that would be assuming legislative authority." 4 Bacon, Abr. 652. See Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507, 71 Am. Dec. 559. The court said: "It is only when the words of the statute are obscure or doubtful that we have any discretionary power in giving them a construction, or can take into consideration the consequences of any particular interpretation." In Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh, 42, 19 Am. Dec. 722, the court said: "In the construction of statutes, we are told, from high authority, that, when the words are doubtful and uncertain, it is proper to inquire what was the intent of the legislature, but, where they have expressed themselves in plain and clear words, it is very dangerous for judges to launch out too far, in searching into their intent." In Hoke v. Henderson, 15 N. C. 1, 25 Am. Dec. 677, it is held that "in construing a statute, if the words are ambiguous, resort should be had to the probable consequences which would arise from the one or the other construction, but, if the meaning of the language of the statute is plain, there can be no such reason." In United States v. The Sadie, 41 Fed. Rep. 396, the court said (quoting with approval the language of the court in United States v. Church of Holy Trinity, 86 Fed. Rep. 304): "Where the terms of the statute are plain, unambiguous, and explicit, the courts are not at liberty to go outside of the language, to search for a meaning which it does not reasonably bear, in the effort to ascertain and give effect to what may be imagined to have been the intention of congress." Mr. Sutherland says, in his work on Statutory Construction: "And, if the legislature has expressed its intention in the law itself, it is not admissible to depart from that intention on any extraneous consideration or theory of construction. Very strong expressions have been used by the courts to emphasize the principle that they are to derive their knowledge of the legislative intention from the words or language of the statute itself, which the legislature has used to express it, if a knowledge of it can be so derived." Section 236, p. 812. He says further, in section 237, on page 812: "It is, beyond question, the duty of courts, in construing statutes, to give effect to the intent of the lawmaking power, and seek for that intent in every legitimate way, but . . . first of all in the words and language employed; and if the words are free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly, and distinctly the sense of the framers of the instrument, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. It is not allowable to interpret what has no need of interpretation. The statute itself furnishes the best means of its own exposition, and, if the sense in which words were intended to be used can be clearly ascertained from its parts and provisions, the intention thus indicated will prevail, without resorting to other means in aiding in the construction." Again, on page 813, he says: "The legislative intent being plainly expressed, so that the act, read by itself, or in connection with other statutes pertaining to the same subject is clear, certain, and unambiguous, the courts have only simple and obvious duty to enforce the law according to its terms." In Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 485, the court said: "The language of a statute is its most rational exposition, and, where its language is susceptible of a sensible interpretation, it is not to be controlled by any extraneous considerations."

In conclusion, I wish to express my pleasure that the majority of this court are able to reach a conclusion contrary to this opinion, and hold the county liable on these warrants. To a new state, its financial honor is of the highest importance. To develop its resources, capital is indispensable, and everything that savors of repudiation, in any form, tends to frighten capital from its borders.

Petition for rehearing overruled March 5, 1894.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,

v.

RECTOR, etc., OF TRINITY CHURCH, Respts.

(145 N. Y. 32.)

1. A statute requiring water to be furnished on each floor of every tenement house is a valid exercise of police power with respect to health, and also with respect to public safety regarding fires and their extinguishment.
2. Compelling expense to improve property by the exercise of police power does not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law, if the exaction is not unreasonable either with reference to the nature or cost.
3. Due process of law does not require notice to the owner of premises before the board of health under statutory authority can order him to furnish water in tenement houses, where he is entitled to a trial in any attempt to enforce a penalty or punishment for non-compliance.
4. One place of water supply on each floor of a tenement house fairly accessible to all occupants of the floor is all that can usually or reasonably be required for health and fire protection, and therefore all that the board of health has power to order under New York Act 1887, amending section 663 of the New York City Consolidation Act.

(Bartlett, J., Decents.)

NOTE.—The above case seems to be one of first impression, and is clearly of great importance.

For constitutionality of laws charging expense of police regulations on business to be regulated, see Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. State (Ohio) 16 L. R. A. 830, and note; and for similar question as to cost of abolishing grade crossings, see Kelly v. Minneapolis (Minn.) 26 L. R. A. 92, and note.

27 L. R. A.

See also 29 L. R. A. 573.

(February 26, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of a General Term of the Court of Common Pleas for the city of New York reversing a judgment of a Trial Term in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the statutory penalty for refusing to comply with an order of the board of health to place water facilities in certain tenement houses. Reversed.

Statement by Peckham, J.:

This is an appeal from an order of the general term of the court of common pleas for the city of New York, which reversed a judgment on a verdict directed for the plaintiff, and granted a new trial. The action was brought by the plaintiff, by virtue of several acts of the legislature giving it power, in certain cases, to commence an action in its own name, for the purpose of recovering the amount of $200, being the penalty for twenty days' violation by the defendant of the act hereinafter mentioned, relative to the supply of water in several tenement houses owned by the defendant. The defendant denied some of the allegations of the complaint, and set up, also, as one of the defenses to the action, that the statute upon which the complaint is founded is unconstitutional. Each party moved, after the evidence was in, that a verdict be directed in its favor. The motion on the part of the plaintiff was granted, and that on the part of the defendant was denied. The defendant excepted to these decisions of the court, and judgment having been entered, it appealed to the general term of the court of common pleas. There the judgment was reversed, and from the order of reversal the plaintiff appeals here.

The cause of action is founded upon section 663 of the Consolidation Act, relating to the city of New York, as such section was amended by chapter 84 of the Laws of 1887. After making various provisions in prior sections for the proper construction and ventilation of tenement houses in the city of New York, the legislature, by the amendment of 1887, enacted as follows: "Sec. 663. Every such house erected after May 14th, 1867, or converted, . . . shall have Croton or other water furnished in sufficient quantity at one or more places on each floor, occupied or intended to be occupied by one or more families; and all tenement houses shall be furnished with a like supply of water by the owners thereof whenever they shall be directed so to do by the board of health. But a failure in the general supply of water by the city authorities shall not be construed to be a failure on the part of the owner, provided that proper and suitable appliances to receive and distribute such water are placed in said house. Provided, that the board of health shall see to it that all tenement houses are so supplied before January first, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine." The rest of the section is not material. It appeared upon the trial that the defendant was the owner of certain houses in the city of New York, known as "Numbers 59, 77, 84, and 86 Charlton Street," and on the 20th of March, 1891, the plaintiff caused to be served on the agent of the defendant a notice requiring the defendant, in conformity with the provisions of the Sanitary Code, to alter, repair, cleanse, and improve the premises above mentioned, and directing that suitable "appliances to receive and distribute a supply of water for domestic use be provided on the top floor of No. 59; the basement, first and second floors of No. 77; the basement, first, second, and third floors of No. 84; and the basement and attic of 86." And the defendant was required to comply with the requirements within five days from the receipt of the notice, and it was also stated in the notice that any application for a necessary extension of time, or for the suspension of any part of the requirements contained in the written notice, should be made to the health department, at the time and place designated in the notice. This action was brought against defendant as owner of houses Nos. 77 and 84 Charlton street. The defendant claims that the houses in question were not "tenement" houses, as that word is popularly used; that they were houses constructed many years ago as dwelling houses, and they have never been altered, with reference to their internal arrangement, so as to convert them into what would popularly be called "tenement houses." They were old-fashioned dwelling houses,—two-story, attic, and basement. There were hydrants in the back yards, accessible to all tenants of the houses. But the proof in the case shows that at No. 77 Charlton street there were three families, and in No. 84 there were six families; and the houses came clearly and distinctly under the definition of "tenement houses," as enacted by section 666 of the Consolidation Act, as amended by the Laws of 1887, chap. 84, p. 100. It is claimed on the part of the defendant that the buildings are in a transition neighborhood, which will be shortly required for business structures; that they are not in a neighborhood where all or many of the large buildings, which are known as "tenement houses," in the popular meaning of the word, are situated; and that these houses are not really within the reason of the statute. The defendant offered on the trial to give testimony as to the necessary cost of complying with the order of the board of health, which was excluded, and the defendant excepted. Defendant also offered to prove that the introduction of appliances to furnish water on each floor, and the required sinks and waste pipes to connect with the sewer, would cause great danger of injury to the property, through the water in the pipes freezing and the pipes bursting in the winter season; also, that no complaints had been made to the defendant corporation by the occupants of these houses, in reference to the want of water. All this evidence was excluded, under the objection of the plaintiff, and upon the exception of the defendant. The general term of the common pleas granted leave to plaintiff to appeal from its order of reversal and granting a new trial, on the ground that a question of law was involved, which ought to be reviewed by this court.

Mr. Roger Foster, with Mr. Henry Steinert, for appellant:

The statute is a lawful exercise of the police power both for the protection of the health of the community and protection against fire.

Com. v. Roberts, 16 L. R. A. 400, 155 Mass. 231; Com. v. Certain Intoxicating Liquors, 115 Mass. 153; Banerost v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 438; Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co. 144 Mass. 523, 59 Am. Rep. 113; Com. v. Abbott, 160 Mass. 282; Prentice, Pol. Powers, 236, note 2; Re Paul, 94 N. Y. 497; Rose v. King, 15 L. R. A. 160, 49 Ohio St. 213.

The owners of these houses, like the owners of theatres, dedicate them to a quasi public use or a use in which the public have a special interest, which justifies a special regulation regulating their use.

People v. King, 1 L. R. A. 293, 110 N. Y. 418; People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559, 117 N. Y. 1; Budd v. People, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45.

Tenement-house owners are in a similar position to innkeepers, whose obligations to their guests have always been regulated by law.

People v. Budd, and Budd v. People, supra; Hale, De Portibus Maris, 77.

The protection of the public health is always a justification for the regulation of the use of property under the police power.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Budd, supra; People v. Rhoer, 25 L. R. A. 794, 141 N. Y. 129; People v. King, supra; Donnell v. State, 48 Miss. 661, 13 Am. Rep. 375; Joseph v. Bidwell, 28 La. Ann. 382, 26 Am. Rep. 102.

To promote the public safety, the legislature has the power to regulate the construction of buildings in cities by forbidding their erection above a certain height, by compelling the use of fire-proof material and even by forbidding the repair of wooden buildings put up within the fire limits before the passage of the law.

Fire Department of New York v. Atlas S. S. Co. 106 N. Y. 566; People v. D'Oench, 111 N. Y. 859; Klinger v. Bickel, 117 Pa. 826; Ex parte Fiske, 73 Cal. 125; Wadleigh v. Gilman, 12 Me. 408, 28 Am. Dec. 188; King v. Davenport, 98 Ill. 305, 38 Am. Rep. 89; Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 849; Allen v. Taunton, 19 Pick. 485; Opinion of Justices, 8 L. R. A. 487, 150 Mass. 592.

An abundant and accessible supply of water is a necessity for the protection of the health of the community and for protection against fire; and is always the subject of police regulations.

State v. Toledo, 48 Ohio St. 112; Lumbard v. Stearns, 4 Cush. 60; Opinion of Justices, supra; Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 847, 28 L. ed. 178.

It is not a taking of property to compel an owner to improve or alter the condition of his property although he is thereby put to some expense.

Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am. Dec. 625; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Emmons, 149 U. S. 364, 37 L. ed. 769; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269; People v. Boston & A. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 569; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbs, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051; People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559, 117 N. Y. 1; Goddard, Petitioner, 16 Pick. 504, 28 Am. Dec. 259; Carthage v. Frederick, 10 L. R. A. 178, 122 N. Y. 268.

The state may compel a man to drain his own land at his own expense.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 46 Am. Rep. 687; Norfleet v. Cromwell, 70 N. C. 634, 16 Am. Rep. 787; Anderson v. Kerns Draining Co. 14 Ind. 199, 77 Am. Dec. 63; O'Reiley v. Kankakee Valley Draining Co. 32 Ind. 169; New Orleans Draining Co. 11 La. Ann. 888; Williams v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 560; Sessions v. Crunkilton, 20 Ohio St. 349; Dingley v. Boston, 100 Mass. 544; Bancroft v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 438; Hagar v. Yolo County Suprs. 47 Cal. 222; French v. Kirkland, 1 Paige, 117, 2 L. ed. 583; Philips v. Wickham, 1 Paige, 590, 2 L. ed. 768; Woodruff v. Fisher, 17 Barb. 224.

So, a city can forbid the construction of wooden buildings within its limits.

Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 849; Wadleigh v. Gilman, 12 Me. 408, 28 Am. Dec. 188; Corde v. Miller, 89 Mich. 581, 38 Am. Rep. 480; Knoxville v. Bird, 12 Lea, 121, 47 Am. Rep. 326.

The state may require the owner of a lot to fill it up at his own expense when otherwise it would become a nuisance.

Nickerson v. Boston, 181 Mass. 806; Rochester v. Simpson, 184 N. Y. 414; Yonkers Board of Health v. Copcutt, 23 L. R. A. 485, 140 N. Y. 12.

The legislature may forbid the further use of a brewery for the purpose for which it was constructed.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205.

Or further interments in a cemetery may be forbidden by the ordinance of a city which sold the land for that purpose with a covenant of general enjoyment.

Brick Presby. Church Corp. v. New York & Cow. 538; Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. 535.

So a building law may forbid improvements or repairs without a license.

Welch v. Hotchkiss, 39 Conn. 140, 12 Am. Rep. 838. See also Daniel v. Hilgard, 77 Ill. 640; State v. Hoskins (Minn.) 25 L. R. A. 759; Rideout v. Knox, 2 L. R. A. 81, 148 Mass. 368; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am. Dec. 625.

The act is not unconstitutional because of its failure to expressly direct that the owner of a tenement shall be given notice and a hearing before he is ordered to connect his buildings with the Croton water-pipes.

Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Spencer v. Merchant, 100 N. Y. 535, 125 U. S. 845, 31 L. ed. 763; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 209; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Weltman, 148 U. S. 839, 36 L. ed. 176; People v. Yonkers Board of Health, 23 L. R. A. 481, 140 N. Y. 1; Salem v. Eastern R. Co. 98 Mass. 431, 96 Am. Dec. 650.

If notice was necessary it will be presumed that it was given.

Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 80, 37 L. ed. 687; People v. Seneca Falls Board of Health, 59 Hun, 595.

Mr. S. P. Nash, for respondent:

The acts of the legislature which impose the duty of supplying water on each floor of the houses described cannot be sustained as a proper exercise of police power.

Carthage v. Frederick, 10 L. R. A. 178, 122 N. Y. 268; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34; People v. Arensburg, 105 N. Y. 123, 59 Am. Rep. 483; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Rochester v. Simpson, 57 Hun, 36.

Judicial proceedings which involve the imposition of penalties or other pecuniary liabilities cannot be taken without notice to the parties to be affected.

People v. Seneca Falls Board of Health, 59 Hun, 595.

Where legislation destroys or impairs the property of the citizen or interferes with his rights it is void, unless it is clearly within the police power of the state; legislation looking to the public good, not merely to individual ease and comfort, or the benefit of one class rather than another.

Forster v. Scott, 18 L. R. A. 543, 136 N. Y. 577.

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The recovery in this case is founded upon that portion of the consolidation act which requires that all houses of a certain description, upon the direction of the board of health, shall be provided with Croton or other water in sufficient quantity at one or more places on each floor, occupied, or intended to be occupied, by one or more families. The defendant, among other things, alleges as a defense that the order of the board of health directing the defendant to furnish the water as provided by the statute was made without notice to it, and that, as it could not be complied with excepting by the expenditure of a considerable amount of money, the result would be to deprive the defendant of its property without a hearing and an opportunity to show what defense it might have, and that it in fact deprived the defendant of its property without due process of law. There was no arrangement in either of these houses in question for the supplying of the Croton or other water to the occupants of each floor at the time when the order of the board of health was made. Such order could not, therefore, be complied with on the part of the defendant without the expenditure of money for that purpose. That fact must be assumed, and, even upon that assumption, we do not think the act is invalid on the alleged ground that it deprives the defendant, if enforced, of its property without due process of law. The act must be sustained, if at all, as an exercise of the police power of the state. It has frequently been said that it is difficult to give any exact definition which shall properly limit and describe such power. It must be exercised subject to the provisions of both the federal and state constitutions, and the law passed in the exercise of such power must tend, in a degree that is perceptible and clear, towards the preservation of the lives, the health, the morals, or the welfare of the community, as those words have been used and construed in many cases heretofore decided. Such cases have arisen in this state, where the power of the legislature was questioned, and where the exercise of that power was affirmed or denied for the reasons given therein. See People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 877, 52 Am. Rep. 84; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 686; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; People v. Arensburg, 105 N. Y. 123, 59 Am. Rep. 483, and many cases cited in these cases. See also, Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 86, 62, 21 L. ed. 894, 404; Barbier v. Connolly, 118 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 928; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Producing & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989. The act must tend in some appreciable and clear way, towards the accomplishment of some one of the purposes which the legislature has the right to accomplish under the exercise of the police power. It must not be exercised ostensibly in favor of the promotion of some such object, while really it is an evasion thereof, and for a distinct and totally different purpose; and the courts will not be prevented from looking at the true character of the act, as developed by its provisions, by any statement in the act itself, or in its title, showing that it was ostensibly passed for some object within the police power. The court must be enabled to see some clear and real connection between the assumed purpose of the law and the actual provisions thereof; and it must see that the latter do tend, in some plain and appreciable manner, towards the accomplishment of some of the objects for which the legislature may use this power.

Assuming that this act is a proper exercise of the power, in its general features, we do not think that it can be regarded as invalid because of the fact that it will cost money to comply with the order of the board, for which the owner is to receive no compensation, or because the board is entitled to make the order, under the provisions of the act, without notice to and a hearing of the defendant. As to the latter objection, it may be said that, in enacting what shall be done by the citizen for the purpose of promoting the public health and safety, it is not usually necessary to the validity of legislation upon that subject that he shall be heard before he is bound to comply with the direction of the legislature. People v. Yonkers Board of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 6, 23 L. R. A. 481. The legislature has power, and has exercised it in countless instances, to enact general laws upon the subject of the public health or safety without providing that the parties who are to be affected by those laws shall first be heard before they shall take effect in any particular case. So far as this objection of want of notice is concerned, the case is not materially altered in principle from what it would have been if the legislature had enacted a general law that all owners of tenement houses should, within a certain period named in the act, furnish the water as directed. Indeed, this act does contain such a provision, but the plaintiff has not proceeded under it. If, in such case, the enforcement of the direct command of the legislature were not to be preceded by any hearing on the part of any owner of a tenement house, no provision of the state or federal constitution would be violated. The fact that the legislature has chosen to delegate a certain portion of its power to the board of health, and to enact that the owners of certain tenement houses should be compelled to furnish this water after the board of health had so directed, would not alter the principle, nor would it be necessary to provide that the board should give notice and afford a hearing to the owner before it made such order. I have never understood that it was necessary that any notice should be given under such circumstances before a provision of this nature could be carried out.

As to the other objection, no one would contend that the amount of the expenditure which an act of this kind may cause, whether with or without a hearing, is within the absolute discretion of the legislature. It cannot be claimed that it would have the right, even under the exercise of the police power, to command the doing of some act by the owner of property, and for the purpose of carrying out some provision of law, which act could only be performed by the expenditure of a large and unreasonable amount of money on the part of the owner. If such excessive demand were made, the act would, without doubt, violate the constitutional rights of the individual. The exaction must not alone be reasonable, when compared with the amount of the work or the character of the improvement demanded. The improvement or work must, in itself, be a reasonable, proper, and fair exaction, when considered with reference to the object to be attained. If the expense to the individual under such circumstances would amount to a very large and unreasonable sum, that fact would be a most material one in deciding whether the method or means adopted for the attainment of the main object were or were not an unreasonable demand upon the individual for the benefit of the public. Of this the courts must, within proper limits, be the judges. We may own our property absolutely, and yet it is subject to the proper exercise of the police power. We have surrendered, to that extent, our right to its unrestricted use. It must be so used as not improperly to cause harm to our neighbor, including in that description the public generally. There are sometimes necessary expenses which inevitably grow out of the use to which we may put our property, and which we must incur, either voluntarily, or else under the direction of the legislature, in order that the general health, safety, or welfare may be conserved. The legislature, in the exercise of this power, may direct that certain improvements shall be made in existing houses at the owners' expense, so that the health and safety of the occupants, and of the public through them, may be guarded. These exactions must be regarded as legal so long as they bear equally upon all members of the same class, and their cost does not exceed what may be termed one of the conditions upon which individual property is held. It must not be an unreasonable exaction, either with reference to its nature or its cost. Within this reasonable restriction, the power of the state may, by police regulations, so direct the use and enjoyment of the property of the citizen that it shall not prove pernicious to his neighbors, or to the public generally. The difference between what is and what is not reasonable frequently constitutes the dividing line between a valid and void enactment by the legislature in the exercise of its police power. In commenting on the difference of degree in any given case which would render an act valid or otherwise, Mr. Justice Holmes, in Rideout v. Knox, speaking for the supreme court of Massachusetts, said: "It may be said that the difference is only one of degree. Most differences are, when nicely analyzed. At any rate, difference of degree is one of the distinctions by which the right of the legislature to exercise police power is determined. Some small limitations of previously existing rights incident to property may be imposed for the sake of preventing a manifest evil. Larger ones could not be, except by the exercise of the right of eminent domain." 148 Mass. 868, 872, 3 L. R. A. 81. See also, Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 540, 547, 10 L. R. A. 116. The case of Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289, is an example of the exercise of the taxing power of the state, and other considerations obtain in such cases.

Laws and regulations of a police nature, though they may disturb the enjoyment of individual rights, are not unconstitutional, though no provision is made for compensation for such disturbances. They do not appropriate private property for public use, but simply regulate its use and enjoyment by the owner. If he suffers injury, it is either damnum absque injuria, or, in the theory of the law, he is compensated for it by sharing in the general benefits which the regulations are intended and calculated to secure. 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 141, and note 2; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 83, 84, 86; Baker v. Boston, 12 Pick. 183, 193, 22 Am. Dec. 421; Clark v. Syracuse, 18 Barb. 82, 86.

The state, or its agent in enforcing its mandate, takes no property of the citizen when it simply directs the making of these improvements. As a result thereof, the individual is put to some expense in complying with the law, by paying mechanics or other laborers to do that which the law enjoins upon the owner; but, so long as the amount exacted is limited as stated, the property of the citizen has not been taken, in any constitutional sense, without due process of law. Instances are numerous of the passage of laws which entail expense on the part of those who must comply with them, and where such expense must be borne by them, without any hearing or compensation, because of the provisions of the law. Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140-152, 62 Am. Dec. 625. One of the late instances of this kind of legislation is to be found in the law regulating manufacturing establishments. Laws 1887, chap. 462. The provisions of that act could not be carried out without the expenditure of a considerable sum by the owners of a then existing factory. Hand rails to stairs, hoisting shafts to be inclosed, automatic doors to elevators, automatic shifters for throwing off belts or pulleys, and fire escapes on the outside of certain factories,—all these were required by the legislature from such owner, and without any direct compensation to him for such expenditure. Has the legislature no right to enact laws such as this statute regarding factories, unless limited to factories to be thereafter built? Because the factory was already built when the act was passed, was it beyond the legislative power to provide such safeguards to life and health, as against all owners of such property, unless upon the condition that these expenditures to be incurred should ultimately come out of the public purse? I think to so hold would be to run counter to the general course of decisions regarding the validity of laws of this character, and to mistake the foundation upon which they are placed. Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. 785; Stuyvesant v. New York, Id. 604; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 706, chap. 16, etc.

Any one in a crowded city who desires to erect a building is subject at every turn, almost, to the exactions of the law in regard to provisions for health, for safety from fire, and for other purposes. He is not permitted to build of certain materials, within certain districts, because, though the materials may be inexpensive, they are inflammable; and he must build in a certain manner. Theaters and hotels are to be built in accordance with plans to be inspected and approved by the agents of the city; other public buildings, also, and private dwellings within certain districts are subject to the same supervision.

And in carrying out all these various acts the owner is subjected to an expense much greater than would have been necessary to have completed his building, if not compelled to complete it in the manner, of the materials, and under the circumstances prescribed by various acts of the legislature. And yet he has never had a hearing in any one of these cases, nor does he receive any compensation for the increased expense of his building, rendered necessary in order to comply with the police regulations. I do not see that the principle is substantially altered where the case is one of an existing building, and it is to be subjected to certain alterations for the purpose of rendering it either less exposed to the danger from fires, or its occupants more secure from disease. In both cases the object must be within some of the acknowledged purposes of the police power, and such purpose must be possible of accomplishment at some reasonable cost, regard being had to all the surrounding circumstances. There might at first seem to be some difference as to the principle which obtained in enacting conditions, upon complying with which the owner might be permitted to erect a structure within the limits of a city or village, or for certain purposes, and the enactment of provisions which would necessitate the alteration of structures already in existence. In the first case it might be urged that the discretion of the legislature in enacting conditions for building might be more extensive, because the owner would be under no necessity of building; it would be a matter of choice, and not of compulsion; and, in choosing to build, it might be said that he accepted the condition,—while in the second case he would have no choice, and would be compelled to alter or improve the existing building as directed by the law. The difference, however, is, as it seems to me, really not one of principle, but only of circumstances. Although the owner, in the one case, is not compelled to build, yet he is limited in the use to which he may put his property by the provisions of the law. He cannot build as he wishes to, unless upon the condition of a compliance with the law; and he may very probably be so situated, as to location of property, and in other ways, that it is really a necessity for him to use his property in the way proposed, and which he cannot do without expending considerable sums above what he otherwise would be called upon to do, in order to comply with those provisions. They must therefore be reasonable, as already stated. When one's use of his property is thus circumscribed and limited, what might otherwise be called his rights are plainly interfered with, and the justification therefor can only be found in this police power. So, when the owner of an existing structure is called upon to make such alterations, while the necessity may seem to be more plainly present, still it may exist in both cases, and the only justification in either is the same. Under the police power, persons and property are subjected to all kinds of restraints and burdens in order to secure the general comfort and health of the public.

The citizen cannot, under this act, be punished in any way, nor can any penalty be recovered from him for an alleged noncompliance with any of its provisions, or with any order of the board of health, without a trial. The punishment or penalties provided for in section 665 cannot be enforced without a trial under due process of law, and upon such trial he has an opportunity to show whatever facts would constitute a defense to the charge; to show, in other words, that he did not violate the statute, or the order of the board. He might show that the house in question was not a tenement house, within the provision of the act, or that there was a supply of water as provided for by the act, or any other fact which would show that he had not been guilty of an offense with regard to the act. Salem v. Eastern R. Co. 98 Mass. 481, 447. The mere fact, however, that the law cannot be enforced without causing expense to the citizen who comes within its provisions, furnishes no constitutional obstacle to such enforcement, even without previous notice to and a hearing of the citizen. What is the propriety of a hearing, and what would be its purpose? His property is not taken without due process of law, within any constitutional sense, when the enforced compliance with certain provisions of the statute may result in some reasonable expense to himself. Any defense which he may have is available upon any attempt to punish him, or to enforce the provisions of the law.

An act of the legislature of Massachusetts which provided that every building in Boston used as a dwelling house, situated on a street in which there was a public sewer, should have sufficient water closets connected therewith, was held valid as to existing houses, and applied, in its penalties, to their owners, if such houses continued without the closets after its passage. Com. v. Roberts, 155 Mass. 281, 16 L. R. A. 400. And see Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co. 114 Mass. 529, 59 Am. Rep. 118. No notice or hearing was provided for, in the above statute as to water closets, before the act could be enforced; and yet to enforce it would, of course, cost the owner of the building some money. The same may be said as to the disinfecting of the rags, in above case in 144 Mass. If the citizen be charged with any violation of such a statute, and any penalty or punishment is sought or attempted, then is the time for a hearing, and then is the time he can make defense, if any he may have. But to assert that he must be heard before the authorities assume or endeavor to act under and to enforce the law, as against him, is to say, in substance, that each citizen is to be heard upon the general question whether it is right to enforce the law in his particular case. This is not to be permitted. Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53, 104; Salem v. Eastern R. Co. supra. Everything that the individual could urge upon the hearing, if given prior to the attempted enforcement of the act by the making of the order in question, can be said by him when he is sued, or when the attempt is made to punish him for the alleged violation of the law. Upon the prior hearing, if granted, it would be no defense to him if he showed that the law could not be complied with, unless at some reasonable expense to himself. That would have been matter to urge upon the legislature prior to the enactment of the statute, as a question of reasonable cost and of public policy Boston & M. R. Co. v. York County Comrs. 79 Me. 386, 393; State v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 83 Mo. 144-149; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 149, 156, note, 62 Am. Dec. 625. We do not think that the cost of making the improvements called for by this act exceeds the limits which have been defined, assuming the amount thereof which the defendant offered to prove.

This is not the case of a proceeding against an individual on the ground of the maintenance of a nuisance by him, nor is it the case of an assumed right to destroy an alleged nuisance without any other proof than the decision of the board itself (with or without a hearing) that the thing condemned was a nuisance. Nor is it the case of the destruction of property which is in fact a nuisance, without compensation. Where property of an individual is to be condemned and abated as a nuisance, it must be that somewhere between the institution of the proceedings and the final result the owner shall be heard in the courts upon that question, or else that he shall have an opportunity, when calling upon those persons who destroyed his property to account for the same, to show that the alleged nuisance was not one in fact. No decision of a board of health, even if made on a hearing, can conclude the owner upon the question of nuisance. People v. Yonkers Board of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 23 L. R. A. 481; Yonkers Board of Health v. Copeutt, 140 N. Y. 12, 23 L. R. A. 485; Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 540, 10 L. R. A. 116; Hutton v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 122, 23 Am. Rep. 208. We are therefore of the opinion that the act, if otherwise valid, is not open to the objection that it violates either the federal or state constitution, in the way of depriving the defendant of its property without due process of law.

We think the act is valid as an exercise of the police power with respect to the public health, and also with respect to the public safety regarding fires and their extinguishment. We cannot say, as a legal proposition, that it tends only to the convenience of the tenants in regard to their use of water. We cannot say that it has no fair and plain and direct tendency towards the promotion of the public health, or towards the more speedy extinguishment of fires, in crowded tenement houses. That the free use of water, especially during the summer months, tends towards the healthful condition of the body, by reason of the increased cleanliness occasioned by such use, there can be no reasonable doubt. The supply of water to the general public in a city has become not only a luxury, but an absolute necessity for the maintenance of the public health and safety. The city of New York itself has spent millions upon millions of dollars for the purpose of securing this great boon for the inhabitants thereof. The right of eminent domain in the taking of land around the sources of the water supply has been granted to and exercised by that city to a very large extent, so that all sources of supply of this vital necessity of life should be rendered as free from contamination and danger to health and life as it possibly could be. This use of the water is not confined, so far as the necessities of the case are concerned, to the public hydrants. The water is brought into the city so that it may be used in every house and building within its limits; and although we may, and indeed must, admit that no health law could practically be enforced which should provide that every individual inhabitant of the tenement houses should use the water, yet we think it is perfectly clear that facilities for the use of the water will almost necessarily be followed by its actual use in larger quantities and more frequently than would be the case without such facilities, and to the great benefit of the health of the occupants of such houses. Those occupants require it more even than their more favored brethren, living in airy, larger, more spacious, and luxurious apartments. Their health is matter of grave public concern. The legislature cannot, in practice, enforce a law so as to make a man wash himself; but, when it provides facilities therefor, it has taken a long step towards the accomplishment of that object. That dirt, filth, nastiness in general, are great promoters of disease; that they breed pestilence and contagion, sickness and death,—cannot be successfully denied. There is scarcely a dissent from the general belief on the part of all who have studied the disease that cholera is essentially a filth disease. The so-called "ship fever" or "jail fever" arises from filth. Most diseases are aggravated by it. That opportunities—conveniences—for the use of water in these tenement houses will unquestionably tend towards, and be followed by, more cleanly living on the part of the occupants of those houses, cannot, it seems to me, admit of any rational doubt; and, if so, then the law which provides, at a reasonable cost, for the furnishing of such facilities, is plainly and honestly a health law.

The learned counsel for the defendant asks where this kind of legislation is to stop. Would it be contended that the owners of such houses could be compelled to furnish each room with a bath tub, and all the appliances that are to be found in a modern and well-appointed hotel? Is there to be a bath room and water closet to each room, and every closet to be a model of the very latest improvement? To which I should answer, certainly not. That would be so clearly unreasonable that no court, in my belief, could be found which would uphold such legislation, and it seems to me equally clear that no legislature could be found that would enact it. The tenement house in New York is a subject of very great thought and anxiety to the residents of that city. The number of people that live in such houses; their size; their ventilation; their cleanliness; their liability to fires; the exposure of their occupants to contagious diseases, and the consequent spread of the contagion through the city and the country; the tendencies to immorality and crime where there is very close packing of human beings of the lower order of intelligence and morals,—all these are subjects which must arouse the attention of the legislature, and which it behooves him to see to, in order that such laws are enacted as shall directly tend to the improvement of the health, safety, and morals of those men and women that are to be found in such houses. Some legislation upon this subject can only be carried out at the public expense, while some may be properly enforced at the expense of the owner. We feel that we ought to inspect with very great care any law in regard to tenement houses in New York, and to hesitate before declaring any such law invalid, so long as it seems to tend plainly in the direction we have spoken of, and to be reasonable in its provisions. If we can see that the object of this law is without doubt the promotion or the protection of the health of the inmates of these houses, or the preservation of the houses themselves, and consequently much other property, from loss or destruction by fire, and if the act can be enforced at a reasonable cost to the owner, then, in our opinion, it ought to be sustained. We believe this statute fulfills these conditions. We think that in this case it is not a mere matter of convenience of the tenants as to where they shall obtain their supply of water. Simple convenience, we admit, would not authorize the passage of this kind of legislation. But where it is obvious that, without the convenience of an appliance for the supply of water on the various floors of these tenement houses, there will be scarcely any but the most limited and scanty use of the water itself, which must be carried from the yards below, and when we must admit that the free use of water tends directly and immediately towards the sustaining of the health of the individual, and the prevention of disease arising from filth either of the person or in the surrounding habitation, then we must conclude that it is more than a mere matter of convenience in the use of water which is involved in the decision of this case. The absence of the water tends directly towards the breeding of disease, and its presence is healthful and humanizing.

Looked at in the light of a fire law, and the act is also valid. The section of the consolidation act in question belongs to title 7, which treats of tenement and lodging houses; and various provisions are made in the preceding sections looking towards the prevention and the prompt extinguishment of fires, as well as towards the protection and promotion of the health of the occupants of such houses. And it seems to me that the facility for the extinguishment of fires, which would result from the presence of a supply of water on each floor of these houses, is plain, and the act must be looked upon as a means for securing such an important result. We are inclined therefore, to the belief that the act may be upheld under both branches alike, as a health law, and as one calculated to prevent destruction of property from fires which might otherwise take place.

27 L. R. A.

The act is somewhat vague as to what shall be regarded as a sufficient quantity of water on each floor, but it must have in this respect, as in others, a reasonable construction; and when an appliance for its supply is placed on a floor where it might be open and common to all those on that floor, and easy of access, and the supply sufficient in amount for general domestic purposes, then and in such case there would be a full compliance with the provisions of the act.

Some criticism is made in regard to the wording of the order of the board of health. The order directed that suitable appliances to receive and distribute a supply of water for domestic use should be provided at these various houses; and it is claimed that there is no language in the act which requires appliances for the distribution of water, nor that the water shall be furnished for domestic use. The act provides that the water shall be furnished in sufficient quantity at one or more places on each floor occupied, or intended to be occupied, by one or more families. This necessarily requires some appliance for that purpose. The statute must also mean that the water is to be provided for the use of the one or more families that are to be occupants of the floor, and that must include a sufficient quantity of water for domestic purposes. The provision in the law that the water shall be furnished in sufficient quantities at one or more places on each floor cannot be so construed as to leave the number of places of supply entirely to the discretion of the board of health. As the water is to be supplied in sufficient quantity for domestic and not for manufacturing purposes, when that point is reached the law is satisfied. Looking at the purpose of the supply, it is, as I have said, reasonably apparent that one such place on each floor, fairly accessible to all the occupants of the floor, would be all that could usually and reasonably be required, and anything further would be unreasonable, and therefore beyond the power of the board to order. The facilities thus given would at the same time furnish the means necessary for obtaining water to extinguish such fires as might accidentally break out, and before they had obtained such headway as to render necessary the aid of the fire department. This is clearly a most important safeguard.

The question alluded to in the brief of the respondent's counsel, whether the penalties might not be said to have commenced running immediately after the passage of the amended Act of 1887, because of the provision requiring all tenement houses to be supplied with suitable appliances before January 1, 1889, and so have amounted to a confiscation of property, is not before us, as the proceeding herein was to recover only those incurred since the order was made by the board. If such a case arises where penalties so enormous in amount are claimed, there will probably be not much difficulty in refusing enforcement, under the circumstances of that case. Upon the whole, we think the order of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas should be reversed, and the judgment of the Trial Court affirmed, with costs.

Bartlett, J., dissenting:

I am unable to discover the limit of legislative power, if this act is to stand. Upon the face of the proceeding, it is not an exercise of the police power to promote the safety of property by the prevention of fire. The order of the health department, served upon the defendant, directs that suitable appliances "to receive and distribute a supply of water for domestic use be provided" on certain floors in the houses named. The act provided that tenement houses "shall have Croton or other water furnished in sufficient quantities at one or more places on each floor," etc. The order undertakes to construe the act, and requires the landlord to distribute a supply of water for domestic use on each floor. The board of health is not confined to compelling one place on each floor at which water may be obtained, but the act reads, "one or more places on each floor." So that it is left with the board of health to determine how many water faucets upon each floor shall be provided by the landlord for the use and convenience of his tenants. In other words, the legislature seeks to vest in one of the departments of the city government the power to decide the extent of the plumbing in tenement houses for Croton water purposes. It must, of course, be admitted that water is essential to the public health, and more particularly in crowded tenement districts. It would undoubtedly be a legitimate exercise of the police power to compel the introduction of water into tenement houses at some convenient point where all the tenants could obtain an adequate supply; and it may be that the legislature could go so far as to require a faucet upon each floor of the large tenement houses, in the public hall, in order to encourage the free use of water, by enabling the tenants to procure it without too great exertion, but certainly it cannot be possible that the legislature may leave the number and location of faucets on each floor for the domestic use of water to be determined by the board of health. There is no limitation as to whether the faucets shall be in the public hall, or in the room of the tenant. To my mind, such an exercise of the police power is spoliation and confiscation under the forms of law. It deprives the landlord of the control of his property, and leaves it to a stranger to decide in what manner the house shall be plumbed. It is a direct interference with the right of the landlord to regulate the rental value of his property. It is a matter of common knowledge that in rented apartments in the city of New York the convenience and volume of the water supply is regulated by the rental value of the premises, and that in the cheap tenement districts the convenience of the tenants is not and cannot be consulted to the same extent as in first-class localities. The vice of the act we are considering lies in the fact, already pointed out, that it is too general in its terms, and clothes the health department with unlimited and undefined powers. If it be the legislative intent to compel the introduction of a more abundant supply of water into tenement houses either to promote the public health, or to provide for the timely extinguishment of fires, I think this very proper exercise of the police power should be manifested in an act containing details and limitations, so that capitalists may understand the burdens imposed upon tenement property, and decide, with a full knowledge of the facts, whether they care to embark their money in that class of buildings. This court has held Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 108, 50 Am. Rep. 636, that the limit of police power "cannot be accurately defined, and the courts have not been able or willing definitely to circumscribe it." Each case must be decided very largely on its own facts. A sound public policy certainly dictates that at this time, when the rights of property and the liberty of the citizen are sought to be invaded by every form of subtle and dangerous legislation, the courts should see to it that those benign principles of the common-law which are the shield of personal liberty and private property suffer no impairment. I think the judgment should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur with Peckham, J., for reversal except Bartlett, J., who reads for affirmance.

PEOPLE of the State of New York, ex rel.
Peter NECHAMCUS, Appt.,

v.

WARDEN OF THE CITY PRISON, Respnt.

(44 N. Y. 522.)

1. A statute making it unlawful to do business as an employing or master plumber without a certificate of competency obtained from an examining board, and registration with the board of health, and requiring compliance with the regulations of both boards, but having no application to plumbers who do not employ others, is a constitutional exercise of the police power to protect health.
2. Unfair or oppressive action of the board of examiners authorized to grant the required certificates of competency to master plumbers, will not render unconstitutional a statute which, as framed, provides for an impartial board.

(January 20, 1895.)

APPEAL by relator from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming an order of a Special Term for New York County dismissing a writ of habeas corpus which had been sued out to obtain the release of petitioner from the custody of defendant to which he had been committed for exercising the business of master plumber without a license. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On the question of equal privileges or protection as affecting the constitutionality of a statute restricting business, see Louisville Safety Vault & Trust Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 14 L. R. A. 679.

For other questions as to statutes restricting business, see note to State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789; Braceville Coal Co. v. People (Ill.) 22 L. R. A. 340; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. (Ark.) 23 L. R. A. 264.

For statutes compelling safety of employes, see State v. Haskins (Minn.) 25 L. R. A. 750, and note.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Roger Foster, for appellant:

The act is void as a deprivation of the relator's liberty and property without due process of law by forbidding him to exercise his lawful calling; as a denial to him of the equal protection of the laws of the state of New York; and as a discrimination against him on account of his race.

U. S. Const. 14th Amend.; New York Const. art. 1, § 6; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 53 Am. Rep. 84; Live Stock Dealers & Butchers Assn. v. Orcauent L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 1 Abb. (U. S.) 888.

It has been held in Illinois unconstitutional to provide by statute for the weighing of coal taken out of mines on scales to be furnished by the mine owner, and that the weight thus ascertained shall be the basis for computing the miner's wages.

Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869; Ramsey v. People, 17 L. R. A. 858, 142 Ill. 380. See also Godcharles v. Wigeman, 118 Pa. 481; Fraser v. People, 16 L. R. A. 492, 141 Ill. 171; State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789, 115 Mo. 807.

The supreme court of Massachusetts has held that the legislature has no power to enact a law forbidding an employer to impose a fine upon a laborer, or withhold any part of his wages on account of imperfections in his work.

Com. v. Perry, 14 L. R. A. 325, 155 Mass. 117; Com. v. Potomack Mill Corp. 155 Mass. 122, note.

In Nebraska, an eight-hour law has been held unconstitutional.

Low v. Rees Printing Co. 24 L. R. A. 702, 41 Neb. 127. See also Re Kubach, Petitioner, 9 L. R. A. 482, 85 Cal. 274; State v. Scougal (S. Dak.) 15 L. R. A. 477.

In former times legislation of this character was usual. No one was allowed to practice a trade unless he first joined and served the regular terms of apprenticeship and examinations in the guild or trade union, which had control of the same.

Madox Firma Burgi, p. 286; Brentano's History and Development of Guilds and the Origin of Trade Unions, in Toulmin's English Guilds, p. cxx, 836.

It has been said of this "that it was a monstrous law, and that, according to the opinion of historians, it represented the triumph of the craft guilds, that is, the mediæval trade unions."

People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559, 117 N. Y. 1. Similar attacks upon the "sacred right of labor" were authorized by law in France down to the time of the French Revolution, of which they were amongst the chief causes.

Dunoyer, De la Liberté du Travail, 358; Carrey's Essays on Rate of Wages, 195, 196; Mill, Political Economy, vol. II. 525, 526.

Of statutes like these, different in kind but only in degree from that under which Nechamous was sent to jail, this court has spoken its opinion in no uncertain language.

27 L. R. A.

People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

The fact that this act purports to be designed to protect the public health will not prevent the court from invalidating it upon the ground that this is a pretense to cover the design of creating a monopoly.

Ex parte Whitwell, 19 L. R. A. 727, 98 Cal. 78; Re Jacobs, supra; People v. Ewer, 25 L. R. A. 794, 141 N. Y. 129; Singer v. State, 8 L. R. A. 551, 72 Md. 464.

The legislature has no power to compel a man to submit to an examination to obtain a certificate of competency before continuing the exercise of his handicraft as a plumber.

In determining the constitutionality of the act the court may examine its effect as proved by the uncontradicted affidavit of the relator.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220; Baltimore v. Badecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 289.

Messrs. John R. Fellows, and John D. Lindsay, for respondent:

The legislature may pass laws, the effect of which is to impair or even to destroy the right of property. Private interest must yield to public advantage. All property is held subject to the power of the state to regulate or control its use, to secure the general safety and the public welfare.

Phelps v. Racey, 60 N. Y. 14, 19 Am. Rep. 140; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 521, 30 Am. Rep. 823.

All regulations of trade, with a view to the public interests, may more or less impair the value of property, but they do not come within the constitutional inhibition, unless they virtually take away and destroy those rights in which property consists.

Wynehamer v. People, 18 N. Y. 391.

The object of the statute under consideration is obvious, and its measures are clearly calculated, intended, convenient, and appropriate to accomplish that object. Therefore the discretion of the legislature in its enactment is not the subject of judicial review.

People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 53 Am. Rep. 84.

That there is a fair, just, and reasonable connection between the statute and the purpose it was designed to serve is apparent upon a perusal of the enactment, and such relation being manifest, the enactment must be upheld as a valid exercise of the police power.

People v. Ewer, 25 L. R. A. 794, 141 N. Y. 129; People v. King, 1 L. R. A. 293, 110 N. Y. 418; People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 539, 117 N. Y. 1.

A statute of Maryland requiring all plumbers, whether masters or journeymen, to take out a license, has been declared constitutional.

Singer v. State, 8 L. R. A. 551, 72 Md. 464.

Every intendment is in favor of the validity of statutes, and no motive, purpose, or intent can be imputed to the legislature in the enactment of a law other than such as are apparent upon the face and to be gathered from the terms of the law itself. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 54; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 118 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The act, for the violation of the provisions of which the relator was arrested and convicted (Laws 1892, chap. 602), created a board for the examination of plumbers, which, in the cities of New York, Brooklyn, and Albany, was to be known as the "examining board of plumbers," and in other cities of the state as "the examining and supervising board of plumbers and plumbing." The members of the board were to be appointed by the mayor, and were to consist of five persons, two of whom were to be master plumbers, of not less than ten years' experience in the business of plumbing, and one was to be a journeyman plumber of like experience. The two other members of the board were to be the chief inspector of plumbing and drainage of the board of health and the chief engineer having charge of the sewers. The fourth section of the act empowered the several boards of examiners to examine all persons intending to engage in the business of plumbing "as employing plumbers," with the power to examine all persons applying for certificates of competency as "employing or master plumbers," or inspectors of plumbing; to determine their fitness and qualifications for conducting such business; and to issue certificates of competency to all such persons as, upon a satisfactory examination, were determined by the board to be qualified for conducting the business as "employing or master plumbers," or inspectors of plumbing. The fifth section requires any person intending to conduct the "trade, business, or calling of a plumber, or of plumbing . . . as employing or master plumber," to submit to examination before the board, as to his experience and qualifications in such trade, business, or calling; and declares that, after September 1, 1893, it shall not be lawful in any city of this state for any person to conduct such "trade, business, or calling" unless he shall have first obtained a certificate of competency from the board of the city. The sixth section provides that on and before September 1, 1893, every "employing or master plumber," carrying on his "trade, business, or calling" in any city of this state, shall register his name and address at the office of the board of health of the city, and that he shall thereupon be entitled to receive a certificate of such registration; provided that, at the time of his application for registration, he hold a certificate of competency from the examining board. A further provision of the section makes it unlawful for any person to engage in the trade, business, or calling" of an "employing or master plumber" without such registration. The thirteenth section provides that any person violating any of the provisions of the act, or any regulation of the board of health, or of the board of examiners, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, etc.

The relator was a master plumber, who had practiced his trade for some years past in the city of New York. He does not allege that he had applied for examination, or had been refused a certificate of competency from the examining board of plumbers of the city of New York; but he alleged in his petition his trade, his religion, and Russian nationality, and then set forth various refusals of the board in that city to grant certificates to other persons because discriminating against race and religion, and because of their not belonging to an association of master plumbers. He says that the act is void, as a deprivation of his liberty and property without due process of law, inasmuch as it grants to the individual members of the examining board of plumbers an exclusive privilege, immunity, and franchise. He says that it is a denial to him of the equal protection of the laws of this state, and that it is a discrimination against him on account of his race. In specification of his objections, he says: First, that the object of the act is to create a monopoly, because, if intended to secure good plumbing work, it would apply to journeyman plumbers and independent plumbers who work alone, or with the aid of apprentices, and do not employ other plumbers; and second, that even if the act applied to all plumbers, journeyman as well as master, it will still be unconstitutional.

As a preliminary observation, I may say that the first ground partakes more of criticism upon the extent to which the legislature has gone. Every person may follow the trade of a plumber, if he chooses, and the restriction is upon their employing men to work for them in their business, unless they hold a certificate of competency based on experience and qualifications. Another observation is that the act does not suggest, as the appellant says of it, any "discrimination against him on account of his race." That is pure supposition, based upon the way he claims to have seen the board perform its duties, and not upon the language of the act, or any possible inference therefrom. A final observation is that it is not made to appear by the petition for the writ that the relator has suffered anything at the hands of the board of examiners. In the absence of any allegations that he applied for examination, that he passed the examination satisfactorily, and that the board, unjustly or otherwise, refused him the certificate, we must assume, under his allegations of his competency and skill as a plumber, or master plumber, that he could have successfully applied for the certificate, which the board was authorized to grant. It seems to me that the constitutionality of this act is to be tested by its effect upon the citizen's right to pursue a lawful employment. If it imposes an arbitrary restriction, and if it has no reference to the welfare and health of the people, it must be condemned. I am not unwilling to concede that the act skirts pretty closely that border line beyond which legislation ceases to be within the powers conferred by the people of the state, through the constitution, upon its legislative body. When the legislature passes an act which plainly transcends the limits of the police power of the state, it is the duty of the judiciary to pronounce its invalidity, and to nullify the legislative attempt to invade the citizen's rights. The court should never hesitate to interpose the barrier of its judgment against the operation of laws which distinctly contravene constitutional rights. There has been much discussion upon the subject of what is a valid exercise of the police power of the state through legislative enactment, and there is little to be added to what this and other courts have said. The police power extends to the protection of persons and of property within the state. In order to secure that protection, they may be subjected to restraints and burdens by legislative acts. If the act is a valid and reasonable exercise of the police power of the state, then it must be submitted to, as a measure designed for the protection of the public to secure it against some danger, real or anticipated, from a state of things which modifications in our social or commercial life have brought about. The natural right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness is not an absolute right. It must yield whenever the concession is demanded by the welfare, health, or prosperity of the state. The individual must sacrifice his particular interest or desires, if the sacrifice is a necessary one, in order that organized society as a whole shall be benefited. That is a fundamental condition of the state, and which, in the end, accomplishes by reaction a general good, from which the individual must also benefit. The restraint of personal action is justified when it manifestly tends to the protection of the health and comfort of the community, and no constitutional guaranty is then violated. People v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129, 25 L. R. A. 794. The legislature, however, is not authorized to enact measures which, under the mere guise of a protection to the citizen, restrains him in the free pursuit of a lawful occupation, and such legislation this court has had occasion, within recent years, to condemn. Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 877, 52 Am. Rep. 84; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 889. In the Gillson Case it was observed by Judge Peckham that if legislation is calculated, intended, convenient, or appropriate to accomplish the good of protecting the public health, and of serving the public comfort and safety, the exercise of the legislative discretion is not the subject of judicial review, but those measures must have some relation to those ends. To this unassailable proposition I will add the remark that the courts should always assume that the legislature intended by its enactment to promote those ends, and, if the act admits of two constructions, that should be given to it which sustains it and makes it applicable in furtherance of the public interests. What is, then, the construction which this act should receive from the court? In the first place, the intentment is warranted that the drainage and sewerage, whether of public works and buildings, or of private tenements, shall be as skillfully planned and carried out as the modern standard of the science admits. Whatever the individual doubts as to the benefits or success, in a sanitary sense, of the work of plumbing as now practiced, it is generally recognized to be essential to comfort and health; and that it should be the subject of some supervision by the authorities ought not to be put in question. The very doubt should make us hesitate to place any obstacle in the way which the legislature, in its discretion, adopts, in order to accomplish something by which large communities shall benefit in their health and comfort. Is this statute not a regulation of a trade, which is in the public interest? The trade very closely concerns the inhabitants of cities, and it should require no argument to show that the more skillful and the more competent the plumber who is employed to do some large work upon the drainage and sewerage system of a city, or of a public or private building, the greater the security to those inhabitants.

This act does not restrain individuals from working as plumbers. It restrains persons from engaging in the business of master or employing plumbers, unless, from experience and qualifications, they are shown to be, themselves, of competent skill. We know that important plumbing work calls for plans and designs and requires skilled supervision. It is some guaranty of these requirements being met that the plumber, employed upon the particular work and who must employ plumbers and assistants in carrying out the work engaged upon, is competently certified, and therefore held out to be skilled and capable in his business. The layman in his ignorance is obliged to put some trust in the plumber he engages; for the plumber's work is not only one calling for the exercise of skill, but it is done in places which are dark, or more or less inaccessible. The legislature, in creating a system by which the qualifications of plumbers, who propose to have work performed by others under their direction, shall be determined, as it seems to me, aids the citizen in an important degree in placing his confidence and furnishes some safeguard against the performance of bad and unsafe work. That the men employed by the master plumber may prove untrustworthy in practice, or may neglect the work committed to them, certainly can furnish no ground for attacking the purpose of this statute; for the presumption and the natural probability are the other way, that a master plumber, who has been certified by the board, will exercise care in the selection of his employes, and he will be competent to see and correct their faults and omissions. Every reason, in my opinion, which bears upon the citizen's comfort and health, demands that we sustain this statute as a step in the right direction.

Nor is the act vicious for affecting the general individual, or as operating as some restraint upon other business occupations, in connection with which the work of plumbing may be undertaken; as, for instance, in the case of a contract for the erection of a building which may include the doing of the plumbing work. As I have previously observed, it does not operate to prevent the individual from following the trade of a plumber. It, merely and only, requires of those who propose to do business as master plumbers to submit to an examination as to their general competency. The application of the statute is to persons following the trade of a practical plumber. The terms "trade, business, or calling," employed in the statute, are synonymous, and have relation to the mechanical employment. One's trade is that business which he has learned and fitted himself to follow, and when the legislature speaks of a "person intending to conduct the trade, business, or calling of a plumber" it has used the words as they would naturally and ordinarily be understood by all, and, particularly, by that class of the people to whom they were intended to apply. So regarded, there can be no reasonable doubt that the application of the statutory provision is to the person whose actual and real occupation is that of the practical plumber. It cannot have a more extended application, nor comprehend those persons whose business is not that of the plumber, as it is understood to be. Kindred occupations would not be affected. Whenever a person holds himself out to the public as a plumber, undertaking to do work as such, he must, if he employs assistants to perform the work, comply with the law and procure his certificate.

Nor is it a ground of objection that, as the statute was intended to apply only to master or employing plumbers, the inference follows that a monopoly in the business is created or sanctioned. It may or may not have been wiser that the legislature should require examinations by and certificates from the examining boards in the case of every person engaged in the business of plumbing; but, if the act is a step in the direction of something which will inure to the public health and comfort, that it does not go as far as it might is not a reason for invalidating it. I am able to see how this act may limit the number of master plumbers, and with great wisdom; but I am not able to see how any monopoly will necessarily follow. The purpose of the act is in the direction of limiting the business to those persons who will perform the work, presumably, with some regard to the public health and comfort, and it would be a misuse of language to speak of such provisions as creating, or even tending to create, a monopoly. As well might it be said that to compel physicians or druggists to take out licenses is a provision giving a monopoly of the particular business to those who become licensed. If the measure is not so obvious a precaution in the case of plumbers as in that of physicians or of druggists, is that a reason for condemning it, if it may reasonably be considered as some precaution? I think not, and I think the measure, as one relating to the general health of cities, is evident, and intended to be so, from the provisions of the act, which require the board of examiners to contain the chief examiner of the city sewers and the chief inspector of plumbing of the board of health; which require not only registration with the board of health, but that the business shall be conducted under rules and regulations prescribed by that board; and which authorize that body to cancel registrations for violations of rules and regulations for the plumbing and drainage of the city. Nor is the constitutionality of an act to be determined by the manner in which its provisions may be carried out by those upon whom devolves the duty of acting as examiners. If they act unfairly or oppressively, as alleged by the relator in his petition, that is conduct which may call for a remedy against the persons who compose the board; but it does not furnish ground for assailing the validity of the statute. As the act was framed, it provided for an impartial board, made up of persons to whom, in human intendment, such duties as were imposed could safely be intrusted for performance. I deem it unnecessary to refer to the other objections to this act. They were sufficiently answered at the general term. It is my opinion that it would be unfortunate for the public interests if this statute should be condemned. It is a step in a direction which would be encouraged, for it does distinctly relate to the public health and welfare.

The order appealed from should be affirmed.

Peckham, J., dissenting:

I dissent from the judgment of the majority of the court in this case. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon the subject, but I desire to record my grounds of dissent as clearly as I can. The act does not state that it is passed in order to preserve the public health. It is sought to be upheld on that ground and as an exercise of that branch of the police power of the state which pertains to the public health. It seems plain to me that the statute has no legitimate tendency to preserve, protect, or defend the public health. Any plumber, however ignorant of his trade he may be, can, under this act, be employed to do any kind of plumbing work, and without having his work subjected to any kind of supervision or inspection. He is absolutely free, and so is his work. The statute only prohibits him from employing others to work for him,—from being, in other words, a master plumber. In order to become a master plumber, he must obtain this certificate. The chance to obtain it lies through an examination into his capacity and his knowledge of his trade, to be certified to by the board of examiners, of which a proportion of master plumbers is to form a part. Thus his right to work in his trade is circumscribed and limited by force of this statute, and he is compelled to pay a certain amount before he is permitted to pass the examination. It is said this is proper and right, in order that the public may have some assurance that the master or employing plumber is not alone capable of following his trade as such, but that he has sufficient knowledge of the laws of health, as applicable to plumbing, to enable him scientifically to follow that trade as a master plumber. It is to be observed that the examination does not necessarily call for any such knowledge. The act can be complied with, so far as this examination is concerned, if the applicant has but the most ordinary knowledge of the laws of his trade and the proper way to follow it practically. It is true the board may demand much more than that, and much more than was ever necessary to practically pursue the trade. If such additional knowledge were exacted, it would be in fact adding, to the known and ordinary qualifications necessary to carry on the well-recognized trade of a plumber, those other and entirely different and much superior qualifications necessary in one who intended to conduct the professional business of a sanitary expert with regard to systems and general plans of plumbing. The legislature has no power to impose such a condition upon one desiring to exercise such a trade. It has, as I believe, no power to prescribe that an individual who desires to follow the trade of a plumber shall be possessed of qualifications which do not naturally pertain to such a calling, and which are only possessed by persons qualified for the pursuit of a very different occupation, involving learning and skill of an uncommon order. The legislature might probably provide for a sanitary inspection of plumbing work, and thus secure a kind of work, as to its system and sufficiency, which might fairly be said to tend towards the protection of the health of the general public. But the trade of the practical plumber is not one of the learned professions, nor does such a tradesman hold himself out in any manner as an expert in the science of "sanitation," nor is any such knowledge expected of him, and this act, when practically enforced, may or may not exact it of him. This board has the very greatest and an entirely arbitrary discretion as to what qualifications it will exact from the applicant. It may make an examination which none but an expert in sanitary knowledge could pass, or it may make the examination entirely perfunctory. Judging from the other features of the act, it will depend upon considerations which are foreign to any question of health as to what kind of examination will be made. If the broader and more severe examination is held, or the greater qualification is insisted on, the imposition of such a condition in the case of a workman upon his natural right to work at his ordinary trade renders the act under which a condition can be imposed unconstitutional. Whether in all cases the condition would be insisted on is immaterial. It is the power to insist upon it under the law which makes the law itself void. And yet, if the more severe examination is not made, and the superior qualification exacted, the act is absolutely worthless as a health measure. If it is intended as an act simply to secure the ordinary capacity necessary for the prosecution of the trade of a plumber, it is useless and vexatious, and not a health regulation in any form. If it exact more, it is an improper addition to the qualifications of a simple tradesman. This act permits the greater exaction to be made. It seems to me very absurd to treat this statute as one which in any possible manner affects, or which was really intended to affect, the public health. And when it is seen that the work of the master plumber may be performed by journeymen who have been subjected to no official examination, and whose work need not be examined by any one, not even by the master plumber himself, the radical failure of the act to really protect the public health is quite apparent. Sewer gas is dangerous, but exactly how to treat the matter of plumbing in order to run the least danger therefrom is a subject for professional learning and skill, except as to the narrow part of the tradesman plumber, which is to see to it that his pipes do not leak, and that they do not permit the escape of gas. This part is mechanical and easily understood, and is the part which the tradesman performs, and the system, the proper arrangement thereof, and such kindred questions, are for the determination of a more scientific and a more learned body of men. The examination provided for by this act, if conducted for the sole purpose of discovering the qualifications of an applicant in regard to those matters which pertain and are germane to the real and practical trade of a plumber, will not have the slightest tendency to discover whether he has also the requisite knowledge to enable him to act as a sanitary expert. Taking the act as a whole, it would seem quite apparent that its purpose is to enable the employing plumbers to create a sort of guild or body among themselves, into which none is to be permitted to enter excepting as he may pass an examination, the requisites of which are not stated, and where his success or defeat is to be determined by a board of which some of their own number are members. In order to be at liberty to exercise his trade as a master plumber, he must pass this examination and become a member of this favored body. It is difficult for me to see the least resemblance to a health regulation in all this. I think the act is vicious in its purpose, and that it tends directly to the creation and fostering of a monopoly. It seems to me most unfortunate that this court should, by a strained construction of the act as a health law, give its sanction to this kind of pernicious legislation. We shut our eyes to the evident purpose of the statute, and by means of maxims well enough in their way, but sadly out of place here, impute a purpose to the legislature which it plainly did not have, and which, if it did have, it has failed to carry out, even conceding that the purpose could be legitimately effected by other means. This measure detracts from the liberty of the citizen, acting as a tradesman, in his efforts to support himself and his family by the honest practice of a useful trade, and I think no court ought to sanction such legislation, unless it tends much more plainly than does this act towards the preservation of the health and comfort of the public. I think the orders of the courts below were wrong, and should be reversed, and the prisoner discharged.

Andrews, Ch. J., and Finch and Haight, JJ., concur with Gray, J., for affirmance. O'Brien and Bartlett, JJ., concur with Peckham, J., for reversal.

James WALSH, by Guardian ad Litem, Respt.,
v.

FITCHBURG R. CO., Appt.

(445 N. Y. 301.)

1. Active vigilance is not required to see that a mere licensee on one's premises is not injured.
2. A turntable on railroad lands, properly made and used, is not, even as to children of tender years, such a dangerous and enticing machine that the railroad company will be liable for injury to a child playing with it merely because it is in an unfenced lot near footpaths which the public are permitted to use.

(March 12, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Third Department, affirming a judgment of the Rensselaer County Circuit in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligently leaving a turntable unguarded in an exposed position. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. T. F. Hamilton, for appellant:

The courts of this state absolutely decline to concur in the doctrines expressed in Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745.

McAlpin v. Powell, 70 N. Y. 126, 26 Am. Rep. 655; Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co. 101 N. Y. 891, 54 Am. Rep. 718; Gusick v. Adams, 115 N. Y. 55.

Even if the public passed over a foot path near this turntable with the knowledge of the railroad company, and pedestrians passed along this pathway as mere licensees, the railroad owed such passers only the duty to do them no intentional harm and no burden of active vigilance was cast upon the defendant.

Nicholson v. Erie R. Co. 41 N. Y. 581; Sutton v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 66 N. Y. 243.

Other states have refused to follow the Stout Case some of them in express terms.

Keffe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 21 Minn. 207, 18 Am. Rep. 398; Frost v. Eastern Railroad, 64 N. H. 220; Clark v. Manchester, 62 N. H. 577; Bates v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 90 Tenn. 86; Daniels v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 13 L. R. A. 248, 154 Mass. 349; Merryman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 85 Iowa, 634; Gay v. Essex Electric Street R. Co. 21 L. R. A. 448, 159 Mass. 288; Kitz v. Nieman, 68 Wis. 271, 60 Am. Rep. 854; Twist v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 39 Minn. 164; Maginnis v. Brooklyn, 7 N. Y. Supp. 194; Breckenridge v. Bennett, 7 Kulp, 95; Greene v. Linton, 7 Misc. 272; Gillespie v. McGowan, 100 Pa. 144, 45 Am. Rep. 865.

Messrs. Henry T. Nason and William J. Roche, for respondent:

If the turntable in question was a dangerous piece of machinery, attractive to children, who with the knowledge and permission of the officers and servants of the railroad company were in the habit of frequenting these premises, and of being on and about this turntable, then it was the duty of the defendant either to warn or forbid these children from going on the turntable, or else to take some precaution in their management of the turntable to prevent the occurrence of such an injury as the one complained of here.

Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 277; 1 Thomp. Neg. pp. 304, 305; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628; Whirley v. Whiteman, 1 Head, 610; Birge v. Gardiner, 19 Conn. 507, 50 Am. Dec. 261; Hydraulic Works Co. v. Orr, 83 Pa. 332; Loomis v. Terry, 17 Wend. 496, 31 Am. Dec. 806.

The question was squarely decided in Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745.

The same doctrine has been laid down in Keffe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 21 Minn. 207, 18 Am. Rep. 398; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Styron, 66 Tex. 421; Bridger v. Ashville & S. R. Co. 27 S. C. 456; Ferguson v. Columbus & R. Railway, 77 Ga. 102; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Dunden, 87 Kan. 1; Early v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 66 Mich. 349; O'Malley v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 43 Minn. 289; Itasca R. & Nav. Co. v. Hedrick, 1 Wash. 446; Koons v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 65 Mo. 592; Barrett v. Southern Pac. Co. 91 Cal. 296, 44 Alb. L. J. 886. See also Kansas Cent. R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 22 Kan. 696, 31 Am. Rep. 203; Union Pac. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 484.

The reasoning on which the above decisions rest is in accordance with the reasoning of our own courts in negligence cases.

Mullaney v. Spence, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. 819; Schmidt v. Cook, 80 Abb. N. C. 285; Kuns v. Troy, 104 N. Y. 344, 58 Am. Rep. 508.

The plaintiff in this case does not stand before the court in the light of a trespasser, but as a person who has come upon the defendant's premises at its express invitation, and the degree of care required of the defendant must be measured accordingly.

Beach, Contrib. Neg. § 206; Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Clark v. Chambers, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 327; Beck v. Carter, 69 N. Y. 283, 23 Am. Rep. 175; Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B. N. S. 556; Nicholson v. Erie R. Co. 41 N. Y. 526; Sutton v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 66 N. Y. 243; Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co. 101 N. Y. 891, 54 Am. Rep. 718; Mangam v. Brooklyn R. Co. 38 N. Y. 455, 98 Am. Dec. 66; Thurber v. Harlem Bridge, M. & F. R. Co. 60 N. Y. 326; Barry v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 92 N. Y. 289, 44 Am. Rep. 377; Bransom v. Labrot, 81 Ky. 644, 50 Am. Rep. 193; Murphy v. Brooklyn, 118 N. Y. 575; Gusick v. Adams, 115 N. Y. 55; Splittorf v. State, 108 N. Y. 205.

No negligence can be imputed to the plaintiff, he being non sui juris.

Kuns v. Troy, supra; Ihl v. Forty-Second Street & U. Street Ferry R. Co. 47 N. Y. 317, 7 Am. Rep. 450; McGarry v. Loomis, 63 N. Y. 104, 20 Am. Rep. 510; Mangam v. Brooklyn R. Co. supra.

NORM.—The above New York decision adopts for that state the rule approved in New Hampshire and Massachusetts disapproving the majority of the cases on the subject as shown by the note. Fort Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Robertson (Tex.) 14 L. R. A. 781.

27 L. R. A.

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant owned a plot of ground in the northern portion of the city of Troy, bounded by four different streets. Quite a large portion of its land was unfenced, and the public had for a number of years been accustomed to walk across this plot for the purpose of shortening the distance, instead of going around by the public streets. The land was approached from the north on the same grade as the public street, and the defendant laid its tracks through the street, and onto the plot, for the purpose of using it in the ordinary transaction of its business. It was not used for the purpose of a depot, and the land itself was rough, uneven, overgrown with weeds and grass, and not fit for use by horses and wagons, and was not so used. The public were not invited upon the land in any sense further than that the defendant had not taken occasion to prevent the public from using a portion of it as a footpath for the purpose already stated. The footpath thus marked out by use ran within 15 or 20 feet of the turntable of the defendant, which was used by it in the ordinary course of its business. The surface of the table was in some places about 3 feet above the grade of the plot, and at others it was 8 or 9 feet above grade. The only way to approach it on the level was by the use of the tracks of the defendant, which led onto the table, and it was used for the purpose of taking the defendant's engines, and turning them around. The turntable was built in the usual manner, and was in perfect repair. The main tracks of the defendant ran through the eastern portion of the plot. The turntable was west of the main tracks. On the 31st of August, 1888, the plaintiff, who was at that time a child of the age of five years and nine months, had come upon the defendant's premises, and, in company with several other and older boys, was playing on the turntable; and, in the course of turning the table around, the plaintiff had his leg caught between the rail on the table and the rail on the adjoining earth, and he was severely injured. This action has been brought for the purpose of recovering damages for those injuries, and a recovery has been had, which has been sustained by the general term.

Plaintiff bases his right to maintain this action upon the allegation that the defendant, by permitting the public to go upon its land in the manner stated, had in effect invited such entrance, and was bound on that account to use greater care to prevent an accident of this nature. A further ground is stated that, in using the turntable, even upon its own property, under circumstances which rendered it probable that children would come upon the land and play upon the turntable, it was bound to the exercise of greater care than it had observed; that it was bound to guard the table in such a way that children could not come upon it, or to station a man there to prevent their entrance, or else the defendant should have used some kind of a device which would or might prevent the turning of the table while it was not in use by defendant. The defendant contends that the plaintiff had not been invited to come upon its ground, either expressly or by any implication arising from its conduct in simply permitting the public to cross a portion of its grounds as a short cut between two streets; and that it was not bound to any active vigilance in the matter, and was only bound to such reasonable care and caution as any one ought to take to prevent injury to another; and that, guided by that rule, it had not, as matter of law, been guilty of any negligence.

As to the assumed invitation held out to the public, there is nothing in the facts found in this record which justifies any such assumption. The plaintiff was not on the land by invitation of the defendant, nor in its business, but for his own purposes, totally disconnected with the defendant's business. He was not a trespasser in the sense of his being unlawfully upon the premises, because the defendant, by its course of conduct, had impliedly granted a license to the public to use the land for the purpose above mentioned. This license, of course, could at any time have been revoked, and then any one going upon the land would have been a trespasser. But, under the circumstances, treating the plaintiff as an adult, and simply upon the question of the invitation held out to him, he was there by sufferance only. The defendant had no right intentionally to injure him, and it would be liable if it heedlessly or carelessly injured him while performing its own business. It owed him a duty to abstain from injuring him either intentionally or by failing to exercise reasonable care, but it did not owe him the duty of active vigilance to see that he was not injured while upon its land merely by permission for his own convenience. Nicholson v. Erie R. Co. 41 N. Y. 525; Byrne v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 104 N. Y. 368, 58 Am. Rep. 512. Splittorf v. State, 108 N. Y. 205; Cunick v. Adams, 115 N. Y. 55. We think there is no proof whatever that the defendant, so far as its duty to plaintiff is concerned, failed to exercise reasonable care in the conduct of its business with regard to this machine.

We are of the opinion that the defendant has not been shown guilty of a violation of its duty, nor has a question been made for the jury in that respect by proof that it used the turntable in the manner it did. It is true that some means might have been adopted which possibly might have prevented the happening of this accident. The proof is that turntables are not generally constructed with bolts for the purpose of keeping them steady. Such bolts do not come with the table from the factory. Nothing of that kind is essential to the machine or for its legitimate and proper use. The table might have been kept so fastened or locked when not in use that people could not turn it without unfastening or unlocking it, and the defendant might even have built a wall around it so high and guarded it so closely as to prevent any access to it by children at any time. But was defendant bound to do so? Did it owe any such duty to the public or to this plaintiff? The turntable was on its own land. It was used by the defendant for the sole purpose of properly conducting its own business. It was a fit and proper machine for that purpose. It was not of the nature of a trap for the unwary. It was not built in any improper or negligent way with reference to the transaction of the business of the defendant. What further duty did it owe to those who had no business upon its land, who came there unasked, and whose presence was simply tolerated?

Upon the question of alluring plaintiff, we do not think it can be correctly said defendant either enticed or allured him to come upon its land. The whole case in this aspect rests upon the doctrine that the turntable was, as to children of tender years, a dangerous, and at the same time an enticing, machine, one which, when seen, would inevitably and infallibly allure children to come upon it for the purpose of playing upon it, and that the natural and probable result of such play would be the injury of the child. Under such circumstances, it is claimed that a person owning such a machine, although it be used on his own land, is bound to exercise extra vigilance for the purpose of preventing injury to children who come upon the defendant's land allured by the machine and ignorant of its dangers. We do not think the facts of this case bring it within any such principle. The leading case in this country, and one which undoubtedly sustains the plaintiff's contention that it is a case for the jury, is that of Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745. That case has been followed in many states, — in Missouri (Koons v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 65 Mo. 592); in Kansas (Kansas Cent. R. Co. v. Pittsimmons, 22 Kan. 686, 31 Am. Rep. 208, reporter's note at page 206); in California (Barrett v. Southern Pac. Co. 91 Cal. 296); and in some other states. The contrary principle has been announced and held in Daniels v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 154 Mass. 349, 18 L. R. A. 248, and Pross v. Eastern Railroad, 64 N. H. 220. We think the better rule is laid down in the two cases last cited. We do not assert that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff under the circumstances existing, but we think it did not owe the duty of such active vigilance as would be necessary to exist in order to send the case to the jury, and permit it to find the defendant guilty of negligence in this case. The court, in McAlpin v. Powell, 70 N. Y. 126, 26 Am. Rep. 555, while distinguishing it from the Stout Case, supra, expresses doubt of the correctness of the application of the principle in the latter case. We have not had occasion to decide the question up to this time, but, now that it is presented, we not only reiterate the doubt which we expressed in the McAlpin Case, supra, but we think that the question of the defendant's negligence was erroneously submitted to the jury in the Stout Case, and that we ought not to follow it as a precedent. We think it is not a question of fact to be submitted to the jury for its determination whether the defendant has or has not been guilty of negligence under such circumstances as appear in this case. Upon such facts, we hold the defendant has violated no duty it owed the plaintiff. It is not contended for a moment that a person on his own land may under all circumstances do anything that he chooses without being held liable to answer in damages for injuries which are direct and probable and natural results of his action. We only say this is no such case. The case of Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 637, is cited as analogous in principle to that which plaintiff urges in this case. We do not think so. The defendant in that case, for the protection of his property, some of which had theretofore been stolen, set a spring gun, without notice, in his walled garden, at a distance from his house. The plaintiff, who climbed over the wall in pursuit of a stray fowl, having been injured, it was held that the defendant was liable to him in damages. In that case the plea was made that the defendant had the right to protect his own property, and that one who was injured without having been invited upon the land, and who was unlawfully there, could maintain no action. It was held that the action was maintainable, for otherwise it might result in a mere trespass being made a capital offense. Chief Justice Best said that the practice (without giving notice) was inhuman, and the proof showed that the defendant had placed the spring gun on the wall for the express purpose of doing injury, and that he had refused to give notice of its existence, on the ground that if he gave notice he would fail to catch any one. The chief justice said that the defendant intended that the gun should be discharged, and that the contents should be lodged in the body of his victim; and that he who sets spring guns without giving notice is guilty of an inhuman act, and, if injurious consequences ensue, he is liable to yield redress to the sufferer. The difference in the two cases is so plain as to require no discussion.

27 L. R. A.

Cases are also cited where the defendant, for the purpose and with the intention of enticing his neighbor's dogs upon his premises, set traps very near the line of the highway, and then baited them with decaying meat, so that the scent was cast not only in the highway, but upon the private premises of the plaintiff, whose dogs, taking the scent, came upon the defendant's grounds, and were taken in a trap, and thereby killed. One of such is the case of Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 277. The court held the defendant liable, upon the ground that one who sets traps to catch his neighbor's dogs, although the traps were set on his own ground, was liable for his wrongful intent and act, and it was fit to be left to the jury whether it was not defendant's intention to catch the plaintiff's dogs; and it was held that a man must not set traps of a dangerous description in a situation to invite, and for the particular purpose of inviting, his neighbor's dogs, as it would compel them, by their instinct, to come into the trap. The act of the defendant in that case was not done in the prosecution of his immediate and proper business, but, as the court held, was a mere malicious attempt, successful in its result, to entice his neighbor's animals upon his property, and the enticement was effected by the means spoken of.

Quite a discussion upon the subject of the acts of an owner upon his own land, directed to the preservation of game or to the destruction of dogs, etc., is to be found in the case of Deane v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 489. In that case the court was equally divided, and so no judgment was rendered. The distinction is clear between acts of the nature spoken of in this case and those which are performed by an individual in the legitimate and honest conduct of his own business upon his own land. As is said by Mr. Justice Cowen in Loomis v. Terry, 17 Wend. 497, 81 Am. Dec. 806: "The business of life must go forward and the fruits of industry must be protected. A man's gravel pit is fallen into by trespassing cattle; his corn eaten or his sap drunk, whereby the cattle are killed; his unruly bull gores the intruder, or his trusty watch dog, properly and honestly kept for protection, worries the unseasonable trespasser. Such consequences cannot be absolutely avoided." The case of Clark v. Chambers, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 827, is also cited as in some degree applicable. In that case the defendant erected a barrier along a way which it was admitted he had no legal right to erect. It was erected for the purpose of keeping people from traveling where they had a right to travel. The barrier which he erected was armed with spikes, and was a dangerous obstacle. Some person, without the defendant's authority, removed a part of the barrier from where the defendant had placed it, and put it into an upright position across a footpath. The plaintiff, on a dark night, was lawfully passing along the road on his way from one of the houses to which the footpath led, when he came in contact with the spikes in the barrier, and injured one of his eyes. The jury found that the barrier was in the road, and dangerous to the safety of a person using it. It was held that the defendant, having unlawfully placed a dangerous instrument in the road, was liable in respect of injuries occasioned by it to the plaintiff, who was lawfully using the road, notwithstanding the fact that the immediate cause of the injury was the intervening act of a third party in removing the dangerous instrument to the footpath from the carriageway where defendant had placed it. In that case you start out with the admission that the act of the defendant was unlawful, and all that follows thereafter was held by the court to be the natural and probable result of his unlawful act.

In Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29, the plaintiff was a child seven years of age, and the cartman of the defendant went into a house in London, and left his horse and cart standing at the door, without any person to take care of them, for about half an hour. The plaintiff got into the cart during the cartman's absence, and another boy led the horse on, and, as plaintiff was about getting off the shaft, the horse started, and plaintiff fell, and was run over by the wheel, and his leg broken. The trial justice left it to the jury to say—First, whether it was negligence in the defendant's servant to leave the horse and cart for half an hour; and, secondly, whether that negligence occasioned the accident. There was a verdict for the plaintiff. On the return of an order to show cause why a new trial should not be had, Lord Denman, Ch. J., held that the case was properly submitted to the jury, and the defendant was properly held negligent by the jury; and although the child had no business on the cart, and, if an adult, it would be said that his own negligence contributed to the injury, yet the child merely indulged his natural instinct in amusing himself with the empty cart and the deserted horse, and therefore it could not be said that he was negligent, or that his action contributed to the injury, within the legal sense of that term, and therefore the defendant could not be permitted to avail himself of that fact. In the course of his opinion, the chief justice said there was a clear distinction to be taken between the willful act done by the defendant in the spring gun case, deliberately planting a dangerous weapon in his ground, with the design of deterring trespassers, and the mere negligence of the defendant's servant in leaving his cart in the open street. In the latter case the liability of defendant is simply for negligence. There is a great difference in the facts between the case of Lynch v. Nurdin and the present case. Leaving a horse and cart in a public street unattended and loose, subject to natural observation and interference from children passing along the street, might be held a proper question for the jury to say whether it was or was not negligence; while in the case of a defendant engaged upon his own land in simply doing that which it is necessary to do in order that he may carry on his business properly, and who fails to exercise the highest vigilance in order to protect from possible harm children who may stray upon his land for no other purpose than recreation, we think there is an absence of any fact upon which a jury ought to be permitted to find negligence. The defendant in the one case was not upon his own land, nor was he engaged in the proper transaction of his business thereon; but, on the contrary, he was in a public street, and improperly left his horse and cart therein unattended, and where others, and among them children, had the same right to be that he had. In the case of this defendant, on the other hand, the turntable was on its own land; it was a proper and appropriate machine for the carrying on of its business; it was properly made; and it was properly used by the defendant. To liken such a case to the allurements of dogs by the spreading of tainted meat over traps on defendant's lands, done for the very purpose of injury, is, as it seems to me, to lose sight of the different principles upon which the cases rest. At any rate, we think that the plaintiff failed to show any actionable negligence on the part of the defendant, and a submission to the jury of the question of such negligence was error. All that can be said on either side of the question has been set forth.

in the Stout Case and the various other cases cited above, and a continuation of the discussion would be fruitless.

We think the judgment for plaintiff must be reversed, and a new trial granted; costs to abide the event.

All concur.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

Jennie COCHRANE, Appt.,

v.

Mayor, etc., of FROSTBURG.

(.....Md.....)

1. Ordinances to prevent stock from running at large in a city are within the grant of power to pass ordinances not contrary to law which may be deemed beneficial and to remove nuisances and obstructions upon streets, lanes, and alleys.
2. The express grant of power in the charters of certain cities to prevent cattle from running at large cannot be taken as an intention by the legislature to prohibit the exercise of such power by other cities.
3. A city may be liable for injuries to a person on a street by a cow running at large, which it could have prevented by ordinary care and diligence, where it has permitted the running at large of such cattle without any attempt to stop it while it had become a common nuisance and source of danger.
4. A city is not liable for injuries committed by a cow running at large without any fault of the owner.

(March 26, 1896.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Allegany County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been inflicted upon plaintiff by a cow which was alleged to have been negligently permitted by defendant to be upon its streets.

Reversed

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Robert R. Henderson and Benjamin A. Richmond, for appellant:

A municipal corporation is only liable for the permission of a nuisance by it when it has the power, express or implied, to prevent or abate it.

Wood, Nuisances, 2d ed. § 742; Flynn v. Canton Co. of Baltimore, 40 Md. 322, 17 Am. Rep. 608.

A municipal corporation has no control over

NOTE.—Liability of a municipality for permitting animals in streets.

The above case seems to have had no predecessor which contained all the elements upon which it is decided. The point of distinction seems to be that the cattle had been permitted to run at large until by reason of their number and continued presence in the street they had become a nuisance.

In Little v. Madison, 42 Wis. 643, 24 Am. Rep. 435, the court held that a city might be liable for injuries caused by an exhibition of wild animals in a public street under its sanction and authorization.

But upon a second appeal of that case, 49 Wis. 605, 35 Am. Rep. 793, the court explains its position and limits its former ruling to some extent and holds that a city is not liable for injuries caused by wild animals, the exhibition of which it has licensed without specifying the place, if the owner exhibits them in a public street.

And in Cole v. Newburyport, 129 Mass. 594, 37 Am. Rep. 394, a city was held not liable for injuries caused by an animal which was merely passing along the highway for exercise in charge of its owner, although it had licensed an exhibition of the animal in a booth to be erected in one of the public squares of the city.

In Levy v. New York, 1 Sandf. 465, plaintiff's infant child was killed by a hog which was running at large in the streets, and he brought suit against the city to recover the damages. The court says "that there is no precedent for the action" and "that the idea that because the city may prohibit a nuisance, therefore it must not only pass a prohibitory law but must also enforce it at the hazard of being subjected to all damages which may ensue from the nuisance, is certainly novel," and the court held that in that case there was no liability. But from the facts which appear in the report of that case, there is nothing to show that the running at large of hogs in the public streets had been so frequent as to endanger the safety of citizens.

27 L. R. A.

In Kelley v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 86, damage was caused by a hog which was running at large entering plaintiff's premises and injuring some clothes. The plaintiff contended that the city was liable because it had failed to pass an ordinance prohibiting animals from running at large, but the court said that the power to pass such ordinance was a discretionary one, for failure to exercise which the city could not be held liable.

In Rivers v. Augusta, 65 Ga. 376, 38 Am. Rep. 787, the city indefinitely suspended an ordinance prohibiting animals from running at large in the streets for the purpose of destroying the grass and weeds which were growing there. A cow running at large set upon and gored the plaintiff who brought suit against the city, because of its failure to keep the streets safe, but the court held that the city could not be held liable for injuries resulting from its neglect to exercise its governmental powers.

In Givens v. Paris, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 705, a cow which a city officer was attempting to drive to the pound inflicted an injury on plaintiff and the city was held not liable, but the case turned on the question of the liability of the city for the negligence of its officer in executing the ordinance, rather than on the question of the liability of the city for permitting a cow to be in the street.

In Moulton v. Scarborough, 71 Me. 287, 36 Am. Rep. 308, a town was held liable for its negligence in permitting a vicious animal which it owned to be at large in a public highway, where it inflicted injury on plaintiff.

But in the case last cited the liability was of course not established for any neglect to exercise governmental powers, but for negligence in the keeping of its property, for the same reason that an individual would be held liable under similar circumstances.

H. P. F.

nuisances except such as is conferred upon it by its charter or general law.

Wood, Nuisances, 2d ed. § 743, p. 821.

Even where express power to abate nuisances is given in the charter, it is admitted that the municipality cannot by ordinance make that a nuisance which is not in fact a nuisance.

Wood, Nuisances, 2d ed. § 744; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 874.

When a corporation has ample power to remove a nuisance which is injurious to the health, endangers the safety, or impairs the convenience of its citizens, it is liable for all the injuries that result from a failure on its part to properly exercise the power possessed by it.

Wood Nuisances, 2d ed. § 749; Baltimore v. Marriott, 9 Md. 160; Flynn v. Canton Co. of Baltimore, 40 Md. 312, 17 Am. Rep. 603; Taylor v. Cumberland, 64 Md. 68, 64 Am. Rep. 759.

The municipality of Frostburg had power to abate nuisances. The language of its charter is clear and explicit.

Permitting of animals to run at large under the conditions and in the manner set out in the declaration is a nuisance, and it is such a nuisance as the city had power to abate.

All "wrongs which arise from the unreasonable, unwarrantable or unlawful use by a person of his own property, real or personal, working an obstruction of or injury to a right of another, or of the public, and producing such material annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort or hurt, that the law will presume consequent damage," are nuisances at common law.

Wood, Nuisances, § 1.

Common law is "a system of elementary principles, and of general judicial truths which are continually expanding with the progress of society, and adapting themselves to the gradual changes of trade and commerce and the mechanical arts, and the exigencies and usages of the country."

Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 687; Jacob v. State, 8 Humph. 495; Hightower v. Fitzpatrick, 42 Ala. 597.

The question of what constitutes a nuisance is one of law for the court.

Wood, Nuisances, 2d ed. § 82; Taylor v. Cumberland, 64 Md. 68, 64 Am. Rep. 759.

Coasting on the public streets had never been decided to be a nuisance until in Taylor v. Cumberland, supra, so held.

So of ice on sidewalks.

See also Com. v. Curtis, 9 Allen, 266; Com. v. Patch, 97 Mass. 221.

Cattle running at large are dangerous to life and limb, being provided with horns and hoofs, which it is their nature to use. They are subject to sudden panics and become uncontrollable. They are easily excited to anger, especially by the color red. They make loud and unseemly noises. They soil the streets and sidewalks and are in the way of persons passing. They frighten women and children. Modern science has shown that cattle are a most prolific source of disease amongst men, and that they assist in spreading diseases from man to man. They are predatory in their habits, and destroy trees, vegetables, grass and ornamental shrubs. The sound of their bells day and night disturbs rest, and tries the nerves. All these things the court will infer from the well-known nature of the animals, and they are alleged in the declaration.

27 L. R. A.

Goodman v. Gay, 15 Pa. 188, 53 Am. Dec. 589; Dickson v. McCoy, 89 N. Y. 401; Barnes v. Chapin, 4 Allen, 444, 81 Am. Dec. 710.

Even in the case of domestic animals not known to be dangerous the owner is liable for damage done to persons or property by such animals, when they are negligently allowed by the owner to go where they have no right to be; for instance upon the public streets.

Goodman v. Gay, Dickson v. McCoy, and Barnes v. Chapin, supra; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 Car. & P. 190; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 950, 951; Kernhacker v. Cleveland, O. & C. R. Co. 8 Ohio St. 172, 62 Am. Dec. 246.

Messrs. A. A. Doub and David W. Sloan, for appellee:

Where the power to prevent cattle from running at large is not expressly granted, it presumed that it was intended it should not be exercised.

Collins v. Hatch, 18 Ohio, 523, 51 Am. Dec. 465; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 89, and notes; St Paul v. Laidler, 2 Minn. 190, 72 Am. Dec. 89.

Any fair and reasonable doubt concerning the existence of power is resolved by the courts against the corporation, and the power is denied.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 89; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Comrs. 21 Pa. 9; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 228-232; 1 Kent, Com. 505.

A charter which confers upon the common council full power and authority to remove and abate any nuisance injurious to public health or safety, etc., does not confer upon the council the exclusive jurisdiction to determine what constitutes a nuisance, but only authorizes the abatement of that which is in fact a common nuisance.

Hennessy v. St. Paul, 87 Fed. Rep. 565; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 874, and notes; Collins v. Hatch, supra; Wood, Nuisances, p. 828; Arkadelphia v. Clark, 52 Ark. 23.

Where a city council passed an ordinance forbidding the running at large of cattle in its streets, but subsequently suspended its operation indefinitely, one who is gored by a cow running at large in the streets has no cause of action against the city.

Dill. Mun. Corp. § 950; Rivers v. Augusta, 65 Ga. 876, 88 Am. Rep. 787.

The power to remove nuisances from the streets could only apply to animals feræ naturæ, and would not apply to horses, oxen, cows, sheep, swine, etc.

Van Leuven v. Lyke, 1 N. Y. 516, 49 Am. Dec. 346; Twigg v. Ryland, 62 Md. 386, 50 Am. Rep. 226.

Municipal corporations are not liable for failure to pass ordinances which are discretionary.

Wilson v. New York, 1 Denio, 595, 48 Am. Dec. 719.

Such animals are not per se nuisances, but are subject only to such regulation as municipal authorities may determine.

Kelley v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 86.

Boyd, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant sued the appellee for injuries sustained by her by being horned, tossed, thrown down and trampled upon by a cow which attacked her while she was walking along a lane or street of Frostburg. The defendant demurred to the declaration and the demurrer was sustained by the court below and judgment entered for the defendant. From that judgment this appeal was taken and we are therefore to inquire into the legal sufficiency of the declaration, and determine whether the facts therein stated, which are admitted by the demurrer, give the plaintiff a right of action.

It is alleged that the defendant was by its charter vested with control over all the streets, lanes, and alleys of Frostburg, and with full power to provide by the passage and enforcement of ordinance for the comfort, good order, health, and safety of all the inhabitants of said town residing within the limits and passing along and over its streets, lanes, and alleys, and with power to prevent and remove all nuisances in said town, and to shield and protect said inhabitants therefrom; that the said town is laid off into streets and alleys, contains between four and five thousand inhabitants, and is compactly built, so that there is a great deal of travel and walking on said streets and alleys.

It is further averred that large numbers of horses, cows, hogs, and horned cattle were turned loose and permitted to run at large upon the streets unattended during the day and night, by means of which "said stock, and particularly said cows (they being armed with dangerous horns and equipped with annoying bells) became a common nuisance and a source of great annoyance and danger to persons passing along said streets and alleys, and particularly so as to women and children, who were attacked and frightened by said stock, whereby the safety and comfort of the inhabitants and the good order of said town were destroyed, and whereby the same became and (at the time of the grievances hereinafter set out) was a common and notorious nuisance and a constant source of dangerous discomfort to the inhabitants of said town."

It is then charged that by reason of the powers contained in the charter it became the duty of the defendant to pass and enforce ordinances to abate or prevent said nuisance and to prevent said animals from running at large and require their owners to keep them off the streets, unless attended by some person in charge thereof, but that the defendant unmindful of its duty negligently and wrongfully failed and refused to pass any such ordinances for the preventing and abating of said nuisance, and negligently, willfully, and wrongfully refused to take any steps whatever to prevent said stock and troublesome and dangerous animals from running at large on said streets, and that while said nuisance still continued plaintiff was walking on a street or lane of said city, using due care and caution, and was attacked by one of the said cows and horned cattle, so by the said defendant negligently and wrongfully allowed and permitted to be at large upon the said streets and was violently horned, tossed, thrown, and trampled upon, etc. The injuries sustained by the plaintiff are then set out in detail showing that both of her arms were broken, her side torn, and that she was otherwise seriously and permanently injured.

If the defendant can be held responsible in any case to one lawfully using its streets for injuries inflicted by a cow running at large, the allegations in this declaration are certainly sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover, if she can sustain them by competent proof. In determining whether the defendant is so liable we will consider:

1. Has the mayor and city council of Frostburg power under its charter to prevent stock from running at large within the corporate limits?

2. If it has such power, what are the consequences of its neglect or failure to do so?

Article 1, section 144, of the Code of Public Local Laws authorizes the mayor and city council of Frostburg to pass such ordinances, not contrary to law, as they may deem beneficial to the town; gives the power to remove nuisance and obstructions upon the streets, lanes, and alleys and to ordain and enforce all ordinances, rules, and regulations necessary for the peace, good order, health, and safety of the town, and of the people and property therein, and authorizes them to impose fines, forfeitures, or imprisonment for the violation of any ordinances of the town.

These powers are in substance the same as those of the charter of the city of Cumberland, which were passed upon in the case of Taylor v. Cumberland, 64 Md. 68, 54 Am. Rep. 759. This court there held that the defendant was authorized and required under its charter to prevent persons from coasting on the streets, if it could do so by ordinary and reasonable care and diligence, and declared such use of the streets to be a nuisance. There was no special authority given in the charter of Cumberland to prevent coasting on the streets, but the power of the city to do so was not only not questioned, but was expressly recognized in that case. If a municipality can without express powers in its charter prohibit the use of its streets for coasting, why should it not have the power to prohibit the use of them by horses, cows, hogs, and horned animals "during both the night and in daytime, and at all times, and on Sundays," at it is alleged in the declaration, especially when the cows are "armed with dangerous horns and equipped with annoying bells? It is difficult to imagine a condition of things more calculated to injuriously affect, if not destroy, "the peace, good order, health, and safety of the town and of the people, and of the property therein," than that described in the declaration.

It is true that the decisions are not uniform as to whether what is called "the general welfare clause," usually contained in charters, authorizes municipal corporations to restrain domestic animals from running at large, but many of them so hold. See 15 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 1188, and note, where a number of them will be found collected together.

There can be no good reason assigned why it should not, unless there be some statute law, or some other provision of the charter inconsistent with such construction. In those cases in which it is held that municipal corporations cannot, without special authority, pass and enforce ordinances of this character, it will generally be found, upon examination of them, that it is by reason of some statute or other special clause that would not apply to the case under consideration. For example, in the case of Collins v. Hatch, 18 Ohio, 523, 51 Am. Dec. 465, so much relied on by the learned counsel for the appellee, the court said that an ordinance to restrain horses, cattle, swine, etc., from running at large, could not be adopted under the general welfare clause, as it would be in contravention of the general laws of that state which allowed such animals to run at large. Is it to be said that the owners of horses, cows, and other animals can turn them loose in the public streets of a town such as described in the declaration, and the authorities have no means to prevent it unless the legislature has given them express power.

It is not necessary to determine whether domestic animals can be impounded and forfeited without express authority being given in the charter, but with powers as broad as those in the charter of defendant there would seem to be no valid reason why it could not pass and enforce ordinances prohibiting stock from running at large and imposing penalties for the violation of them. If the owners of cows and horses tied them along the public streets of Frostburg, so as to interfere with the free passage of people having the right to use the streets, it could not be successfully contended that the authorities were without remedy. Why, then, should they be permitted to turn them loose, thereby not only obstructing the free and proper use of the streets, but permitting them to wander over the sidewalks to frighten, and possibly injure, women and children.

It was contended by the appellee that it is customary in this state to grant special powers to such municipal corporations as desired to prevent stock from running at large, and hence when it is omitted from a charter the presumption is that it was not intended by the legislature that such power should be exercised. We do not think that such a conclusion can properly be drawn. Various reasons might be given for such omission. Some of those municipalities may have been so disturbed by animals running at large that they wanted to emphasize that power to restrain them, or they may have thought it safest to include such power to avoid any question.

In the brief for appellee certain towns are named which have the power expressly granted them to prevent cattle from running at large, and it is stated that Hagerstown, Frederick, and others have no such power conferred on them. It would seem to be a most unreasonable construction to place upon the action of the legislature to say that inasmuch as it has granted this express power to some towns of the state, but has omitted it in the charters of Hagerstown and Frederick, therefore these two cities, which are among the largest in the state, were intended by the legislature to be prohibited from exercising such powers. There may be no such provision in the charter of Baltimore city, yet it would scarcely be claimed that it could not prohibit stock from running at large under the general powers vested in it.

The object of such a provision as the general welfare clause is to cover those cases not specifically designated. It would be impossible to enumerate in detail in a charter of ordinary length all the powers that a corporation could exercise. The very effort to name them all might exclude some that were omitted but would have been authorized under the general welfare clause if an attempt had not been made to itemize them. We think it clear that the defendant has the power under its charter to pass and enforce ordinances to prevent stock from running at large within its limits and that the condition of affairs described in the declaration is a nuisance of such character as should be abated for the peace, good order and safety of the people and property of the town.

It becomes necessary therefore, to consider the second inquiry above suggested, namely, what are the consequences of the neglect or failure of the defendant to exercise its powers. We have been referred to a number of authorities outside of this state to the effect that a municipality is not liable for the injuries sustained by reason of its failure to abate a nuisance although it has power to do so. But that is no longer an open question in this state. It was said in Marriott's Case, 9 Md. 174, that when a statute conferred a power upon a corporation to be exercised for the public good the exercise of the power is not merely discretionary but imperative and the words "power and authority," in such case may be construed "duty and obligation." It was there held that the city of Baltimore was required to pass ordinances sufficient to reach the exigencies of the case and was bound to see that they were enforced.

Mason, J., in delivering the opinion in that case said, "The people of Baltimore in accepting the privileges and advantages conferred by their charter took them subject to the burthens and restrictions which were made to accompany them under the same charter. One of those burdens was the obligation to keep the city free from nuisances. A disregard of the obligations thus imposed would be attended with the same consequences which would result to the individual at common law were he to disregard his obligations to the community in these particulars. As the duty is the same in a corporation as an individual, so are the consequences the same for its disregard." On page 175 the court quotes with approval from the case of Pittsburgh v. Grier, 22 Pa. 65, 60 Am. Dec. 65: "It is no matter whether that duty (removing a nuisance) remains unperformed because it had no ordinances on the subject or because having ordinances it neglected to enforce them. The responsibilities of a corporation are the same in either case."

In Taylor's Case, supra, it was held that the corporation was under an obligation to exercise for the public good the powers conferred on it by its charter to prevent nuisances and to protect persons and property. So, whatever may be the law elsewhere it is well settled in this state that a corporation having such powers must exercise them, and is ordinarily liable for its failure to do so to any person who has received special damage therefrom, who is not himself in fault. Of course, as was said in Taylor's Case, if it use ordinary and reasonable care and diligence to prevent the nuisance, its duty is discharged and it is relieved from responsibility, and a vigorous effort to enforce its ordinance on the subject would fulfill its duty in this respect.

The declaration alleges that defendant "negligently and wrongfully failed and refused to pass any such ordinances for preventing and abating said nuisance, and negligently, willfully and wrongfully refused to take any steps whatever to prevent said stock and troublesome and dangerous animals from running at large on said street." Now, if it be true, as is alleged in the declaration and admitted by the demurrer, that women and children had been attacked and frightened by these animals thus running at large in the streets, it would seem clear it was the duty of the defendant to take some steps to prevent it. It was certainly its duty to prevent such a condition of affairs as is described in the declaration.

But the main difficulty in this case is to determine how far the defendant is responsible for such an injury as that complained of by plaintiff. It is well settled that the owner of a domestic animal is ordinarily not responsible for injuries inflicted by it unless it is of a ferocious or vicious disposition, accustomed to bite or attack mankind, and he knows that it has such disposition or vicious propensity. "The gist of the action is the keeping of the animal after knowledge of its mischievous propensities," and it is incumbent upon the owner to see that no injury is done by it. There is another class of cases in which owners have been held liable, without proving knowledge by them, on the ground that the animals were wrongfully in the places where they did the mischief. It has, for example, been held that the owner of a horse who permits it to go at large in the streets of a populous city is answerable for a personal injury done by it to an individual without proof that he knows the horse is vicious. The owner had no right to turn the horse loose in the streets. Goodman v. Gay, 15 Pa. 188, 58 Am. Dec. 589; Decker v. Gammon, 44 Me. 322, 69 Am. Dec. 99; Dickson v. McCoy, 89 N. Y. 401; Barnes v. Chapin, 4 Allen, 444, 81 Am. Dec. 710. This last case places the liability on the ground that the owner was in fault in permitting his mare to go at large on the highway without a keeper. See also Mosier v. Beale, 43 Fed. Rep. 358, in which it was held that in an action for personal injury caused by defendant's cow it was not necessary to allege scienter when it was alleged that the injury was committed while the cow was negligently permitted by defendant to trespass on plaintiff's premises.

27 L. R. A.

In the case now under consideration, if the owner of the cow negligently or willfully permitted her to go at large on the streets of Frostburg, he was in fault and was liable for injuries done by her to persons lawfully using the streets. Let us, therefore, apply these principles and determine how far the defendant is liable. We have already said that the defendant had the power, and it was its duty, to prevent such a condition of affairs as the declaration alleges existed at the time of the injury. Of course, the ringing of cow bells, frightening women and children, and other things alleged, which were annoying and injurious to the public at large, do not give the plaintiff a right of action, as she can only recover, if at all, for special injuries sustained by her. Those special injuries were not sustained by the ringing of cow-bells, etc., but by the attack of this particular cow. These other matters are relevant, however, to our inquiry, because they are of such character as must likely have brought this nuisance to the attention of the authorities, and hence reflects upon their duty to abate the nuisance. In Taylor's Case it would not have been contended that if the sled which struck him had been the only one coasting on the streets of Cumberland, the defendant would have been liable.

It was because coasting had been carried on to such an extent that the city authorities were called upon to stop it as a nuisance and something dangerous to those lawfully using the streets. So in this case, if horses, cows, hogs and horned cattle were permitted by the town authorities to run at large as alleged in the declaration, they were called upon to put a stop to it. If, however, this cow that injured the plaintiff was on the street without any fault of the owner, then no blame can attach to the defendant, and it would not be liable, for it would not do to hold a municipal corporation to a stricter liability for injuries done by domestic animals than the owners themselves would be held to. Nor would the defendant be liable unless it could have prevented this cow from running at large by the use of ordinary care and diligence.

If the cow was at such place and for such short time as it could not have been discovered by the defendant's officers by the use of reasonable care and diligence before it attacked plaintiff, then the defendant would not be liable, unless the cow's running at large can be attributed to the failure of defendant to pass and enforce ordinances to prevent stock from running at large.

Of course, if the plaintiff is shown to be in fault, another defense would arise. Whether or not the plaintiff can prove such facts as will entitle her to recover, can only be determined at a trial of the case, but we think the allegations in the declaration are sufficient to require the defendant to plead, and therefore the demurrer should have been overruled. For these reasons we must reverse the judgment.

Judgment reversed and new trial awarded.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Thomas SEEVERS
v.
G. GABEL et al., Appts.

(.....Iowa.....)

A hirer of personal property under an agreement to return it at the expiration of the lease in as good condition as when taken, usual wear excepted, is not liable for its loss by fire without his fault.

(April 2, 1895.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Mahaska County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the value of certain property which had been rented by plaintiff to defendant and was accidentally destroyed by fire during the period of rental. Reversed.

Statement by Given, J.:

Action upon a written contract, as follows: "This indenture, made and entered into this 17th day of January, 1891, witnesseth, that the said first party lease to second party the following described personal property, to wit, one saw rig, complete, from the first day of February, 1891, to the first day of February, 1892, inclusive.

... And the said second party agrees to pay first party, as rent for the same, eight dollars and thirty-three cents ($8.33) per month, in advance. ... Second party further agrees to keep a competent man to run same, and, at the expiration of the time mentioned in this lease, to give first party peaceable possession of said personal property, by returning the same to Seevers' Manufacturing Company's shops, in Oakaloosa, in as good condition as it now is, usual wear excepted. Thomas Seevers. G. Gabel. C. Brown." Plaintiff alleges that defendants have failed to pay any part of the rent, wherefore he asks to recover $100, with interest. He also alleges that defendants failed to return said property, as required by the contract, wherefore he asks to recover $400 damages. Defendants answered, admitting the contract, and alleging that in the nighttime, on or about the 30th day of June, 1891, said property was destroyed by fire; that said fire was the result of accident or incendiarism, and was not on account of any negligence or want of care on defendants' part. Other allegations of the answer are not material to the question to be considered. Plaintiff replied, denying generally the allegations of the answer. The case was tried to a jury, and a verdict and judgment for plaintiff for $198.83, including $147.12 damages. No question is made on this appeal as to the rent.

NOTE.—The above case holding in effect that a hirer of property with a general agreement to return it in good order is not an insurer against its destruction, falls within the subject of intervening impossibility to perform as a release from obligation to perform a contract, as to which, see note to Stewart v. Stone (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 215. 27 L. R. A.

Messrs. Bolton & McCoy for appellants.
Messrs. Seevers & Seevers, for appellees.

Given, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The record before us shows that no transcript of the reporter's notes of the evidence in this case was filed with the clerk of the district court until after this appeal was taken, and appellee had filed an amended abstract denying appellants' abstract, and alleging and showing that the evidence had not been preserved as required. Appellee contends that, as the evidence is not before this court, we cannot consider the errors assigned by appellants on the giving and refusing of instructions. The instructions given, which are complained of, clearly relate to a matter of law involved in the case, as shown by the pleadings independent of the evidence. It is a question of the construction that should be given to the written contract sued upon and admitted. Other errors assigned cannot be considered, in the absence of the evidence duly preserved and authenticated.

2. The question to be considered is whether the court erred in giving the following instructions: "(8) Evidence has been offered tending to prove that during the term of the lease the property leased by the plaintiff to the defendants was injured by fire. Defendants' contention is that the fire terminated the contract of lease, and released the defendants from all liability, excepting for the rent that had accrued up to the date of the fire. (4) You are instructed that this would be true, but for the terms of the contract itself, which provide that 'the defendants, at the expiration of the time mentioned in the lease, were to return the said property in as good condition as it now is, usual wear excepted,' and this clause imposes upon the defendants the obligation of returning the property notwithstanding the fire. If they have failed to do so, then plaintiff will be entitled to recover damages, measured by the rule hereinafter given." Appellants complain of that part of the instructions that states that the clause of the contract quoted "imposes upon the defendants the obligation of returning the property notwithstanding the fire," or to respond to damages. They cite authorities as to the different kinds of bailments, and the care required of bailees, and contend that under this contract they are not liable for injury to the property occurring without their fault. There is no question of negligence involved in this inquiry. The instructions complained of are grounded upon the assumption that the property was injured without fault on the part of appellants. Appellee concedes, as do the instructions, that appellants would not be liable, in the absence of the express contract with respect to the return of the property. He contends, and correctly so, that the liability which the law would imply in the absence of contract may be enlarged by contract.

His claim is that under this contract the appellants are absolutely bound to return the property, or, in case of its unavoidable loss or injury, to respond in damages. In the absence of a contract the law would imply a promise on the part of appellants to return the property at the expiration of the term in as good condition as when received, ordinary wear and decay excepted. Aside from naming a place to which the property was to be returned, this is just what the parties have expressed in their contract. Surely, appellants' liability is not enlarged by expressing in the contract just what the law would have implied; yet it is not claimed that appellants would be liable under the implications of the law. That a place is named to which the property was to be returned does not enlarge appellants' liability. The sole contention is whether, under that part of the contract quoted in the instructions, appellants are bound to return the property, or to respond in damages, notwithstanding its destruction by fire without fault on their part. It is simply a question as to the proper construction of this contract. Appellee cites the rule that "where the party, by his own contract, creates a duty or charge upon himself, he is bound to make it good, notwithstanding any accident or delay by inevitable necessity, because he might have provided against it by contract." Our inquiry is whether the appellants did, by this contract, create the duty or charge upon themselves to return the property, or respond in damages in case of its unavoidable destruction. If they did so, they are liable; otherwise, not. We will be aided in this inquiry by referring to the construction given by the courts to similar contracts. Among the many cases that might be cited, we refer to the following: In McEvers v. Steamboat Sangamon, 22 Mo. 168, a barge was hired by the defendant under an agreement that it was "to be delivered in good order, the usual wear and tear excepted." The barge was destroyed by ice, and it was held that the steamboat was not liable, on the contract, for the nondelivery of the barge. In Young v. Bruce, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 324, the contract was for the hire of a slave "until said 25th of December, 1819, to be returned, well clothed, at that time." Defendants answered that the slave was drowned by inevitable accident, without fault of theirs, whereby they were prevented from returning him. The court held that it was not the intention of the parties that the defendants should be responsible for the death of the slave without fault on their part, and that the demurrer was properly overruled. In Harris v. Nicholas, 5 Munf. 488, the contract was for the hire "of four negro fellows the present year, who are to be returned, well clothed, on or before the 25th of December." Defendant answered that before the expiration of the time one of the negroes, without fault on defendant's part, departed this life. The court held that if the covenant could be considered "as a covenant to return the negro in question, as well as to secure the payment of the money due for his hire, it ought not to be considered as a covenant to insure such return in the event which has happened." In Maggart v. Hansbarger, 8 Leigh, 532, the plaintiff leased to the defendant certain real estate, upon which there was a gristmill and carding machine, defendant agreeing "to return the said property with all its appurtenances." The mill and carding machine were destroyed by fire accidentally, or by some unknown incendiary. It was held that the contract was distinguishable from those wherein the party covenants to keep in order, and that the tenant was not bound to rebuild. In Warner v. Hitchins, 5 Barb. 666, the defendants bound themselves, "at the expiration of the lease, to surrender up possession of the premises in the same condition they were in at the time of making the lease, natural wear and tear excepted." The court, after a thorough and extended consideration of the subject, held that the tenants were not bound to put up new buildings in the places of those destroyed by fire, distinguishing the case from those wherein covenants to repair are made. In Wainwright v. Silvers, 18 Ind. 497, it was held that a tenant is not answerable, in the absence of an express agreement, for the destruction by accidental fire of buildings occupied. This case is clearly distinguishable from those wherein there is an agreement to keep leased property in repair. There are many cases holding that under contracts containing such a covenant the tenant was bound to restore the buildings, if they were destroyed by fire. See David v. Ryan, 47 Iowa, 642; Van Wormer v. Crane, 51 Mich. 368, 47 Am. Rep. 582.

27 L. R. A.

Appellee cites and relies upon the case of Drake v. White, 117 Mass. 10, and Harvey v. Murray, 136 Mass. 377. In the first case the contract was as follows: "Received of John E. Drake one Morris & Ireland fire-proof safe, which we promise to deliver the same to said Drake, or its equivalent in money, on payment of a certain note signed by said Drake." The property was destroyed without fault of the defendants. The court says: "In the present case the parties have reduced their contract to writing, and have omitted to attach to the defendants' liability for the property any limitation whatever. On the contrary, their express promise is to do one or the other of two things,—either to return the property specifically, or to pay for it in money." The conclusion is based upon this expressed agreement. In this case we have no agreement to return the property or its equivalent in money. In the other case, defendant rented a piano, and agreed "to return it in as good order as when received, customary wear and tear excepted." The piano was injured by inevitable accident. The court says: "This case falls fully within the decision in Drake v. White, supra. Indeed, the mention in the contract now before us that customary wear and tear are excepted from the defendant's agreement furnishes an additional reason for holding that injury from inevitable accident is not excepted." In our opinion those cases are clearly distinguishable from each other. In the former the property was delivered as security for the payment of a debt, under an express agreement that it, or its value in money, should be returned on payment of the debt. That was a contract to be absolutely liable; but not so in the latter case, nor in this one. We have quoted the entire opinion in the latter case, which is grounded solely upon the former, through a misapprehension, we think, of what was decided in the former. While it is identical with this, as to the question involved, we do not think it is entitled to weight as authority, nor do we think that the exception expressed in that or in this contract is any reason for holding the appellants liable for loss from inevitable accident. Inquiring, as we do, for the intention of the parties with respect to the return of this property, we cannot believe that either party understood himself as standing as an insurer to the other. The plaintiff agreed to furnish the property for use for one year, in return for the rent to be paid. It would hardly be claimed that plaintiff is guilty of a breach of this contract by failing to furnish the property for use, because of its destruction without fault on his part; yet it does not seem that the destruction of the property should be a termination of this contract as to one party more than to the other. Plaintiff's obligation to furnish the property for use is quite as explicit as is defendants' obligation to return it. There was no adequate consideration moving to the defendants, as insurers of the property. The use and the rent were equivalent. Therefore, defendants would have nothing for this extraordinary liability,—a liability that should not, and, we think, would not, be left to doubtful construction, if intended, but would be plainly expressed in the contract. We are of the opinion that the defendants are not liable, under this contract, for the destruction of the property without fault on their part, and therefore that the court erred in giving the instructions complained of.

Reversed.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

T. I. GREENSTREET, Appt.,

v.

Ada THORNTON.

(60 Ark. 369.)

A decree based on a summons against a dead man who is named as the owner of property, the sale of which is sought for an assessment for an improvement, is of no validity whatever, no matter how the summons was posted or published, although such notice in case of unknown owners might be sufficient.

(March 23, 1895.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Sebastian County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Affirmed.

Ada Thornton a minor owned certain property in Ft. Smith. An assessment for street improvement was made against it which was not paid and a suit was brought by the board of improvement to collect the assessment; the assessment and suit were against George Thornton, father of Ada Thornton, who had been dead for several years. The summons was issued, and being returned not found, a copy was affixed to the property and published as required by the statute in cases where defendant is not found. Upon these services a decree was rendered condemning the property to be sold and Greenstreet purchased at the sale. In due course he received a deed for the property and this suit is brought to cancel such deed.

NOTE.—The sufficiency of constructive service of process to sustain jurisdiction for personal judgment is the subject of a note to Moyer v. Bucks (Ind.) 16 L. R. A. 281.

For general requisites of jurisdiction, see note to Shores v. Hooper (Mass.) 11 L. R. A. 308. 27 L. R. A.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. Joseph M. Hill, for appellant:

The provision requiring suit to be brought against the owner of the land does not mean that it must, in order to render the judgment valid, be brought against the real owner, but it means that suit must be brought against the person appearing by the registry of deeds to be the owner in the absence of a showing to the contrary.

Vance v. Corrigan, 78 Mo. 94.

If it were necessary to go into questions of actual ownership, the land taxed would indeed be in a precarious condition, since changes of ownership, either real or simulated, would render the collection of a tax difficult, if not impractical.

Merrick v. Hutt, 15 Ark. 331; Worthen v. Ratcliffe, 42 Ark. 330.

Authority over the land owner was acquired by the filing of the complaint stating that taxes were due on this particular tract, and by publication of the required notice, which took the place of ordinary process to bring the parties into court.

McCarter v. Neil, 50 Ark. 188.

This suit is collateral attack, and cannot be maintained.

Williamson v. Mimms, 49 Ark. 336; Boyd v. Roane, 49 Ark. 397; Doyle v. Martin, 55 Ark. 87.

Greenstreet was an innocent purchaser under this decree, and should be protected as such.

Boyd v. Roane, supra.

No valid defense is offered to the original proceedings.

State v. Hill, 50 Ark. 463.

The statute requires that a valid defense be shown before the statutory action will lie for the vacation of the judgment complained of.

Sand. & H. Dig. §§ 4199, 4200; State v. Hill, supra; Chambless v. Reppy, 54 Ark. 539; Boyd v. Roane, supra.

Mr. T. W. N. Boone, for appellee:

It is essential that jurisdiction should have attached during the defendant's life; and if the action is commenced against one already dead the judgment will be absolutely void for want of jurisdiction.

1 Black, Judgm. § 203; Crosley v. Hutton, 98 Mo. 196; Williams v. Hudson, 98 Mo. 524; Bollinger v. Thouteau, 20 Mo. 89; Stafford v. Fiser, 82 Mo. 898; Harness v. Cravens (Mo.) Dec. 22, 1894; Loring v. Folger, 7 Gray, 505.

Where property is taken under statutory authority in derogation of common law every requisite of the statute having a semblance of benefit to the owner must be complied with or the proceedings will be ineffectual.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 646.

A void judgment is subject to a collateral impeachment.

Grimmett v. Askew, 48 Ark. 151; Graham v. Spencer, 14 Fed. Rep. 608; Downs v. Allen, 22 Fed. Rep. 805; Citizens Bank v. Brock, 28 Fed. Rep. 21.

Riddick, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question before us is whether the decree for the sale of the lot of Ada Thornton was of any validity. The proceedings were regular, except that instead of Ada Thornton, the owner of the lot, being made a party. George Thornton, a dead man, was named as defendant. It is contended by counsel for appellant that this is a proceeding in rem, that by virtue of the same the court obtained jurisdiction over the lot in question, and that its decree is not void, and not subject to collateral attack. Mr. Black, in his work on Tax Titles, speaks of suits to collect delinquent taxes as "proceedings quasi in rem." Black, Tax Titles, § 167. Judge Smith in McCarter v. Neil, 50 Ark. 188, says that such proceedings are substantially actions in rem. But the fact that an action of this kind partakes of the nature of an action in rem does not dispense with the necessity of notice. Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 496. Discussing this question, Judge Work, in his book "Courts and Their Jurisdiction" (page 50), says: "The proceedings may be purely against the thing, in which case it is sometimes said that the proceeding is against all the world, and the notice must necessarily be general. Under such a notice, any and all persons who claim any interest in the property are called upon to assert such claims; and, if they do not, their interests are cut off or made subservient to the decree rendered." A general notice of this kind was required by what is known as the "Overdue Tax Law," and it was of such a notice that Judge Smith was speaking in the case of McCarter v. Neil, supra, cited by counsel, when he said that in such proceedings "all persons are presumed to be parties." It would not do to suppose that he used this language in reference to any other than those actions in which all parties having or claiming an interest are notified to come forward and defend the same, "for the extent of a decree's effect is measured by the notice." "If the notice is limited to certain persons, made parties to the action, the decree is binding upon the rights of such parties only." Waples, Proc. in Rem. § 628; Work, Courts, 50; Cooley, Const. Lim. § 496.

97 L. R. A.

There is only one contingency in which a general notice is authorized by the statute in proceedings of this kind, and that is when the owner of the property is unknown. That fact must be alleged in the complaint, and the suit proceeds, so says the statute, "as an action in rem against the property." Summons issues against the unknown owner of the particular property, and service is had by affixing a copy of the same to the property and by publication. In such a case, the notice is general to the unknown owner, whoever he may be, and, if the summons is served in the manner required, all parties must take notice, for it includes all who have an interest in the property. But, as before stated, this general notice is only allowed where the owner of the property is unknown, and that fact alleged in the complaint. Sand. & H. Dig. §§ 5844-5846. Where it is not alleged that the owner is unknown, and the proceedings are against a certain person named as defendant and alleged to be the owner of the property, then, whether there be actual service upon him, or only constructive service in the manner designated by the statute, it is a notice to him only, and the decree affects only his interest in the land, whatever it may be, and no one else is bound by it. The defendant named in this proceeding was dead, and the decree based on a summons against him, it matters not how it was posted or published, was of no validity whatever. Crosley v. Hutton, 98 Mo. 196; Williams v. Hudson, 98 Mo. 524. The contention of appellant that the decree in question cannot be made the subject of a collateral attack is not well taken, for the decree is void. "A void judgment or decree is a mere nullity, and has no force, either as evidence or by way of estoppel." Black, Judgm. § 535; Freem. Judgm. § 117; Paul v. Willis, 69 Tex. 269; Cain v. Goda, 84 Ind. 209; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Summers, 113 Ind. 10; Sidensparkar v. Sidensparkar, 52 Me. 481, 83 Am. Dec. 527; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 748.

But we need not discuss that question here, for judgments are only binding on the parties and privies to the litigation. The appellee, Ada Thornton, was not a party to the proceeding to sell this lot, and neither she nor any one else is bound by this decree, rendered in a proceeding begun and prosecuted against a dead man.

We think that the decree of the chancellor was right, and it is affirmed.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Ohio, ex rel. John K. RICHARDS, Atty-Gen.,

City of CINCINNATI

(.....Ohio.....)

*1. An amended section of a statute takes the place of the original section, and must be construed with reference to the other sections, and they with reference to it; the whole statute, after the amendment, has the same effect as if re-enacted with the amendment, and hence, an unconstitutional statute may be amended into a constitutional one so far as its future operation is concerned, by removing its objectionable provisions, or supplying others, to conform it to the requirements of the constitution.

2. The Act of April 13, 1893, as amended April 24, 1893, authorizing cities of the first class to annex contiguous municipalities of other grades and classes, is a subsisting and constitutional law.

3. It is not a valid objection to the statute, or to annexation under it, that a municipal corporation may be so annexed without the consent of its constituted authorities, or of its inhabitants; nor, that the taxable property within such municipality will become subject to taxation for the payment of previously incurred indebtedness of the city to which the annexation shall be made.

* Headnotes by the COURT.

NOTE.—Power of legislature to annex territory to municipalities.

Besides the attempts which have been made to overthrow the action of municipal corporations in annexing territory under delegated power, and which will not be directly considered in this note, the cases are quite numerous in which the authority of the legislature itself to change municipal boundaries has been directly questioned or at least passed upon. These attacks come from two directions. First on the part of the municipality itself and second on the part of individuals who are in some way affected by the change. So far as the rights of the municipality itself are concerned, the power of the legislature has always been held to be absolute in the absence of some constitutional provision directly controlling the matter, and such provisions are few. The grounds for attack by individuals are somewhat more numerous and have in some quarters been more successful, although in a great majority of the cases the action of the legislature has been implied.

Power as against municipality.

In Stone v. Charlestown, 114 Mass. 214, the court in considering the validity of the annexation of certain towns to the city of Boston said, the power to alter the boundaries of counties, towns, and cities into which the territory of the commonwealth has been divided for political and municipal purposes is an inherent attribute of the legislature to be exercised according to its own views of public expediency unless restrained by express constitutional provisions.

In Galesburg v. Hawkinson, 75 Ill. 122, the court in passing upon the question of the power of the legislature to delegate to the courts the right to alter the boundaries of municipal corporations, 37 L. R. A.

4. The statute does not require that, at the election held to determine whether annexation shall be made, the question be so submitted that the electors of each municipality sought to be annexed may vote for or against its annexation; nor is it essential to the annexation that a majority of the votes cast by the electors of any such municipality shall be in favor of it. The question to be voted upon is whether all of the municipalities included in the proceeding shall be annexed, when it is sought to annex more than one, and the proposition is deemed carried if a majority of the aggregate vote cast be in favor of annexation.

(March 23, 1895.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of quo warranto to determine by what right defendant was exercising the franchise of annexing contiguous territory and to prevent it from exercising such franchise. Refused.

Statement by Williams, J.:

The petition alleges that the defendant, which is the only city of the first grade of the first class in this state, has instituted, and is about to carry to completion, proceedings to extend its corporate limits by annexation, so as to include the contiguous villages of Riverside, Westwood, Clifton, Avondale, and Linwood, and claims the right to do so, under and by virtue of an act of the general assembly, passed April 13, 1893, entitled "An says "that the authorities are all in favor of the proposition that the legislature may alter the boundaries of municipal corporations at pleasure.

In Laramie County Comrs. v. Albany County Comrs., 23 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552, the court in deciding that a portion might properly be cut off from a county, says, unless the constitution otherwise provides the legislature has authority to extend or limit the boundaries of such corporations or even abolish them altogether in the legislative discretion. And the same rule was applied in Hagle v. Beard, 33 Ark. 497.

The legislature may properly annex territory to a town for the purpose of forming a taxing district to further the raising of a tax for local improvements. Henderson v. Jackson County, 2 McCrary, 615.

So far as public and municipal franchises and existence of municipal corporations are concerned, the legislature may exercise over them exclusive control and may constitutionally enlarge, restrict, or even destroy their municipal existence. Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 20 Vt. 12, 37 Am. Dec. 748.

As against the municipality itself, its boundaries may be changed at the pleasure of the legislature. Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 22; Ham v. Sawyer, 23 Me. 37.

The legislature has absolute control over municipal corporations to create, change, modify, or destroy them at pleasure. People v. Wren, 5 Ill. 239; Coles v. Madison County, 1 Ill. 120, 12 Am. Dec. 164; Grady v. Lenoir County Comrs. 74 N. C. 101; Greenleaf v. Trustees of Twp. No. 41 N. R. 14 E., 22 Ill. 228.

In McCormick v. St. Louis I. M. & S. R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 640, it is said that the power of the legislature at the time of passing the Act of May 16, 1880, contracting the boundaries of a town, to exact to authorize cities of the first grade of the first class to annex contiguous municipal corporations of other grades or classes lying within any county containing such cities of the first grade of the first class," and an act amendatory thereof, passed April 24, 1898. The first-mentioned act reads as follows:

"SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio: That any city of the first grade of the first class shall have the power to annex to its present corporate limits any contiguous municipal corporation or corporations of other grades or classes situate in the county containing such city of the first grade of the first class, upon compliance with the terms and conditions hereinafter recited.

"SEC. 2. That any such city of the first grade of the first class desiring to annex any contiguous municipal corporation or corporations of other grades or classes, lying within the county containing such city shall, by its board of legislation, pass an ordinance declaring such intention and describing the municipal corporation or corporations which it desires to annex; and it shall be the duty of the mayor of such city of the first grade of the first class seeking such annexation, to cause such ordinance to be published once a week for four consecutive weeks in two newspapers published and of general circulation in the county; and if there be any objections to or remonstrances against the proposed annexation the same shall be filed with the clerk of the board of legislation of such city, and the clerk shall present the same at the next regular meeting of such board of legislation; and such board shall hear all objections and remonstrances and finally determine the same by ordinance.

"SEC. 3. That if said board of legislation after such hearing determines in favor of such annexation, then the mayor of such city of the first grade of the first class, and also the mayors of the different municipal corporations sought to be annexed, shall each cause their separate proclamations to be issued, as in the case of municipal elections, notifying the qualified voters of their respective municipalities of the time and place of the holding of an election to determine whether such municipalities shall be so annexed. The time for such election shall be fixed by the ordinance of the board of legislation determining in favor of such annexation, and shall be not less than thirty days after the passage of such ordinance. Before such annexation shall be deemed to have carried, it shall have received a majority of all votes cast upon such proposition. Such election shall be conducted in the same manner as is now by law provided for the conduct of municipal elections in such cities and municipal corporations, respectively, except that no additional registration shall be required. The form of the ballots to be used at such election shall be determined by the board of elections of such county.

"SEC. 4. That it shall be the duty of the judges of election to return the result to the board of elections for such county, and it shall be the duty of such board to ascertain tend or contract the limits of towns, was absolute and not subject to any judicial control.

In Darby v. Sharon, 112 Pa. 66, the court in considering the validity of the annexation to one county of territory formerly belonging to another, assumes as a premise that the legislature may by appropriate general laws either enlarge or contract the boundaries of municipalities; may consolidate several into one or divide one into several.

In the absence of express constitutional prohibition, territory may be lawfully detached from one municipality and added to another. Metcalf v. State, 49 Ohio St. 536; Town of Milwaukee v. City of Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 96; State v. Lake City, 23 Minn. 404; Teaulet's Succession, 23 La. Ann. 42; Dare County Comrs. v. Currituck County Comrs. 96 N. C. 189.

In Coolidge v. Brookline, 114 Mass. 592, the court held that a town had no right to its territorial limits which it had a corporate duty to defend as against the action of the sovereign power, so that it could lay a tax to pay the expenses of the defense. The court says within what limits a particular municipality shall exercise its powers, whether it shall be divided, its boundaries changed, or its territory annexed to another municipality, is for the legislature in the absence of constitutional restrictions to determine. The change in the boundaries of a town or its annexation to another may seriously and vitally affect the interests of its present inhabitants and be repugnant to the feelings and wishes of a large majority, but they cannot use the corporate powers of the town to enable them to oppose the change and thereby impose burdens upon the tax-payer, when the town has no corporate duty imposed or implied by law.

It was likewise held that a town cannot raise money to oppose the division of its territory by the legislature, in Westbrook v. Deering, 68 Me. 231. 37 L. R. A.

Power as against the inhabitants of the town.

In Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699, the court in determining the liability of a town for the debts of another town which had been annexed to it, says, power exists in the legislature not only to fix the boundaries of such a municipality when incorporated but to enlarge or diminish it subsequently, without the consent of the residents by annexation or set-off unless restrained by the constitution, even against the remonstrance of every property holder and voter within the limits of the original municipality. Property set off or annexed may be benefited or burdened by the change and the liability of the residents may be increased or diminished, but the question in every case is entirely within the control of the legislature, and if no provision is made every one must submit to the will of the state as expressed through the legislative department.

In considering the question of the constitutionality of the annexation of a village to a city, the court said, the annexation may increase or it may decrease the taxes of those owning property situated within the limits of the village or city, it may or it may not subject property within such limits to pre-existing indebtedness. In any event these circumstances constitute no legal or constitutional objection to annexation. Objections to, as well as arguments for, annexation based upon such supposed increase or decrease of taxation rest wholly upon grounds of expediency and do not affect the legal or constitutional rights of either municipality or of the residents thereof. Valverde v. Shattuck, 19 Colo. 104.

As against owner of annexed territory.

The effort to restrict the legislative power has been granted on behalf of the owners of property which was taken into the municipality. The ob-the result of such election and certify the same to the secretary of state and to the board of legislation of the city seeking the annexation.

"Sec. 5. That if such election shall have resulted in favor of such annexation, it shall be the duty of the mayor of such city to whose limits are to be so attached such municipality or municipalities, to immediately notify the court of common pleas of the county containing such city of the result of such election, and thereupon such court shall appoint three commissioners, who shall be residents of such county. And such commissioners shall be sworn in by the judge of such court to faithfully, honestly and impartially discharge their duties, and such commissioners' compensation shall be fixed by such court, and the same shall be paid out of the general fund of the treasury of the city making such annexation, upon vouchers to be issued by the mayor of such city.

"Sec. 6. That it shall be the duty of such commissioners to make a full and detailed account of the indebtedness due by each municipality so annexed and of the several school districts affected by such annexation; that they shall also report what number of bonds or other evidences of debt have been issued by each corporation, and of the several school districts. That such commissioners, in connection with the sinking fund trustees of such city of the first grade of the first class, shall arrange the terms and conditions for the final annexation of such municipalities, and report the same to said court. That whenever their report shall have been so made and approved by the court such annexation shall be deemed complete.

"Sec. 7. That if any municipality so annexed shall complain, in writing, that the terms and conditions for such annexation are unjust and unfair in whole or in part towards its interests, such corporation or corporations shall have the same heard by the court appointing such commissioners. That such court shall have the power to modify such report, if in its judgment the conditions and terms are unfair to the interest complaining, but shall not have the right to set aside the annexation of such municipality or municipalities to such city. That neither an appeal nor writ of error shall be allowed to reverse or set aside such final decree of the court.

"Sec. 8. That whenever the terms and conditions of such annexation shall have been completed, the commissioners herein designated shall file a transcript of such terms and conditions with the recorder of such county, and also transmit a certified copy of the same to the secretary of state, and the same shall be by such secretary recorded in his said office. And thereafter such territory and municipalities so annexed shall be governed by the respective boards and officers of such city annexing the same. Upon such annexation, the board of legislation shall by ordinance provide for the division of such annexed municipality or municipalities into wards, and thereafter members of the jection in such cases is not so much against being made a part of the municipality as against bearing the added burden caused thereby. As to many kinds of corporations which are sometimes classed as municipalities, such as counties and townships, there can be little ground for objection because the difference in burden in the different organizations is so slight that it must be practically immaterial in which one property is located. But when the population at one point has become so great as to require special and expensive forms of government, so that it is inequitable to cast the burden of it upon the state, county, or township at large, and it becomes necessary to organize a special government for such center of population, then it becomes very material to the individual where his property is situated.

As stated in a New York case, it is wrong that a few should be taxed for the benefit of the whole, and it is equally wrong that the whole should be taxed for the benefit of the few. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266.

If a reason for erecting city and village governments is to relieve the people at large from the expense of governing dense centers of population, it would seem especially inequitable to include a small parcel of property situated precisely like that for which relief is demanded within the lines devoted to the municipality and thereby add to the burden which it would have to bear in case there was no incorporation its share of the burden taken off from the other property of its class. This inequity has led to a very determined effort to have the courts set the matter right.

Power of court to control legislature.

There is a very great uniformity in the authorities to the effect that the question is one for the 27 L. R. A.

legislature which the courts have no power to control.

The propriety of annexing agricultural lands to a municipality rests entirely within the discretion and under the control of the legislature. Washburn v. Oshkosh, 40 Wis. 453.

The decision of the legislature as to the necessity of bringing property within the limits of the municipality is not subject to review by the courts at the instance of an aggrieved tax-payer. Madry v. Cox, 78 Tex. 538.

The legislature having prescribed a certain limit to which the boundaries of a city may be extended without expressing any qualifications, the right to so extend them results without regard to the use or character of the occupation of the annexed territory. State v. Warahachie, 81 Tex. 628.

In Edmunds v. Gookins, 20 Ind. 477, the court seems to assume the power of the legislature to annex territory in deciding upon the validity of annexation proceedings by a city which had been validated by a legislative act.

Fraud cannot be imputed to the legislature in the passage of an act, so as to overthrow it. Davis v. Point Pleasant, 28 W. Va. 289.

The courts cannot declare an act of the legislature invalid on the sole ground that it is repugnant to natural justice or expediency. People v. Fleming, 10 Colo. 568.

The legislature has power to enlarge the limits of towns and cities and impose taxes for all the purposes of the corporation. The question whether the benefits resulting from the extension authorize the burden of contributing to the payment of existing debt is one for the legislature to determine in annexing new territory. Stoner v. Flournoy, 25 La. Ann. 850.

The question of the annexation of territory to a town is not, one for the courts. Powers v. Wood board of legislation and members of the board of education of a school district affected by such annexation shall be elected in the even and odd numbered wards, respectively, whenever members of said boards for the even and odd numbered wards, respectively, are elected in the city and school district to which such annexation is made; provided, that at the first annual municipal election held after such annexation members for the ward in such annexed territory shall be chosen for one or two years, as the case may require, so that the terms expire whenever terms of existing members in odd and even numbered wards, respectively, expire.

"SEC. 9. That all officers and boards created for the government of the different municipal corporations so annexed to such city existing before such annexation, and of the several school districts in the territory and municipal corporations so annexed shall be abolished whenever such annexation is complete; and the title to all real estate and property of all description heretofore vested in such municipal corporations so annexed, and in the several school districts so annexed, shall be by this act transferred to such annexing city and school district of such city, respectively.

"SEC. 10. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provision of this act are hereby repealed.

"SEC. 11. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

The amendatory act re-enacts the first section, omitting the word "present," and makes no other change in the statute.

The petition avers that the foregoing statutes are unconstitutional, and that the defendant in proceeding to make the annexation is exercising a franchise not conferred on it by law. It is further averred that the proceeding is not in conformity with the statute, in that, at the election held under its provisions, the question of the annexation of all of the villages named was submitted as the only one to be voted upon, when, it is claimed, each village should have been allowed to vote upon the question of its annexation, and a majority of the votes cast by its electors is necessary to authorize its annexation; and furthermore, the election was called and held in each of the villages of Riverside, Clifton, and Linwood, against the protest of their respective municipal authorities. A large majority of the aggregate vote cast was in favor of the annexation of all the villages, and a majority of the vote cast in Cincinnati, and in each of the villages, was in favor of it, except that cast in Clifton, where the majority was against annexation. The petition prays that the defendant be required to show by what authority it is exercising the right claimed, and that it be ousted therefrom.

The defendant pleads the statutes referred to, in justification of its action, alleging that the proceeding had, up to the time of the filing of the petition, has been regular, and in strict accordance with their provisions, and claiming under them the right to complete the annexation, which has so far progressed as to call for the appointment of commissioners as provided in section five of the statute.

County Comrs. & Ohio St. 235; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 95.

The propriety of annexing land to a municipal corporation is a question for the legislature. Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 243.

The expediency of the extension of a city's limits is exclusively for the legislature. Wade v. Richmond, 18 Gratt. 533.

What property should be embraced within the municipality and whether it should be taken for municipal purposes are political questions to be determined by the law-making power and an attempt by the judiciary to revise the legislative act would be a usurpation of power. Norris v. Waco, 57 Tex. 635.

There are a few expressions tending towards an opposite conclusion.

There are limits in the extension of boundaries of municipalities, beyond which the legislature cannot go. Morford v. Unger, 3 Iowa, 82.

In Vestal v. Little Rock, 11 L. R. A. 782, 54 Ark. 281, the court in considering the action of a city in annexing territory consisting of farm and garden property which was not needed for city use, and the annexation of which would subject their owners to the burdens without the benefits of local government, states: "Courts of wisdom and learning have upon the same facts in the protection of private rights set aside the solemn acts of a co-ordinate branch of government;" and continues: "Without committing ourselves to the entire approval of those cases we cannot in the exercise of ordinary appellate jurisdiction ignore the considerations of justice and right that prompted them,"—and it annulled the action of the city, and a few courts have made a distinction between the power to annex territory and that to tax the added land.

Thus it is held that courts will not interfere with the exercise of the power to extend city limits, but they will restrain municipal taxation where practicable in cases in which it is shown that the proprietor of the property taxed cannot be benefited by the proximity of the municipality. Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16 Iowa, 271; Durant v. Kaufman, 34 Iowa, 191; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26 Iowa, 419; Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30 Iowa, 543.
27 L. R. A.

And in Evans v. Council Bluffs, 65 Iowa, 223, it is said cities should not be permitted to retain lands within their limits which are not needed for city purposes and which are not benefited by being within the corporation.

But the majority of the courts do not recognize such a distinction.

The power to determine the proper territory for the municipal taxation is with the legislature. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54; Kountze v. Omaha, 5 Dill. 443.

The courts cannot interfere with the assessments of agricultural lands within a city for municipal purposes. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 633; Hewitt's App. 88 Pa. 55.

The legislature may by adding agricultural lands to a municipality subject them to municipal taxation. Washburn v. Oshkosh, 60 Wis. 453.

In New Orleans v. Michoud, 10 La. Ann. 763, the court says that the remedy for burdensome taxation upon rural property for city purposes rests with the legislature, and not with the courts.

There is no power in the courts to control the taxing power, when it is conferred in good faith to uphold local government and give police regulations to the population, and not merely to embrace taxable property for the revenue purposes in order to lighten the burdens of others. Arbogast v. Louisville, 2 Bush, 27; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 37.

If the act cannot be declared to be unconstitu-

The reply contains allegations showing that the indebtedness of the defendant is something over twenty-six millions of dollars, a large part of which was incurred in the construction of what is known as "the Cincinnati Southern Railroad," and other considerable portions for water-works, city hall, and other purposes purely local, to the creation of which indebtedness the villages sought to be annexed have not consented, or in any way given their approval.

The cause has been submitted upon evidence, and an agreed statement of fact, which show that the annexation proceedings thus far prosecuted, are in substantial conformity with the statute, unless it be in respect to the method of the vote as before stated, which will be more particularly noticed in the opinion. It also appears that improved streets of the several villages extend to their respective corporate limits, and there connect with the improved streets of the defendant, thus forming continuous thoroughfares, on some of which street railroads are constructed and operated to and from the business portions of Cincinnati. It further appears that the defendant is indebted as heretofore stated; and, that for the year 1894 the rate of taxation in Cincinnati is slightly larger than in each of the villages, except Linwood, where the rate is slightly greater than in Cincinnati. Any other facts deemed material in the disposition of the case will be noticed in the opinion.

Messrs. John K. Richards, Atty. Gen., D. Thew Wright, John W. Warrington, and Stanley E. Bowdle, for plaintiff:

tional there is no other ground upon which the collection of a tax upon agricultural land annexed to a city can be interfered with by the courts. Santa Rosa v. Coulter, 58 Cal. 587; Dixon v. Mayes, 72 Cal. 166.

The collection of taxes on agricultural lands cannot be enjoined. Oary v. Pekin, 88 Ill. 154, 30 Am. Rep. 543.

Taxation of agricultural property for city purposes is not unconstitutional. Linton v. Athens, 58 Ga. 553.

The court cannot relieve from the assessment of taxes upon agricultural property in a city. Davis v. Point Pleasant, 39 W. Va. 239.

Rights of land owner.

Consent of the owner of property to be embraced is not necessary to enable the legislature to enlarge the territory of the municipality so as to take in his property. St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507; St. Louis v. Allen, 18 Mo. 412; Walden v. Dudley, 49 Mo. 631; Giboney v. Cape Girardeau, 58 Mo. 141.

The legislature has power to extend the limits of an incorporated town without the consent and against the wishes of the citizens who live on or own lands comprising the property to be annexed. Manly v. Raleigh, 57 N. C. 370.

The legislature may enlarge the boundaries of a municipal corporation without submitting the question to a vote of the people. Smith v. McCarthy, 55 Pa. 359.

The extension of corporate limits is an exercise of governmental power of which the persons newly taken in cannot be heard to complain. They have no voice in the matter, no power to resist, nor is any legal right of theirs infringed thereby. McCallie v. Chattanooga, 3 Head, 317.

A legislature may without the infringement of § 7 L. R. A.

The act must be uniform in operation.

State v. Cincinnati, 20 Ohio St. 18.

The Act of April 18, 1894, did not have uniform operation throughout the state, but was limited in operation to the city of Cincinnati, by virtue of the word "present."

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 25; People v. Burns, 5 Mich. 114.

Mere words will not save an act if its practical operation is confined to a single municipality.

State v. Mitchell, 31 Ohio St. 592; Welker v. Potter, 18 Ohio St. 85; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

As it stood upon the legislative records it was in legal contemplation as though it had not been passed. The attempted amendment of April 24 was consequently ineffectual, as there was nothing to amend. It clearly could not give life to something that had no existence.

Ash v. Ash, 9 Ohio St. 383; Emporia v. Norton, 16 Kan. 236; Stange v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa, 308; Reading v. Savage, 120 Pa. 198; Kimball v. Rosendale, 43 Wis. 407, 24 Am. Rep. 421.

Defendant claims that regard must be given only to the majority of the joint vote of all the municipalities concerned; and that the majority in each separate municipality voting must be disregarded.

Defendant's interpretation leads to absurdity. It cannot be adopted for that reason alone.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 828; Ex parte Walton, 101 U. S. 17; Ch. Div. 746; Potter's Dwar. Stat. cl. 2, p. 188; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 880.

constitutional rights extend the limits of a city to embrace new territory. New Orleans v. Caselar, 27 La. Ann. 156.

Taking property without compensation or due process of law.

Taxing for municipal purposes lands which receive no benefit from the municipal government is a taking of property without compensation. Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 86.

An act embracing farm property without the limits of a town though on its face simply extending the limits of a town and presumptively a legitimate exercise of power for that purpose, would in reality when applied to the facts be nothing more nor less than an authority to the town to tax the land to a certain distance outside its limits, and in effect to take the money of the proprietor for its use without compensation to him.

Where the original limits of a town are not filled out, and it has not in fact extended itself beyond them on either side and upon petition to the town the adjacent vacant land or cultivated farm, not necessary or wanted for streets or houses, is brought within it by an extension of its boundaries, the whole force and effect as well as obvious intent of the act is to subject this exterior land to the taxation of the town without even the pretext of extending the protection or control of the town over them. And the power of local regulation and government would furnish no legitimate or real basis for the act. Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 346.

Something more than benefit is necessary to warrant municipal taxation. There must be both benefit actual or presumed, and a town or city population on or near the land creating a neces-

The interpretation for which defendant contends sets at naught the settled state policy.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 821; Opinion of the Justices, 7 Mass. 524.

The duty conferred on the commissioners is of a legislative or political character; and, as such, not susceptible of delegation to the judiciary.

Powers v. Wood County Comrs. 8 Ohio St. 285; Bristol v. New-Ohester, 8 N. H. 585; Barker Dist. Board of Education v. Valley Dist. Board of Education, 30 W. Va. 438; Re Board of Review, 27 Ohio L. J. 334.

These commissioners who would be strangers in every legal sense to the municipalities, would be empowered to bind persons and property by "terms and conditions;" and to that extent would assume legislative or governmental control over them.

To thus subject municipalities to the control and interference of an authority which they have not constituted has been repeatedly decided to be invalid.

Hessler v. The Drainage Comrs. 58 Ill. 105; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 65, 118 Ind. 449; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 103; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. pp. 209, 235.

The court's action here must have the effect of authorizing a change in the boundaries of an existing government. Such power is legislative and cannot be vested in the judiciary.

Galesburg v. Hawkinton, 75 Ill. 152; State v. Skonsa, 32 Minn. 540; People v. Bennett, 29 Mich. 451, 18 Am. Rep. 107; People v. Carpenter, 24 N. Y. 86; Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. v. Clinton County Comrs. 1 Ohio St. 86.

city, or at least rendering it not unreasonable that the municipal government should extend over it. Courtney v. Louisville, 12 Bush, 420.

The court cannot interfere with the action of the legislature in extending the boundaries of a city, but the authority to tax rural property for the benefit of a city is taking property without compensation and is unconstitutional. Bradshaw v. Omaha, 1 Neb. 18; Oliver v. Omaha, 3 Dill. 368.

The doctrine of those cases was, however, departed from in the subsequent case of Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

In Cheaney v. Hooser, supra, the extension was held to be proper, and in Sharp v. Dunavan, 17 B. Mon. 223, the statements of that case as to the illegality of the extension of boundaries was limited, and it was held that if the included property was near enough to the city to enjoy its substantial benefits, it might be included within the boundaries of the city. The court says the judgment of the legislature "cannot be controlled on the ground of a mere difference of opinion as to the necessity of the town or upon mere conjecture or opinion as to the motives of the extension but only upon the ground of a flagrant violation of the constitutional right to be demonstrated by the extrinsic fact showing the actual condition of the town with respect to the territory, population, and locality and the condition of the added territory with respect to the population and in relation to the existing town.

A bridge although within the limits of a city is not subject to municipal taxation if it receives no benefits from the city government which will justify it. Such taxation will be taking private property for public use without just compensation. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 81 Ky. 189.

27 L. R. A.

The legislature could not, therefore, make these powers valid in the court, by either calling or treating them by a wrong name.

State v. Hipp, 38 Ohio St. 199, 229; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 203, 8 Am. Dec. 52; State v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 109; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 109; Ex parte Shrader, 33 Cal. 279; Houssman v. Montgomery, 58 Mich. 364; People v. Nevada, 6 Cal. 143; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen, 361, 79 Am. Dec. 784; Case of Election of Suprs. 114 Mass. 247, 19 Am. Rep. 841; State v. Noble, 4 L. R. A. 101, 118 Ind. 852; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 169, 26 L. ed. 377; State v. Railway, 43 N. J. L. 388.

As respects farming property, the operation and effect of the act is to authorize the taking of private property without compensation, and is therefore in violation of article 1, section 19, and article 13, section 5, of the Constitution.

Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82; Arbogast v. Louisville, 2 Bush, 275; Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 492; Prince George's County Comrs. v. Bladensburg, 51 Md. 465.

The legislation of Ohio has hitherto so far recognized the autonomous character of municipalities as to require their mutual assent to annexation.

Rev. Stat. §§ 1606-1616; 3 Saylor, Stat. §§ 697-705, pp. 2090, 2091, including 2 Swan & C. Stat. § 15, p. 1496; 36 Ohio Laws, 219; 46 Ohio Laws, 146; Act Feb. 18, 1848; 49 Ohio Laws, 318.

State v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 478, decides that the repealing clause of the old Towns and Cities' Act of May 3, 1852, did not annihilate and recreate the municipal corporations of the

It is the tax and not the boundary which is unconstitutional. Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 492.

But the majority of the courts do not agree with the reasoning of the above cases.

In Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 73, 26 L. ed. 659, plaintiff's farm was annexed to the city of Pittsburgh. When it was taxed for city purposes he alleged that it was a taking of his property without due process of law. The court said: "It is not denied that the legislature could rightfully enlarge the boundary of the city so as to include the defendant's land. If this power were denied, we are unable to see how such denial could be sustained. What portion of a state shall be within the limits of a city and governed by its authorities and its laws has always been considered to be a proper subject of legislation. How thickly or how sparsely the territory must be settled so organized into a city must be one of the matters within the discretion of the legislative body. . . . It may be true that plaintiff does not receive the same amount of benefit from some of these taxes, or from any of them, as do citizens living in the heart of the city. . . . But who can undertake to adjust with precise accuracy the amount which each individual in an organized civil community shall contribute to sustain the organization? These are matters of detail within the legislative discretion and, therefore, of power in the law-making body within whose jurisdiction the parties live. This court cannot say in such cases, however great the hardship or unequal the burden, that the tax collected for such purposes is taking the property of the tax-payer without due process of law."

In State v. Brown, 53 N. J. L. 162, the court in deciding that agricultural land which had been originally embraced within the limits of a town state, but recognized and continued them, leaving their corporate identity unaffected.

See People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 239, 15 Am. Rep. 202; Rosebrough v. Saffin, 10 Ohio, 87; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 562.

There is a completely recognized and preserved principle of local autonomy, demoniated local self government, which has been reserved to the people of those localities.

Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 1-17; 1 Kyd, Corp. pp. 1-12, 28; Ang. & A. Priv. Corp. 11th ed. § 18; 2 Kent, Com. 4th ed. p. 274; Re Flatbush, 60 N. Y. 398.

Mandatory legislation for local objects is not sustainable.

People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 238, 15 Am. Rep. 202. Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 78; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. 10; State v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 873; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 108; Callam v. Saginaw, 50 Mich. 7; Wasson v. Wayne County Comrs. 17 L. R. A. 795, 49 Ohio St. 622; Mills v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 400, 9 Am. Rep. 578; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 42, 80 Am. Dec. 718; People v. Batchelor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 490; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; People v. Shepard, 63 N. Y. 285; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 62; Livingston v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302.

The power to annex includes the power to impose a debt (for local objects, be it remembered), to be discharged by the levy of a tax against taxable inhabitants of a corporation which never assented thereto.

People v. Cauty, 55 Ill. 33.

In Wider v. East St. Louis, 55 Ill. 183, it was held "that the legislature ordinarily has no power to impose a debt or levy a tax upon a municipal corporation without its assent."

Marshall v. Silliman, 61 Ill. 218; Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Sparta, 77 Ill. 505; Barnes v. Lacon, 84 Ill. 461; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 235; Western College of Homeopathic Medicine v. Cleeland, 12 Ohio St. 375; Cincinnati v. Cameron, 33 Ohio St. 336; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 21, 2 Am. Rep. 868; Tolado v. Cone, 41 Ohio St. 180; Robinson v. Greenville, 42 Ohio St. 628, 51 Am. Rep. 857; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 66, 68 a, and cases cited.

This is a special law.

67 Ohio Laws, 141; State v. Cincinnati, 20 Ohio St. 18; State v. Pugh, 43 Ohio St. 118; Springer v. Avondale, 85 Ohio St. 626; State v. Brewster, 39 Ohio St. 658; Costello v. Wyoming, 49 Ohio St. 202; State v. Smith, 48 Ohio St. 311; Carr v. West Carrollton, 8 Ohio C. Ct. Rep. 7.

This law provides that the votes of all the electors of the villages and in Cincinnati shall be cast, not upon any one single question,—not upon any one question in which the voter is distinctly and solely interested; but he is required to vote upon a large number of questions, in many of which he has no interest.

State v. Constantine, 42 Ohio St. 437, 51 Am. Rep. 833.

This law is invalid, because it deprives three villages of the franchise to be a corporation without their assent.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 69, p. 98; could not be exempted from taxation for municipal purposes, says in commenting on the rule that taxation of property which receives no benefit from the expenditure of the money was taking private property for public purposes without compensation, except in a few states "the doctrine thus promulgated has no support in the jurisprudence of this country. . . . In the case of general taxation for governmental purposes, benefit is presumed to accrue to all."

Annexing territory to a municipality and subjecting it to taxation for municipal purposes is not taking property without compensation, but subjecting it to public burdens for the compensation presumed to result from the benefit of the corporation. Dodson v. Fort Smith, 38 Ark. 517.

The annexation of territory to a municipal corporation is not a taking of property for public use without compensation, nor a taking of property without due process of law. Williams v. Nashville, 60 Tenn. 487.

Mere extension of town limits is not a taking of property without due process of law. Martin v. Dix, 53 Miss. 53, 24 Am. Rep. 661.

An act extending the limits of a municipality does not take private property without just compensation. That provision is a limitation upon the power of eminent domain, and has no relation whatever to the taxing power. Groff v. Frederick City, 44 Md. 67; Martin v. Dix, supra.

A change of status of a tract of land from a farm to city lots by the exercise of a power granted to cities to extend their limits, is not a taking of property without due process of law. Callen v. Junction City, 7 L. R. A. 733, 43 Kan. 627.

The provisions against taking property without compensation has reference only to the taking of specific pieces of property of an individual. Loganport v. Seybold, 59 Ind. 225.

27 L. R. A.

Annexation by special law.

Where the constitution requires the regulation of municipalities by general laws, the legislature cannot destroy a municipal corporation by an act amending the charter of another municipality to which the former is to be annexed, although the act is valid so far as it relates to the latter municipality alone. Re Extension of Boundaries of Denver, 18 Colo. 288.

Under a constitutional provision that corporations shall be created by general laws but continuing those already existing under special charters, with power in the legislature to modify them, they may be amended by special laws so as to enlarge their boundaries. Wiley v. Bluffton, 111 Ind. 152.

A constitutional provision that no corporation shall be created or its powers increased or diminished by special law does not apply to municipal corporations. Williams v. Nashville, 60 Tenn. 487.

The amendment of a city charter so as to permit it to annex territory does not require a general law. Longworth v. Evansville, 38 Ind. 322.

In Callen v. Junction City, 7 L. R. A. 733, 43 Kan. 627, it is said the particular necessity of each city of the second class are such that, coupled with our constitutional provisions, the only manner in which their corporate limits can be extended is by a general law authorizing the extension on such terms and conditions as will not result in the injury of owners of adjacent property, or will not empower a city government to arbitrarily include agricultural lands within the corporate limits.

A constitutional provision against special legislation will prevent the legislature from extending the limits of a city by special act. Wyandotte v. Wood, 5 Kan. 603.

And the authority of that case was recognized in Gray v. Crockett, 80 Kan. 123, a case in which it

United States v. Quincy, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. ed. 403; Goodale v. Kennell, 27 Ohio St. 426, 22 Am. Rep. 321.

This law is invalid, for it seeks to confer upon the court of common pleas powers not judicial in their nature.

Marbury v. Madison, 5 U. S. 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Hayburn's Case, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 409, 1 L. ed. 486; United States v. Ferreira, 54 U. S. 13 How. 40, 14 L. ed. 42; Ex parte Logan Branch at Logan of State Bank of Ohio, 1 Ohio St. 433; Auditor of State v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 Kan. 500, 7 Am. Rep. 575; Ex parte Griffiths, 8 L. R. A. 398, 118 Ind. 83; State v. Judges of Common Pleas Ct. 21 Ohio St. 2.

The power to change the territorial limits of a municipal corporation is legislative, not judicial, and cannot be exercised by courts.

Willett v. Bellville, 11 Lea, 1; State v. Armstrong, 3 Sneed, 684; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 41, 138, 185; Galesburg v. Hawkinson, 75 Ill. 152; People v. Nevada, 6 Cal. 143; People v. Riverside, 70 Cal. 461; People v. Bennett, 29 Mich. 457, 18 Am. Rep. 107; Mewisether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197.

Messrs. Frederick Hertenstein and Frank F. Dinamore, for defendant:

The validity of classification by the legislature has been repeatedly recognized and sustained by this court.

If just and reasonable, and in no manner arbitrary, classification is proper.

Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476, 52 Am. Rep. 90; Costello v. Wyoming, 49 Ohio St. 202.

In the present case the plaintiff cannot avail itself of a privilege which the court only can claim.

State v. Gaskay, 5 Ohio, 14; State v. Judges of Common Pleas Ct. 21 Ohio St. 1; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 24.

All corporations are organized and sustained by general laws, and the legislature, by a repealing act, may take the life of every corporation in this state.

Metcalf v. State, 49 Ohio St. 586.

If this principle be followed to its legitimate conclusion, all municipalities are under the absolute control of the legislature.

The wisdom of the legislature is supreme. It is the sole judge of the necessity of legislation, and a court should not assume the responsibility of deciding a question which the people have entrusted to their representatives.

Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 542; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102; Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607; Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. v. Clinton County Comrs. 1 Ohio St. 77; State v. McCann, 21 Ohio St. 198; State v. Dudley, 1 Ohio St. 437; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 578; Hill v. Higdon, 5 Ohio St. 249, 67 Am. Dec. 289.

Municipal corporations are created by the authority of the legislature, and derive all their powers from the source of their creation.

The legislature, at any time, within its own discretion, unless restrained by constitutional provisions, may enlarge or diminish the powers of a municipal corporation; may attach to or take from its corporate limits; may consolidate or annex it to another, and indeed may was attempted to abridge the limits of a city by special act.

In Ohio the territory cannot be added by special act. State v. Cincinnati, 20 Ohio St. 18.

The fact that general provisions have been made for the enlargement of municipalities and the constitution provides that the legislature shall have no power to suspend any general law for the benefit of any individual will not prevent the legislature from enlarging the boundaries of a municipality by special law. Williams v. Nashville, 89 Tenn. 487.

In Missouri the annexation may be made by general law without the necessity of the notice required by the constitution to be given in case of the enactment of special laws. Copeland v. St. Joseph (Mo.), Jan. 21, 1895.

Interference with election districts.

In Michigan annexation cannot interfere with boundaries of representative districts. People v. Holihan, 29 Mich. 116. But the legislature may change representative districts after an enumeration as provided by the constitution. People v. Bradley, 36 Mich. 447.

The consolidation of two cities will not contravene the constitutional provisions against the change of representative districts, if the statute expressly provides that, notwithstanding the change, such districts shall remain as before. Smith v. Saginaw, 81 Mich. 123.

In Massachusetts the legislature has constitutional power to change county or town lines at will unless they interfere with the provisions of the constitution as to the formation of districts for the election of senators and representatives. Opinion of the Justices, 6 Cush. 580.

The Massachusetts Act of 1854 for the annexation of Charlestown to Boston was held unconstitutional. 27 L. R. A.

tional for interfering with the constitutional rights of the inhabitants to elect representatives and senators in the general court. Warren v. Charlestown, 2 Gray, 104.

Other constitutional requirements.

The right to annex may be made so dependent on the duty to exempt agricultural lands from taxation that if the exemption is void the whole act may be void. Copeland v. St. Joseph (Mo.), Jan. 21, 1895.

That the annexed territory is not given representation on the board of aldermen is not fatal to its validity. Valverde v. Shattuck, 19 Colo. 104.

A constitutional provision prohibiting the transferring of territory from one county to another without consent of the parties residing in the territory so transferred, does not prevent the annexation of a portion of the territory of a county, or to a city, although they constitute separate political divisions. Daly v. Morgan, 1 L. R. A. 757, 60 Md. 460.

A constitutional provision against the making of a city unless the territory contains a certain number of inhabitants does not apply to the annexation of such territory to a city already existing. Chandler v. Boston, 112 Mass. 204. In that case the court says the control of the general court over the territorial division of the state into cities, towns, and districts unless controlled by some specific constitutional limitation must necessarily be supreme. If injuriously affected by legislative action upon these political relations, within constitutional limits, the court can afford no remedy.

The consolidation of two or more municipal corporations all of which are indebted is not prohibited by constitutional prohibition that no municipality shall become indebted to more than a certain amount, although the indebtedness of abolish or destroy its corporate character entirely.

Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 639; Merivether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 169; People v. Morris, 18 Wend. 325; Girard v. Philadelphia, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 58; Cooley, Const. Lim. 192; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 54, 67; Chandler v. Boston, 112 Mass. 204; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 51 U. S. 10 How. 511, 18 L. ed. 518; Layton v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 515; North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 183, 71 Am. Dec. 580; Terrett v. Taylor, 18 U. S. 9 Cranch, 43, 8 L. ed. 650; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. ed. 620; Jefferson City Gas-Light Co. v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644, 24 L. ed. 521; Laird v. De Soto, 22 Fed. Rep. 421; Thompson v. Abbott, 61 Mo. 176; St. Louis v. Allen, 18 Mo. 412; Berlin v. Gorham, 84 N. H. 266; People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 877; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 582; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166, 26 L. ed. 1015; Demarest v. New York, 74 N. Y. 161; Piqua Branch of State Bank of Ohio v. Knoop, 57 U. S. 16 How. 369, 14 L. ed. 977; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 322; 21 L. ed. 597; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 28 L. ed. 440; Broughton v. Pensacola, 98 U. S. 266, 28 L. ed. 896; United States v. Port of Mobile, 12 Fed. Rep. 768; Knight v. Ashland, 61 Wis. 238; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 90; Richland County v. Lawrence County, 12 Ill. 1.

It is not necessary that the legislature should first obtain the consent of the persons to be annexed to a city before passing the law of annexation.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 185; 1 Beach, Mun. Corp. chap. 12; Laramie County Comrs. v. Albany County Comrs. 92 U. S. 807, 23 L. ed. 552; North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 142, 71 Am. Dec. 580; Windham v. Portland, 4 Mass. 389; Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 346; Ham v. Sawyer, 38 Me. 87; Kelly v. Meeks, 87 Mo. 896; St. Louis v. Allen, 18 Mo. 400; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 20, 67 Am. Dec. 748; Berlin v. Gorham, 84 N. H. 266; Gorham v. Springfield, 21 Me. 58; Daly v. Morgan, 1 L. R. A. 757, 69 Md. 460; Valverde v. Shattuck, 19 Colo. 104; Powers v. Wood County Comrs. 8 Ohio St. 285; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96.

The necessity for such annexation is a question of public policy to be decided by the legislature, or by such tribunal as it may provide.

Berlin v. Gorham, 84 N. H. 275; St. Louis v. Allen, 18 Mo. 412; Stils v. Indianapolis, 55 Ind. 515; People v. Carpenter, 24 N. Y. 86; Kelly v. Meeks, supra; Hurka v. Kansas City, 46 Kan. 788; Taylor v. Fort Wayne, 47 Ind. 274; Devore's App. 56 Pa. 163; Smith v. Saginaw, 81 Mich. 123; Girard v. Philadelphia, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 58.

The city of Cincinnati is the taxing district, and this may be enlarged by the legislature. If this be done, whatever property is thus brought within the city of Cincinnati must contribute to the public support, and must share in the public benefit because within the district.

some of them exceeds the limit and the result may be that the indebtedness of the new corporation may exceed the limit. True v. Davis, 6 L. R. A. 266, 138 Ill. 322.

Whether the land is used for one purpose or another is wholly immaterial. The law has fixed a more certain and less fluctuating test for determining so important a right as that of local or municipal taxation. Maltus v. Shields, 2 Mer. (Ky.) 553.

Territory of a city may be enlarged under a statute entitled "to define" the boundaries of the city. People v. Bradley, 36 Mich. 447.

Under the Missouri constitution territory cannot be cut off from one county for annexation to another if the effect will be to leave the former with less than 500 square miles of territory. Woods v. Henry, 55 Mo. 560.

The question of the constitutionality of the act cannot be raised by quo warranto proceedings. People v. Whitcomb, 55 Ill. 172.

Held valid on facts.

There are cases even in states which hold that the power of the legislature is not unlimited which have held the annexation to have been proper upon the facts. Ford v. North Des Moines, 80 Iowa, 636; Beattyville Trustees v. Daniel, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 798; Elkton Trustees v. Gill, 94 Ky. 128; Brown v. Denver, 3 Colo. 169; Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spearman, 12 Iowa, 118; and similar rulings have been made with reference to taxation. Mendenhall v. Burton, 42 Kan. 570; Butler v. Muscatine, 11 Iowa, 433; Brooks v. Polk County, 52 Iowa, 460.

When the proprietors of undedicated town property being legally within the town limits hold such close proximity to the settled and improved portion of the town that the corporate authorities cannot open and improve its streets and alleys and extend to the inhabitants thereof its usual police regulations and advantages without incidentally benefiting such proprietors in the personal privileges and accommodations or in the enhancement of their property, then the power to tax the same arises. Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 404; Davis v. Dubuque, 20 Iowa, 458; O'Hare v. Dubuque, 22 Iowa, 144.

Limitation on legislative power.

There are some judges who have refused to subscribe to the doctrine of the unlimited power of the legislature when uncontrolled by constitutional provisions. It has been held that the legislature cannot authorize a municipality to tax land lying beyond its corporate limits. Wells v. Weston, 22 Mo. 384.

The strongest presentation of this view is to be found in a dissenting opinion by Agnew, Ch. J., in Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 180, 27 Am. Rep. 689, which so fully discusses the question as to justify extended extracts from the opinion. The judge said: "If the legislature can, by a mere extension of boundary, authorize the city to tax farm lands for purely city purposes, it might, without extension, direct all farms within given lines, outside of the city, to pay these city taxes. Thus, when we get rid of that confusion of thought which confounds extension of boundary and power of taxation, we perceive that taxes laid on mere farm lands to pay city levies applicable only to the built-up or true city is nothing more than an order to farmers to pay for the benefit of the city residents; it is taking the money of A. to pay for improvements made for the use of B. This is palpably and flagrantly unjust, and, therefore, against common right. If the legislature itself cannot compel farmers to pay city taxes for purely local purposes in which they have no share, it is clear it cannot authorize the city to do indirectly what it cannot do

Powers v. Wood County Comrs. and Blanchard v. Bissell, supra.

The power of the legislature to authorize the annexation of farm lands is ample.

Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 830; Conington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 491; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa, 82; Butler v. Muscatine, 11 Iowa, 448; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 86; Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 404; Langworthy v. Dubuque, 16 Iowa, 271; Durant v. Kauffman, 84 Iowa, 194; Giboney v. Cape Girardeau, 58 Mo. 141; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 507; St. Louis v. Allen, 18 Mo. 400; State v. Reynolds, 61 Mo. 208; Linton v. Athens, 58 Ga. 598; Martin v. Dir, 52 Miss. 58; Municipality No. 3 of New Orleans v. Michoud, 6 La. Ann. 605; Washburn v. Oshkosh, 60 Wis. 453; Madry v. Coz, 73 Tex. 588; Cary v. Pekin, 88 Ill. 154, 30 Am. Rep. 543; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 794; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 659; 85 Pa. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 688; Norris v. Waco, 57 Tex. 685.

directly. An order, with or without the extension of boundary, upon a certain class to pay taxes for local benefits conferred on others is wholly different from a power to lay a general tax for the support of government. The latter is a power to which every citizen of a state submits himself in consideration of the general benefits derived from government. But as to the former . . . the object is to make the owners of farms divide the expense of supporting municipal government with those who need it; . . . the true city is the built-up part, while the levy of taxes on farms is to confiscate property outside for the benefit of those within the true city."

"The power of the legislature is clear to divide the state, for convenient local government, into counties, townships, cities, boroughs, etc., conferring on each an appropriate autonomy. But in doing this the powers conferred must be adapted to the ends to be accomplished by each. A sound and large discretion is necessarily exercised in this adaptation of powers. But it is equally clear that the powers conferred must have a reasonable appropriateness to the end proposed. Such an exercise of power only can fairly comport with the true and acknowledged principles of our American governments, which are well founded on the rights of the people, and for their 'peace, safety, and happiness.'"

And he quotes from Calder v. Bull, 31 U. S. 8 Dall. 383, 1 L. ed. 648: "The purposes for which men enter into society will determine the nature and terms of the social compact, and as they are the foundation of the legislative power, they will decide what are the proper objects of it. The nature and ends of legislative power will limit the exercise of it. . . . Therefore, while we concede the wide range to be given to legislative discretion in adapting the means to the end, that is, to the purposes of local government, there is a limit beyond which the legislative power cannot sacrifice the sacred right of private property. This limit is reached when it palpably and plainly sacrifices this right, which the people themselves have jealously guarded against transgression in their fundamental law. There must be, therefore, a reasonable appropriateness in the means employed to execute the legislative purpose. The taxing power conferred on the city, therefore, cannot extend to such a case as this, where a ruinous burden is laid on land wholly rural and outside of the city proper, for purely local and city objects, in which . . . the owner has no interest. This distinction between

Williams, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute relied on by the defendant as authority for the annexation it is attempting to accomplish, is assailed on various grounds, one of which is, that it is in conflict with section 1 of article 18 of the Constitution, which prohibits the conferring of corporate power by special legislation.

As this objection is predicated largely, if not entirely, upon the first section of the original act, and seems to rest upon the word "present," therein contained, which was eliminated by the amendment adopted before any steps toward the annexation were taken, it is proper to consider the effect of that amendment. We understand the plaintiff's counsel to contend, that the first section rendered the whole statute obnoxious to the constitutional provision referred to, and, that it could not, therefore, be made valid by amendment, though the unconstitutional feature be thereby local taxation for purely local purposes, and general taxation by the state, in which all are interested, cannot be overlooked or thrust aside. . . .

"In discussing this question, the advocates of unlimited power ignore the distinction so palpable between the general power of taxation for the benefit of the whole state, though laid in districts, and the imposition of local burdens in return for specific benefits. As to the former all men participate more or less in the general advantages of government; but there can be no such postulate for the latter where it is palpably clear the local burden is imposed without just cause and is plainly for the benefit of others. And a court must regard a substantial return not a merely speculative or shadowy benefit, which amounts to no more than a pretext. . . . If the rights of property can be taken or taxed away, without a justifiable cause to bring the legislative act within the just powers of government it is confiscation, not legal contribution."

Closely in line with that reasoning is DENVER v. COULEHAN, post, 751. The latter case is supported in other jurisdictions.

Thus under a grant of power to county boards to change boundaries of towns, a change cannot be made so as to include two detached tracts of territory. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 38 Am. Rep. 840.

So the legislature cannot annex non-contiguous territory. Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 218.

In Hurla v. Kansas City, 46 Kan. 738, the court in considering the regularity of the action of a city in enlarging its boundaries under authority of a statute says: "We doubt, under the power delegated in this section, if the city council is authorized to leave out or disregard small tracts adjoining the city limits and pass over them and attempt to take within the city a detached tract not adjoining its boundaries."

Making special taxing district.

The object of raising funds for special purposes may be accomplished without annexing the territory to the town for all purposes. In a recent case it was held that the legislature may lawfully erect territory contiguous to a town and the town into a district for the purpose of enabling it to vote aid to an internal improvement and raise the money by taxation on the property in the district. Henderson v. Jackson County, 12 Fed. Rep. 676.

H. P. F.

removed. Assuming the premises to be sound, the conclusion, we think, does not follow.

"Where one or more sections of a statute are amended by a new act, and the amendatory act contains the entire section or sections amended, and repeals the section or sections so amended, the section or sections as amended must be construed as though introduced into the place of the repealed section or sections in the original act, and, therefore, in view of the provisions of the original act as it stands after the amendatory sections, are so introduced."

McKibben v. Lester, 9 Ohio St. 627.

And, it may be added, the other sections are to be interpreted in connection with, and in view of, the amended section or sections, and, in its application to cases arising after the amendment has been made, the whole statute must have the same operation and effect as if it then had been re-enacted, in terms. Hence, an unconstitutional statute may be amended into a constitutional one, so far as its future operation is concerned, by removing its objectionable provisions, or supplying others to conform it to the requirements of the constitution. It is, therefore, unnecessary, in passing upon the constitutionality of this statute, to consider the first section before it was amended.

1. This court decided, in State v. Cincinnati, 20 Ohio St. 18, that the extension by a municipality of its corporate jurisdiction, by the enlargement of its territorial boundaries, is the exercise of a corporate power which cannot be conferred by special act; so that, the question here is whether the statute under consideration, in its amended form, is an act of that nature. The first section provides: "That any city of the first grade of the first class shall have the power to annex to its corporate limits any contiguous municipal corporation or corporations of other grades or classes situate in the county containing such city of the first grade of the first class, upon compliance with the terms and conditions hereafter recited." The classification of municipal corporations, adopted by the codification of 1880, has been continued in force. By it, such corporations are divided into cities, villages, and hamlets; and cities into two classes, first, and second, and each class into grades; those of the first class into three grades, with provision for a fourth, and those of the second class into four grades. At no time since the adoption of that classification has there been more than one city belonging to either grade of the first class; Cincinnati being the only city of the first grade, Cleveland the only city of the second and Toledo the only one of the third grade of that class; and, while other cities might have come, or may hereafter come into one or the other of those grades, no doubt one purpose of the classification, if indeed that was not its only purpose, was to provide a plan by which legislation applicable alone to each of those cities might be enacted without overstepping the limitations of the constitution. The validity of legislation of that class was early called in question, but its constitutionality has been repeatedly maintained. It is said, in State v. Brewster, 39 Ohio St. 653: "The objection that the classification was illusory was conceded to be forcible, but did not prevail." In view of the volume to which such legislation has grown, and is likely to further grow in the future, it is still urged that a better, as well as a sounder rule would have been established, if the objection had prevailed. But whatever the individual views of judges on that subject may now be, the validity of legislation of that kind has been so long recognized, and it enters so largely into the government of the cities of this state, that the evil consequences to be apprehended from overturning the established rule would greatly exceed any likely to result from adhering to it. At all events, as has been declared more than once by this court, the rule has become so firmly established that it is no longer open to controversy. State v. Pugh, 43 Ohio St. 98; State v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 98; State v. Hudson, Id. 187; State v. Wall, 47 Ohio St. 499; State v. Smith, 48 Ohio St. 211.

The question is always open, however, whether a particular statute is within the rule; and it is held not to be a valid objection "against legislation, general in form, concerning cities of a designated class and grade, that but one city in the state is within the particular classification at the time of its enactment;" nor, "that the belief or intent of the individual members of the general assembly who voted for the act was that it should apply only to a particular city." State v. Pugh, supra. Nor is the power of classification confined to that based upon population, or the division of municipalities into classes or grades according to the number of their inhabitants; and while it is difficult, if not impossible, to accurately define the power by any general rule, it is settled that proper classification may be based upon the peculiar situation of municipalities, their conditions, internal and surrounding, which render different legislation with respect to them necessary, or especially appropriate. Bronson v. Oberlin, 41 Ohio St. 476; Costello v. Wyoming, 49 Ohio St. 302. And, whatever the plan or basis of classification, the principle upon which the validity of legislation with respect to a particular class depends, is, that other municipalities may attain to the same class, and become subject to, and avail themselves of, the benefits of the act; if that may be done, the statute is a law of a general nature, and not invalid, though it confer corporate power. State v. Pugh, and State v. Hawkins, supra.

Tested by that principle, the statute under which the annexation proceeding here involved was instituted, is not a special act. It is continuing in its operation, and adapted to future proceedings of the same kind, as well as to the present one. And, though the defendant is now the only city of the first grade of the first class in the state, every city hereafter coming into that grade and class may, under the same circumstances, without further legislation, avail themselves of the provisions of the act, and exercise the power of annexation in the manner and upon the conditions prescribed in the act. Under existing legislation, every such city will be provided with the same officers and governmental machinery as the defendant, and be subject to the same general laws that are applicable to the defendant; and the like result will ensue with regard to contiguous municipalities of other grades; those contiguous to future cities of the first grade of the first class, will, without further legislation, be under the same general laws that those now contiguous to existing cities of that grade and class are, and have the same form of government.

2. The act being of a general nature, is it in conflict with section 26 of article 2 of the Constitution, which requires that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state? We think it is not. In order that a law may have such operation, it is not necessary that there be in every part of the state persons or objects upon which it can operate, nor that many persons or objects be within the scope of its operation; it is sufficient if the law operate uniformly upon all persons or objects, or classes of either, in the same situation and condition, and all that may come within the relation and circumstances for which it provides; and it is clear the statute in question has such operation, since all cities of the class and grade of the defendant, and all that may hereafter attain to that grade and class, may avail themselves of the provisions of this statute, and annex contiguous municipalities of other grades, upon the same conditions and terms under which the defendant is authorized to make such annexation, and by the same mode of procedure. McGill v. State, 34 Ohio St. 228; Senor v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 661.

3. It is further claimed that the statute is repugnant to those sections of the judicial article of the constitution (sections 1 and 4 of article 4), which declare that the judicial power of the state shall be vested in certain courts, among them the courts of common pleas, and that "the jurisdiction of the courts of common pleas and of the judges thereof shall be fixed by law." The particular provisions of the statute pointed out as being so repugnant, are those contained in sections 5, 6, and 7, which confer authority on the court of common pleas to appoint three commissioners, fix their compensation, and approve or modify their report. These commissioners are required to make a detailed account of the indebtedness of each municipality included in the annexation, and of the school districts affected by it, and arrange the terms and conditions of the annexation, and make report to the court, which may approve it as made, or modify it, and then approve it. When the report is approved, the annexation, it is declared, shall be deemed complete, and the action of the court shall be final. The powers to be exercised under these provisions of the statute, it is said, are not of a judicial nature, and cannot, therefore, be conferred on the court; and, as the annexation cannot be consummated without their exercise, the whole statute, it is contended, becomes inoperative. There appears to be no constitutional obstacle in the way of investing a court or judge with such powers. Nor is there any valid objection to their due execution, if the court or judge chooses to perform them, for third persons cannot complain on the ground that their performance could not have been enforced. State v. Gazlay, 5 Ohio, 14; State v. Judges of Common Pleas Ct. 21 Ohio St. 1; Walker v. Cincinnati, 1d 14, 8 Am. Rep. 24. In the two cases in 21 Ohio St., above cited, powers analogous to those pointed out as objectionable in this statute were conferred on the judges instead of the courts; and in that respect the cases are distinguishable from this one; but the distinction is not important. In the case of the State v. Gazlay, the statute, as appears from the report, authorized the court to assess a tax upon lawyers, which, while in no sense judicial action, is something more than the appointment of a ministerial or administrative board or officer; and this court upheld the law, and enforced the tax. All such powers, when the court is directed to execute them, are necessarily to be performed by the judge, for they can be in no other way; and hence, it can make no substantial difference whether the statute confers them in terms on the court, or on the judge of the court. It will be found that in many instances, in providing measures of importance in the municipal government of the defendant, and other cities, and in the conduct of public affairs generally, the legislature has imposed upon the court, eo nomine, duties not dissimilar to those the court is required to perform by the statute in question. Thus, it is required to fix the number of justices of the peace in new townships (Rev. Stat. § 566); to approve the report and fix the compensation of commissioners appointed to establish the seat of justice of new counties, and to appoint a director to purchase land and lay the same into lots, and alleys, in such county seat; and prescribe regulations for the action of the director in so doing, and in the disposition of the lots (sections 882-887); to appoint persons to examine the reports of county commissioners, and persons to examine the county treasury (sections 917, 1181); to appoint city hall trustees (section 2559, a, 1); a board of tax commissioners (section 2690, a); trustees of the sinking fund (section 2715); directors of certain universities (section 4098); trustees of children's homes (sections 7913-7937); and to grant licenses to ferries and auctioneers (sections 4222-4225), (4256-4259); and perform many other similar duties. Other statutes confer like powers upon judges. And in whichever form the power has been given, the judges, so far as we are aware, have conformed to the legislative will, whether they could have been compelled to do so or not; and many important public results have been, and are being accomplished, in consequence. The legislature has, no doubt, empowered the courts and judges to perform these acts, and others of like nature, because in that way the best public agencies necessary in carrying the legislation into effect, are most likely to be obtained; and we are not convinced, either that the legislative judgment in that regard is at fault, or, that the legislative purpose must fall; at least, so long as the courts and judges charged with the performance of the act interpose no objection. In regard to the power to be exercised by the court of common pleas in approving or modifying the report of the commissioners appointed to adjust the terms of annexation, and the dangers suggested, of impairing the rights of creditors of either of the municipalities, or other private rights, it is sufficient to say, the case has not yet reached that stage where any actual violation of those rights has occurred, or any probable violation of them is apparent. For aught that can be now known, the terms of annexation may be adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned; and if the rights of creditors, and others be violated, the individuals affected must seek the needed redress.

27 L. R. A.

4. Another objection made to this statute is, that the object sought to be accomplished by it, in the mode provided, is beyond the range of legislative authority, because it authorizes annexation, and consequently taxation, without the consent of those who are affected by it. The proposition of counsel, as stated in the brief, is: "If annexation of one municipal corporation to another be so authorized as to vest in the agencies empowered to effect the union final authority to require substantial taxes for objects accomplished, and purely local to the annexing corporation, to be imposed upon the taxable inhabitants of the municipality proposed to be annexed, then the exercise of power to annex must be founded in mutual consent."

That the enlargement of the territorial boundaries of municipal corporations by annexation, and the consequent extension of their corporate jurisdiction, including that of levying taxes, are legitimate subjects of legislation, must be admitted; and hence, the extent to which such legislation shall be enacted, both with respect to the conditions and circumstances under which the annexation may be had, and the manner in which it may be made, rests wholly in the discretion of the general assembly, except in so far as limitations upon its power are contained in the constitution. Accordingly, legislation has been sustained, which authorized the annexation of territory, without the consent of its inhabitants, to a municipal corporation having a large unprovided-for indebtedness, for the payment of which the property included within the territory annexed became subject to taxation. Powers v. Wood County Comrs. 8 Ohio St. 285; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96. In both of these cases it was held that the annexation might be made without the consent, and even against the remonstrance of a majority of the persons residing on the annexed territory, that the lands thus annexed were liable to local taxation for the payment of the pre-existing indebtedness of the municipality, and that the statute authorizing such annexation was constitutional; the court saying in the first of the cases that there is no constitutional provision on the subject, and that, "It would require a very artificial and unsound mode of reasoning to hold that territory could not be annexed to a town which owed debts, until the owners of such territory were paid a compensation in money for a proportional part of such debt, on the ground that the property annexed was condemned for public use;" and further, that it is not "to be presumed that a municipal corporation has contracted a debt without being correspondingly benefited." And in Metcalf v. State, 49 Ohio St. 586, a statute was held valid which, in turns, detached from a city, without its consent, territory included in its corporate limits, and attached to it another taxing jurisdiction. The principle established by these cases must control the decision of this one, so far as the question now under consideration is concerned, unless, as counsel for the plaintiff contend, the principle is inapplicable on account of the nature of the indebtedness of the defendant, or because the territory proposed to be annexed is already embraced in organized municipalities.

The indebtedness of the defendant, which, it is claimed distinguishes this case from those above referred to, is that incurred for what is known as "the Cincinnati Southern Railroad," for waterworks, city hall, and some other local improvements aggregating many millions of dollars. It does not appear what was the nature or amount of the indebtedness of the respective municipalities involved in the cases of Powers v. Wood County Comrs., or Blanchard v. Bissell; and it should be presumed, counsel claim, that it was created for the necessary or usual governmental purposes, and not for local improvements. Allowing the presumption, it is not perceived how the amount or nature of the municipal indebtedness can affect the right of annexation, if it be otherwise legal; for the power to bring into a municipal corporation, by annexation, property not theretofore subject to taxation for municipal purposes, and lay taxes upon it to raise funds for the payment of any previously existing municipal debt, necessarily includes the power to do so for the payment of every such debt lawfully incurred. Persons thus brought into the annexing corporation, and their property, like all of its other inhabitants and their property, receive and enjoy the benefits of all local improvements, and should share the burdens existing when the enjoyment commences; and, in like manner, the inhabitants of the annexing corporation enjoy the benefits and share the burdens arising from the local improvements of the municipalities annexed. If a valid objection to the annexation could be predicated upon the nature of the indebtedness for the payment of which the property included in the annexation may be taxed without the consent of its owners, the reason would seem to be stronger for allowing it where the debt was incurred for purely governmental purposes; for the benefits derived therefrom are not continuing, nor the results tangible, like those arising from permanent public improvements, but may have entirely ceased, and so be no longer capable of enjoyment by the persons included in the annexation, except what may be attributed to good municipal government resulting from the expenditure. But the power of taxation does not rest upon the consent of the taxed, except as that consent is implied or shown in the enactment of laws by the representatives of the people, or is made requisite by legislation; and, therefore, taxes may be imposed, or authorized by the legislative body, within its discretion, for all public purposes, so long as the fundamental law is not violated. We cannot think that, because the annexation authorized by the statute may result in the taxation of property without the owner's consent, for the payment of the lawful indebtedness of the annexing corporation, the passage of the act was a usurpation of legislative power. If either of the municipalities sought to be annexed should be the owner of private property which may be taxed, it stands on the same footing as other owners of private property; its rights can be no greater than theirs, and hence, there can be no more necessity for its consent, than for theirs; and property held by it for public purposes will continue to be held for such purposes, after the annexation is completed, until other lawful disposition is made of it. Nor do we think the general assembly exceeded its legislative power in authorizing the annexation of municipalities of a lower grade to one of a higher grade. Grant its powers to annex, or provide for annexing to a city or village, adjacent territory against the will of its owners and occupants, and there does not appear to be any satisfactory reason for denying the power where the territory is coextensive with the boundaries of another municipal corporation, especially when there is no such limitation in the constitution.

It is maintained by very high authority that it is clearly within the legislative discretion to extend or restrict the boundaries of municipal corporations, "or consolidate two or more into one." Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, 6th ed. 228; and it is declared by Mr. Justice Clifford, in Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 515-524, 25 L. ed. 699-701, to be the constant practice for legislative bodies to divide or consolidate municipal corporations, and that such action is often necessary for the public interests and convenience. And in Merivether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472-511, 26 L. ed. 197-204, it is said by Mr. Justice Field: "Municipal corporations are mere instrumentalities of the state for the more convenient administration of local government. Their powers are such as the legislature may confer, and these may be enlarged, abridged, or entirely withdrawn at its pleasure. This is common learning, found in all adjudications on the subject of municipal bodies and repeated by text-writers. There is no contract between the state and the public that the charter of a city shall not be at all times subject to legislative control. . . . There is no such thing as a vested right held by any individual in the grant of legislative power to them." Many other authorities, much to the same effect, are cited in the brief of counsel for the defendant which we deem it unnecessary to notice further. We have been referred to none maintaining the contrary doctrine, and have found none. In the light of these authorities, we would be unwarranted in holding that the legislature transcended its powers in passing the act in question; and, observing in this case the well-established rule that the courts should not declare a statute unconstitutional unless convinced that it is clearly so, we hold the statute in all respects constitutional and valid.

37 L. R. A.

5. The remaining question is whether the statute has thus far been complied with. The plaintiff claims it has not been in the mode of submitting the question of the annexation at the election held under the statute; that the question of the annexation of all the villages sought to be annexed was the only one submitted, so that the electors of each village was denied the right to vote on the question of its annexation, and could only vote for or against the annexation of all. This seems to be in strict conformity with the statute. The second section provides that the city desiring to annex any contiguous municipal corporation or corporations shall pass an ordinance declaring such intention, and describing the municipal corporation or corporations it desires to have annexed; and section three provides that when the city desiring the annexation determines in favor of the same, its mayor, and the mayors of the different municipal corporations sought to be annexed shall each issue a proclamation, notifying the qualified electors of their respective municipalities, of the time and place of holding an election "to determine whether such municipalities shall be annexed." There is but one question to be determined, and that is whether all the municipalities sought to be annexed, if more than one, shall be annexed; and in the determination of that question the electors of all such municipalities, and of the city desiring the annexation, are equally interested. The statute further provides that the annexation shall be deemed to have carried, if a majority of the votes "cast upon such proposition shall be in favor of annexation." We find no provision in the statute which contemplates a separate vote by the electors of each municipality upon the question of its annexation.

The defendant, having shown that it is lawfully possessed of the privileges and franchises it is charged with exercising, is entitled to judgment.

COLORADO SUPREME COURT.

City of DENVER et al., Appts.,

v.

Jeremiah COULEHAN et al.

(.....: Colo. ....):

"The legislature of this state does not have the power to extend or enlarge the territorial limits of a specially chartered town or city by adding thereto noncontiguous lands,—that is, lands entirely separated from the municipality by intervening territory; and the courts may declare the annexation of such noncontiguous territory invalid, and enjoin the collection of municipal taxes upon the property thus sought to be annexed.

(December 22, 1894.)

APPPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Jefferson County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to enjoin the assessment, levy, and collection of taxes upon plaintiffs' property for the use of the city of Denver. Affirmed.

Statement by Elliott, J.:

Action to enjoin the assessment, levy, and collection of taxes upon certain property in Jefferson county by or for the use of the city of Denver. Trial, and judgment in favor of plaintiff, granting the perpetual injunction as prayed for. Defendants appeal. The complaint is very lengthy. The following extracts will be sufficient for an understanding of the opinion: "The plaintiff, suing as well for the behalf of all other owners of taxable property situate within the district of lands aforesaid, similarly situated, as for himself, complaining, saith that plaintiff is, and for twenty years and more last past hath been, the owner of those certain premises described as the northeast quarter of section twenty-three (23), township three (3) south, of range sixty-nine (69) west; . . . that by a certain act of the general assembly of the state of Colorado approved on the third day of April, A. D. 1893, entitled 'An act to revise and amend the charter of the city of Denver,' it was and is provided, among other things, that the corporate limits of the said city of Denver should begin, etc. [description, including lands of plaintiff], 'excepting, however, out of the said city, as so established, all towns and cities incorporated and then existing under the general laws of the state, situated within said last-mentioned boundaries.' . . . Plaintiff further avers that the plaintiff's land hereinbefore described, and all of the lands hereinbefore mentioned, situate in the said township three (3) south, of range sixty-nine (69) west, and township four (4) south, of range sixty-nine (69) west, are, and always have been, included within the limits of the said county of Jefferson; that the said lands of the plaintiff are agricultural lands, and now are, and for many years last past have been, by plaintiff planted and cultivated for the rearing of grasses, small grains, and small fruits; that the said lands are valuable only as agricultural lands; that the same are not and never have been divided into streets, alleys, lots, blocks, or outlots, nor doth plaintiff propose or intend, nor hath plaintiff ever proposed, intended, or desired, to so subdivide the same into parcels, or sell or expose the same to sale as urban or suburban property, nor are the same valuable for such purpose; that no public buildings or other improvements have ever been erected or made by the said city of Denver upon or within three miles of said lands of plaintiff or said district of lands aforesaid, situate in said county of Jefferson; that none of the public streets or alleys of the city of Denver extend into or near to the same, or any part thereof, or into or within two miles of any part of the said district of lands aforesaid; and that neither light, heat, police protection, water, nor other convenience or public service furnished by or under authority of the city of Denver for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof hath ever been extended or afforded to plaintiff or any of the people residing within the said district; nor doth or can plaintiff or the other owners of lands situate within the said district have any benefit, advantage, or convenience whatsoever of the government of the said city of Denver, or any department thereof; nor are the said lands of plaintiff, nor any of the lands situate within the district aforesaid, in range sixty-nine (69) aforesaid, necessary to be added to the city of Denver for opening streets or ways between other parts of the said city of Denver, or for any other municipal purpose whatsoever; and that the whole purpose of the city of Denver and those active in and about procuring such enlargement of the bounds of said city was and is to enable the authorities of the said city of Denver to levy taxes upon the lands and other taxable property within the said district for raising moneys for discharging the current expenses of the said city, and for discharging the principal and interest of the bonded indebtedness of the said city hereinafter mentioned. . . . Plaintiff further avers that the said district of lands in every part thereof was at the date of the passage of the said act, and still is separated from the bounds of the said city of Denver, as established prior to the passage of the said act, by a distance of two (2) miles or more, and by certain municipal corporations theretofore and now still existing, to wit the town of North Denver, the town of Highlands, the town of Colfax, and the town of Barnum, all which, as plaintiff on information and belief avers, at the date of the passage of the said act, and for many years before that, were, and still are, municipal corporations, lawfully organized and existing under the laws of the state of Colorado. . . . Plaintiff is advised by counsel, and therefore avers, that the attempt made by the

*Headnote by ELLIOTT, J.

NOTE.—As to power of legislature to annex territory to municipalities, see note to case immediately preceding this one.

27 L. R. A.

said enactment to include the said district of lands within the limits of the city of Denver solely for subjecting the same to taxation for the purposes of the said city of Denver, and the attempt by the said enactment to subject the said lands to the burden of the indebtedness heretofore contracted by the said city of Denver for loans as hereinbefore mentioned and the other indebtedness of the said city of Denver, was beyond the authority of the general assembly, and wholly without effect. Nevertheless, plaintiff saith the city council of the said city of Denver threaten to and will levy upon the lands situate in said district, including the lands of plaintiff, hereinbefore described, taxes for city purposes to an amount not exceeding the limit in the said act provided, to wit, ten mills on the dollar upon the assessed value of said property, and cause the said levy to be certified to the county clerk of the said county of Jefferson; and the said John Vivian, who is the county clerk and recorder of the said county of Jefferson threatens to and will, unless restrained by the writ of injunction hereinafter prayed, extend the same upon the tax lists of the said county of Jefferson for the now current year and every year hereafter, in the manner directed in the said act, and include the said city taxes in his warrant to the county treasurer of the said county of Jefferson; and the said Robert E. Jones, who is the county treasurer of the said county of Jefferson, will, unless restrained as aforesaid, proceed to levy and collect the said taxes, either by sale of plaintiff's lands aforesaid or by distraint and sale of plaintiff's personal property. And plaintiff avers that the taxes so levied and assessed as aforesaid will be a cloud on the lands of plaintiff and all other lands situated within the district aforesaid whereupon such taxes shall be levied and assessed as aforesaid, and the levy and assessment of such taxes from year to year in every year hereafter, as the said city of Denver proposes and threatens to do, will be a continuous and constantly recurring injury, irreparable by any action at law. Plaintiff, therefore, as well for and on behalf of the owners of other taxable property within the said district similarly situated as for himself, prays judgment that the said city of Denver, and the said city council thereof, and all and singular the officers, agents, and servants thereof, be strictly restrained and prohibited from levying upon the lands aforesaid or the other taxable property within the said district, or other lands or taxable property similarly situated to the lands and taxable property of plaintiff aforesaid within the said district, any assessment or tax whatsoever to meet the expenses of said city of Denver, or for other purpose whatsoever, and from causing any such levy to be certified to the county clerk and recorder of said county of Jefferson; that the said county clerk and J. A. Ferris, assessor, as well as their successors in office, be likewise restrained and enjoined from levying or extending any such tax upon the tax list of the said county of Jefferson in any year, and from including any such taxes in any warrant to the county treasurer of said county; and that the said county treasurer and all and singular his successors in office be in like manner strictly restrained and enjoined from collecting, or assuming to collect, any such city taxes of the city of Denver at any time levied or assessed upon or against any such lands or other taxable property within the said district; and that plaintiff may have such other and further relief or such different relief as to the court shall seem meet, and his costs."

Messrs. A. B. Seaman and Louis K. Pratt, for appellants:

Plaintiff's attempt to set up a state of facts that would warrant a court of equity in relieving the property of a class of persons engaged in a particular occupation in a particular part of a taxing district from the collection of one of the lawful levies of taxes made in such taxing district by the proper authority, leaving the same levy to be collected upon all other persons having property in such district, this would be a palpable violation of that provision of the constitution that requires tax levies and collections to be uniform throughout the taxing district.

Breece v. Haley, 11 Colo. 351; People v. Henderson, 12 Colo. 369; High, Inj. § 497; Miller v. Grandy, 18 Mich. 540; North Carolina R. Co. v. Alamance County Commrs. 83 N. C. 259; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

In the absence of specific constitutional restrictions the difficulty in the way of pronouncing such legislation unconstitutional or of affording judicial relief in such cases is almost insurmountable.

Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 794, 795; Cooley, Const. Lim. 501, note.

As a charter cannot be made in the first instance or changed afterwards without fixing and changing boundaries either by enlargement or contraction, it necessarily follows that the extension of the boundaries by the Act of 1893 was fairly revisory and amendatory of the charter as it existed before.

Brown v. Denver, 7 Colo. 309; Carpenter v. People, 8 Colo. 116; Rogers v. People, 9 Colo. 450, 59 Am. Rep. 146; Darrow v. People, 3 Colo. 426; People v. Londoner, 6 L. R. A. 444, 18 Colo. 309; Re Extension of Boundaries of Denver, 18 Colo. 268.

Where, as in Colorado, the legislature is untrammelled by constitutional restrictions, the legislative control in the matter of fixing municipal boundaries and taxing districts is plenary and not subject to judicial interference.

Martin v. Diaz, 53 Miss. 58, 24 Am. Rep. 661; Galesburg v. Hawkinson, 75 Ill. 152; Giboney v. Cape Girardeau, 58 Mo. 143; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 183, 185, 189; People v. Fleming, 10 Colo. 558; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 738, 794, 795, and notes; Brown v. Denver, 8 Colo. 169; 1 Beach, Pub. Corp. §§ 80, 397, 398; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 733; Santa Rosa v. Coulter, 58 Cal. 587; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54; Kountze v. Omaha, 5 Dill. 445; People v. Bennett, 30 Mich. 451, 18 Am. Rep. 107; Madry v. Cox, 73 Tex. 538; Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96; Chandler v. Boston, 112 Mass. 200; Washburn v. Oskosh, 60 Wis. 453; Cooley, Taxn. p. 149-237; Wade v. Richmond, 18 Gratt. 583; People v. Brooklyn 4 N. Y. 419.

On petition for rehearing.

In matters of legislation the power of the legislature is absolute in the absence of either express constitutional limitations or limitations fairly to be implied from the constitution itself.

It is not within the power of the court to restrain the enforcement of a legislative act merely because the legislature acted improvidently in passing it.

Wadsworth v. Union Pac. R. Co. 18 Colo. 612.

If the people of this state desired to have municipal corporations made up of non-contiguous territory in different counties in the state, who is there to say nay?

If the people have vested all their legislative powers in the legislature of the state, the legislature of the state in that direction possesses all of the powers of the people, and what the people could do the legislature can do.

The making of a municipal corporation is a legislative act. The making of such an incorporated city out of non-contiguous territory is not a physical impossibility; it would not contravene any physical laws. It is, therefore, within the power of the legislature and cannot be controlled by the court.

People v. Rucker, 5 Colo. 455; People v. Wright, 6 Colo. 92; People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 405; Wadsworth v. Union Pac. R. Co. 18 Colo. 600; Alexander v. People, 7 Colo. 155; Re Kindergarten Schools, 19 L. R. A. 469, 18 Colo. 284; People v. Fleming, 10 Colo. 558; Potter's Dwar. Stat. 368; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 200, 228; Patterson v. Yuba County Supra. 18 Cal. 175; Leonard v. Wiseman, 81 Md. 201; Flint River S. B. Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 164, 48 Am. Dec. 248; Merchants Union Barb Wire Co. v. Brown, 64 Iowa, 275; Washburn v. Oshkosh, 60 Wis. 457; Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 218; 1 Beach, Pub. Corp. § 397, p. 391; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 54, 65, pp. 93, 107.

The question of the boundaries of an incorporated village belongs to policy rather than law, and is political and not judicial.

People v. Bennett, 29 Mich. 451, 18 Am. Rep. 107; 1 Beach, Pub. Corp. § 404, p. 397; Daly v. Morgan, 1 L. R. A. 757, 69 Md. 460.

Where the legislature exercises the power by direct legislation, it may annex to a municipal corporation any lands which it deems proper to be included within the limits of municipality; but where the power is delegated it is usually restricted to contiguous and adjoining lands.

15 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 1011; Trus v. Davis, 6 L. R. A. 266, 193 Ill. 523.

Messrs. Wells, Taylor & Taylor, for appellees:

The legislature cannot arbitrarily convert rural lands into town lands and burden the proprietor with taxation for municipal purposes, without any corresponding benefit.

Langworthy v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa, 86; Deeds v. Sanborn, 26 Iowa, 419; Deiman v. Fort Madison, 30 Iowa, 548; Winser v. Burlington, 68 Iowa, 279; Cheaney v. Hooser, 9 B. Mon. 330; Covington v. Southgate, 15 B. Mon. 493; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush, 87; Courtney v. Louisville, 12 Bush, 420.

The power of the judiciary to give relief in 27 L. R. A.

the proper case is countenanced in Brown v. Denver, 8 Colo. 171.

The legislature could not, upon any supposition of benefits received from the proximity of the municipality, have authorized the city of Denver to impose taxes upon the inhabitants of the annexed territory without annexation.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 615; Wells v. Weston, 22 Mo. 384; Re Flatbush, 65 N. Y. 398.

The attempted annexation is void, because the annexed territory was, and still is, separated from the then existing limits of the city of Denver by intervening municipal corporations.

Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 210; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 36 Am. Rep. 840.

Elliott, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The city of Denver was organized and existing under and by virtue of a special charter long before and at the time of the adoption of our state constitution. The constitution did not abrogate such charters, nor does it exempt them from legislative amendments. Const. art. 14, § 14; also, Id. art. 15, § 2; Brown v. Denver, 7 Colo. 305; Carpenter v. People, 8 Colo. 116. On April 3, 1893, the general assembly of Colorado passed "An act to revise and amend the charter of the city of Denver." See Sess. Laws 1893, p. 131. Prior to the passage of that act, the territorial limits of the city were wholly within the county of Arapahoe. Jefferson county bounds Arapahoe on the west, but between Jefferson and the western limits of the city of Denver there were at the time of the passage of the act above mentioned several municipal corporations, viz., the town of North Denver, the town of Highlands, the town of Colfax, and the town of Barnum. The territorial boundaries of these municipalities for the most part extended to the Jefferson county line, and so separated the city of Denver from that county. In fact, at the time of the passage of the act to revise and amend the Denver charter, no part of the territorial limits of the city of Denver was contiguous to any part of Jefferson county. Nevertheless, by the terms of said act, it was attempted to enlarge or extend the limits of the city of Denver by adding thereto a strip of land, 5½ miles long by 1¼ miles wide, lying along the eastern border and wholly within the county of Jefferson.

If the act adding the Jefferson county strip to the city of Denver be upheld as valid, there might, perhaps, be no escape from the taxation complained of in the present action. The decisions exempting certain property within the territorial limits of a town or city from municipal taxation, on the ground that the property is so situated that it cannot receive its due proportion of municipal benefits, are strongly combated, on the ground that the doctrine they assert is illogical as well as impracticable, in that it amounts to a substitution of judicial opinion for legislative judgment in matters peculiarly within the province of the law-making power. See, upon this subject, Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 616, note 3, and cases there cited; also, 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 794, 795, and notes. But it is unnecessary to decide this point.

In determining the present controversy, we shall endeavor to reach a proper solution of the following question: Has the legislature the power to extend or enlarge the territorial limits of a specially chartered town or city by adding thereto noncontiguous lands,—that is, lands entirely separated from such town or city by intervening territory? It is customary to speak of the power of the legislature over municipal corporations as "plenary." But this, like most attempts at epigrammatic statements of the law, must be taken cum grano salis. Certain it is that constitutional limitations must always be observed in respect to such legislation. Besides, insurmountable obstacles may arise out of the nature and subject-matter of the legislation to render the same ineffectual. In general, the boundaries of a specially chartered town or city may, by act of the legislature, be extended and enlarged so as to include additional lands, the property thus added becoming subject to municipal taxation, and entitled to municipal benefits. It is urged that power thus vested in the legislature is subject to abuse or improvident use. This may be true, and yet it does not necessarily follow that the courts can restrain the enforcement of a legislative act merely because the legislature acted improvidently in passing it. Before the courts will restrain the enforcement of a legislative act, it must appear beyond reasonable doubt that the legislature in passing the act exceeded its power, or attempted to exercise a power it did not possess. Wadsworth v. Union Pac. R. Co., 18 Colo. 612. The improvident use of power by the legislative department of the government does not justify usurpation by the judicial department. The remedy for the improvident use of official power is by appeal to the people, whose will, when legally expressed under the constitution, is sovereign over all departments. It is true that all remedies for maladministration in civil government may fail, because all governmental agencies must be intrusted to minds subject to human infirmities. In such case we can only suffer and wait while we strive for improvement. Martin v. Dix, 52 Miss. 53, 24 Am. Rep. 661; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

Is there, then, in the present case, no check that can curb the vaulting ambition of a great city in its efforts to enlarge its corporate boundaries and increase its corporate revenues? Has the legislature such transcendent power in respect to territorial additions to specially chartered towns and cities that the courts can give no relief? Is there nothing left but an appeal to the people as the dernier resort? The answer to these questions must depend upon the nature and scope, as well as the subject-matter, of the legislative act in question. As we have seen, the general rule is that the legislature has the power to extend the boundaries, and thus enlarge the territorial limits, of a town or city existing under special charter. But may the legislative arm be extended as a great pothook into any and all the counties of the state, there to encircle, as in this case, many square miles of the territory of such outside counties, and make the same part and parcel of the city of Denver? May the legislature do this, without annexing any intervening territory, and without providing even a street or an alley to connect such outlying municipal additions to the city proper? It may be said that this is an extreme illustration; but, as was once said by Chief Justice Shaw, "it is necessary to put extreme cases to test a principle."

What is a city? With much research into the historical derivation of the word, Webster, pre eminently the lexicographer of the law as well as of the common people, defines a "city" in substance as follows: (1) A large town; (2) a corporate town; in the United States, a town or collective body of inhabitants, incorporated and governed by a mayor and aldermen; (3) the collective body of citizens or inhabitants of a city. Since a city is a large town we look for the meaning of the word "town." Again, we find from Webster that the primitive idea of a town was an inclosure. The popular use and meaning of the word is a large, closely populated place, whether incorporated or not, as distinguished from the country or from rural communities. These definitions are sustained and amplified by the Century Dictionary. The legal as well as the popular idea of a town or city in this country, both by name and use, is that of oneness, community, locality, vicinity; a collective body, not several bodies; collective body of inhabitants,—that is, a body of people collected or gathered together in one mass, not separated into distinct masses, and having a community of interest because residents of the same place, not different places; hence, locality, not localities; vicinity; vicinage; near, adjacent, not remote. So, as to territorial extent, the idea of a city is one of unity, not of plurality; of compactness or contiguity, not separation or segregation.

Legislative acts in the matter of extending the boundaries of municipal corporations are to be interpreted and applied according to the essential nature as well as the subject-matter of such legislation. In the nature of things, there must be some limit to legislative power. For example, the legislature cannot extend the municipal boundaries of a city into another state. Legislative acts upon such a subject would have no extraterritorial force. There are some things that in their very nature cannot be accomplished by any human power: A thing cannot be made to exist as a whole and in broken disjointed fragments at one and the same time. A thing essentially single in its nature cannot have a plural existence. Every municipality must have its territorial corpus, in which to exercise its corporate functions and powers. Such corpus may be enlarged or diminished by the action of the legislature. So the human body may grow or diminish by the action or nonaction of its vital forces; but neither the human body nor the municipal corpus loses its identity, its individuality, or its unity by such growth or enlargement. It is a misnomer—a solecism—to speak of a growth of the human body not connected with the body itself. Such a growth is, in fact, not of the body. So, territory not in fact connected with or adjacent to a city cannot be regarded as a part of the municipal corpus, or as an addition thereto, in any true sense of the term. Analogous questions have been considered by the Wisconsin supreme court. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 86 Am. Rep. 840; Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 210. In the latter case Mr. Justice Taylor said: "We do not by this decision intend to set bounds to the discretion of the legislature in fixing the boundaries of a village, so long as the territory of which it is composed is adjacent or contiguous, nor to intimate that the legislature may not incorporate as one village two or more assemblages of inhabitants living at some distance from each other, with spaces of uninhabited lands intervening, when such intervening spaces are also included in such village, but that a village cannot be incorporated containing two or more tracts of territory not contiguous or adjoining, and separated by some other civil subdivision of the state, and especially that an uninhabited and separate tract of country cannot be annexed to or made a part of an incorporated village. If, by an act of the legislature, a tract of country not inhabited, and not adjoining a village, can be made a part of such village, then it would seem to follow that, by another act of the legislature, the inhabited part of such village might be separated therefrom; and we should have the anomalous thing of a village without inhabitants, and composed simply of a tract of territory, which would be an absurdity."

From careful investigation and consideration, it is evident that it was never contemplated by the law that the territorial limits of a town or city might include distinct, disjointed fragments or parcels of land, situate miles and miles distant from each other, and separated from the city proper by intervening territory. It is not to be understood from this that a city may not be formed from territory lying on different sides of a natural stream. Nor must anything in this opinion be construed as intimating that noncontiguous territory may be added to a city by connecting the same by a narrow street or alley. Annexation sought to be accomplished by such means might bear upon its face such earmarks of fraud as would vitiate an ordinary transaction, though we do not intimate that judicial inquiry may extend to the motives of a co-ordinate department of the government. Kountess v. Omaha, 5 Dill. 443, Fed. Cas. No. 7,928; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 170, 27 Am. Rep. 733; People v. Martin, 19 Colo. 565, 24 L. R. A. 201; Hudson v. Denver, 12 Colo. 157. In Galesburg v. Hawkinson, 75 Ill. 158, it is said that the boundaries of municipal corporations can be altered and changed by the legislature in its discretion, and that the authorities are all that way. The opinion, however, significantly adds: "Courts may determine what are the corporate limits already established; they may determine whether what is claimed by the municipal authority to be the corporate limits is so or not; and they may inquire whether the legislative authority has exceeded the powers with which it is invested. But all this implies an existing law, applicable to the particular subject, and the inquiry is, What is the law, and has it been violated or complied with?"

Counsel for appellant relies upon the following from an eminent text-writer: "Not only may the legislature originally fix the limits of the corporation, but it may, unless specially restrained in the constitution, subsequently annex, or authorize the annexation of the contiguous or other territory; and this without the consent, and even against the remonstrance, of the majority of the persons residing in the corporation or on the annexed territory." 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 185. The words "or other," in the foregoing extract, are not italicized in the published volume. The leading case cited in support of the text is Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96. That case was one wherein it was sought to annex an unincorporated village to the city of Toledo. It was objected that the territory sought to be annexed was not in fact contiguous to the city of Toledo. The opinion shows "that the center of the Maumee river formed the southeastern boundary of the city of Toledo; that the annexed territory [consisting of an unincorporated village called "Yondota"] is situated on the southeastern side of the river, in a bend running up near to the heart of the city, and that all of it is nearer to the center of the business and valuable property than many other portions of the original city territory; that the river is navigable, and, where it formed said original boundary, is of unequal width; but, for half a mile or more, does not exceed one fourth of a mile in width, and has been permanently bridged for railroad purposes, and may be bridged for other purposes; that Yondota depended mainly upon the influence of business and improvements in Toledo for its growth and importance. The transcript of the annexation proceedings, and the accompanying map, show that the annexation consists in an extension of the original boundaries, so as to include the whole of the river and a considerable tract of land on its southeast side. There is no territory intervening between that which was annexed and the original city limits. All the parts of the annexed territory are in immediate contact with each other; and the whole is in direct contact of several miles with original boundary. Contiguity cannot import more than immediate contact; and we think the objection founded on a want of contiguity is not well taken." It is clear that the Toledo case in no way militates against the views we have expressed, but rather confirms them; none of the other cases cited by counsel sustain the view that non-contiguous territory may be added to and made part of a town or city; hence we conclude that the text of Judge Dillon above quoted cannot be accepted as correct to its full extent and import. The dearth of authority upon this point leads to the belief that legislatures have seldom, or never before, attempted to annex to an incorporated town or city territory so clearly non-contiguous as in the present instance.

It was argued orally that, while the legislature may not have the power to annex distant non-contiguous territory by a direct act for that purpose, yet in this case the Jefferson county strip must be regarded as a part of the city of Denver, for the reason that it is included in the boundary surveys as specified in the revised and amended charter, and that, unless so included, the city has no boundary lines, particularly on the west. This argument is without force. Equity looks to the substance rather than the form; it regards the result of an act rather than the mode of accomplishing it. There may be a wrong way of doing a right thing, but there is no right way of doing a wrong thing. An act essentially wrong does not become right by the manner of doing it. If the mode of making municipal additions as argued by counsel were to be upheld, any non-contiguous territory, however remote, might be surveyed in, and thus become attached to and made a part of, the city. The conclusion at which we have arrived need not disturb the boundary lines of the city as established by the amended charter, except on the west. As to these, the city limits must end where the insurmountable obstacles—that is, the territorial limits of the intervening municipalities—begin.

For the reasons stated, we are clearly of the opinion that the legislature did not have the power to extend or enlarge the territorial limits of the city of Denver by adding thereto the non-contiguous strip of lands situate in Jefferson county, and that the district court did not err in restraining the collection of taxes by or for the use of the city of Denver upon such Jefferson county property. This conclusion being decisive of the present controversy, other questions sought to be raised upon this appeal need not be discussed.

The Judgment of the District Court is accordingly affirmed.

A petition for rehearing was subsequently made in response to which on March 4, 1896, the following opinion was handed down:

Per Curiam:

Counsel for appellants have presented an elaborate argument in support of their petition for rehearing. Their contention is that since the constitution allows legislative amendments to special municipal charters, and does not expressly forbid the annexation of non-contiguous territory, therefore, under the power of amendment, the legislature may annex to a specially chartered town or city territory located in any part of the state, however disconnected and remote the same may be from the city to which it is sought to be annexed. Counsel earnestly contend that any question concerning the legality of such annexation is a matter for legislative, and not for judicial, determination. This view was thoroughly considered when the former opinion was announced. We were aware of the decisions by this court sustaining the power of the legislature to amend special municipal charters. Without discrediting such decisions as have been made upon this subject, we have felt constrained to say that it was never contemplated to give the legislature the power, under the guise of amendments, to make such radical and unheard-of changes in specially chartered towns or cities as the annexation of territory entirely disconnected and remote from the original municipality. Such annexation would be foreign to the subject-matter of the original municipality, and hence not a proper subject of amendment; and the provisions therefor would not be germane to the one general subject of the act, or clearly expressed in the title, as required by section 21 of article 5 of our Constitution. There can be no doubt that the term "town" or "city" as used in the constitution in its ordinary signification, as denoting a single parcel of compact or contiguous territory, and not as including several distinct parcels of land situate at remote distances from each other. The idea of a town or city is that of unity, not plurality. Hence we have felt constrained to say that a thing essentially single cannot, by legislative act, be given a plural existence, especially where the legislative power over such subject is the power to amend rather than the power to change its essential character. There are several specially chartered municipal corporations in this state whose charters are subject to legislative amendment; but may the legislature, under the guise of amending these charters, add a section of land in Weld county to Central City, another section in El Paso to Georgetown, another section in Las Animas to Black Hawk, another section in Gunnison Valley to Denver, thus dotting the state over with municipal cases, at the discretion of the legislative department? We are of opinion that it is within the province of the judiciary to give the power of amendment in such cases a reasonable construction; and, if the legislature does not restrict itself to proper limits in exercising such power, the courts must exercise proper control over the subject.

In their argument upon the petition for a rehearing, counsel for the appellants challenge the court to point out the particular provision of our constitution which inhibits the legislation complained of. From what we have just said it follows that the provision for annexation of non-contiguous territory, not being germane to the subject-matter of the original municipality, is obnoxious to section 21 of article 5. In addition to this, if the effect of this act in its practical operation be practically, though indirectly, to destroy and annul the corporate existence of these intervening municipalities, then under the decision of this court in Re Extension of Boundaries of Denver, 18 Colo. 288, it can be said that this provision violates the spirit of section 13 of article 14 of our Constitution, which enjoins upon the legislature the duty to "provide by general laws for the organization and classification of cities and towns." See, on this point, Smith v. Sherry, 50 Wis. 210. One of the purposes of this act to revise and amend the charter of the city of Denver was to extend the boundaries of the city, and this extension must have been designed either to provide the necessary territory for the growth and development of an enterprising city, for legitimate purposes of revenue, or some other proper municipal purpose; or else it must have been to accomplish by indirection what could not be done directly, viz., to annul these intervening corporations, or to cripple them, and deprive them of some of the privileges and powers which they possess under the general laws, and so force them, unwillingly, into the city of Denver. The section of said act which we held in the above-cited case to be in conflict with said section 18 of article 14 expressly provided for the disincorporation of these municipalities, and proposed to include them within the limits of the city of Denver as thus extended. In said case we held that, by a special act of the legislature, such as this confessedly is, the boundaries of the city of Denver could not be so enlarged as to include therein other municipalities incorporated under the general laws of the state; the reason given, inter alia, being that this would by special law disincorporate such existing corporations organized under the general incorporation laws, and that section 18 must be held to extend to the disincorporation, as well as to the incorporation, of such cities and towns. If it be said that the objection pointed out in Re Extension of Boundaries of Denver, supra, to the legislation embodied in the question submitted by the house of representatives, does not apply to the section now under consideration, our reply is that, although the two provisions are not literally the same, yet the evident object aimed at by both is the same, and the practical effect and operation of both will be the same. It is true that the section under consideration does not include within the limits of the city of Denver these existing municipalities; but the proposed boundaries of the city of Denver go beyond these municipalities, and the city of Denver, as thus constituted, is made to surround these towns and cities on all sides, and they are thus cut off from any further growth or territorial expansion. The operation of the act, as well as its form and its words, must be looked to to determine the constitutionality of a measure.

If the legislature, by a special law, may thus extend the boundaries of a city so as to include therein non-contiguous territory, with a number of existing municipalities incorporated under the general laws of the state lying between such non-contiguous territory and the previously established limits of the city whose boundaries are thus sought to be extended, such legislation would just as effectually stop the growth and development and curtail the powers of these intervening corporations, which were granted to them under the general incorporation laws, and practically and just as effectually disincorporate them as to some of the powers and privileges granted to them by general law, as though the special legislative act, in so many words, swept them out of existence. Thus would the special law, in effect, repeal and render nugatory the general incorporation laws of the state. Thus would towns and cities incorporated under the general laws be forced by a special law involuntarily to surrender the powers and privileges acquired under such general laws. To accomplish such results by indirection, when the same could not be done directly, would nullify the limitations imposed by the constitutional provision referred to.

The petition for rehearing should be denied.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

AMERICAN SUGAR REFINING CO.,

Appt.,

v.

Charles H. FANCHER, Assignee, etc., of
Charles Burkhalter et al., Resp't.

(145 N. Y. 552.)

1. There is no adequate remedy at law for a defrauded vendor of goods, who did not learn of the fraud until the purchaser had sold a large part of them to bona fide purchasers, and then had made an assignment for creditors which will defeat the jurisdiction of equity to aid him to reach the proceeds in the hands of the assignee.

2. Claims for the purchase price of goods sold to bona fide purchasers by an insolvent, who had procured them under fraudulent representations of solvency, can be recovered in lieu of the goods themselves from his voluntary assignee for creditors by the defrauded vendor on his timely election to rescind the original sale for fraud.

(April 9, 1895.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, granting a new trial after a finding by a referee in his favor in an action brought to reach certain credits belonging to defendant insolvent assignors and representing property which had been fraudulently obtained by such assignors from plaintiff. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles E. Hughes, Arthur C. Rounds, and Frederic R. Kellogg, for appellant:

The plaintiff, as a defrauded vendor, is entitled to recover from the vendee or his voluntary transferee the proceeds of the resale of the property fraudulently purchased.

Partridge v. Rubin, 15 Daly, 844; Jackson v. Cadwell, 1 Cow. 822; 2 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 444; National Trust Co. v. Gleason, 77 N. Y. 408, 83 Am. Rep. 632; Talbot v. Bank of Rochester, 1 Hill, 295; Comstock v. Hier, 78 N. Y. 269, 29 Am. Rep. 142;

NOTE.—The above case is of more than ordinary importance as one that decides a doubtful and unsettled question of commercial law. It is substantially a case of first impression.

27 L. R. A.

Keener, Quasi Cont. pp. 159, 170 et seq.; Lamine v. Dorrell, 2 Ld. Raym. 1216; Peter Adams Co. v. National Shoe & Leather Bank, 28 Abb. N. C. 172; Rothschild v. Mack, 115 N. Y. 1; Catts v. Phalen, 43 U. S. 2 How. 876, 11 L. ed. 306; People v. Wood, 121 N. Y. 522; Abbotts v. Barry, 2 Brod. & B. 889; Browning v. Bancroft, 8 Met. 278.

The basis of the recovery in equity is a constructive trust, i. e. a trust ex maleficio.

Roberts v. Ely, 118 N. Y. 181; Varet v. New York Ins. Co. 7 Paige, 567, 4 L. ed. 277.

Where realty is involved equity will set aside the fraudulent conveyance, and if the grantee has resold will compel him to account for the proceeds.

Trevelyan v. White, 1 Beav. 589; Cheney v. Gleason, 117 Mass. 557; Hammond v. Pennock, 61 N. Y. 145.

In case of property misapplied by one holding a fiduciary relation to the injured party, equity will compel an accounting of the proceeds.

Re Hallett, L. R. 18 Ch. Div. 696; Holmes v. Gilman, 20 L. R. A. 566, 138 N. Y. 869; Baker v. New York Nat. Bank, 100 N. Y. 81, 58 Am. Rep. 150.

Where no fiduciary relation exists, yet if the wrongdoer "had no title ab initio," securities for which the goods have been exchanged may be reached in the hands of the thief or his assignees (voluntary or mala fide), equity constituting him and them trustees ex maleficio.

Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133, 25 Am. Rep. 152.

In general, whenever the legal title to property, real or personal, has been obtained through actual fraud, misrepresentations, concealments, or through undue influence, duress, taking advantage of one's weakness or necessities, or through any similar means, or under any other similar circumstances which render it unconscientious for the holder of the legal title to retain and enjoy the beneficial interest equity impresses a constructive trust on the property thus acquired.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1058; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1265; Blapham, Eq. § 91; Perry, Tr. § 166; Small v. Athwood, Younge, 507; Importers & Traders Nat. Bank v. Petrus, 123 N. Y. 272; La Comité des Assureurs Maritimes v. Standard Bank of South Africa, 1 Cab. & El. 87.

The goods were obtained from the plaintiff by larceny, and upon this ground the plaintiff is entitled to recover their proceeds from the voluntary assignee of the persons guilty of the theft.

Penal Code, §§ 528, 544.

A false statement of fact by a purchaser of goods as to his financial responsibility, upon the faith of which the sale was made, was within the statute.

People v. Haynes, 11 Wend. 557; Robinson v. Dauchy, 8 Barb. 20.

In People v. Lyon, 99 N. Y. 210, it was there held that the crime of obtaining goods by false pretenses was a felony.

People v. Dumar, 106 N. Y. 503.

Under the English statutes from the time of Elizabeth there has been no hesitation in awarding restitution of the proceeds of stolen property, or of property obtained by false pretenses, where this has been the more convenient course.

27 L. R. A.

Queen v. Justices of Central Crim. Court, L. R. 17 Q. B. Div. 598; L. R. 18 Q. B. Div. 814.

The original owner may by an equitable action secure the proceeds of the resale either from the thief or from his voluntary or mala fide assignees.

Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133, 25 Am. Rep. 152.

The court will not award to the voluntary assignee of a thief the proceeds of stolen property.

Riggs v. Palmer, 5 L. R. A. 340, 115 N. Y. 506.

Messrs. James B. Dill and Frederick Seymour, with Messrs. Stern & Rushmore, for appellee:

The whole object of the plaintiff is to secure a preference over other creditors of an insolvent estate from whom at the time of the assignment it differed in position only in that its contract was tainted with fraud.

The plaintiff is entitled to no preference over all the other creditors of the insolvent estate on the ground that his contract was tainted with fraud.

South Branch Lumber Co. v. Ott, 143 U. S. 632, 85 L. ed. 1186; Hyman v. Kapp, 9 N. Y. S. R. 69; Tim v. Smith, 13 Abb. N. C. 31; Frelinghuysen v. Nugent, 86 Fed. Rep. 229.

The plaintiff cannot maintain this action because it failed to rescind the contract before the vendees sold the goods and before the assignment was made.

Re Cain's Petition v. Gleason, 105 N. Y. 262; Holmes v. Gilman, 20 L. R. A. 566, 138 N. Y. 876; 1 Bigelow, Fr. 438; Banque Franco-Egyptienne v. Brown, 84 Fed. Rep. 163; Bosley v. National Mach. Co. 123 N. Y. 550.

The fraud of the Burkholders did not make the assignee a trustee ex maleficio.

Bosley v. National Mach. Co. supra.

The doctrine of compensation in equity had its foundation and arose out of real estate transactions.

Newham v. May, 18 Price, 749; Hammond v. Pennock, 61 N. Y. 145; 1 Bigelow, Fr. 433.

The courts have gone so far as to express their hesitancy and reluctance to introduce the intricacies of trusts into mercantile transactions.

New Zealand & A. Land Co. v. Watson, L. R. 7 Q. B. Div. 374; Banque Franco-Egyptienne v. Brown, 84 Fed. Rep. 163; Busard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 847, 80 L. ed. 451; Suler v. Matthews, 115 Mass. 253.

The doctrine of trusts in itinere has been extended by the courts of this state to personality and the proceeds followed in two cases only:

(1) Where the person having the possession of the property of another towards whom he sustains a fiduciary relation wrongfully disposes of it.

Garvey v. Jarvis, 46 N. Y. 510; Brett, Lead. Cas. in Eq. No. 19, p. 45; Carpenter v. Danforth, 53 Barb. 581; Holmes v. Gilman, 20 L. R. A. 566, 138 N. Y. 869; New Zealand & A. Land Co. v. Watson, supra; Bank of Clarke County v. Gilman, 81 Hun, 486; Baker v. New York Nat. Bank, 100 N. Y. 83, 58 Am. Rep. 150.

(2) Where there is an absence of title in the wrongdoer.

Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133, 25 Am. Rep. 152; National Trust Co. v. Gleason, 77 N. Y. 400, 33 Am. Rep. 632; Doyle v. Murphy, 22 Ill. 502, 74 Am. Dec. 165.

Equity will not turn a completed sale of chattels into a trust ex maleficio.

Banque Franco-Egyptienne v. Brown, supra.

Andrews, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case presents a question of considerable practical importance. It relates to the equitable jurisdiction of the court under special circumstances to follow proceeds of personal property in the hands of a fraudulent vendee or his general assignee for the benefit of creditors at the suit of a defrauded vendor, who by false pretenses was induced to part with the property upon credit, the proceeds sought to be reached being the sums due from sub-vendees of the fraudulent purchaser arising on resales by him made before the discovery by the plaintiff of the fraud. The facts upon which the question arises are substantially conceded and are free from complication. Between the 20th day of September, 1892, and the 20th day of October following, the plaintiff sold and delivered to the mercantile firm of C. Burkhalter & Co., doing business in the city of New York, sugars of various qualities on credit for the price in the aggregate of $19,121.41, no part of which has been paid, the last sale having been made October 19, 1892. On the next day, the firm being insolvent and owing debts greatly in excess of its assets, made a general assignment to the defendant for the benefit of its creditors. Among the assigned assets were a portion of the sugars sold by the plaintiff to the firm, which he replevied from the assignee, but the firm, prior to the assignment, had sold to numerous persons, customers of the firm, in the ordinary course of trade, portions of the sugars on credit and claims held by the firm against the sub-vendees arising out of such sales, exceeding in the aggregate the sum of $10,000, were among the assets which passed by the assignment. These claims were collected by the assignee after the assignment, and (excepting a small sum) after notice had been served by the plaintiff on the assignee that it rescinded the original sale for fraud, which notice was accompanied by a demand for the sugars then in the possession of the assignee, and for an accounting and the delivery to the plaintiff of the outstanding claims against the customers of Burkhalter & Co. in their hands for the sugars sold by the firm as above stated. The assignee declined to accede to the demand made. On the trial the parties by stipulation fixed the amount of the claims for sugars sold which had come to the hands of the assignee, and which had been collected by him. The fraud of Burkhalter & Co. was not controverted. It was shown that the sales were induced by a gross misrepresentation in writing, made by one of the members of the firm to the plaintiff as to the solvency of the firm, made on or about September 20, 1892, within thirty days before the assignment, and when the firm was owing several hundred thousand dollars more than the value of its whole assets.

The case presented is singularly free from any uncertainty in respect to the facts upon which the equitable jurisdiction to follow the proceeds of the sugars is claimed. They are definite and ascertained, but it is insisted that the court is impotent to give relief by way of subjecting the choses in action of their proceeds, representing the sugars, to a lien in favor of the defrauded vendor, or to adjudge that they shall be applied in partial recompense and restitution for the property so wrongfully obtained, because, as is claimed, such relief is not in any such case within the scope of the powers of courts of equity as heretofore defined and exercised, and for the further reason that new rights have intervened by reason of the assignment. The fraud of Burkhalter & Co. was, as we have said, admitted. They are hopelessly insolvent, and were so at the time they took the plaintiff's goods. They disposed of a large part of the sugars before the plaintiff became cognizant of the fraud. The plaintiff was only apprised of it after the assignment was made. The remedy at law upon the contract against the fraudulent and insolvent purchaser is, under the circumstances, ineffectual. The pursuit of the property, except the small part of it which was unsold and passed to the assignee, is impracticable. If it could yet be found unconsumed and capable of identification, the multiplicity of suits which would be rendered necessary to reclaim it would make the remedy expensive, burdensome, and inadequate. The identification of the proceeds sought to be reached is complete and unquestioned. It is not claimed that the credits or the money into which they have been converted are not the very proceeds of sugars of which the plaintiff was defrauded.

The jurisdiction of a court of equity to follow the proceeds of property taken from the true owner by felony, or misapplied by an agent or trustee, and converted into property of another description, and to permit the true owner to take the property in its altered state as his own, or to hold it as security for the value of the property wrongfully taken or misapplied, or in case the original property or its proceeds have been mingled with that of the wrongdoers in the purchase of other property, to have a charge declared in favor of the person injured to the extent necessary for his indemnity, so long as the rights of bona fide purchasers do not intervene, has been frequently exerted and is a jurisdiction founded upon the plainest principles of reason and justice. The case of Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133, 25 Am. Rep. 152, is an illustration of the application of this principle in a case of the larceny of negotiable bonds, sold by the thieves, in which the court subjected securities in which they invested the money, and which they had transferred with notice to third persons as security for services to be rendered, to a charge in favor of the owner of the stolen bonds. The cases upon this head are very numerous, where there has been a misapplication of trust funds by trustees, or persons standing in a fiduciary relation, and the money or property misapplied has been laid out in land or converted into other species of property. The court in such cases lays hold of the substituted property and follows the original fund, through all the changes it has undergone, until the power of identification is lost or the rights of bona fide purchasers stop the pursuit, and holds it in its grasp to indemnify the innocent victim of the fraud. And even in case of money, which is said to have no earmark, its identity will not be deemed lost, though it is mingled with other money of the wrongdoer, if it can be shown that it forms a part of the general mass. Pennell v. Daffell, 4 DeG. M. & G. 372; Re Hallett's Estate, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 696; Holmes v. Gilman, 188 N. Y. 389, 20 L. R. A. 566.

In the cases of stolen property or of misapplication by a trustee or agent of the funds of the principal or cestui que trust, the title of the real owner of the property has been in most cases lost, without his consent, and the court by a species of equitable substitution repairs, as far as practicable, the wrong and prevents the wrongdoer from profiting by his fraud.

And, indeed, courts of law, borrowing the equitable principle, in cases of misappropriation by agents, vest in the principal at his election the legal title to a chattel or security in the hands of the agent, purchased exclusively by the application of the embezzled or misappropriated fund. Taylor v. Plumer, 8 Maule & S. 563. It is at this point that the controversy in the present case commences and the divergence arises which has led to this litigation. It is claimed, on behalf of the defendant, that courts of equity in commercial cases, where the claim of the plaintiff originates in a fraud in the sale of personal property, do not undertake to follow proceeds in the hands of the wrongdoer, but that the defrauded party having consented to part with his title, is remitted exclusively to such legal remedies as are given for the redress of the wrong. The jurisdiction of courts of equity in cases of trust or agency, or cases of like character, it is insisted, is founded upon the ancient jurisdiction of these courts over trusts and fiduciary relations, and has not been and ought not to be extended beyond these cases. It is very true that trusts and trust relations are peculiarly cognizable in equity, and have been so cognizable from the earliest period of equitable jurisprudence. But it is to be said that these are but branches of the larger jurisdiction over frauds, which equity abhors, and of which it has cognizance admittedly in many cases not connected with technical trusts or agency. It cannot be denied that the protection of cestui que trusts against frauds of the trustee is an object of peculiar solicitude in the courts of equity. They, in many cases, are incapable, by reason of age, inexperience, or other incapacity, from looking out for themselves, and the court stands in the attitude of guardian of their interests. But, as has been said, a court of equity does not restrict its remedial processes to the aid of the helpless or the ignorant. It embraces within its view the general claims included within what are called quasi trusts, and intervenes to prevent violations of equitable duty by whomsoever committed or whoever may suffer from the violation. It goes altogether outside of trust relations in many cases to prevent fraud, or to compel a restoration of property obtained by fraud. The exercise of the jurisdiction to set aside fraudulent transfers of real or personal property made in fraud of creditors is familiar. And the jurisdiction is most beneficially invoked in cases of private fraud to rescind transfers of real estate procured by fraudulent representations, and to restore to the defrauded vendor the title of which he has been defrauded. It often happens in cases of transfers of real estate procured by fraud that, before the action is brought or the plaintiff is apprised of the fraud, the fraudulent vendee has disposed of the land in whole or in part, or has created liens thereon in favor of the bona fide purchasers for value. In such cases the court will mould the relief to suit the circumstances, and will, at the election of the plaintiff, rescind the contract and compel a reconveyance of the part of the land still remaining in the hands of the vendor, and compel the wrongdoer to account for the proceeds of the land sold, or award compensation in damages. The court in many cases resorts to the fiction of a trust, and, by construction, adjudges that the proceeds in the hands of the wrongdoer are held by him as trustee of the plaintiff. This was the exact nature of the relief granted in the case of Trevelyan v. White, 1 Beav. 589, as appears by the recital of the decree in the opinion of the master of the rolls, where part of the estate had been sold by the fraudulent vendee. In Cheney v. Gleason, 117 Mass. 557, a bill was filed by the defrauded vendor of real estate to reach a mortgage taken by the vendee on the land on a resale by him, and the court sustained the bill and granted the relief. In Hammond v. Pennock, 61 N. Y. 145, the court rescinded, at the instance of the plaintiff, a contract for the exchange of real and personal property, owned by the plaintiff, for a farm of the defendant in Michigan, which had been consummated on the plaintiff's part by a conveyance and transfer, the contract and conveyance having been obtained by the defendant by fraudulent representations, and the defendant having, after the conveyance to him, contracted to sell part of the land conveyed to him by the plaintiff, the court adapted the relief to the circumstances and rescinded the conveyance so far as practicable, and adjudged that the defendant account for the proceeds of the personal property included in the sale.

If the jurisdiction exercised by courts of equity in respect to undoing fraudulent conveyances of real estate and following the proceeds in the hands of the fraudulent grantee, appertains in like manner and degree to sales of personalty, it would seem that the plaintiff in the present case was entitled to relief. The fact that before the action was brought, Burkhalter & Co. had made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors to the defendant is no obstacle to the relief, if, except for the assignment, the court would have interposed, on the prayer of the plaintiff, its preventive and other remedies, to have enabled the plaintiff to reach the unpaid claims against the sub-vendees. An assignee for creditors is not a purchaser for value, and stands in no other or better position than his assignor as respects a remedy to reach the proceeds of the sales by Burkhalter & Co. Goodwin v. Wertheimer, 99 N. Y. 149; Barnard v. Campbell, 58 N. Y. 76, 17 Am. Rep. 208; Ratcliffe v. Sangston, 18 Md. 388; Bussing v. Rice, 2 Cush. 48. It is claimed that the general creditors of the firm will be prejudiced if the plaintiff is allowed to prevail, and that he will thereby acquire a preference over the other creditors of the insolvent firm. But general creditors have no equity or right to have appropriated to the payment of their debts the property of the plaintiff, or property to which it is equitably entitled as between it and Burkhalter & Co.

They, so far as appears, advanced nothing and gave no credit on the faith of the firm's possession of the sugars, assuming that that element would have had any bearing on the case. If the sugars had existed in specie in the hands of the assignee it cannot be doubted that the plaintiff on rescinding the sale would have been entitled to retake them, and the general creditors are in no worse position, if the plaintiff is awarded the proceeds, than they would have been if the sugars had remained unsold. Much was said on the argument upon the difference between a trespasser taking and disposing of the property of another and the case of a sale of personal property to a vendee induced by fraud. It is the law of this state, as in England, that title passes on such a sale to the fraudulent vendee, notwithstanding that the crime of false pretenses is included in the statute definition of a felony, but which was not such at common law. Barnard v. Campbell, supra; Wise v. Grant, 140 N. Y. 593; Benjamin, Sales, 6th ed. § 493; Fansett v. Smith, 23 N. Y. 252; Benedict v. Williams, 48 Hun, 124.

But a purchase procured by fraud is in no sense, as between the vendor and vendee, rightful. It was wrongful, and while a transfer so induced vests a right of property in the vendee until the sale is rescinded, the means and act by which it was procured was a violation of an elemental principle of justice. But the rule is that a sale of personal property induced by fraud is not void, but is only voidable on the part of the party defrauded. "This does not mean that the contract is void until ratified; it means that the contract is valid until rescinded." When a contract of sale infected by fraud of the vendee is consummated and the property delivered, the vendor on discovering the fraud may pursue one of several courses. He may affirm the contract, and an omission to disaffirm within a reasonable time after notice of the fraud will be deemed a ratification. He may elect to rescind it, and thereby his title to the property is reinstated as against the purchaser and all persons deriving title from him, not being bona fide purchasers for 27 L. R. A.

value, and a purchaser is not such who takes the property for an antecedent debt or who purchased the property on credit and has not paid the purchase money or been placed in a position where payment to a transferee of the claim cannot be resisted. Barnard v. Campbell, supra; Dows v. Kidder, 84 N. Y. 121; Matson v. Melchor, 42 Mich. 477; 1 Benjamin, Sales, p. 570, note.

Upon rescission, the vendor may follow and retake the property wherever he can find it, except in the case mentioned, or he may sue for conversion. When these legal remedies are available and adequate, clearly there is no ground for going to a court of equity. The legal remedies in such case are and ought to be held exclusive. But in a case like the present, where there is no adequate legal remedy, either on the contract of sale or for the recovery of the property in specie, or by an action of tort, is the power of a court of equity so fettered that, where it is shown that the property has been converted by the vendee and the proceeds, in the form of notes or credits, are identified beyond question in his hands, or in possession of his voluntary assignee, it cannot impound such proceeds for the benefit of the defrauded vendor? The only reason urged in denial of this power, which to our minds has any force, is based on the assumption that it would be contrary to public policy to admit such an equitable principle into commercial transactions. But with the two limitations adverted to, and which ought strictly to be observed (1) that it must appear that the plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law, either in consequence of insolvency, the dispersion of the property or other cause, and (2) that nothing will be adjudged as proceeds except what can be specifically identified as such, business interests will have adequate protection. Indeed, the disturbance would be much less than is now permitted in following the property from hand to hand until a bona fide purchaser is found.

The case of Small v. Attwood, Younge, 507, is a very instructive case, which involved a large amount, was argued by eminent counsel and received great consideration. It supports, we think, the equitable jurisdiction invoked in the present case. It was an action by the purchaser to rescind a contract for the sale of mines and mining property induced by fraudulent representations, and to recover the purchase money paid to the amount of about £200,000. The court found the fraud and rescinded the contract, and made a decree for an accounting. On a supplemental bill being filed, showing that the purchase money paid had been invested by the seller in public securities in his name, which he afterwards caused to be put in the name of his mother, and that the purchaser had no other means adequate to repay the purchase money, the chancellor, on an application for an injunction restraining the transfer of the securities, held that the money paid could be followed into the stock purchased, and granted the injunction. The case Re Carin's Petition v. Gleason, 105 N. Y. 256, was an attempt to fasten upon the estate of an insolvent a preferential lien for money put into his hands by the plaintiff for the purchase of a mortgage for her, and which he applied, without authority, to the payment of his debts before the assignment, with the exception of a small sum ($80.00) which went into the hands of the assignee. The court held that the money, which the insolvent had used to pay debts prior to the assignment, was not a preferred debt, but sustained her right to be paid the small sum which the assignee received belonging to the trust. This case points the distinction. The character of the debt gave it no priority. The fund had been dissipated and could not be traced among the assigned assets. There was no equitable ground of preference except for the small sum mentioned.

Upon the whole case, we are of the opinion that the judgment on the report of the referees was correct, and the order granting a new trial should, therefore, be reversed and the judgment on the report of the referees affirmed, with costs.

All concur.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

KANSAS CITY, MEMPHIS & BIRMINGHAM R. CO., Appl.,

Josephus SMITH.

(.....Mm.....)

1. The common law of England though adopted and accepted as the law of the state and though unchanged by statute is not under all circumstances and conditions to be applied as the local common law.
2. The right to erect great railroad embankments may be necessarily implied in the duty to provide suitable and safe roadways so that when done with due regard to the rights of owners of adjacent and proximate lands any necessary and consequent injury to such lands must be borne by the owners.
3. Flood waters of a large stream which in time of ordinary floods include within their course farms innumerable and railroads, villages, towns, and cities, cannot be regarded as within the strict rules of law on the subject of obstructing streams.
4. The mere fact that water on land overflowed in an extraordinary flood was somewhat deeper, remained longer, and flowed with stronger current than it would have done except for a railroad embankment does not show any injury by reason of the embankment where the crops must have been covered with water long before any water was diverted thereto by the embankment.

(March 11, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Monroe County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged obstruction of a watercourse to the injury of plaintiff's property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wallace Pratt, with Messrs. Sykes & Bristow and J. W. Buchanan, for appellant:

In the absence of proof showing an improper construction of the railroad, the presumption is that the railroad company properly constructed its embankments for the operation of its line of railroad.

Morrissey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 88 Neb. 406; Hannaher v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 5 Dak. 1; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Schaffer, 124 Ill. 113; Emery v. Raleigh & G. R. Co. 103 N. C. 209; Columbus & W. R. Co. v. Bridges, 86 Ala. 448.

Is a land owner liable for constructing on his own land an embankment which interferes with the flow of surface water, thereby causing injury to the lands of adjoining proprietors?

Under the rule of the civil law this question must be answered in the affirmative.

24 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, pp. 907-916.

But under the common law there is no such liability.

Gannon v. Hargadon, 10 Allen, 106, 87 Am. Dec. 625; 24 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 917; Lawrence v. Great Northern R. Co. 16 Q. B. 643; Jean v. Pennsylvania Co. 9 Ind. App. 56; Cairo & V. R. Co. v. Stevens, 78 Ind. 278, 38 Am. Rep. 189.

The overflow caused by a river spreading beyond its banks in time of high water must be regarded and may be treated as surface water.

Jean v. Pennsylvania Co. supra.

The right of an owner of land to occupy and improve it as he may see fit, either by erecting structures or by changing the surface, is not restricted by the fact that such use of his own land will cause surface water to flow over adjoining lands in greater quantities or in other directions than they were accustomed to flow.

Rathke v. Gardner, 184 Mass. 14; Abbott v. Kansas City, St. J. & O. B. R. Co. 85 Mo. 271; Lamb v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 78 Cal. 125; Gray v. McWilliams, 21 L. R. A. 593, 86 Cal. 157; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 721; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 1088, and note; Morrissey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 88 Neb. 406.

It is a necessary accompaniment to the rule of the civil law that the lower owner may demand that the water be not interfered with above him. If this right does not exist, then neither does the other right of the civil law which allows the upper owner to drain water from his land onto those of his lower neighbor. In England the lower owner has no such right.

Rawstorn v. Taylor, 11 Exch. 869; Alcorn v. Sadler, 66 Miss. 221; Morrissey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. supra.

Messrs. J. A. Blair and Brame & Alexander for appellee.

NOTE.—As to the adoption of the common law in this country, see note to McKennon v. Wian (Okla.) 23 L. R. A. 501.

As to the overflow of a river caused by an embankment, see Cairo, V. & C. R. Co. v. Brevoort (C. C. D. Ind.) 25 L. R. A. 537, and note, 27 L. R. A.

Cooper, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by the appellee to recover against the appellant damages alleged to have resulted to his lands and crops from an overflow caused by obstructing the waters of Town creek by the roadbed of appellant's railway. It appears from the evidence that the valley through which Town creek flows is from two to three miles wide, and that the plaintiff's farm is situated adjacent to and in a bend of the creek, and the land for injury to which and the crops thereon this suit is brought is south of the creek, while the roadbed of the defendant company is on the north side, and about three fourths of a mile distant. The road runs down the valley and on a line parallel with the general course of the stream, and is upon an embankment from three to four feet high. There are, within the distance of two or three miles opposite the appellee's land, three streams, which flow from the north across the railroad and into Town creek. Where they cross the road, bridges and trestles were put in of sufficient dimensions to permit the free flow of the water coming down these streams, but there was no outlet between these bridges. Town creek is a stream nearly twenty miles long, and empties into the Tombigbee river some three miles east of the plaintiff's farm. Its banks are about 20 feet high, and its channel 125 feet wide. It drains in its course a large section of country, and in times of heavy rains its valley is inundated to a greater or less degree annually, and in some years of excessive rains the whole valley is submerged to a depth of from two to four feet on the more elevated portions. The floods of the year 1874 and those of April and July, 1892, were the heaviest ever known by those familiar with its history. The damages for which the plaintiff sues resulted from the flood of July, 1892, and consisted in the loss of his crops and injury to a portion of his cultivated lands, the soil of which was washed away. The plaintiff's contention is that, but for the railroad embankment, the overflowing waters from Town creek would have passed further to the north, and then have returned to the channel of the creek below his farm, or would have flowed down the valley, north of the creek, to the Tombigbee river; that by reason of the roadbed, and a want of proper and sufficient opening therein, the flood water was thrown back and a cross current created, by reason of which the quantity of water south of the creek was materially increased, and that the erosion by which his land was injured resulted from the increased current. The evidence for the plaintiff tends to support his contention. For the defendant, evidence was introduced that before the building of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, Town creek was worked as a public highway, and depended upon by the community as its means of shipping out crops and getting in supplies; that, after the Mobile & Ohio Railroad was constructed, the creek was abandoned as a highway, until in the year 1883 it was cleaned out by the United States, but, not being greatly used, was again abandoned, and bushes and trees permitted to grow in its channel, and drift to accumulate; that early in the year 1892 a large quantity of timber growing between the creek and the roadbed had been felled by the Nettleton Hardwood Company, the laps and tops of which were left on the ground. And so the defendant contended that, if there had in fact been any increase in the quantity of the flood waters upon the valley, it was caused by the obstructions in the channel of the stream, and, if the current was changed, this could as reasonably be attributed to the act of the Nettleton Company in cutting timber and leaving the tops thereof in the valley as to the roadway of the defendant. For the plaintiff it is argued that the defendant's roadway obstructs the waters of a stream which the plaintiff was entitled to have flow according to its usual course; that, though the water, by reason of its volume, had overflowed the banks of Town creek, it was yet a part of that stream, and ought to have been permitted by the defendant to pursue its flow according to nature, unimpeded by any artificial obstruction. For the defendant it is contended that the water, having left the channel of the stream and spread over the adjacent valley, was surface water, and as such the defendant might lawfully repel it from its roadway, and for any injury resulting therefrom no right of action exists.

27 L. R. A.

In England it seems to be settled that riparian owners are entitled to have streams to flow in their usual course, whether in times of low or flood water, and that flood water overflowing the banks and following the course of the stream along the valley, but without the channel, is a part of the stream, against which one owner may not protect himself to the injury of another. Rex v. Trafford, 1 Barn. & Ad. 874; Atty-Gen. v. Earl of Lonsdale, L. R. 7 Eq. 387; Mason v. Shrewsbury & H. R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. B. 581; Lawrence v. Great Northern R. Co. 16 Q. B. 643. In Atty-Gen. v. Earl of Lonsdale, supra, while the jurisdiction of the court of equity to grant the injunction prayed against an obstruction in the river was upheld only on the ground that the obstruction impeded navigation, it was said, in effect, that the extent of the injury sustained by the plaintiff, which was nominal, did not affect his right as riparian owner to object to the obstruction placed in the stream by, and which was of great value to, the defendant. There is some conflict of authority in this country, but the decided preponderance is with the English cases. Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio St. 287; Barden v. Portage, 79 Wis. 126; O'Connell v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 87 Ga. 246, 13 L. R. A. 394, in which many cases are reviewed; Byrne v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 88 Minn. 212; Currier v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 7 Lea, 388; Burwell v. Hobson, 12 Gratt. 322, 65 Am. Dec. 247; Cairo, V. & C. R. Co. v. Brevoort, 25 L. R. A. 527, and note thereto.

But there are some authorities holding that flood water is surface water. Morris v. Council Bluffs, 67 Iowa, 343, 56 Am. Rep. 343; Cairo & V. R. Co. v. Stevens, 73 Ind. 293, 38 Am. Rep. 189; Shelbyville & B. Turnp.

Co. v. Green, 99 Ind. 205; Taylor v. Fickas, 64 Ind. 167, 81 Am. Rep. 114. In Sinai v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co., 71 Miss. 547, we had occasion to consider the right of a railway company to obstruct by its embankment a body of water consisting of overflow and surface water, and decided that under the circumstances of that case the company was liable to an adjoining proprietor for injury caused by throwing back such water on his lands. It may well be doubted whether the radical differences sometimes asserted between the rule of the civil law and that called the common-law rule in reference to surface waters exists to the extent indicated by the general language of the text-books and expressions to be found in many decisions. In Boyd v. Conklin, 54 Mich. 588, 52 Am. Rep. 881, Judge Campbell, in an exhaustive and able opinion, affirms that both rules rest upon substantially the same principles, and that from the time of Brocton down the common-law courts have referred to the civil-law writers as having defined the subject of rights of water in substantial agreement with the recognized rules of the common law, and concludes his opinion with the declaration that: "There seems to be no reason for attempting to draw distinctions between the civil and the common law on the subject. The authorities recognize the principles as in no sense conventional, or derived from any school of jurisprudence, but as resting on the immunity of one man's property from injury by another in violation of natural justice, and in disregard of the relative conditions arising from its position. Each may do with his own what is consistent with the fair interests of the other."

It is a mistake to assume that the common law of England, though adopted and accepted as the law of the state, and though unchanged by statute, is under all circumstances and conditions to be applied as the local common law. In many instances a directly opposite rule is the common law of the state. In Vicksburg & J. R. Co. v. Patton, 81 Miss. 156, 66 Am. Dec. 552, the rule of the common law that a man should fence in his cattle was declared to be inapplicable to our condition, and the right of free pasturage was held to exist as a part of our common law, and the duty of fencing them out was devolved upon other landowners desiring to exclude them from cultivated or other lands. See also Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650; Crane v. French, 88 Miss. 508. In Sinai v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co., supra, we declared that the supposed rule of the common law, under which it was then claimed that each proprietor had the absolute right of excluding surface water from his premises, regardless of any injury to an adjoining proprietor, could not be invoked (if it in fact existed) by a railroad company asserting a right to submerge hundreds of acres of adjoining land with surface water by its embankment. It is apparent that a rule intended to regulate the correlative rights of adjoining landowners whose property is devoted to agriculture or residence purposes could not be applied to the same extent either in favor of or against a railroad company owning a strip of land 100 feet wide and hundreds of miles long. The duty imposed by law upon these corporations to provide suitable and safe roadways over which ponderous engines and trains are to be driven carries with it from necessity the right to erect great embankments on which the rails are set; and when this is done with due regard to the rights of owners of adjacent and proximate lands, any necessary and consequent injury to such lands must be borne by the owner. But such companies may not, under a claim of being absolute owners of their roadways, so construct them as to unnecessarily impair the value of adjacent property.

In this view of the relative rights and duties of the parties, it is not of controlling importance to hold that the flood water from which the plaintiff claims to have suffered be dealt with as surface water, or as the water of a stream, or as a separate and distinct sort. It cannot be the law, however, in this state, that the flood waters of the large streams which are within or along the borders of this state are to be dealt with as the waters of a stream, not to be obstructed, impeded, or turned aside under any circumstances, except upon condition that the persons so doing shall respond in damages for all injury sustained by another riparian owner, and be liable for nominal damages as for the infringement of the legal rights of adjacent proprietors who in truth suffer no real injury. In Chapman v. Copeland, 55 Miss. 476, it was held that the diversion of a watercourse gave to the plaintiff a right of action and the recovery of nominal damages, whether any real injury had or had not resulted. If the waters of the Mississippi river, which at flood sometimes spread in width from twenty to forty miles, and flow in a continuous and unbroken body down the valley, are to be dealt with as the waters of a stream, and the whole valley is to be given up as the course way of the stream, the most fertile portion of our state may at once be abandoned. From Memphis to Vicksburg, and from the foothills to the river, there is not a square yard of land that was not deposited by the overflowing waters of the river. If the course usually pursued by the ordinary flood waters is the channel of the stream, the whole valley is the channel. It is evident that to so declare would be to announce as a positive rule of law, and as an indisputable fact, that which is not true, and which, if put into practical operation, would relegate prosperous and fertile districts to the condition of a wilderness. There are farms innumerable, and railroads, villages, towns, and cities situated in a watercourse if the usual flow of the flood waters of the Mississippi river mark and define the course of that stream. It is manifest that to apply the strict rules of law controlling in cases of streams and the obstructions thereof to such a river and to such conditions is, in the very nature of things, impracticable and impossible. Calling these overwhelming floods surface or channel water for the purpose of dealing with them under rules applicable to entirely different conditions, advances us no step in the solution of the questions involved. We must deal with things, and not names, and conditions inherently and radically different cannot be assimilated by mere terminology.

The rules governing the rights and duties of individuals in reference to waters rest upon principles which underlie very many other property rights. At last they depend upon the two legal maxims that one may make such use as he wills of his own, and that he must so use his own as not to impinge the legal rights of others. As to surface water and streams flowing along their channels, general rules have been formulated, which are usually applicable, and under which the relative rights and duties of parties may be adjusted; but to apply these rules to waters of a radically different class is to measure different conditions by a single standard. To say that flood waters are surface waters, and may always be dealt with as such, or that they may be fenced against as may the waters of the sea, regardless of consequences, would be to give to one riparian owner the power and right of benefiting and preserving his own property at the direct expense of another. But, on the other hand, if it be the rule that alluvial lands subject to occasional floodings are to be dealt with as comprising the bed of a stream, the beneficial ownership therein is practically destroyed in the interest and for the benefit of other riparian owners. The difficulty or impossibility of formulating an exact rule by which the rights of parties under varying circumstances may be adjusted is of but little importance in view of the fact that it is not the less difficult to determine such rights by the application of those already existing, and which were formulated for the control of somewhat analogous, but not similar, conditions. It is but the usual difficulty of applying legal principles to varying facts. Along the lines which separate what is clearly the exercise of a legal right from the commission of actionable injury, there are often found circumstances in which it cannot be said with confidence to which class the particular act should be assigned, but this difficulty is not peculiar to the class of cases now under consideration, and suggests rather the propriety of resorting to more flexible, rather than more rigid, rules. But on the clearly shown facts of the case now before us we think no right of recovery is disclosed, (1) because of failure of duty by the defendant in the construction of its roadway is established, and (2) because no causal connection is proved between the act of the defendant and the injury resulting from the flood. The roadway of the defendant company is not shown to be of sufficient height to obstruct the waters of Town creek so as to deflect them upon the land of the plaintiff at times of ordinary or periodically recurring floods. The witnesses speak of the floods of 1874, and of those of April and July, 1892, as having been the highest ever known. It is not claimed by the plaintiff that his lands would not have been submerged by the flood of July (for injury by which he sues) if no railroad had been built in the valley. His contention is that the water was somewhat deeper on his land than it would have been, that it remained longer, and flowed with stronger current. But it must be borne in mind that all the evidence relates to an exceptional condition of affairs, to a flood equalled but twice and exceeded but once in the memory of the inhabitants; and against such contingency it would, in no event, be negligence not to provide. But we are not disposed to rest our conclusion on this ground alone, for it involves the concession that, as against the overflowing waters of alluvial streams, a riparian owner may do nothing to protect himself against periodically recurring floods, but, so long as they continue as a part of the moving mass of waters of which the stream is the thread, must give way to them as flowing in a watercourse. To so hold would, in our opinion, be to apply to bodies of water of a distinctive class rules which were formulated for entirely different conditions, and which, if followed, will lead away from the principles upon which the rules rest. Some part of the valleys of alluvial streams must be land not within a watercourse. How much, it may be difficult to determine, but surely something may be withdrawn by man from the natural condition of things for his own use. We think it may with safety be said that a valley of a mile or a mile and a half along streams of the class of Town creek goes far beyond any requirement of the law for the course of the stream. How much less than this would be sufficient we need not attempt to declare. That the embankment of the railway has not obstructed the course of the stream is demonstrated by the fact that no injury has resulted to any one during the ordinary floods, which have passed harmlessly away. It is the extraordinary, the exceptional, the unexpected, which has caused the injury for which the plaintiff sues. Upon what theory the jury proceeded in finding that the increased depth of the water caused by the embankment was an injury to the standing green crops of the plaintiff, we cannot perceive. Under all the testimony it is evident that the crops must have been covered with water long before any water deflected by the embankment of the defendant could have reached the land. Of what value a field of corn was in the green ear, and covered by water to a depth of two or three feet, or how the injury thereto was increased by piling up on it a few tons more of water, it is difficult to see. One witness, it is true, seems to say that the plaintiff's crop was worth fifty cents per bushel in the field, and that it was damaged to that extent by the water forced thereon by the defendant's embankment. But this witness evidently meant that this would have been the value of the crop but for the overflow, and it is not to be doubted that the crop would have been as completely destroyed by the flood if the railroad had never been constructed. We need not review the evidence to show the want of causal connection between the act of the defendant and the injury to the plaintiff. We dispose of the cause on the ground above indicated,—i. e. that on the facts proved no liability rests upon the defendant as for the obstruction of a watercourse.

The judgment is reversed.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

PENNSYLVANIA R. CO., Appt.,
v.
MONTGOMERY COUNTY PASSENGER
R. CO.

(.....Pa.....)

1. Electric railways over country roads connecting widely separated cities and towns cannot be built without consent of the owners of the fee of such roads, notwithstanding consent of the town authorities has been given, under the General Street Railway Act of 1889 authorizing corporations for the construction of street railways "on any street or highway" on which no track is already laid or authorized to be laid, but giving no right of eminent domain and providing that every railway must have a continuous route forming a complete circuit with its own track.
2. An electric railway imposes an additional servitude on the land over which public roads run outside of municipal boundaries.
3. The consent of supervisors to the construction of a street railway over a road must be given when they are together and acting in their official character and should appear upon the township books kept by the town clerk.
4. A street railway company has no right to build any part of its line until it has the right to complete it, where it has no power of eminent domain.
5. An injunction against the construction of an electric railway over public country roads can be had by the owner until his damages are paid or secured to his satisfaction.

(March 26, 1896.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Montgomery County in favor of defendant in an action brought to enjoin it from constructing an electric street railway on a public highway in front of plaintiff's property without making compensation to it. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Messrs. William F. Solly, Charles H. Stinson, David W. Sellers, and C. Henry Stinson, for appellant;

The appellee is a mere trespasser and is not empowered, not having the right of eminent domain, to construct its electric railway over the public road on the appellant's land without its consent.

Sterling's App. 111 Pa. 35, 56 Am. Rep. 246; Miffin v. Harrisburg, P. M. & L. R. Co. 16 Pa. 182; Chambers v. Furry, 1 Yeates, 167; Levis v. Jones, 1 Pa. 386, 44 Am. Dec. 138; Chess v. Manown, 8 Watts, 219; Phillips v. Dunkirk, W. & P. R. Co. 78 Pa. 177; Lance's App. 55 Pa. 16, 93 Am. Dec. 722; Jones v.

NOTE.—For the effect of street railways as additional servitudes, see note to Western Railway of Alabama v. Alabama Grand Trunk R. Co. (Ala.) 17 L. R. A. 474.

It will be noticed that the present decision distinguishes between city streets and country roads in respect to the effect of street railways as additional burdens, and the case is in this respect a new departure.

87 L. R. A.

Eric & W. Valley R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 768, 151 Pa. 30; Junction R. Co. v. Boyd, 8 Phila. 224; Presbyterian Soc. Trustees in Waterloo v. Auburn & R. R. Co. 8 Hill, 567; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co. 16 N. Y. 97, 69 Am. Dec. 651; Mahon v. New York Cent. R. Co. 24 N. Y. 658; Re Bloomfield & R. Nat. Gas-Light Co's Petition v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 386; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co. 4 Cush. 63.

When the Act of 1889 speaks of streets or highways, it refers to the streets or highways of a city, town, or village.

Cochran v. Washington Library Co. 6 Phila. 492.

The subject of building passenger railways on township roads is not at all expressed in the title of an act providing for the "incorporation of street passenger railways." The two things are entirely different.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

Dorsey's App. 72 Pa. 193; Union Pass. R. Co's App. 81 Pa. 91; Beckert v. Allegheny, 85 Pa. 191; Re Phenixville Road, 109 Pa. 44; Rogers v. Manufacturers Imp. Co. 109 Pa. 109; Re Carbondale & P. Turnp. & Plank Road, 23 W. N. C. 105.

The consent of both local authorities and the land owners must be obtained.

Re King's County Elev. R. Co. 105 N. Y. 97; Re Rochester Electric R. Co. 128 N. Y. 361.

Messrs. James B. Holland, N. H. Langelere, and John G. Johnson, for appellee:

The owner of lands bounding on a public highway has no right to compensation because of the construction thereon of an electric railway. The appellant had no greater right to compensation than it would have possessed had its lands been located on a street of a borough.

McDevitt v. People's Nat. Gas Co. 160 Pa. 367; Rafferty v. Central Traction Co. 147 Pa. 590.

The Schuylkill river road, upon which the railway of the appellee was being laid, was a street or highway within the meaning of the Act of 1889.

It is the right of a passenger railway company, organized under the Act of 1889 for the construction of a road extending through more than one municipality, borough, or township to construct such road in parts, as the same, from time to time, shall be authorized to be constructed, by the local authorities immediately concerned.

An abutting land owner has no right, where the construction of the railway is with the consent of the authorities of the locality in which it is being laid, to object to such construction because the consent of the authorities of other localities, through which the same runs, has not been obtained.

Philadelphia & Gray's Ferry Pass. R. Co's App. 102 Pa. 123; Farmers Market Co. v. Philadelphia & R. Terminal R. Co. 142 Pa. 593; National Docks R. Co. v. Central R. Co. 82 N. J. Eq. 760; Ottaquechee Woolen Co. v. Newton, 57 Vt. 451; Western Pennsylvania R. Co's App. 104 Pa. 406; Germantown Pass. R. Co. v. Citizens Pass. R. Co. 151 Pa. 183;

Junction Pass. Railway v. Williamsport Pass. Railway, 154 Pa. 116.

Williams, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Our system of street passenger railways had its origin in the days of special legislation. Each company then had its own act of incorporation, in which its route was described and its powers defined. These companies were confined to the cities and large towns of the state, and their cars were moved by horse power, and were a substitute for the omnibus, and other vehicles devoted to the carriage of passengers, which had been previously in common use. After the adoption of the new constitution the practice of separate legislation for each company became impracticable, and in 1876 a general law was passed providing for the organization of street-railway companies for the purpose of "constructing, maintaining, and operating a street railway for public use in the conveyance of passengers." No power of eminent domain was conferred on these companies, but the several provisions of the act show that such railways were to be constructed upon the streets, conforming to the grade of the streets, and subject to the regulation of the municipal authorities. The Act of 1876 gave to street-railway companies, in cities of the first class, the right to "use other than animal power" in the movement of their cars. The Act of May, 1878, conferred the like right upon the street-railway companies in cities of the second and third classes. The general law further provided that any company organized under its provisions should maintain an office for the transaction of its business "in the city" where its railway was located. All these provisions show that the street railways contemplated by the General Act of 1878 were intended for the accommodation of the crowded streets of cities, and for no other purpose. The present general law relating to these corporations was passed in 1889. It was intended to bring together the valuable provisions of several acts of assembly into one comprehensive statute, and to make some changes that experience had shown to be desirable. It authorized the incorporation of five or more persons for the purpose of "constructing, maintaining, and operating a street railway on any street or highway upon which no track is laid or authorized to be laid" under existing charters, with the privilege of occupying "any street" by any power other than by locomotive. It required the route to be set out in the application for incorporation stating the streets and highways upon which it was to be built, and showing "the circuit of the route, the amount of the capital stock of the company," and other particulars. It required all companies incorporated under its provisions to maintain an office where the railroad was located. Section 15 provided that "no street passenger railway shall be constructed by any company incorporated under this act within the limits of any city, borough or townships without the consent of the local authorities thereof, nor shall any street passenger railway be incorporated hereunder which shall not have a continuous route from the beginning to the end, forming a complete circuit with its own track, excepting the five hundred feet to be used under section fourteen hereof."

From these provisions, we think it is apparent that the attempt now being made to convert these city conveniences into long lines of transportation, connecting widely separated cities and towns by electric railways traversing country roads, was not anticipated or provided for by the legislature. The failure to confer upon these companies the power of eminent domain would, if it stood alone, be sufficient to justify this conclusion. The land taken for streets in cities and boroughs is in the exclusive possession of the municipality, which may use the footway as well as the cartway for any urban servitude without further compensation to the lot owners. Provost, Jr. v. New Chester Water Co. 163 Pa. 275; Reading v. Davis, 158 Pa. 360; McDevitt v. People's Nat. Gas Co. 160 Pa. 367. Nor does the construction of a street passenger railway upon the surface of the street impose any additional servitude upon the property fronting on the street so occupied. Rafferty v. Central Traction Co. 147 Pa. 579. But the easement acquired by the public by proceedings under the road laws is an easement for passage only. The owner is entitled to the possession of his land for all other purposes. We held, therefore, in Sterling's App., 111 Pa. 35, 56 Am. Rep. 246, that the occupancy of a country road by a pipe line imposed an additional servitude upon the farm owner, while in McDevitt v. People's Nat. Gas Co., supra, we held that a pipe line laid within the limits of the street by authority of the city did not impose any additional servitude on the lot owner. The reason for the distinction is fully stated in the opinion in the latter case. The same distinction exists, and for the same reasons, between urban and suburban property, as to the right of corporations to occupy a highway for a street passenger railway. This, as will be seen by the cases cited above, is an urban servitude, to which suburban property has not been subjected by law, up to this time. The consent of township authorities justifies an entry upon the public road, so far as the public is concerned; but the supervisors of the townships have no power to bind private property, or subject it to a servitude, for the benefit of any person or corporation other than the township and the public it represents. The carriage of passengers through the township, on their journey from one city or borough to another, by rail, is in no sense a township purpose; and whether these passengers make their journey in cars drawn by a locomotive over a steam railroad, or in those propelled by electricity over tracks laid upon the highways, is immaterial both to taxpayers and to landowners along the route traveled, except as the adoption of one or the other of these modes of transportation may affect the township roads, or the private property of citizens. When the supervisors gave their consent to the occupation of the township roads by a street railway, they speak as the representatives of those who build and those who use the roads, but not as the representatives of the private property over which the roads pass. The street-railway companies cannot reach the property owners either through "the local authorities," or by the right of eminent domain, as the law now stands; and it is not easy to see how such a company can protect itself in the use of country roads except by contract with every owner of property along the roads they wish to occupy. The trouble is that the supposed needs of the country have outgrown its legislation, and an effort is now being made to adapt street railways to purposes for which they were never intended, and for which the existing legislation relating to them was not framed.

Cities and boroughs possess the necessary power over their streets to enable them to authorize their use by a street railway. Townships do not possess municipal powers, and, under existing laws, their control over the public roads is limited. But in this connection another interesting question suggests itself. How is the assent of "the local authorities" to be obtained in any given case, and what is the proper evidence that it has been given? The township books, in the custody of the town clerk, are the records of the township, and should afford evidence of the action taken by the supervisors in all matters of public importance. A paper in the pocket of a contractor or of some officer of a corporation is not the proper evidence of action by the township or the school district. The action needed is not that of the individuals who compose the board, but of the official body. Thus it was held that a contract signed by the members of the school board separately did not bind the district. The best evidence of their official action was their minutes kept by the secretary. Wachob v. School Dist. of Bingham, 8 Phila. 568. For the same reason a contract signed by the president and secretary was held to be invalid. It had not been acted upon by the board when in session. School Dist. of Denison Twp. v. Padden, 89 Pa. 395. One supervisor may bind the township by an act that is ministerial in its character. Dull v. Ridgway, 9 Pa. 272; Pottsville v. Norwegian Twp., 14 Pa. 543. Not so, however, when the act is one that requires deliberation and the exercise of judgment. Cooper v. Lampeter Twp., 8 Watts, 125; Union Twp. v. Gibboney, 94 Pa. 534; Sommerset Twp. v. Parson, 105 Pa. 860. In such cases the supervisors must be together, and their action must be taken in their official character, and should appear upon the township book kept by the town clerk. If not so taken, it does not bind the township, and has no validity whatever. The supervisors should consider and deliberate upon any application made to them for leave to occupy any of the township roads with a street railway. If they decide to grant the application upon certain terms and conditions, as to the manner and extent of the occupancy permitted and the extent of repairs to be required, these terms should appear in the record of the meeting, as well as the consent; and a contract that does not rest on such official action, properly taken by the proper officers, is utterly worthless. But we know, as matter of current history, that street railways have been projected, and actually constructed, and are now in operation, over country roads, where no legal consent has been obtained, and where no attention has been paid to the rights of property holders. Such railways cannot now be torn up or enjoined either by the township officers, or at the instance of land owners along their routes. Where such enterprises have been allowed to proceed, and the expenditure of large sums of money has been permitted, it would be inequitable to correct at this time what was a mutual mistake, under the influence of which these enterprises have been pushed to completion; but it would seem desirable that such charters should not be granted in future until the legislature has made such provision for the assessment of damages to property as shall protect the owners from the additional servitude which the construction of electric railways does certainly impose upon all adjoining owners outside of municipal boundaries. At present an action at law is the only remedy within the reach of an injured person who has suffered a railway to be built across his land without objection; but equity will interpose to protect him, if he comes in proper time, by enjoining the construction until his damages have been paid or secured to his satisfaction.

The only remaining question raised in this case is over the right of a street railway to build any part of its line before it has the right to complete it. A steam railroad may enter upon any part of its line and commence building, subject only to its duty to complete the line in accordance with its charter. The reason of this is that it is clothed with the power of eminent domain, and may enter and appropriate land regardless of the will of the owner. A street-railway company, as we have seen, does not possess the power of eminent domain. It cannot build under its charter alone. It must have the consent of the proper municipal or local authorities, or it cannot move. If the proposed line passes through a city, borough, or township intermediate the termini, and that city, borough, or township refuses its permission, the power to build the road described in the application and charter cannot be exercised. It must be possible for the company to complete its line before it has a right, as against any city, borough, or township into which its line extends, to begin work. It is not possible for such company to complete its line without the consent of the local authorities of the districts through which it passes; and, where this is refused in one or more of the municipal or quasi municipal divisions through which its line runs, the building of its proposed road under its charter is an impossibility. Let us suppose, for purposes of illustration, a charter to authorize the construction of a street railway from A., through certain roads in B., C., and D., to the city of E., and that consent has been obtained from the local authorities of A., and C., and of E., but refused by the local authorities of B. and D. The proposed line is thereby cut up into three wholly unconnected pieces. It is very clear that, under a charter authorizing the building of a line of road from A. to E., the company could not lawfully build three distinct local roads, viz. one in A., another in C., and the third in E. The consent given by A. to the construction of the line of road authorized by the charter would not estop the local authorities from objecting to the construction of a local road within its own limits. When confronted with its own consent, A. could well reply, "The road to which consent was given is not the road you are now building, for the building of that road has become impossible by the action of the authorities of B. and D."

The learned judge of the court below said in the conclusion of his opinion, "Corporations of this character are multiplying rapidly, and we may assume they are demanded by the public." This is a strong reason for meeting the questions involved in this case squarely, that the legislation needed to protect property owners against this class of corporations may be had at the same time that the powers necessary to convert what was intended as an urban convenience into a general mode of transportation are considered and conferred by the law-makers. In this case the defendant's line of so-called street railway extends through two boroughs, two townships, and over one county bridge over the Schuylkill river. The line and circuit of its road over the several highways to be occupied are fully set forth in its charter. The consent of the local authorities of West Conshohocken borough and of White Marsh township were refused. That of Upper Merion township was given. That of the borough of Conshohocken was given, and has since been withdrawn. Under such circumstances the building of the line of street railway described in and authorized by the charter is impossible, and the company has no right to proceed. The conclusions of the learned master were correctly drawn, and the decree recommended by him should have been made.

The decree appealed from is now reversed, and the record remitted, with direction to the court below to make the decree recommended by the master, awarding the injunction prayed for. The costs of this appeal to be paid by the appellee.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

S. V. SALENO, Appt.,
v.
City of NEOSHO, Respt.
(.....Mo.....)

1. The mere lack of the mayor's signature to an ordinance is not fatal where it is expressly provided that if he neglects or refuses to sign or return it with objections it shall become a law without his signature.
2. Approval of an ordinance by the acting president of the board of aldermen in the absence of the mayor is sufficient where the statute provides that in the absence of the mayor he shall perform the duties with all the rights, power, and jurisdiction of the mayor.
3. The validity of a contract with a city in no way depends upon the execution of duplicate copies as required by a provision that in every case of contract entered into duplicate copies shall be executed, one of which shall be filed and not taken from the office except for the purpose of evidence.
4. A contract by a city to pay a fixed price annually for a supply of water for a term of twenty years does not constitute a debt for the aggregate amount which may ultimately become payable within the meaning of a constitutional provision restricting the amount of city indebtedness.

(March 19, 1895.)

NORM.—On the disputed question whether or not a contract for a period of years on which payments are to be made annually as services are performed constitutes an indebtedness for the aggregate amount, see Beard v. Hopkinsville (Ky.) 23 L. R. A. 402, and note. Also the later cases of Carter v. Thorson (S. Dak.) 24 L. R. A. 794, and Linn v. Chambersburg (Pa.) 25 L. R. A. 217.
37 L. R. A.

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Barton County in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a contract by which the city had undertaken to pay certain rental for fire hydrants and water supply furnished by the plaintiff. Reversed.

Statement by Burgess, J.:

This is an action upon a contract alleged to have been entered into between plaintiff and defendant, under which plaintiff erected for defendant (a city of the fourth class) a system of waterworks, and defendant granted to plaintiff a waterworks franchise for a term of twenty years, and agreed to pay plaintiff, for the use of water for city and other purposes, $2,000 a year for the use of fifty water hydrants for a term of twenty years, and $30 per year for each additional hydrant which the city, by its board of aldermen, might order for the use and benefit of the city. The action is for hydrant rental due. As to the amount there is no controversy. The validity of the contract is denied by defendant, the only evidence thereof and details being included in an ordinance of said defendant (No. 118). Section 15 of said ordinance reads as follows: "This ordinance shall become binding as a contract on the said city of Neosho, in the event that said S. V. Saleno or his assigns shall, within ten days from the passage and publication thereof, file with the city clerk of said city his written acceptance of the terms, obligations, and conditions of this ordinance; and upon such acceptance, this ordinance shall constitute the contract, and shall be the measure of the rights and liabilities of the said city and of the said S. V. Saleno." On the 15th day of October, 1890, this ordinance was submitted to a vote of the people for ratification after its passage by the board of aldermen, under authority of an ordinance (No. 114) in which was set forth the object and purpose of the election to be held for the ratification or rejection of the contract as set forth in said ordinance first named, which last-named ordinance provided for all the details for holding the election, including notice thereof, polling places, the kind of ballots to be used, manner of ascertaining and declaring the result of the election, and certifying the same. An election was held in pursuance of the provisions of this ordinance, which resulted in an almost unanimous vote in favor of ratifying the contract as set forth by Ordinance No. 113. On the day next after the election, being October 16, 1890, the city clerk, by order of the board of aldermen, notified plaintiff that the contract had been ratified by a vote of the people of Neosho, voting at an election held in said city on the day previous, at which there were more than two thirds of the legal votes polled at said election in favor of ratifying said Ordinance No. 113; there being 293 votes polled for its ratification, and 82 votes against it. On the 17th day of October, 1890, plaintiff filed with said board his written acceptance of the contract. Plaintiff then gave bond, entered upon the construction of the waterworks, which were completed, and subsequently, to wit, November 23, 1891, accepted by the board of aldermen. By the terms of the contract, the hydrant rental is made payable semiannually, on the 1st days of January and July of each year. This suit was brought for the hydrant rental which became due July 1, 1892. The trial resulted in a judgment for defendant, and from the judgment plaintiff appealed.

Messrs. Thurman & Wray and James H. Pratt for appellant.

Messrs. O. L. Cravens and George Hubbard, for respondent:

The Waterworks Ordinance 113, so called, is void, because never properly signed, approved, or published.

Presiding at the meeting when said ordinance was finally passed by the board, it became the mayor's duty to authenticate its passage by his signature as such president of the board, and unless he did so the said ordinance did not take effect.

Becker v. Washington, 94 Mo. 875; Graham v. Carondelet, 33 Mo. 263; Carondelet v. Wolfert, 39 Mo. 305; Lewis v. St. Louis, 69 Mo. 595; Saxton v. Beach, 50 Mo. 488; Saxton v. St. Joseph, 60 Mo. 153; 7 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 8761.

It must appear that there has been a fair compliance with all the conditions precedent, whether prescribed by charter or ordinances.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 499; Cole v. Skrainka, 105 Mo. 303; Galtbreath v. Newton, 30 Mo. App. 380; Keane v. Cushing, 15 Mo. App. 96; Keane v. Klausman, 21 Mo. App. 485; Ex parte Bedell, 20 Mo. App. 125.

The alleged contract was not made or subscribed in duplicate by both parties, or deposited, as by law required, and is therefore void.

There being no contract in writing, dated when made and subscribed by the parties, Saleno acquired no rights and the city incurred no liabilities; nor can there be a recovery on quantum meruit, nor any estoppel or ratification.

Wolcott v. Lawrence County, 26 Mo. 273; Johnson v. School Dist. No. 1, 67 Mo. 319; Rumsey Mfg. Co. v. Schell City, 21 Mo. App. 175; Maupin v. Franklin County, 67 Mo. 327; Heidelberg v. St. Francois County, 100 Mo. 69; Sturgeon v. Hampton, 88 Mo. 203; Keating v. Kansas, 84 Mo. 415; McDonald v. New York, 68 N. Y. 23, 23 Am. Rep. 144; Stuart v. Cambridge, 125 Mass. 102; Starkey v. Minneapolis, 19 Minn. 203; Crutchfield v. Warrensburg, 30 Mo. App. 465; Mo. Const. art. 4, § 48; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 89; Prince v. Quincy, 128 Ill. 457; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 90, 28 L. ed. 363; Hubbard v. Williamstown, 66 Wis. 551; Austin v. Coggeshall, 12 R. I. 829, 34 Am. Rep. 648; Schumm v. Seymour, 24 N. J. Eq. 143; State v. Jersey City Street & Water Comrs. 55 N. J. L. 230; 1 Beach, Pub. Corp. § 627.

The etymology and definition of the word "subscribe" show that its meaning when applied to the signature to an instrument in writing is the signature or writing of one's name beneath or at the end of the instrument.

James v. Patten, 6 N. Y. 12, 55 Am. Dec. 876; Riley v. Riley, 36 Ala. 502; Pridgen v. Pridgen, 35 N. C. 260; Coon v. Rigden, 4 Colo. 282.

Though a written contract is executed, duly subscribed, etc., by the parties, yet, if it be not in duplicate and one copy filed with the clerk as required by section 3158, Rev. Stat. 1889, it is fatally defective and will not bind the municipality.

Globe Furniture Co. v. District No. 7, Twp. 62, Range 31, 51 Mo. App. 549.

Under the ordinance, the city incurred, if anything, an indebtedness beyond its income and revenue for the year and exceeding five per centum on its taxable property.

The current and necessary liabilities must be taken into account in reckoning the limits imposed by our constitution upon municipalities.

Book v. Earl, 87 Mo. 246; Barnard v. Knox County, 13 L. R. A. 244, 105 Mo. 383.

The most obvious meaning of our constitution does not allow the city to incur such obligations as is alleged to such an extent.

10 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law. p. 399; Lake County Comrs. v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060.

In cities and towns having less than ten thousand and more than one thousand inhabitants, said rate (of tax levy) shall not exceed fifty cents on the hundred dollars valuation.

Mo. Const. art. 10, § 11.

Power to contract indebtedness ceases with the power to tax for its payment.

Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. of Cleveland, Ohio, v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455; Gould v. Paris, 68 Tex. 511; San Francisco Gas Co. v. Brickwedel, 62 Cal. 641; Book v. Earl, 87 Mo. 246; Arnold v. Hawkins, 95 Mo. 569; Barnard v. Knox County, 18 L. R. A. 244, 105 Mo. 382; Black v. McGonigle, 108 Mo. 193; State v. Columbia, 111 Mo. 365; Lamar Water & Electric Light Co. v. Lamar (Mo.) May 28, 1894.

Constitutions the same as that of Missouri, and similar ones, are interpreted by the courts to mean what we claim for ours.

Beard v. Hopkinsville, 23 L. R. A. 402, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 756; Spilman v. Parkersburg, 85 W. Va. 605; Prince v. Quincy, 128 Ill. 443; Prince v. Quincy, 105 Ill. 188, 44 Am. Rep. 785; Lau v. People, 87 Ill. 885; Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626; Brie's App. 91 Pa. 396; State v. Medbery, 7 Ohio St. 522; Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49 Iowa, 62; San Francisco Gas Co. v. Brickwedel, supra; People v. May, 9 Colo. 80.

Statutory prohibitions like unto those in our constitution are construed by the courts in accordance with our view.

Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 502; State v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 558; Atlantic City Water Works Co. v. Read, 50 N. J. L. 686; Niles Water Works v. Niles, 59 Mich. 311; Putnam v. Grand Rapids, 58 Mich. 416; Coulson v. Portland, Deady, 481; Johnston v. Becker County Comrs. 27 Minn. 64.

The excess of authority by the board of aldermen, in attempting to bind the city in a forbidden manner and to excessive extent, vitiates the contract as an entirety, and appeal is without a remedy.

Hedges v. Dixon County, 37 Fed. Rep. 804; Richardson v. McReynolds, 114 Mo. 641; Davis v. Harrison, 45 N. J. L. 79; State v. Bayonne, 55 N. J. L. 241; Reineman v. Covington, O. & Black Hills R. Co. 7 Neb. 810; Millerstown v. Frederick, 114 Pa. 435; People's Bank of St. Paul v. Barnes County School Dist. No. 52, 3 N. Dak. 496; Coffin v. Indianapolis, 59 Fed. Rep. 221; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Dayton, Id. 327.

The monopoly attempted to be created by Ordinance 118 is contrary to public policy, also against the bill of rights, and therefore void.

Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 502; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90, 92 Am. Dec. 196; Gale v. Kalamazoo, 28 Mich. 344; Brenham v. Brenham Water Co. 67 Tex. 542; St. Louis Gas-Light Co. v. St. Louis Gas, Fuel & Powder Co. 16 Mo. App. 52; 7 Bacon, Abr. p. 22; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed., authorities cited in note 2, p. 393; State v. Post, 55 N. J. L. 264; Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 145, 40 Fed. Rep. 126; Re Delaware Bay & O. M. R. Co's Petition (N. J.) Nov. 16, 1887; Raggio v. State, 86 Tenn. 272.

Burgess, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The court declared the law to be: First. That the contract set forth in Ordinance No. 118, ratified by the people, and accepted by the plaintiff, as shown by the records of the city, was not sufficient to constitute a valid contract between plaintiff and defendant, and refused to declare the law to be that it was not necessary, in order to the validity of the contract, that it should be upon one paper, signed by both plaintiff and defendant, and that if the terms of the contract in said ordinance were ratified by the voters of defendant city, at an election lawfully held for that purpose, and plaintiff thereafter, in writing, accepted such terms, the same constituted a valid contract. Second. That if the hydrant rental could not be paid out of the levy of 50 cents on the $100, after paying all current expenses of the city, it constituted a debt for the amount that might ultimately become due, and refused to declare the law to be that a contract to pay $2,000 a year for hydrant rental for a term of twenty years did not constitute a debt, within the meaning of section 12, article 10, of the State Constitution, without reference to performance.

Plaintiff's first contention is that Ordinance No. 118 was signed by the acting mayor, attested by the clerk, ratified by a vote of the voters of the city of Neosho, and accepted in writing by the plaintiff, and constituted a valid contract for furnishing said city with water according to the terms and conditions as set forth in said ordinance. Defendant is a city of the fourth class. By section 1599, Rev. Stat., which pertains to such cities, it is provided that "no bill shall become an ordinance until the same is signed by the president of the board of aldermen and the mayor." By section 1616, the mayor when present is ex officio president of the board of aldermen. The record shows that, although the mayor was present and presiding at the meeting of the board when Ordinance No. 118 was put upon its final passage, he did not authenticate its passage by his signature as such president of the board; and, because of his failure to do so, it is insisted by defendant that the ordinance never became effective. It is difficult to see the force of this argument, when it is provided by section 1616, Rev. Stat., that, if the mayor should neglect or refuse to sign any ordinance or return the same with his objections in writing at the next meeting of the board of aldermen, the same shall become a law without his signature. By the very terms of the section last quoted, on the neglect or refusal of the mayor to sign the ordinance or to return the same to the next meeting of the board of aldermen with his objections in writing thereto, it became a law, and his failure to so return it must be regarded as equivalent to signing it. The notice of holding the election with respect to the ratification of the ordinance by the voters, and everything pertaining thereto, as well, also, as the publication of the result of the election, which was spread upon the records of defendant, seem to have been a fair and substantial compliance with the charter and ordinances of the city.

Another contention on the part of defendant is that the ordinance authorizing and calling the special election is void, for the reason that it is provided by section 9 of that ordinance that it was to take effect and be in force from and after its passage by the board of aldermen and its approval by the mayor. At the time of its passage, the mayor of the city was absent, and, in consequence thereof, it was approved by the then acting president of the board of aldermen. By section 1616, Rev. Stat., it is provided that, in the absence of the mayor, the board shall elect one of its own members to occupy his place temporarily, who shall be styled "acting president of the board of aldermen;" while the following section provides that in case of temporary absence of the mayor, and until his return, the acting president of the board of aldermen, for the time being, shall perform the duties of mayor, with all his rights, powers, and jurisdiction. This ordinance was signed, "John Myers, Acting Pres. Board of Aldermen;" and its approval seems to have been in strict compliance with the provisions of defendant's charter, under the then existing circumstances. We are therefore of the opinion that section 9, in so far as its validity depended upon its approval by the mayor, was and is valid, and that its approval by the acting president of the board of aldermen was all that the law required.

The objections raised by defendant as to the publication of the notice of the election and the canvass of the returns thereof seem to be extremely technical, and without merit.

It is argued by counsel for defendant that as the contract sued upon was not made in duplicate, and subscribed by both parties thereto, nor deposited in such office or with such officer of defendant as may have been charged with the keeping of its contracts, it is void, under section 8158 of defendant's charter. A similar question was passed on by this court in Lamar Water & Electric Light Co. v. Lamar (Mo.) 26 S. W. Rep. 1025, in which Black, Ch. J., speaking for the court, said: "The ordinance could not take effect as a contract until ratified by the requisite vote; but it was competent and perfectly proper to pass the ordinance to take effect when ratified. Indeed, an ordinance setting forth the terms of the contract, and then approved by the necessary vote, and accepted in writing by the persons proposing to build the works, was all that was necessary to make a perfect and complete contract." In the case in hand the ordinance setting forth the terms of the contract was approved by the necessary vote, and accepted in writing by plaintiff, who was proposing to build the works, and clearly brings this case within the rule announced in the Lamar Water-Works Case. The validity of the contract in no way depends upon the provisions of said section 8158, as contended by defendant. By that section, in every case of contract entered into by any county, city, town, village, school district, or other municipal corporation, or by any officer or agent on their behalf, duplicate copies of the same are required to be executed, one of which shall be filed in such office or with such officer of the municipal corporation as may be charged with the keeping of the contracts thereof, and shall not be taken thence except for the purpose of evidence in some legal matter or cause; but the law nowhere requires, as a condition precedent to its becoming a contract, that the instruments embodying its terms shall be signed in duplicate. If such was the law, why say, "In every case of contract entered into," etc.? The object and purpose of the statute in requiring duplicate copies to be executed and filed with the proper custodian was evidently for the purpose of preserving them as evidence to be used in any legal matter or cause, and not to make the duplicate copies constituent elements of the contract. Indeed, the statute provides that in case of variance between such copies the one on file shall control in the construction of the contract, which is very persuasive evidence, at least, that the object in requiring duplicate copies to be taken was to preserve them as evidence. In executing the contract the requirements of the statute seem to have been observed, and it is not, we think, invalid because not properly executed.

Defendant contends that under the ordinance, the city incurred, if anything, an indebtedness beyond its income and revenue for the year, and exceeding 5 per centum on its taxable property, while upon the part of plaintiff the contention is that the contract by the defendant city to pay a fixed price annually for a supply of water, for a term of twenty years, does not constitute a debt for the aggregate amount which may ultimately become payable, within the meaning of section 12, article 10, of the State Constitution. The only allegation in the answer that can possibly be construed as having any reference to the power of defendant to enter into the contract is that wherein it is alleged that "defendant says that the alleged contract between the plaintiff and defendant was not within the scope of the powers of defendant, nor expressly authorized by law." It does not allege that, under the contract, the city incurred an indebtedness beyond its income and revenues for the year, and exceeding 5 per cent upon its taxable property. So that the only question that we have to deal with is as to whether the contract created an indebtedness upon the part of defendant, as contemplated by the constitution; and upon that question the authorities are not entirely in harmony. In construing words used in that instrument, in the absence of some restriction placed upon their meaning, they must be given such meaning as is generally accorded to them. A debt is understood to be an unconditional promise to pay a fixed sum at some specified time, and is quite different from a contract to be performed in the future, depending upon a condition precedent, which may never be performed, and which cannot ripen into a debt until performed. Here the hydrant rental depended upon the water supply to be furnished to defendant, and, if not furnished, no payment could be required of it. That the contract did not create an indebtedness, within the meaning of the section of the constitution before mentioned, finds support in the fact that said section provides that any city incurring any indebtedness requiring the assent of the voters shall, before or at the time of doing so, "provide for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same." The contract in suit provides for no interest. By its terms, there is none to fall due. Nor was the constituting a sinking fund as required by the constitution, for the payment of indebtedness, intended to apply to simple contracts that might never be performed.

A number of cases have been cited by defendant in which it has been held, under constitutions containing similar provisions to those in the constitution of this state, a contract to pay upon a contingency, as upon the happening of some event, such as the rendering service or furnishing supplies, is in a sense a debt. Beard v. Hopkinsville, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 756, 23 L. R. A. 403; Spilman v. Parkersburg, 35 W. Va. 605; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gas Light & Coke Co. 98 Ill. 415, 88 Am. Rep. 97; Springfield v. Edwards, 84 Ill. 626; Lavo v. People, 87 Ill. 885; Prince v. Quincy, 105 Ill. 188, 44 Am. Rep. 785; Erie's App. 91 Pa. 398; State v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 558; Atlantic City Water-Works Co. v. Read, 50 N. J. L. 666; Niles Water-Works Co. v. Niles, 59 Mich. 811; Putnam v. Grand Rapids, 58 Mich. 416; Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 502; Coulson v. Portland, Deady, 481, Fed. Cas. No. 8,275.

It is worthy of remark that in each one of the cases cited the constitutional limit of indebtedness had been reached before the contract had been made, except Niles Water-Works Co. v. Niles, and in that case one of the members of the court (Sherwood, J.) dissented. No such claim is made as to the city of Neosho. Among the authorities which hold to a contrary rule, and that the word "indebted," as used in state constitutions, as in section 12, article 10, of the Constitution of Missouri, does not include contracts for the annual supply of municipalities with such necessities as light and water and of a similar character, and contracts for the payment therefor do not create a debt for the aggregate amount which may become due upon a compliance with the terms of the contract, may be cited the following: Dively v. Cedar Falls, 27 Iowa, 227; Grant v. Davenport, 36 Iowa, 401; Budd v. Budd, 59 Fed. Rep. 785; Walla Walla Water Co. v. Walla Walla, 60 Fed. Rep. 957; State v. McCauley, 15 Cal. 429; Koppikus v. State Capitol Comrs. 16 Cal. 248; People v. Pucheco, 27 Cal. 207; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gas Light & Coke Co. 98 Ill. 415, 38 Am. Rep. 97; Carlyle Water, Light & Power Co. v. Carlyle, 81 Ill. App. 339; Carlyle v. Carlyle Water, Light & Power Co. 140 Ill. 445; Crowder v. Sullivan, 128 Ind. 486, 18 L. R. A. 647; Valparaiso v. Gardner, 97 Ind. 1, 49 Am. Rep. 416; Weston v. Syracuse, 17 N. Y. 110; Utica Water-Works Co. v. Utica, 81 Hun, 430; Smith v. Dedham, 144 Mass. 179; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 88.

Our conclusion is that the weight of authority is adverse to the contention of defendant, and is in accord with the spirit and meaning of our constitution as we understand it, and as we think also comports with better reason.

Under section 1589, Rev. Stat., defendant was given the power to prevent and extinguish fires, and, for that purpose, to provide the necessary means, including water, without first taking a vote of its citizens to authorize it to do so; but no power was given it to erect a system of waterworks for the purpose of supplying the city and the inhabitants thereof with water, or to contract with any person, company, or association, giving and granting to such person, company, or association the exclusive right to furnish any system of waterworks for the use of the city for any length of time not to exceed twenty years, without being authorized by a vote by ballot of two thirds of its qualified voters voting at an election held for that purpose, provided by ordinance. As we have seen, the ordinance providing for such an election was duly passed, and the election held, which resulted in a two-thirds vote in favor of its adoption.

There are numerous other questions raised by counsel in their briefs to which we have not adverted, as from what has already been said the judgment must necessarily be reversed, and the cause remanded.

It is so ordered.

All concur.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Mary E. VAN OSDELL et al.

v.

Ellen CHAMPION, Admr., etc., of Charles B. Champion, Deceased, et al., Appts., and Calvin R. CORBIN et al., Repts.

(.....Wis.....)

1. A condition in a devise that the property shall in no wise ever be subject to any debt, liability, execution, or attachment against the devisee, existing at that time or at any future time, is void.

NOTE.—The subject of spendthrift trusts, which is distinguished from the case above decided, is involved in the case of Roberts v. Stevens (Me.) 17 L. R. A. 206, and cases cited in the footnote thereto. 27 L. R. A.

2. Attorneys' fees are taxable as inequitable actions in a proceeding under Rev. Stat., § 312, for the trial of issues on application by a creditor in a partition action, whether the trial is by court or by jury.

(March 5, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendants Ellen Champion et al. from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Lafayette County rendered in a proceeding for the partition of certain real estate which awarded the share of Charles B. Champion, deceased, to his creditors rather than to his representatives. Affirmed.

Statement by Pinney, J.:

An action was brought for the partition of certain lands, against Charles B. Champion, who claimed an undivided fifth interest in the same, under the residuary clause of the will of his mother, Elizabeth Champion, and against various others interested in said premises, claiming under the will and as incumbrancers. The premises were sold under the judgment in the partition suit, and the proceeds of the interest of said Charles B. Champion therein paid into court, amounting to $2,116.17; and they were claimed by divers judgment creditors of the said Champion, among others the respondents Calvin R. Corbin and Horatio May, under a judgment in their favor, and against Champion, rendered May 7, 1870, and by L. A. Clinton, under a similar judgment, and they filed petitions in the partition action, claiming said moneys. Their claims were resisted by Ellen Champion, widow and administratrix of the estate of Charles B. Champion (who had died in the meantime), on the ground that his interest in the lands was not subject to levy or sale on execution, by reason of the provisions of the will of his mother, through which he obtained his title, and also by other defendants, who held alleged incumbrances against his interest in the lands. A trial was had before the court upon issues joined on these petitions; and it was found, among other things, that the interest of Champion in the lands had been sold on execution issued October 4, 1890, upon leave granted, on the judgment in favor of Corbin and May, and that it remained unredeemed from such sale; that the entirety of the lands was devised by Elizabeth Champion to Charles B. Champion and four others, equally, share and share alike, their heirs and assigns, forever, the testatrix making in said devise "this express condition: that the share of my said son, Charles B. Champion, shall in no wise ever be subject to any debt, liability, execution, attachment, or judgment against said Charles B. Champion, existing at this time or any time hereafter;" that the judgment in favor of L. A. Clinton against Champion was rendered May 6, 1890, and was found to be the paramount lien, the lien of the Corbin and May judgment having expired; that the dower interest of Ellen Champion, the widow of the deceased, in the fund in court, was $427.87, which she had elected to take for her dower; that the amount due on the judgment of L. A. Clinton was $291.68; and that the remainder of the fund—$1,396.61—belonged to, and should be paid over to, Corbin and May; and judgment was given for the payment of these sums accordingly, and for costs in favor of Corbin and May, and also in favor of L. A. Clinton, against Ellen Champion, as administratrix, etc., to be paid in course of due administration out of the estate of Charles B. Champion, deceased, and against George F. West and other defendants named, who had resisted and defended against said petitions. The costs in favor of Corbin and May were taxed by the clerk, allowing only $25 attorney's fees to the petitioners, which, on their appeal, was increased by the court to $67.12. From this judgment, Ellen Champion, as administratrix, etc., appealed.

37 L. R. A.

Messrs. Wilson & Martin and Calvert Spensley, for appellants:

If the provision as to existing debts would be valid if standing alone, it is still valid although as to future debts it may be void.

2 Woerner, Law of Administration, pp. 883, 884; Beach, Wills, § 815; 3 Jarman, Wills, p. 709; Tiers v. Tiers, 98 N. Y. 568; Orley v. Lane, 85 N. Y. 840; Harrison v. Harrison, 80 N. Y. 543; Adams v. Perry, 43 N. Y. 488.

Restrictions on devises contained in wills are to be regarded the same as restraints on alienation contained in deeds.

Co. Litt. 223 A; Shep. Touch. p. 129; McWilliams v. Nisly, 2 Serg. & R. 507, 7 Am. Dec. 654; 2 Woerner, Law of Administration, p. 955; Doe v. Pearson, 6 East, 173; Gray v. Blanchard, 8 Pick. 284; 2 Jarman, Wills, Bigelow's ed. p. 14; Beach, Wills, § 229; Schouler, Wills, § 601.

The restriction is only as to certain debts, i. e. those existing at the time the will was made.

Partial restraints on alienation are valid.

Stewart v. Barrow, 7 Bush, 868; Langdon v. Ingram, 28 Ind. 380; Simonds v. Simonds, 3 Met. 558; McKinstee v. Smith, 27 Conn. 628; Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629, 58 Am. Rep. 692; White v. Thomas, 8 Bush, 661; Shankland's App. 47 Pa. 118; Braman v. Stiles, 2 Pick. 460, 18 Am. Dec. 445; Perkins v. Hays, 8 Gray, 405; Foster v. Foster, 133 Mass. 179.

A condition which defeats an estate on appropriation to the grantee's debts is valid.

Broadway Nat. Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170, 43 Am. Rep. 504; Overman's App. 88 Pa. 276; White v. Thomas, 8 Bush, 661.

A devise of the income of property to cease on bankruptcy or insolvency is valid.

Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 23 L. ed. 254; Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. Jr. 429; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 41, 67 Am. Dec. 118; 2 Jarman, Wills, p. 25.

When the intention of the testator is clearly declared to be to bequeath the property for the sole benefit of the donee, or that his creditors shall have no part of it, the bequest will fail upon his insolvency or bankruptcy, even when it occurs during the life of the testator and a gift over will take effect.

Beach, Wills, § 281; Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 23 L. ed. 254; 2 Redf. Wills, p. 290 (old ed. p. 663), 800 (old ed. 680); Yernold v. Moorhouse, 1 Russ. & M. 864; Blackstone Bank v. Davis, 21 Pick. 42, 32 Am. Dec. 241.

Messrs. P. B. Simpson, J. B. Simpson, and W. E. Carter for respondents.

Pinney, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. It is laid down as a general rule that "a condition, annexed to a conveyance in fee or by devise, that the purchaser or devisee should not alienate, is unlawful and void. If the grant be upon the condition that the grantee shall not commit waste, or not take the profits, or his wife have her dower or the husband his curtesy, the condition is repugnant and void, for these rights are inseparable from the estate in fee. Conditions are not sustained when they are repugnant to the estate granted, or infringe upon the essential enjoyment of the independent rights of property, and tend manifestly to public inconvenience." Kent, Com. *181; 2 Redf. Wills, 287, 290. "But it has been held that land may be conveyed to a married woman so as to exclude her husband upon her death from becoming tenant of the premises by the curtesy." Haight v. Hall, 74 Wis. 152. The authorities are very generally agreed that property cannot be conveyed, devised, or bequeathed with a restriction against it, or any portion of it, going to assignees in bankruptcy or in any form to creditors, although a grant may be made which shall be determinable by way of ceaser, or by limitation of the estate over to another upon the occurrence of a certain event; such as insolvency, bankruptcy, or the occurrence of any other act or event arising or growing out of the conduct or neglect of the grantee or devisee. The bounty of a grantor or testator may, however, be secured to another by means of a trust,—a "spendthrift's," as it is sometimes called; so that the periodical income of the estate cannot be anticipated by the cestui que trust, but may be paid to him from time to time, beyond the power of creditors to intercept or reach it. Many such cases are collated and cited by appellants' counsel, some of which are referred to in Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 717, 727, 23 L. ed. 254, 257, and the whole subject is fully considered in Broadway Nat. Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170, 43 Am. Rep. 504, and Forster v. Forster, 133 Mass. 179.

But these cases are all clearly distinguishable from the present, by reason of the absolute and unlimited condition contained in the residuary clause of Mrs. Champion's will, under which her son, Charles B. Champion, obtained his title. We have not been referred to nor are we aware of any authority that would warrant us in upholding, as against the creditors of Charles B. Champion, the provision by which the devise to him was upon the express condition that the premises should "in no wise ever be subject to any debt, liability, execution, or attachment against him, existing at this time or at any time hereafter." The condition is general, and is not limited to future events. It was intended to affect existing as well as future writs or judgments, and is unlimited in point of time, and was manifestly an attempt to secure the estate in his hands as a devise in fee against the claims of creditors incident to such an ownership by the laws of every civilized state; and to sustain such a condition would be productive of great inconvenience to creditors and those dealing with the grantee or devisee upon the faith of apparent absolute ownership, and would be contrary to sound public policy. To give effect to such a condition would be, as to such transaction, to permit parties to abrogate and annul the law of the state by a mere private arrangement; and the contention of the appellants' counsel goes to the extent of claiming that a man may thus be the full legal, as well as the equitable, owner of property thus devised, deal with it as he pleases, and that it shall not be liable for his debts. This would be to destroy, in a very great degree, all faith in the apparent ownership of property, and countenance secret exemptions from liability of a debtor's property for his debts, and would tend to mischievous and fraudulent results. In Blackstone Bank v. Davis, 21 Pick. 41, 39 Am. Dec. 241, it was held that a provision, in a devise of land, that the land should not "be subject or liable to conveyance or attachment," was void, because contrary to law, which makes a man's property liable for the payment of his debts. In that case, as in this, the condition was unlimited in point of time; and it was declared to be "an attempt to impose a restraint upon property, which the law would not allow." In Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 44, 67 Am. Dec. 118; while sustaining the provision there in question, it was said that "any attempt to make the interest of the beneficiary inalienable, or to withdraw it from the claims of creditors, would have been nugatory, . . . would clearly be repugnant to the estate in fact devised and bequeathed, and would be ineffectual for that reason, as well as upon the policy of the law." This view is sustained in Hahn v. Hutchinson, 159 Pa. 183, 138-141; Stansbury v. Hubner, 73 Md. 238, 11 L. R. A. 204; Steib v. Whitehead, 111 Ill. 251; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Gates, 75 Iowa, 343; Ehrisman v. Sener, 163 Pa. 577. We hold, therefore, that the provision in the will of Mrs. Champion, relied on to protect the property devised to Charles B. Champion from the claims of his judgment creditors, is void.

2. By section 3128, Rev. Stat., provision is made by which application may be made to the court by any creditor being a party to an action for partition, and having a lien upon any undivided share or interest in the premises sold, to order the amount due such creditor to be paid, and for a hearing upon notice to the other party; and by section 3129 the court is "to hear the proofs and allegations of the parties, and if any question of fact shall arise which, in the opinion of the court, cannot be determined without a trial by jury, the court shall direct an issue to be made which shall be tried as in other cases, and the costs of such trial shall be paid by the party failing, which payment shall be enforced as in other cases." It is objected by the appellant that the power to award costs against the party failing extends only to cases where the issue is tried by a jury; and where, as in this case, the issue was tried by the court, the power to award costs does not exist. By section 2883, Id., judgment may be given in an action "determining the ultimate rights of the parties on each side, as between themselves;" and this would include the right to award costs as between them. We think that, by a fair construction of the statute, the costs, if the issues are tried by the court, may be awarded in like manner as if there had been a trial by jury. Both the action for partition and this proceeding in it being of an equitable character, attorney's fees were rightly taxed as between the parties to these issues as in equitable actions. We find no error in the judgment appealed from.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

STATE of Wisconsin, ex rel. Michael DUNN, Sheriff, Ptff. in Certiorari,

v.
Francis W. NOYES.

SAME

v.
Eugene S. ELLIOTT.

(87 Wis. 340.)

1. An objection to indictments, that they were found by a grand jury impaneled for a term prior to that at which they were found, cannot be made the basis of a

habeas corpus proceeding for the release of the persons so indicted.

2. The legality of a de facto grand jury cannot be inquired into upon habeas corpus proceedings for discharge from commitments based upon indictments found by such body, under the rule that the acts of persons acting as de facto officers cannot be questioned collaterally.

(March 16, 1894.)

WRITS of certiorari to the Circuit Court for Milwaukee County to review proceedings in habeas corpus for the release from relator's custody of the defendants which resulted in orders for their discharge. Reversed.

NOTE.—Organization of grand jury.
For review of case of STATE v. NOYES, see sub-head "Time and term," infra, V.

I. Pleading and practice generally.

- a. Mode.
- b. Party.
- c. Time.

II. Writ; summons; officer.

- a. Precept; venire.
- b. Form.
- c. Seal.
- d. Officer.
- e. Oath.
- f. Summons; service; return.
- g. Name.
- h. Time.

III. Excusing and completing panel.

- a. Discharging and excusing from panel.
- b. Power to complete panel.
- c. Class.

IV. Drawing.

- a. Irregularities.
- b. Certificate.
- c. Manner.
  - 1. Mode.
  - 2. Machinery.
- d. Notice.
- e. Number.
- f. Name.
- g. Officers.
- h. Oath to officer.
- i. Officer's presence.
- j. Fraud.
- k. Power to draw.

V. Time and term.

- a. Adjournment.
- b. First day; first week; first term.
- c. Legal term.
- d. Time limited.
- e. Prior to term.
- f. Time designated.

VI. Reconvicting.

VII. Court.

VIII. Special term.

IX. Special grand jury.

X. Oath.

- a. Affirmance.
- b. Form.
- c. Objection that grand jury was not sworn.
- d. Time and person administering.
- e. "Then and there."

I. Pleading and practice generally.

a. Mode.

A plea in abatement is the proper practice if the irregularity is not apparent in the record, which plea must be specific. But if the statute prescribes the mode of attack, that mode is exclusive, and a collateral attack cannot be made for irregularities. The right of the accused, as to time to object, depends somewhat on whether he is held to answer, or in custody. He must, however, be diligent and may act by attorney, but a party not under prosecution cannot question the organization of the grand jury.

27 L. R. A.

Objection must be made before plea of not guilty, and as to making it between the time of impaneling and plea of not guilty, the statutes vary and control.

Where the objection to organization is specific the ruling on the question of practice will be found under classification of manner of organization at various subheads.

The abbreviations in parentheses will readily be understood. They indicate the mode of raising the question, as mo. qu. for motion to quash; mo. ar. for motion in arrest; in dem. for demurrer; mo. new tr. for motion for new trial; pl. abate. for plea in abatement; and obj. for objection otherwise raised.

Generally an objection to irregularities or defects in the organization of impaneling of a grand jury not appearing in the case cannot be made by demurrer, motion in arrest, motion to quash, but objection should be made by plea in abatement. Fisher v. United States, 1 Okla. 262 (dem.); State v. Pile, 5 Ala. 72 (mo. ar.); Collier v. State, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 888 (mo. qu.; dem.); State v. Freeman, 6 Blackf. 248 (mo. qu.); State v. Haywood, 73 N. C. 437 (mo. qu.); Nugent v. State, 19 Ala. 540 (obj.); Cook v. Territory, 3 Wyo. 140 (mo. qu.); Wallace v. State, 2 Lea, 22.

And a motion to quash because section 4, Ala. Act of 1887-88, p. 77, was not observed was held unavailing as such act did not apply to the county. Forney v. State, 98 Ala. 19 (mo. qu.).

And a motion to quash because drawn under Ohio Rev. Stat., 7208, was properly overruled as such section applies to Hamilton county and was observed in drawing the jury. McCarthy v. State, 5 Ohio C. Ct. Rep. 627 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.).

In Ford v. State, 112 Ind. 373 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.), it was held that a motion to quash or in arrest reaches the indictment and nothing more, and objections to the empaneling must be made by plea in abatement.

And a party having the indictment set aside claiming the grand jury was illegally discharged, cannot thereafter claim that such objection should not have been sustained. State v. Hart, 67 Iowa. 143 (mo. qu.).

And under Cal. Penal Code, § 995, and Cal. Cr. Code, § 278, providing for setting aside the indictment when not found as prescribed, the words "not found" will not authorize an attack by motion for cause of challenge to the array. People v. Colby, 14 Cal. 87 (mo. set aside); People v. Southwell, 40 Cal. 141 (mo. set aside).

But under Cal. Wood's Dig., 284, § 279, providing for motion to set aside where the defendant has not been held to answer, the defendant who has not been held to answer may challenge the panel on arraignment. People v. Beatty, 14 Cal. 566 (mo. qu.).

A plea in abatement is the proper mode of pre-

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Leopold Hammel, Dist. Atty., with Mr. Jared Thompson, Jr., for plaintiff in certiorari:

Habeas corpus is a new and original proceeding for the enforcement of the civil right of personal liberty (Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 27 L. ed. 826); and is therefore strictly and purely a collateral proceeding, in which the question as to the validity of the judgment or other adjudication arises and is attacked collaterally and not in a direct proceeding by way of error, certiorari, or motion to quash.

People v. Kelly, 24 N. Y. 74; Ableman v. Booth, 62 U. S. 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; Ex parte Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 85 L. ed. 513.

And it deals with radical defects only, which go to the jurisdiction in Re Grandall's Petition, 84 Wis. 177; State v. Sloan, 65 Wis. 647; Browne, Jurisdiction, § 110; and not with mere error, irregularity, or want of form, nor with defects which may be amended or remedied by further entry or motion.

People v. Cavanagh, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 680; People v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 559, 19 Am. Rep. 311; Semler's Petition, 41 Wis. 517; Re Schuster, 82 Wis. 610; Re Graham, 74 Wis. 450; Re Pikulik, 81 Wis. 158; Re French, Id. 597; State v. Sloan, 65 Wis. 651, and cases cited.

At the time of the adjournment, the said grand jury was a legally organized and constituted jury, rightfully exercising its judicial sending irregularities in selecting or impaneling a grand jury. Henning v. State, 106 Ind. 386, 55 Am. Rep. 756 (mo. ar.); Brown v. State, 18 Ark. 96 (mo. new tr.).

But the plea in abatement must be specific in its particulars. Newman v. State, 14 Wis. 394 (pl. abate.); State v. Skinner, 34 Kan. 256 (pl. abate.); Ward v. State, 48 Ind. 239 (pl. abate.); Woodward v. State, 38 Fla. 508 (pl. abate.); Cox v. People, 19 Hun. 480; Tilley v. Com. 89 Va. 126 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.); Baldwin v. State, 12 Neb. 61 (pl. abate.); Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393 (pl. abate.); State v. Holcomb, 66 Mo. 371 (pl. abate.); Brennan v. People, 15 Ill. 511 (pl. abate.).

And so must a motion to quash. Warner v. State, 54 Ark. 660 (mo. qu.).

Where a statute is specific as to the mode of objection, that manner must be followed to the exclusion of others. Boulo's Case, 51 Ala. 18 (pl. abate.); Williams v. State, 86 Ind. 400 (pl. abate.; action on bond); People v. Hooghkerk, 95 N. Y. 149, 67 How. Pr. 256 (obj.); Johnson v. State, 38 Tex. 570 (exception); Green v. State, 1 Tex. App. 83 (chal.; mo. qu.).

A collateral attack cannot be made for irregularities in selection of the list by proceedings in habeas corpus. Ex parte Warriss, 28 Fla. 371 (hab. corp.).

b. Party.

The failure to make the challenge or objection to the organization of the grand jury in the proper mode and at the proper time depends largely on the situation of the accused, and the circumstances under which he is placed sometimes largely control his privilege.

As where the defendant was bound to appear at the November term and had no opportunity to challenge the grand jury, because the indictment was at the March term, the indictment was set aside. Territory v. Ingersoll, 3 Mont. 454 (mo. set aside).

In Vattier v. State, 4 Blackf. 78 (pl. abate.), it was held that the accused on arraignment at a term subsequent to the indictment might object to the organization of the grand jury where he had been recognized to appear.

Under Cal. Wood's Dig., § 284, § 279, providing for motion to set aside when the defendant has not been held to answer, a defendant who has not been held to answer may challenge the panel on arraignment. People v. Beatty, 14 Cal. 566 (mo. qu.).

And where he has been held to answer and has the privilege of challenging, a default cannot be entered on the bond where he is only called to object to the panel, as he must be called for arraignment, trial, or judgment. State v. Klingman, 14 Iowa, 404 (bond).

But where the accused was offered the privilege of moving to set aside and failed to act, the fact that he was prevented from challenging the panel will not be error. State v. Larkin, 11 Nev. 814 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.).

And a challenge by an attorney while the accused was in jail asking that the accused might be brought in court, was properly overruled where it was not shown to have been made with the knowledge of the accused. Ross v. State, 1 Blackf. 390.

As to whether the attorney could waive the right of challenge to the grand jury in the absence of the accused, the error would be immaterial, if none of the grand jurors were disqualified. State v. Felter, 25 Iowa, 67 (mo. set aside).

And the challenge is confined to those under prosecution. Thayer v. People, 3 Dougl. (Mich.) 417 (mo. qu.).

So where the accused was in jail on a former indictment and his attorney claimed that the grand jury were about to investigate his conduct in regard to a certain murder, his right to challenge was properly refused as he was not under prosecution for that offense. Hudson v. State, 1 Blackf. 817 (chal.).

A person summoned to testify before the grand jury "de facto" cannot question its organization. Ex parte Haymond, 91 Cal. 545.

c. Time.

Generally the plea of not guilty is a waiver of all right to take advantage of defects in the organization of the grand jury, as objection should be interposed before a plea to the merits. People v. Allen, 43 N. Y. 28 (pl. abate.; mo. ar.); Dyer v. State, 11 Lea, 509 (pl. abate.); People v. Stacey, 34 Cal. 307 (mo. set aside); State v. Borroum, 26 Misc. 203 (pl. abate.); State v. Miles, 31 La. Ann. 325 (mo. ar.); State v. Seaborn, 15 N. C. 305 (mo. ar.); Cooper v. State, 120 Ind. 577 (pl. abate.); United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857 (mo. ar.); Young v. State, 28 Ohio St. 577 (mo. for writ of error); State v. Jackson, 36 La. Ann. 96 (mo. ar.); State v. Williams, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 454 (pl. abate.); State v. Watson, 31 La. Ann. 379 (obj.); Horton v. State, 47 Ala. 58 (dem.); Potsdamer v. State, 17 Fla. 395 (mo. ar.); Burroughs v. State, Id. 643 (mo. ar.).

And must be before trial. State v. Thompson, 28 La. Ann. 187 (obj.).

And under Paschall's Dig., arts. 2380-2387, a challenge to the array should be made before the grand jurors are accepted. Grant v. State, 2 Tex. App. 163 (obj.).

Under the particular statutes of some states the objection to the organization must be made before the grand jury are sworn, or at the time of its organization. Logan v. State, 50 Miss. 299 (mo. new tr.); State v. Ingalls, 17 Iowa, 8 (obj.); State v. Bolt, 7 Blackf. 19 (mo. qu.); Bellair v. State, 6 Blackf. 104 (mo. set aside); State v. Gibbs, 39 Iowa, 318 (mo. set aside); State v. Howard, 10 Iowa, 101 (mo. set aside).

Even where the accused is in jail this applies. State v. Hoyt, 12 Minn. 128 (mo. set aside); State v.

functions. The municipal court had rightful jurisdiction and power to make an adjournment of the court. Having such power if the court erred in its exercise, it was error committed within the limits of its jurisdiction, error which it had jurisdiction to commit, and because thereof was not jurisdictional error however erroneous or irregular in fact, and is not assailable on habeas corpus.

Browne, Jurisdiction, § 104; People v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 559, 19 Am. Rep. 211.

The receipt of the indictment by the court and in its direction that it be recorded, the order of capias, the arraignment, the holding to bail and the precept of commitment in default of bail, severally operated in the law as an adjudication upon the legality of the indictment, however erroneous in fact such proceedings or adjudications may have been.

Wanser v. Howland, 10 Wis. 8; State v. Sorenson, 84 Wis. 27.

The indictment was legal and sufficient upon its face, and the acceptance thereof by the court in connection with its other said acts predicated upon its legal validity amounted to an adjudication that the proceedings antecedent to the indictment, and upon which it was founded, were legal and valid, and that the indictment was properly in and before the court.

Hinckley, 4 Minn. 345 (mo. set aside); Maher v. State, 3 Minn. 444 (mo. set aside); Dobson v. State (Ark.) July 3, 1891 (mo. new tr.); Thomason v. State, 2 Tex. App. 550 (pl. abate.; mo. qu.); Brown v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 119 (mo. set aside; mo. qu.).

And in Iowa an objection to the organization of a grand jury must be made before an indictment. State v. Hinkle, 6 Iowa, 380 (pl. abate.); Dixon v. State, 3 Iowa, 416 (pl. abate.).

Where the defendant was in court. State v. Ruthven, 58 Iowa, 121 (mo. set aside).

And under La. Act 44, of 1877, § 11, all objections to the array or venire must be made on the first day of the term. State v. Simmons, 43 La. Ann. 991 (mo. qu.).

So under Act of 1857. State v. Canady, 16 La. Ann. 141 (obj. on bond).

And under Ala. Code, § 3591, providing that objection to the drawing of grand jury must be made at the term, the court has discretion to allow it to be made at a subsequent time. Russell v. State, 33 Ala. 366 (Mo. ar.).

Where the organization or the array has been once questioned objection cannot afterwards be made in another form. McClary v. State, 75 Ind. 260 (pl. abate.); Guykowski v. People, 2 Ill. 476 (chal.).

And if objection is not taken to the organization of the grand jury it cannot be made in the supreme court for the first time. Brantley v. State, 13 Smedes & M. 468; Fleming v. State, 60 Miss. 434; State v. Griffin, 37 Mo. 608; Wallace v. State, 2 Lea, 29; Sanders v. State, 55 Ala. 188; Tanner v. State, 32 Ala. 1; Bass v. State, 37 Ala. 469.

And it will be presumed that a grand jury was legally organized. State v. Dilworth, 34 La. Ann. 216 (obj.); State v. George, Id. 261 (obj.); State v. Taswell, 30 La. Ann. 884 (obj.); Wilson v. People, 3 Colo. 325 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.).

II. Writ; summons; officer.

a. Precept; venire.

The presumption is that a proper order for the venire was made, and the defendant must be diligent in making his objection or they will not avail. Substantial compliance with the statute is all that is necessary. There is some conflict of authorities as to the necessity of seal, but irregularities in matters of form or summons generally will not vitiate. The writ of venire must be served by a proper officer, but his qualifications need not appear on the process, and in Missouri an objection that the proper oath had not been taken by the sheriff is insufficient. The return may be amended.

The presumption will be that an order was made summoning a grand jury. Robinson v. Com. 88 Va. 900 (mo. qu.); Bell v. State, 42 Ind. 335 (mo. qu.); State v. Standley, 75 Iowa, 215 (mo. set aside); State v. Cole, 9 Humph. 626 (mo. ar.).

And objection that no order was made directing the summoning the grand jury should be made before they are sworn. State v. Freese, 30 Mo. App. 347 (pl. abate.).

37 L. R. A.

And before a plea of not guilty. Curtis v. Com. 87 Va. 589 (mo. qu.).

Want of precept is not available after plea to merits or verdict, and N. Y. Rev. Stat., 208, requiring a precept, is directory and not mandatory. People v. Robinson, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 236; People v. McCann, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 272 (mo. new tr.).

These cases overrule the dictum in McGuire v. People, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 148, holding that the court in that case overlooked the distinction between a precept and a venire, and in the McGuire Case the question involved was as to petit jury.

This statute was also held merely directory in People v. Cummings, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 343 (mo. new tr.).

Iowa Code 1873, § 244, requiring a precept to issue for talesmen only applies when the entire panel is absent, and does not apply where a part fails to appear. State v. Miller, 58 Iowa, 84, 154 (mo. qu.). State v. Pierce, 8 Iowa, 231 (pl. abate.).

Under Tenn Code, §§ 3993-4016, a writ of venire facias is not necessary where the judge directed the sheriff to summon a panel. Boyd v. State, 6 Coldw. 1 (obj.).

Where a verbal order for a venire was given to the clerk, the omission to issue a venire will not be allowed to prejudice the public. United States v. Reed, 2 Blatchf. 435-461 (mo. qu.).

And the same was said to be allowable in White v. State, 3 Helak. 338.

But under Neb. Code 1867, 664, providing for an order for summoning talesmen, a simple transfer from the petit jury list will invalidate. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385 (mo. qu.).

The cases of United States v. Reed, supra, and United States v. Tallman, 10 Blatchf. 21 (mo. qu.), hold that substantial compliance with the state statute is all that is necessary and that mere irregularities will not vitiate.

And in Combs v. Com. (Va.) June 29, 1898 (pl. abate.), it was held that a special grand jury may be summoned without a writ of venire, from a list furnished by the judge.

And the sheriff having copies of the jury list, which list was lost, could summon the grand jury without another order from the court. Hudspeth v. State, 50 Ark. 584 (mo. set aside).

But in Chase v. State, 30 N. J. L. 218 (mo. qu.), it was held that in the absence of statute grand jurors could only be summoned on precept issued out of court, and a grand jury summoned without such precept is invalid.

See also, as to precept, People v. Cyphers, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 606; Cyphers v. People, 31 N. Y. 373.

b. Form.

Irregularities in matters of form of the writ of venire, precept, or summons will not invalidate the indictment under Miss. Code 1867, p. 499, providing that fraud is the only subject of challenge to array. Nichols v. State, 46 Miss. 224 (mo. qu.).

And the same was held where the writ was di-

Holton v. Burton, 78 Wis. 831; State v. Benson, supra.

The court at the time of the issuing of the warrant of commitment and at the time of said adjournment, had before it, and presented to it, the question of the regularity and sufficiency of the said indictment and of the grand jury proceedings antecedent thereto, and the question of adjournment, with the power, and resting under the duty, to act upon those questions. And what does it signify upon habeas corpus, whether the determination of those questions were erroneous or not?

Ex parte Wilson, 140 U. S. 595, 35 L. ed. 513, in connection with Wanser v. Howland,

People v. Liscomb, Re Graham, Re Piskulik, Re French, and Re Schuster, supra; Graham v. Weeks, 138 U. S. 461, 34 L. ed. 1051; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787; People v. Martin, 1 Park. Crim. Rep. 187; Ex parte Springer, 1 Utah, 214; Ex parte Twohig, 13 Nev. 302; Ex parte Haymond, 91 Cal. 545; Re Betts, 36 Neb. 283; Ex parte Warriss, 28 Fla. 371; Appendix, 3 Hill, note 30, p. 659; People v. Robinson, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 235.

Defects in the selection, organization, or constitution of the grand jury cannot be reached by habeas corpus where the indictment is regular and legally sufficient on its face.

rected to "any sheriff of the state of Alabama." State v. Phillips, 2 Ala. 237 (mo. ar.).

And surplusage in the writ as serving ("for the week") may be rejected. Hawes v. State, 38 Ala. 37 (mo. qu.).

So an omission from the form of "citizens of M-county" will not invalidate. State v. Alderson, 10 Yerg. 623 (obj.).

Or where the writ is on the wrong blank and objection was not made before three months after they had adjourned. Com. v. Salter, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 461 (mo. qu.; chal.).

And one accused of crime cannot question the form of process in obtaining a jury in Texas, as the grounds to set aside the indictment are limited by the Texas Criminal Code, arts. 463-467, and this objection is not allowed. West v. State, 6 Tex. App. 485 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.).

And an objection to want of official title of clerk of court will not invalidate as the court will take judicial notice of the title of its own officers. State v. Cole, 9 Humph. 626 (mo. ar.).

And the writ of venire may be issued under the signature of the judge without the attestation of the clerk, under Tenn. Act 1870, chap. 115, providing that the court may appoint grand jurors and cause them to be summoned. White v. State, 3 Heisk. 338 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.).

But under an order to summon twenty-four persons as "trial" jurors, an indictment found by them should be set aside. People v. Earnest, 45 Cal. 29 (mo. set aside).

c. Seal.

There is some difference in practice as to the effect of absence of seal on the writ of venire, some states holding that want of seal will not invalidate. Maher v. State, 1 Port. (Ala.) 265, 26 Am. Dec. 379 (mo. qu.); State v. Bradford, 57 N. H. 188 (mo. qu.); White v. Com. 6 Binn. 179, 6 Am. Dec. 443 (exception); Bennett v. State, Mart. & Y. 133 (obj.).

And the Ohio supreme court has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the trial court, overruling a plea in abatement or motion to quash, made because the writ of venire was not under seal, as it is not for error of law occurring on the trial. Wagner v. State, 43 Ohio St. 537 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.).

Other states hold that the absence of the seal will invalidate if proper objection is made. State v. Lightbody, 38 Me. 200 (mo. qu.); State v. Fleming, 66 Me. 142, 22 Am. Rep. 552 (pl. abate.); State v. Williams, 1 Rich. L. 128 (mo. ar.); State v. Dosier, 2 Speers, L. 211 (mo. ar.).

d. Officer.

The service of the summons to impanel a grand jury by an unauthorized person will render the indictment invalid. Bruner v. San Francisco City & County Super. Ct. 32 Cal. 239 (writ prohibition); Com. v. Graddy, 4 Met. (Ky.) 223 (mo. qu.).

So where the venire was directed to the United States marshal for the "district of Louisiana" when it should have been "eastern district of Louisiana" an exception to the array should be sustained. United States v. Antz, 4 Woods, C. C. 174 (mo. qu.).

e. Oath.

An objection that the proper oath had not been administered to the sheriff cannot be made in Missouri, by plea in abatement, or by motion in arrest. State v. Welch, 33 Mo. 22 (pl. abate.); State v. Clifton, 73 Mo. 430 (mo. ar.); State v. Hart, 66 Mo. 208 (mo. ar.).

And that the sheriff or constable did not indorse on the writ his qualification or oath of office will not invalidate. State v. Clayton, 11 Rich. L. 561 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.); Com. v. Moran, 130 Mass. 231 (pl. abate.).

f. Summons; service; return.

Defects or irregularities in summoning the grand jurors, or appearance by them without service of the summons, will not invalidate the indictment. Sylvester v. State, 72 Ala. 201; Newman v. State, 14 Wis. 394 (pl. abate.); State v. Mellor, 13 R. L. 666 (pl. abate.).

And the same was held under Or. Stat., p. 184, § 179, providing that no challenge shall be made to the panel. State v. Fitzhugh, 2 Or. 227 (chal.).

And the same was held under Mo. Rev. Code 1845, p. 663, providing that no challenge to the array can be made unless a grand juror is a prosecuting witness, and Rev. Code 1845, title Jurors, providing for no exception for disability after the jury is sworn. State v. Bleekley, 18 Mo. 423 (pl. abate.).

And such objection cannot be made for the first time in the supreme court. Shaw v. State, 18 Ala. 549 (obj.).

But in Nicholls v. State, 5 N. J. L. 539 (mo. qu.), it was held that a grand jury summoned without process could not make a valid indictment.

And the same was held in United States v. Antz, 16 Fed. Rep. 119 (mo. qu.), under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 810, providing that no grand jury shall be summoned unless a venire was ordered to issue.

The sheriff may amend his return on the writ. Com. v. Parker, 2 Pick. 550 (mo. ar.); State v. Riekey, 9 N. J. L. 384 (mo. qu.); Com. v. Chauncey, 2 Astm. 30 (mo. qu.; mo. new tr.); State v. Clough, 49 Me. 573 (mo. qu.). See also State v. Martin, infra.

In Gladden v. State, 13 Fla. 623 (mo. qu.), it was held that objection to the return of grand jurors may be made in that state by a plea in abatement at any time, before pleading in bar.

But it is too late after verdict to object that a venire of forty had been returned, when the law only required thirty. State v. McIntire, 2 N. C. Law Repos. 237 (mo. ar.).

Where there is no return made on the precept requiring the sheriff to draw a grand jury the indictment was held invalid. Baton v. Com. 6 Binn. 447 (obj.).

See subhead "Drawing-Number," infra, IV. e.

Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 433; Dolan v. People, Id. 485; People v. Dolan, 6 Hun, 232, affirmed 64 N. Y. 485; Ex parte Springer, Ex parte Twobeg, Ex parte Raymond, Re Betts, and Ex parte Warris, supra.

Without the aid of the local statute, empowering the court to prolong the grand jury proceedings into the next term the court had the power to make the above stated adjournment, and so to prolong into the next term, the sittings of the grand jury and its unfinished inquests being made, and especially in the absence, as the fact is, of any existing prohibition of the statute against so doing?

State v. Leahy, 1 Wis. 258; Wright v. North- western Union R. Co. 37 Wis. 391. And see Tallman v. Truesdell, 3 Wis. 443; Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 229, 35 Am. Dec. 54; Mechanics Bank of Alexandria v. Withers, 19 U. S. 6 Wheat. 106, 5 L. ed. 217; Schrier v. Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co. 65 Wis. 457.

In the inferior English courts, anciently, in capital cases, if the jury did not agree before the departure of the justices into another county the sheriff was required to send them along with the justices in carts, upon their circuit, and the judge might take and record their verdict in a foreign county.

8 Bacon, Abr. 768 (G); King v. Ledgingham, 1 Vent. 97; 3 Bl. Com. 276.

g. Name.

A mistake in name of persons summoned as grand jurors will not invalidate their action. McKee v. State, 22 Ala. 33 (mo. qu.).

And the change of name of one of the grand jurors in the venire by the sheriff will not vitiate, under Ill. Crim. Code, § 411, providing that no indictment shall be quashed for disqualification of any grand juror, but it was said that it would be good grounds at common law. McElhanon v. People, 92 Ill. 369 (mo. qu.).

A plea in abatement should be sustained if the names of the jurors did not appear in the venire, and they had not been summoned under the original venire, or under the mode to supply deficiencies. Rawles v. State, 8 Smedes & M. 599 (pl. abate.).

See subhead "Drawing-Name," infra, IV. f.

h. Time.

Some cases hold that a statute providing the limit within which a venire should be issued, or jury summoned, is directory and not mandatory. Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490 (obj.); Johnson v. State, 38 Miss. 363 (pl. abate.); State v. Smith, 67 Me. 323 (pl. abate.).

And the venire may be corrected to show the proper date. Davis v. Com. 99 Va. 132 (pl. abate.).

But in Thorp v. People, 3 Utah, 441 (chal.), it was held that the indictment by a grand jury, impaneled on a venire issued less than thirty days prior to the term was invalid where the statute was mandatory.

See subhead "Time and term," infra, V.

III. Excusing and completing panel.

a. Discharging and excusing from panel.

Generally the discharge of some of the grand jurors and filling their places will not invalidate, and it will be presumed that grand jurors were properly discharged. But if the grand jurors are not discharged the court cannot order others in their places, and it will be presumed that the court properly exercised the power to complete the panel. The irregularity in choosing from the class to fill the deficiency will generally not vitiate, as filling from bystanders, unless the statute is prohibitory and mandatory.

As to the number necessary or proper to act on an indictment, see note to State v. Belvel, post, 846.

The discharging of some of the original panel and supplying their places, or excusing some of the original panel, so long as the number is within the statutory limit, will not invalidate their action. State v. Ward, 60 Vt. 142 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.); State v. Hunter, 43 La. Ann. 157 (mo. qu.); Epperson v. State, 5 Lea, 291 (pl. abate.); State v. Fee, 19 Wis. 563 (mo. qu.); United States v. Belvin, 46 Fed. Rep. 381 (mo. qu.); Blevins v. State, 68 Ala. 92 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.); State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165 (mo. qu.); Beasley v. People, 89 Ill. 571 (mo. qu.); William v. State, 69 Ga. 11 (pl. abate.); People v. Colby, 54 Cal. 87 (mo. set aside); State v. Schieler (Idaho) Apr. 30, 1894, (mo. set aside).

37 L. R. A.

And it will be presumed that grand jurors were discharged for proper cause. State v. Wingate, 4 Ind. 193 (mo. qu.); Wallis v. State, 54 Ark. 611 (mo. qu.).

But where the court had no power to order a drawing to fill the deficiency, the indictment was bad. State v. Symonds, 36 Me. 123 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.).

And where a court has no power to discharge a grand juror except to cause a grand juror to be sworn in place of one who is sick or absent, the excusing of a grand juror on account of his wife's sickness, and appointing a substitute, will invalidate the indictment. Portis v. State, 23 Miss. 573 (pl. abate.).

So where the judge informed the grand jury that they need not appear at the next term of court unless summoned again, and no summons was issued but talesmen called to take the place of the regular panel who were absent, the indictment was invalid. State v. Bowman, 73 Iowa, 110 (mo. qu.).

And in Smith v. State, 19 Tex. App. 95 (obj.), it was held that the discharge of a member for the term being void would not affect the legal original organization; but in that case it did not appear but what the juror was discharged after the indictment was found.

b. Power to complete panel.

The power vested in court to complete the panel will be presumed to have been properly exercised. Territory v. Barth (Ariz.) Dec. 9, 1887 (mo. qu.); Burrell v. State, 129 Ind. 290 (pl. abate.); Kessler v. State, 50 Ind. 229 (mo. qu.).

And the proper exercise of the power given by statute to fill the vacancies will be sustained. Wilson v. State, 32 Tex. 112 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.); Com. v. Morton, 12 Phila. 596 (mo. qu.); Julian v. State, 46 Ohio St. 511 (mo. for writ of error); State v. Drogmond, 55 Mo. 87 (pl. abate.); Crimm v. Com. 119 Mass. 325 (obj.); State v. Best (Iowa) Oct. 3, 1894 (chal.); State v. Smith, 83 Iowa, 178 (mo. set aside); State v. Silvers, 89 Iowa, 714 (mo. set aside); State v. Gurlagh, 78 Iowa, 141 (mo. set aside); State v. Pierce, 8 Iowa, 231 (pl. abate.).

And in Denning v. State, 23 Ark. 131 (pl. abate.), it was held that in the absence of statutory prohibition, the discharge of grand jurors and filling the vacancies will not invalidate the indictment.

So under Mississippi Hut. & How. Statute Laws, p. 496, § 67, providing no challenge to the array should be sustained or venire facias quashed except for partiality or corruption, and talesmen were added to complete the grand jury, by order of the court, a plea to the venire was properly overruled. King v. State, 5 How. (Miss.) 730 (pl. abate.).

In Alabama, where the court can supply the deficiency when the original panel is below fifteen, under Ala. Code, § 4754, providing for such action, the court may order the panel to be filled when the

Owing to the increased demands of business, the several courts of Middlesex were empowered by statute to continue their sittings four days after the term, and by Statutes of George I., and II., to eight and fourteen days respectively, and by Statute of George IV., the sittings were, and remain, extended and unlimited during vacation after the terms.

8 Bl. Com. 57, note 22, and 78, note 11. See Sanborn & Barryman, Anno. Stat. § 2422a, p. 1898.

The twelve monthly terms of the municipal court constitute practically one continuous term, at which the continuity of the municipal court remains unbroken, and in which there is no vacation within the express language of the organic act of that court, and in fact its business and proceedings.

See Es Gannon, 69 Cal. 541.

Where the grand jury has at least acted under color of lawful authority, the indictment found by them, as respects the public and third persons is legal and valid, as the act and proceeding of a de facto grand jury, and is as regular and valid as the presentment of a de jure grand jury.

Mechem, Pub. Off. § 319; State v. Carroll, 88 Conn. 449, 9 Am. Rep. 409; People v. Petrea, 92 N. Y. 128; State v. Hughes, 58 Iowa, 165; State v. Belcol (Iowa) Oct. 16, 1893, post, 846; People v.

number excused reduced the panel below fifteen. Kilgore v. State, 74 Ala. 1 (obj.).

But in that state it was held in Peters v. State, 96 Ala. 38 (mo. qu.), that the court cannot act unless a sufficient number are excused by the court to reduce the number below fifteen.

However in Germolges v. State, 99 Ala. 216 (pl. abate.), it was held that an order of courts supplying vacant places without discharging those not appearing was no grounds for objection. The number appearing is not shown in the case and therefore it cannot be ascertained from that case whether it was intended to limit or distinguish Peters v. State, supra, as no reference is made to that case, but the decision was on the ground that under the statute no objection can be taken by plea or otherwise to an indictment on the ground that a grand juror is not legally qualified, drawn, or summoned, except that they were not drawn in the presence of proper officers.

If the panel is already sixteen in Alabama, the court cannot under the code add to the panel, if so the indictment will be void. Boyd v. State, 96 Ala. 33.

Under Alabama special statute limiting the grand jury to fifteen, if twelve were selected from the original venire and three more drawn to fill the vacancies, a motion to quash the venire should be overruled. Roberts v. State, 68 Ala. 156 and 515 (mo. qu.).

Under Ala. Acts 1884-85, p. 151, providing for drawing juries and supplying deficiencies in organization, not providing for subsequent deficiencies, it is held that Ala. Code, § 4754, providing the mode of supplying the deficiencies, applies. Abernathy v. State, 78 Ala. 411 (mo. qu.); Donnelly v. State, Id. 463 (mo. qu.).

And where in Alabama eighteen were summoned, fifteen appeared, seven were accepted, and the sheriff was ordered to summon twenty-two, twice the number required to complete the organization, and he only summoned twenty-one, and one of the original venire was excused, it was held that under Ala. Code, § 4889, providing that objection cannot be made to the formation of a grand jury except when they were not drawn in the presence of officers designated by law, or where there is an order of record relating to the organization contrary to law, a plea in abatement was properly overruled. Billingslea v. State, 68 Ala. 486 (pl. abate.); Phillips v. State, Id. 469 (pl. abate.).

c. Class.

An irregularity in choosing from the list or wheel to fill the deficiency instead of from the county or district, or vice versa, will generally not vitiate the action of the grand jury, where the statute is not prohibitory. Jones v. State, 18 Fla. 899 (pl. abate.); Dukes v. State, 14 Fla. 499 (pl. abate.); United States v. Eagan, 30 Fed. Rep. 608 (pl. abate.).

But in Oliver v. State, 66 Ala. 8 (pl. abate.), it was said that if the court erred in directing the class from which the deficiency should be filled, it would be fatal, but if the sheriff erred it would not vitiate.

Where the talesmen have been summoned from the bystanders, or from a list made out by the sheriff, the proceedings are valid in absence of a prohibitory statute or under a permissive one. State v. Cameron, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 172 (chal.); Johnston v. State, 7 Smedes & M. 58 (mo. qu.); Dowling v. State, 5 Smedes & M. 864 (mo. new tr.); Jim v. Territory, 1 Wash. Terr. 63 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.); Runnels v. State, 28 Ark. 121 (mo. set aside); Lowrance v. State, 4 Yerg. 145 (mo. arrest); Fletcher v. People, 81 Ill. 116 (obj.).

Where the clerk substituted four names from the list instead of others disqualified, and the sheriff amended his return to show that they were not on the original list, a plea in abatement was properly overruled. State v. Martin, 38 W. Va. 563 (pl. abate.).

But where the statute is prohibitory or mandatory, and the deficiency is supplied from the bystanders, the indictment is invalid. Couch v. State, 68 Ala. 168 (mo. qu.); Ulmer v. State, 61 Ala. 208 (mo. qu.); Finley v. State, Id. 201 (mo. ar.).

And in Montgomery v. State, 8 Kan. 263 (mo. ar.), this was also said to be error in organization, but the accused must act promptly or the error will be waived.

Under Ala. Code, § 4390, providing that grand jurors may be householders or freeholders, and section 4338, providing for twice the number necessary to complete the panel, it was error to order only two householders and freeholders summoned, where two were needed. Fowler v. State, 100 Ala. 96 (obj.).

So an order limiting a talesman to registered voters would invalidate the indictment under such statute. Scott v. State, 68 Ala. 59 (mo. ar.).

But an order under such a statute to summon "eight qualified persons" would be valid. Stewart v. State, 98 Ala. 70 (mo. qu.).

And an order to summon a sufficient number of "good and lawful citizens possessing the qualifications specified in the statute of Alabama" is valid. Yancy v. State, 68 Ala. 141 (dem.).

IV. Drawing.

a. Irregularities.

Mere irregularity in drawing will generally not invalidate; and the failure to certify the lists will not render the indictment invalid; but some of the cases decide this on the question of practice and pleading.

Irregularity in the mode or manner of drawing will generally not affect the indictment unless the statute is mandatory. Some of the decisions, however, are made upon the question of time and mode of objection.

If the statute requires the notice of the drawing to be given the failure to give such notice will invalidate the grand jury.

Unless the statute is mandatory an objection that

Fitzpatrick, 66 How. Pr. 14; Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 488; Dolan v. People, Id. 485; People v. Dolan, 6 Hun. 232; State v. McMartin, 42 Minn. 80; Curtin v. Barton, 189 N. Y. 505; Ex parte Haymond, 91 Cal. 545; Re Gannon, supra; Bruner v. San Francisco City & County Super. Ct. 93 Cal. 289; State v. Brown, 12 Minn. 545; People v. Southwell, 46 Cal. 141.

Several of the Wisconsin cases are so similar in facts to the case at bar as to render them specially in point and their doctrine applicable to and controlling in this case.

Re Boyle's Petition, 9 Wis. 264; Ex Burke, 78 Wis. 857; State v. Williams, 5 Wis. 808, 68 Am. Dec. 65.

a greater or less number was drawn from which the grand jury was made is insufficient, and an objection allowed by statute must be made in the statutory way.

Clerical misprision in the names upon the list from which the grand jurors are drawn will not affect their action and objection to the change of names must be presented as required by statute.

The drawing must be made by an authorized person, and has been sanctioned in but few cases when made by deputy. The title of office of the person drawing cannot be investigated collaterally by objection to the drawing. Generally an objection that the officer had not taken the statutory oath will prevail, if made in time, and in proper manner.

There is some conflict of authority as to the effect of the absence of one of the officers, where several are to participate in the drawing, some holding that such absence is an irregularity merely. In Alabama, Indiana, and Utah the statutes are mandatory. To vitiate a drawing on account of fraud, it must be clearly shown.

The question of power to draw depends on local statutes.

Where there is a substantial compliance with the statute generally, mere irregularities in the drawing and selecting the grand jury will not invalidate their action. Downs v. State, 78 Md. 128 (pl. abate.); Com. v. Brown, 121 Mass. 69 (pl. abate.); State v. Sandoz, 37 La. Ann. 376 (mo. qu.); Ex parte McCoy, 64 Ala. 201 (mo. qu.; chal.).

But where the law is mandatory and the grand jury is not selected as required by law, an indictment is invalid. State v. Williams, 5 Port. (Ala.) 130 (pl. abate.).

b. Certificate.

Where there has been substantial compliance with the law, an indictment should not be set aside for failure to certify the list, or that they were not certified at the exact time. State v. Ansaleme, 15 Iowa, 44 (mo. set aside); State v. Carney, 20 Iowa, 82 (mo. set aside); Crawford v. State, 61 Ga. 708 (pl. abate.); Brassfield v. State, 55 Ark. 556 (mo. qu.; cert.); Mikell v. State, 62 Ga. 368 (pl. abate.).

Other cases hold the same, as a question of practice as that a motion in arrest cannot be based upon matters not in the record. State v. Conway, 23 Minn. 291 (mo. ar.).

So under Minn. Gen. Laws 1878, chaps. 109, 110, providing a motion to set aside must be made at the time of arraignment, such motion cannot be made after arraignment to set aside for lack of certificate in list. State v. Schumm, 47 Minn. 373 (mo. set aside); State v. Diok, Id. 375 (mo. set aside).

So under Minn. Gen. Laws 1878-79, chap. 107, providing for challenge, that the requisite number of ballots was not drawn from the grand jury box, the challenge because the list was not certified cannot be made by motion to quash. State v. Greenman, 23 Minn. 209 (mo. qu.). 27 L. R. A.

The following cases sustain the proposition that the grand jury was a de facto grand jury at least, and its acts valid.

Dean v. Gleason, 16 Wis. 1; State v. Bloom, 17 Wis. 522; Laver v. McGlachlin, 28 Wis. 864; Sauerhering v. Iron Ridge & M. R. Co. 25 Wis. 447; State v. Bartlett, 35 Wis. 287; State v. Goldstucker, 40 Wis. 124; Sprague v. Brown, 40 Wis. 612; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Langlade County, 56 Wis. 614; Cole v. Black River Falls, 57 Wis. 110; Yorty v. Paine, 63 Wis. 154; Baker v. State, 69 Wis. 32; Baker v. State, 80 Wis. 416; State v. Cunningham, 15 L. R. A. 561, 81 Wis. 440; State v. Oates, 86 Wis. 634.

So under Texas Code, art. 377, the time for challenge is limited to be before the grand jury is impaneled, and where the list is not certified in a plea in abatement that the accused was in jail will not allow the objection to be made at any other time than that prescribed. Kemp v. State, 11 Tex. App. 174 (pl. abate.).

But under a statute requiring the list to be made out and delivered to the clerk thirty days prior to the term, a plea in abatement, that the county commissioner did not deliver the attested copy of names selected was said to be a good plea. United States v. Cropper, 1 Morris (Iowa) 190 (pl. abate.).

See further subhead, "Time and form," infra. V. And the certificate is prima facie evidence that the board selected the grand jury as required by statute. Manlon v. People, 29 Ill. App. 522 (mo. qu.).

c. Manner.

1. Mode.

Where the judge selected the venire under Tenn. Code, § 4791, instead of appointing them under the provisions of the old code, the action was valid. Turner v. State, 89 Tenn. 547 (obj.).

The objection that the grand jury was drawn by a boy of improper age is too late, when made by a motion for new trial. State v. Underwood, 23 N. C. 96 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.).

That the grand jury was not drawn by lot is insufficient as a plea in abatement where the manner of selecting is not mandatory. Box v. State, 34 Miss. 614 (pl. abate.).

But where they were not selected from a box from the list required by statute, the indictment will be invalid. Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621 (pl. abate.).

See further next subhead, "Machinery."

And where the jury was drawn by lot instead of being selected as required by statute, the indictment is invalid. State v. Clarkson, 3 Ala. 373 (pl. abate.).

The objection that the grand jury was not selected by lot may be made after the first day of the term, where the crime was committed on the first day of the term. State v. Texada, 19 La. Ann. 436 (dem.).

And in Nevada the mode of selecting the grand jury is not a statutory ground for setting aside an indictment, especially after a plea not guilty. State v. Collyer, 17 Nev. 275 (mo. qu.).

2. Machinery.

The irregularity in drawing the grand jurors from cards presented to the sheriff by the city clerk instead of from the regular box will not invalidate their action. State v. Champeau, 52 Vt. 313, 36 Am. Rep. 754 (pl. abate.). But see Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621 (pl. abate.).

And returning some of the names to the box and drawing others so as to apportion the jurors in the county will not invalidate, and objection must be

Mr. W. C. Williams, for defendant in error:

Jurisdiction of the person of the defendant can only be acquired by the issue and service of legal process.

The court had no jurisdiction to issue such process in this case, except upon an indictment found and returned into court by a grand jury.

There was no grand jury which could find and return this indictment, it had no legal existence, and any pretended indictment returned by it had no more force or validity "than if it had been found by the chamber of commerce of the city of Milwaukee, or any other equally respectable body of men."

by plea in abatement on arraignment, and not by motion to quash. State v. Martin, 28 N. C. 672 (mo. qu.).

And drawing from an open hat instead of the box will not vitiate unless the accused is prejudiced. State v. Gillick, 7 Iowa, 287 (mo. qu.).

And objection that the name of a grand juror was not in the box is insufficient where his name was on the minutes of the court records as having been drawn. Cross v. State, 84 Ga. 443 (obj.).

Under Tennessee Act 1779 (Car. & Nich.) 421, providing for drawing the names out of a box where more than thirteen are summoned, if less than the number required are in attendance their names need not be placed in the box and drawn out again. Workman v. State, 4 Sneed, 426 (pl. abate.).

The indictment is not invalid where the commissioners broke open the box on account of the key being lost. Long v. State (Ala.) May 14, 1894 (mo. qu.).

Where it was claimed that the wheel was not sealed as required by law and the keys in the custody of the sheriff, and the box not in the custody of the commissioners, the objection was insufficient as the wheel was in the commissioners' office in the vault, and was sealed. Rolland v. Com. 82 Pa. 306 (chal. array).

But if only one seal was used the indictment should be quashed under Pa. Act April 13, 1834, providing that the sheriff and commissioners shall seal the wheel. Brown v. Com. 73 Pa. 321, 18 Am. Rep. 740 (chal. array; mo. qu.).

d. Notice.

The failure to give notice of the drawing as required by statute will invalidate the drawing. State v. Clough, 49 Me. 573 (mo. qu.).

And where the selection was by the sheriff and not made publicly by the judge as required by the statute, the indictment will be void. Avirett v. State, 76 Md. 510 (pl. abate.).

But notice is immaterial where the proper officers are present. People v. Gallagher, 55 Cal. 463 (mo. set aside).

e. Number.

Objection to the grand jury because the number from which they were drawn exceeded or was less than the statutory number, must be made as provided by statute in regard to the manner of objecting, and so where a challenge was required a plea in abatement did not avail. Huling v. State, 17 Ohio St. 583 (pl. abate.).

Nor a motion to quash. People v. Harriot, 8 Park. Crim. Rep. 112 (mo. qu.).

A motion in arrest as a plea of not guilty waives objections. Green v. State, 23 Miss. 687 (mo. ar.).

And that the list contained more than the statutory number was not a good objection where after erasures the proper number remained. Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 501 (pl. abate.).

27 L. R. A.

Therefore, the process upon which he was arrested and detained was absolutely void and the court never acquired jurisdiction of the defendant.

It accordingly follows that there was no power in the court to arraign or try the defendant or hold him to bail or commit him for failure to give bail for his appearance for trial.

United States v. Richardson, 28 Fed. Rep. 61; United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857; State v. Sloan, 65 Wis. 647.

In the strongest light possible the action of the municipal court amounted to nothing more than the assumption by it, as a matter of law, that it had jurisdiction to issue its process, when in fact it had none, and "its judgment

And if the extra number was struck off before the grand jury was sworn, there is no cause for challenge. State v. Knight, 19 Iowa. 94 (chal.).

And N. C. Code, § 1727, providing that only thirty-six names shall be drawn, is directory. State v. Watson, 104 N. C. 736 (mo. qu.).

And where the statute did not require 800 names of qualified jurors that three were ineligible and three were dead did not affect the drawing. United States v. Rondeau, 16 Fed. Rep. 109 (pl. abate.).

And the Utah Act providing that eighteen only shall be summoned from which a grand jury of fifteen shall be made was repealed by the Poland bill. People v. Lee, 2 Utah, 441 (exception).

But Hutchinson Code, section 883, providing that thirty-six should be drawn, was mandatory, and drawing forty would invalidate. Leathers v. State, 26 Miss. 73 (pl. abate.).

See also, as to number, State v. McEntire, 2 N. C. Law Repos. 287; McKee v. State, 83 Ala. 32.

As to number acting on panel, see note to State v. Belvel, post, 846.

f. Name.

The variance or clerical mispision in writing a name of the grand jurors will not avoid the indictment. State v. Mahan, 12 Tex. 233 (pl. abate.); Ramsey v. State, 83 Ala. 81 (pl. abate.); Boles v. State, 56 Ark. 35 (mo. set aside); Hayes v. State, 58 Ga. 85 (mo. qu.); Turner v. State, 78 Ga. 174 (pl. abate.); State v. Norton, 28 N. J. L. 33 (mo. qu.); State v. Mahan, 12 Tex. 233 (pl. abate.).

And Texas Paschall's Dir., art. 2381, providing for challenge when the list was not selected by the county court and for corruption controls as to challenge. Green v. State, 1 Tex. App. 82 (chal. to array).

And that the name did not appear by any list prepared by the county court is not a good plea in abatement. Sayle v. State, 8 Tex. 120 (pl. abate.).

And the use of some of the names which had been dropped from the list is not ground for any objection, where they were competent persons. Williams v. State, 55 Ga. 391 (mo. qu.).

And a motion to set aside an indictment because one of the names was not on the list should be overruled as objection should be made by challenge and it does not appear but what the error was corrected. State v. Hart, 29 Iowa, 268 (mo. set aside).

And the presumption is that only names taken from the lists were used. State v. De Bord, 88 Iowa, 103 (mo. qu.).

And that the names were not written in full before drawn cannot be reached by motion in arrest in Alabama, but must be by plea in abatement. State v. Stedman, 7 Port. (Ala.) 436 (mo. ar.).

g. Officers.

Where the statute is mandatory and specific, the act of drawing cannot be made by any other person than those specified, or in such a case cannot may be questioned anywhere for want of jurisdiction."

This we do in this case by habeas corpus.

Spelling, Extraordinary Relief, §§ 1202, 1203, 1206, 1213, 1216.

If there was any question as to whether this was a de facto grand jury or not, it was a question which could properly be inquired into upon habeas corpus.

Re Boyle's Petition, 9 Wis. 267.

An indictment found by a grand jury at a term of court not authorized by law is void.

Davis v. State, 46 Ala. 80; Com. v. Bannon, 97 Mass. 218; Finnegan v. State, 57 Ga. 427. See also State v. McNamara, 3 Nev. 70; O'Byrnes v. State, 51 Ala. 25; Miller v. State, 33 Miss. 356, 69 Am. Dec. 351.

Mr. Hugh Ryan also for defendant in error.

be by deputy. State v. McNamara, 3 Nev. 70 (mo. set aside); Dutell v. State, 41 G. Greene, 125 (mo. qu.); State v. Hale, 44 Iowa, 96 (mo. set aside; mo. arrest); — v. —, 3 N. J. L. J. 153 (Somerset Oyer & Terminer Ct.) (obj.; mo. qu.); Clare v. State, 30 Md. 164 (pl. abate.); State v. Brandt, 41 Iowa, 593 (mo. set aside); Cochran v. State, 39 Ala. 40 (mo. qu.); State v. Williams, 5 Port. (Ala.) 130 (pl. abate.); Stokes v. State, 24 Miss. 621 (pl. abate.).

And where one not a jury commissioner interfered and wrote the name of one of the jury, it will avoid the indictment. State v. Clavery, 43 La. Ann. 1133 (mo. qu.); State v. Taylor, 43 La. Ann. 1131 (mo. qu.).

And where the sheriff was ordered to summon certain named persons and the statute required the sheriff to select, the indictment was invalid. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377 (mo. qu.).

But an objection is invalid made on the ground that the drawing was by deputy, where he had the power of his principal. Willingham v. State, 21 Fla. 761 (pl. abate.).

But 21 U. S. Stat. at L. 43, as to politics of the commissioner, is directory and not mandatory. United States v. Chaires, 40 Fed. Rep. 320 (pl. abate.).

And in a similar case it was held that the evidence did not sustain such an objection. United States v. Paxton, 40 Fed. Rep. 136 (chal.; mo. qu.).

And the federal courts could have the state authorities summon the grand jury. United States v. Hanson, 23 Fed. Rep. 74 (pl. abate.); United States v. Richardson, Id. 61 (pl. abate.).

And a plea in abatement that the names were not drawn by a clerk is insufficient under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 1035, providing that defects in form not prejudicial shall not affect an indictment. United States v. Tuska, 14 Blatchf. 5 (pl. abate.).

And a challenge to the array on the ground that the commissioners were not elective officers as those appointed by the state but were government officials and were partial, cannot be made after the grand jury is organized. United States v. Butler, 1 Hughes, C. C. 512 (chal.; mo. qu.).

An objection cannot be made to the supervisors after the grand jury is charged, under a statute making the impaneling conclusive evidence of competency. Durrah v. State, 44 Miss. 739 (pl. abate.).

An objection to the sheriff must be made before trial. State v. Douglass, 63 N. C. 500 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.).

So a plea in abatement that one of the grand jurors was not drawn by councilmen is bad where they should be drawn by aldermen. State v. Dugan, 15 R. L. 412 (pl. abate.).

So an objection to the qualification of the jury commissioners is too late when made on motion 37 L. R. A.

Orton, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The same questions being in both these two cases, they will be considered and disposed of together. They are brought before this court by a common-law writ of certiorari, to review the proceedings in habeas corpus of the judge of the circuit court of Milwaukee county, by which the defendants in error were discharged from imprisonment. The pleadings in the habeas corpus and the certiorari proceedings show the following facts: On the last day of the October term of the municipal court of Milwaukee county, 1898, the grand jury of said court found and returned true bills of indictment against the defendants and four other persons, under section 4541, Rev. Stat., for having fraudulently received deposits as directors of the Plankinton Bank of Milwaukee, for a new trial. State v. Washington, 33 La. Ann. 506 (mo. new tr.).

And an objection to the relationship of one of the commissioners and the murdered man in a homicide case will not affect the drawing. State v. McNinch, 13 S. C. 89 (mo. qu.). See State v. MoQuaige, 58 C. N. S. 429 (chal.).

The right of office, or constitutionality of act giving authority to the officer, cannot be collaterally attacked by objecting to the drawing of the grand jurors. People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 214 (chal.); Dolan v. People, 6 Hun, 493, 64 N. Y. 435 (pl. abate.); Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 433 (chal.).

And Louisiana Act 44 of 1877, § 11, providing that objections shall be made on the first day of the term, is mandatory, unless good reason is given for delay in objecting to the qualification of commissioners. State v. Sterling, 41 La. Ann. 679 (mo. qu.).

b. Oath to officer.

If the accused does not wait too long, and is not in fault in delaying, an objection that the statutory oath was not administered to the jury commissioner, will invalidate their action. State v. Strickland, 41 La. Ann. 513 (mo. qu.); State v. Thompson, 32 La. Ann. 379 (mo. set aside); State v. Williams, 30 La. Ann. 1023 (mo. new tr.); State v. Bradley, 33 La. Ann. 403 (mo. qu.); State v. Hinson, 42 La. Ann. 941 (mo. qu.); State v. Oliver, Id. 943 (mo. qu.); State v. Mima, Id. 944 (mo. qu.).

If the officer qualifies after the drawing and then acts over again and then uses the same names it will not validate. State v. Vance, 31 La. Ann. 393 (mo. qu.).

But in Kendall v. Com. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 15 (mo. qu.), an indictment was sustained against the same objection on the ground that Ky. Crim. Code, § 281, prevents a review of motions of this kind.

And in Louisiana the clerk of the court need not take the jury commissioner's oath but once. State v. McRevels, 31 La. Ann. 337 (mo. set aside; other indictments).

And the Louisiana Act of 1877 does not require the commissioner's oath to be recorded. State v. Stewart, 45 La. Ann. 1164 (mo. qu.).

Or appointments to be on the minute book in the court where it is on record at the clerk's office. State v. Hall, 44 La. Ann. 976 (mo. new tr.).

And the motion for a new trial for want of commissioner's oath is not a proper objection. State v. Tisdale, 41 La. Ann. 333 (mo. new tr.).

1. Officers' presence.

Courts of some states hold that the absence of one of the officers required to take part in the drawing, will be only an irregularity which will not vitiate the drawing. Blair v. State, 5 Ohio C. Ct.

knowing at the time said bank to be insolvent. The defendants were detained by virtue of commitments on failure to enter into recognizance, issued out of said municipal court, after their arraignment and pleas of not guilty. There was no grand jury summoned, selected, or impaneled for the said October term of said court, but the grand jury acting for said term, and which found said indictments, was the same grand jury duly impaneled for said court, at and for the previous September term thereof. No order was made by said court directing a grand jury for said October term, and no grand jury was summoned for said term. The said grand jury was ordered, summoned, and impaneled for said September term by an order dated August 3, 1893; and the said grand jury convened at the September term, on September 12, 1893, and entered upon the investigation leading to said indictments, but the same was not concluded during the said September term, and for such reason they continued their sittings over and into the said October term, and until the last day of said term, when the said indictments were found, and duly returned. On the last day of the September term the said court adjourned to October 2, 1893, which was the first day of the October term. The same grand jury found and returned several other indictments and against other persons during said October term. On these facts the learned judge of the circuit court discharged the defendants, holding that said indictments were void, and that the said municipal court had no jurisdiction, therefore, to issue the writs for the arrest or the commitments for the detention of the defendants. I say that this was the ground upon

Rep. 496 (pl. abate.); People v. Rodriguez, 10 Cal. 60 (chal.); Stevenson v. State, 69 Ga. 68 (mo. ar.; but should be pleaded in abatement).

And in Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105 (prohibition), where the presiding judge was not present when his order for the drawing was changed, but was present at the drawing, the indictment was sustained.

Under Louisiana Act 44 of 1877, requiring objections for defects in drawing to be made on the first day of the term, an objection on account of the absence of a person required to be present at the drawing will be too late. State v. Leftwich, 48 La. Ann. 1194 (mo. qu.).

And in Alabama an objection for absence of officers must be by plea in abatement. Preston v. State, 63 Ala. 127 (obj.).

But in the same state it was held that on such an objection oral evidence could not contradict the record. State v. Allen, 1 Ala. 442 (pl. abate.).

But under Louisiana Act 44 of 1877, requiring a drawing of the jury, the clerk of the commissioners must be present or the indictment will be invalid. State v. Conway, 35 La. Ann. 350 (mo. qu.).

And under Utah Act, Jan. 21, 1890, providing for the drawing, the statute must be complied with and a plea in abatement that the officer did not, in connection with the clerk, draw the jury from the box as required by law, but that six were taken as talesmen from the bystanders, is a good plea. Brannigan v. People, 3 Utah, 488 (pl. abate.).

And under Ind. Const., art. 5, § 3, providing that the associate judges shall not hold the court in capital cases, and under a provision requiring the presence of the president of the circuit court, an indictment cannot be found by the grand jury, impaneled in the absence of the president. Cook v. State, 7 Blackf. 165 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.).

And under Ala. Code, section 4800, requiring the jurors to be drawn in the presence of officers, the false impersonation of a juror by another is fatal to an indictment. Nixon v. State, 68 Ala. 636 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.).

J. Fraud.

Where one of the grand jurors requested the deputy sheriff to place him on the jury, but no corruption is shown, the indictment will not be invalid. Com. v. Thompson, 4 Leigh, 667, 26 Am. Dec. 339 (pl. abate.).

And where the grand jury asked for another drawing in order that they might have a stenographer, and the second person drawn out of one hundred and three names is the only man wanted who was a stenographer, and had been employed to prosecute another man who was indicted and no prejudice is shown to the accused, the indictment was valid. People v. Lauder, 29 Mich. 100 (pl. abate.).

And a plea in abatement that one of the grand jurors was placed on the jury by reason of having persuaded others not to attend, is insufficient in not showing that those who did not attend were legally drawn. State v. Mead, 15 R. I. 416 (pl. abate.).

And a motion to set aside the indictment because two jury commissioners procured themselves to be made members of the grand jury, is not decided, as it does not appear but that such facts did not exist, nor does it appear to have been prejudicial. Williams v. State (Ark.) June 27, 1891 (mo. set aside).

And while malicious misconduct on the part of the sheriff in selecting the jury would be sufficient to quash the indictment, in New Jersey it would not be a good plea in abatement. Gibbs v. State, 45 N. J. L. 379, 46 Am. Rep. 723 (pl. abate.).

K. Power to draw.

Where the drawing took place under the old statute before the new act took effect, it was held that the old law controlled. Re Tillery, 43 Kan. 138 (hab. corp.).

And an objection on the ground of unconstitutionality of the act as being local is a challenge to the array and N. Y. Code Crim. Proc., § 223, forbids any challenge to the panel or the array. People v. Fitzpatrick, 1 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 426, 30 Hun, 498 (mo. set aside).

And under N. Y. Crim. Code, § 225, providing that objections to the matters of form in the indictment that are not prejudicial shall be disregarded, and section 323, prohibiting a challenge to the panel, a plea that the grand jurors were drawn under an act unconstitutional because local, is insufficient and the motion to set aside or quash is not given for any other causes in section 313. People v. Petrea, 23 N. Y. 123, 65 How. Pr. 59 (pl. abate.).

This case in effect overrules People v. Duff, 65 How. Pr. 365, 1 N. Y. Crim. Rep. 307, but does not refer to the same.

And Ohio Rev. Stat., § 5171, controls as to the impaneling of grand jurors, and section 5167 applies only to petit jurors. Julian v. State, 46 Ohio St. 511 (mo. writ error).

And where the United States courts in Indian Territory had no power to impanel the grand jury a prisoner should be discharged on habeas corpus. Ex parte Farley, 40 Fed. Rep. 66.

For "time," see subhead, "Time and term," infra.

V.

V. Time and term.

a. Adjournment.

The case of STATE v. NOYES was a collateral at-which the defendants were discharged, because the want of jurisdiction in the municipal court was the only ground upon which the defendants could have been discharged on habeas corpus. Although this is made a question on this hearing, it is no longer an open question in this court. It has been repeatedly decided by this court that nothing less than jurisdictional defects in the proceedings can be considered, or justify a discharge of the prisoner on habeas corpus, for errors and irregularities which do not go to the jurisdiction of the court may be inquired of on motion, appeal, or writ of error. The last paragraph of section 3428, Rev. Stat., provides:

"But no such court or officer on the return of any such writ [habeas corpus] shall have the power to inquire into the legality or justice of any judgment, order, or execution," etc. This is a limitation on the power of a judge or court to inquire of nothing less than jurisdictional defects in the proceedings on which the imprisonment is based. Mr. Justice Taylor, in State v. Sloan, 65 Wis. 647, so held after an examination of the previous cases in this court, and cited People v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 571-604, 19 Am. Rep. 211; Ex parte Lange, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 168, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Gibson, 81 Cal. 628, 91 Am. Dec. 546; Hurd, Habeas Corpus, 327; Re Perry, 80 Wis. 268; Re Crandall's Petition, 34 Wis. 177; Re Sewler's Petition, 41 Wis. 517; Hauser v. State, 33 tack by habeas corpus on an indictment found by a grand jury convened for the September term, but which acted at the October term to which the court had adjourned. Although the court discusses de facto grand juries, the decision is on the ground of collateral attack by habeas corpus, and the indictment was sustained as against such an attack. Irregularities in organization will not invalidate on a collateral attack. See subhead, L., "Pleading and practice generally," also rulings as to mode of attack for specific objections throughout the note.

Indictments found by grand juries at adjourned terms have been uniformly sustained.

The time during the term at which the grand jury shall be organized is not considered mandatory, but is otherwise in Arkansas. The term, however, must be a legal term, and objections to the action of grand juries, on account of time of convening, must be specific and according to statute. Under some statutes providing limited periods to act, as certain week or so many days in a month, they may act during different months. And if the statute is not mandatory limiting the time within which they shall be selected, an objection for that cause will not prevail.

See further as to "time," subhead "Writ; time," supra, II., h., and United States v. Cropper, 1 Morris (Iowa) 190 (pl. abate.).

See also next subheads, "Reconvening," "Special term," "Special grand jury."

That the grand jury was adjourned with the court to the adjourned term or was convened and impaneled at an adjourned term in the absence of prohibitory statute will not invalidate their action. Ulmer v. State, 14 Ind. 52 (mo. qu.); Com. v. Read, Thacher Crim. Cas. 180 (mo. ar.); State v. Davis, 23 Minn. 428 (dem.); State v. Sweeney, 68 Mo. 98 (mo. ar. does not show adj. gr. jur. at adjourned term); People v. Sheriff of Chautauqua, 11 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 172 (ba. corp.); Traviss v. Com. 106 Pa. 597 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.).

See also for adjournment, Sharp v. State, 2 Iowa, 454, infra, V., c.; Harper v. State, 42 Ind. 405, infra, V., d.

b. First day; first week; first term.

If the statute is not mandatory that the grand jury shall be organized on the first day of the term it may be organized on a subsequent day of the term. Jackson v. State (Ala.) Apr. 11, 1894 (obj.); State v. Dillard, 85 La. Ann. 1049 (mo. qu.); State v. Pate, 40 La. Ann. 748 (mo. qu.).

And the same applies in regard to the first week of the term. Perkins v. State, 92 Ala. 66 (mo. qu.).

But under Ark. Dig., 98, providing that the county court shall at the first term select a grand jury, a plea in abatement that the same was selected at another term should be sustained. Wilburn v. State, 21 Ark. 196 (pl. abate.).

27 L. R. A.

c. Legal term.

If the term at which the grand jury was organized is not a legal term as required by statute the indictment is invalid. Finnegan v. State 57 Ga. 423 (pl. abate.); Davis v. State, 46 Ala. 80 (mo. qu.).

But on an objection that the indictment was not found at a legal term the question whether it was an adjournment or special term is immaterial after verdict. Sharp v. State, 2 Iowa, 454 (mo. ar.).

A plea that the grand jury was selected on the 6th of May, which plea did not negative the fact that this was not in the May term, is insufficient. State v. Newer, 7 Blackf. 307 (pl. abate.).

d. Time limited.

Under Indiana Act 1865, S.S. 156, providing that a grand jury should not sit more than ten days in each month, a plea in abatement which fails to allege that the grand jury had been in session in the month of the indictment more than ten days prior thereto, is bad. Clem v. State, 33 Ind. 418. (pl. abate.).

And under such a statute the grand jury may sit in different months at an adjournment session. Harper v. State, 42 Ind. 405 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.).

And the objection that a different grand jury was required for separate weeks is not sufficient under Louisiana Act 44 of 1877, § 5, 6, providing that the grand jury shall serve until discharged. State v. Bennett, 45 La. Ann. 54 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.).

e. Prior to term.

Where the statute is not mandatory as to the grand jury being selected prior to the term, or mandatory limiting the time prior to the term in which it shall be selected, the action of a grand jury selected during the term or prior thereto will be valid. Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13; (chal.); State v. Smith, 38 S. C. 27 (mo. qu.); Mesmer v. Com. 26 Gratt. 978 (mo. qu.); Vanhook v. State, 12 Tex. 252 (pl. abate.); State v. Lawry, 4 Nev. 161 (chal.).

And to sustain their action it will be presumed that the December term continued in January. State v. Winebrenner, 97 Iowa, 230 (mo. ar.).

And under Indiana 2 Rev. Stat. 1876, p. 417, providing for selection of grand jury for the next ensuing two terms, a grand jury selected after the term of indictment is good as against a plea in abatement. Kelley v. State, 53 Ind. 811 (pl. abate.).

But under Nev. Crim. Code, § 669, and § 584, providing that they shall be selected prior to the term and that they shall not be drawn unless the judges so directs, an indictment by a grand jury selected at the same term is invalid. State v. Lauer, 41 Neb. 228 (pl. abate.).

And under Oregon New Const., art. 7, § 18, providing that grand jurors should be chosen from jurors in attendance at the court, an act providing for drawing prior to the term is unconstitutional and their indictment invalid. State v. Lawrence, 12 Or. 297.

Wis. 678. To these may be added Re Schuster, 82 Wis. 610; Re Graham, 74 Wis. 450; Re French, 81 Wis. 597.

We take it for granted that the learned judge of the court below held that the municipal court had no jurisdiction to issue the writs and commitments on which the defendants were arrested and imprisoned, on the ground that the indictments on which they were based were void, and that the indictments were void, because not found by a lawful grand jury. The decision of the court below depended, then, on the legality of the grand jury that found the indictments. That question is supposed to be before us on this certiorari. But, as we understand the law, the court below had no right in this collateral proceeding to inquire into the legality of that grand jury, and decide it to have been an illegal body, without authority to find the indictments; nor has this court the right to so inquire and decide. We are precluded from inquiring and determining whether the body of men that acted as a grand jury in finding the indictments was a grand jury de jure by the barrier the law sets up to protect the acts of that body in the interest of the public and public justice as a grand jury de facto. "The de facto doctrine, which was introduced into the law as a matter of policy and necessity to protect the interests of the public where those interests were involved in the official acts of persons exercising the du-

1. Time designated.

Under North Carolina Act 1887, chap. 589, not prohibiting the revision of grand jury lists more frequently than four years, a challenge for having been drawn at a time other than that prescribed was not good. State v. Durham Fertilizer Co., 111 N. C. 668 (mo. qu.).

Under N. Y. Laws 1861, chap. 444, providing that the county judge shall designate the term at which the grand jury shall be required, an indictment was valid although the judge omitted to order the grand jury to attend. People v. Cyphers, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 666, 31 N. Y. 373 (pl. abate.).

Under N. Y. Code Crim. Proc., § 45, which was a similar statute, it was held that the grand jury was organized properly under the statute. People v. Bugg, 98 N. Y. 587 (mo. qu.).

A change of time for the court does not make the grand jury an illegal one, and under S. C. Gen. Stat., § 2266, providing that no irregularity in organizing shall be sufficient to set aside the verdict, unless party is prejudiced, an objection should be made before verdict. State v. Jeffcoat, 26 S. C. 114 (mo. ar.).

A clerical misprision as to the date of organization may be corrected. Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106 (obj.).

VI. Reconvening.

Indictments found where grand jury is reconvened by the court in session, are valid. State v. McEvoy, 9 S. C. 208 (mo. qu.); Blanton v. State, 1 Wash. 265 (mo. qu.); Reg. v. Holloway, 9 Car. & P. 48; Long v. State, 46 Ind. 582 (mo. qu.); State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 418 (mo. new tr.).

Even if some of those not reconvened had not acted before, the same will be valid. Findley v. People, 1 Mich. 284 (pl. abate.).

VII. Court.

The provisional court of North Carolina had power to indict by grand jury. State v. Jarvis, 68 N. C. 556 (mo. ar.).

And under the New York statute authorizing the court of oyer and terminer to be held twice annually, and as often as the judge shall appoint, and an extra court to be appointed by the governor, an objection that there were two grand juries in the same county at the same time, is insufficient. Allen v. People, 57 Barb. 888 (pl. abate.).

Under Mass. Stat. 1859, chap. 199, substituting superior court for the court of common pleas, the grand jury properly belongs to the superior court. Com. v. Rich, 14 Gray, 385 (protest).

VIII. Special term.

Under the peculiar statutory provisions of some states an indictment may be found by a grand jury convened at a special term. State v. Barnes, 30 Mo. 418 (mo. ar.; adj. term); State v. Cardozo, 11 S. C. 195 (mo. ar.); State v. Nash, 7 Iowa, 347; People v. Carabin, 14 Cal. 488 (obj.); Young v. State, 3 How. (Miss.) 265 (obj.).

27 L. R. A.

And after a plea to the indictment it is too late to object that the grand jury for a special term was not properly organized. Brown v. State, 9 Neb. 157.

But where the authority for the special session does not warrant the indictment by a grand jury at that time their action is invalid. Wilson v. State, 1 Blackf. 423; Bales v. State, 63 Ala. 30.

And in Dunn v. State, 2 Ark. 249, 35 Am. Dec. 54 (obj.), it was held that where a grand jury is convened at a special term the order for the term must be complete and follow the statute.

See subhead "Special grand jury," infra.

IX. Special grand jury.

Under the statutory provisions of most states, the court is authorized to order a special grand jury to be summoned, where there has been a failure to draw or summon a regular grand jury. Newton v. State, 21 Fla. 53 (pl. abate.); Hester v. State (Ala.) June 14, 1894 (mo. qu.); Kemp v. State, 89 Ala. 53 (obj.); Robertson v. Com. (Va.) Nov. 8, 1894 (pl. abate.); State v. McCarty, 17 Minn. 76 (obj.; mo. qu.).

In Arkansas the court has the implied constitutional power to direct such a one to be summoned. Straughan v. State, 16 Ark. 87 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.).

Under Minn. Gen. Stat., 637, providing challenge to the panel for certain causes, a challenge for other causes cannot be made to a special venire. State v. Gut, 18 Minn. 841 (obj.).

The objection that the special venire was issued to make up the original thirty-six, instead of drawing from the original venire of those that appeared, must be made by challenge and not by plea in abatement or motion to quash. State v. White, 17 Tex. 242 (pl. abate.).

A special grand jury may be ordered in vacation. Holman v. State, 79 Ga. 155 (pl. abate.); Snodgrass v. Com. 89 Va. 679 (mo. qu.); State v. Marsh, 18 Kan. 596 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.; mo. arrest.).

On the discharge of the grand jury a special grand jury may be impeached under the statutory provisions of the several states. Shinn v. Com. 32 Gratt. 369 (pl. abate.); Drake v. State, 14 Neb. 585 (obj.); Freel v. State, 31 Ark. 212; Bumpeon v. People, 78 Ill. 248 (obj.); White v. People, 31 Ill. 838 (obj.); Charts v. Territory (Ariz.) Jan. 23, 1893 (obj.); Edmonds v. State, 34 Ark. 720 (mo. qu.).

Under the common-law power of the court to order a special grand jury the same has been held legal. Stone v. People, 3 Ill. 823 (mo. new tr.).

And the defendant having the grand jury set aside and obtaining a special venire, cannot then complain that his objection to the original grand jury should not have been sustained. State v. Grimes, 50 Minn. 123 (obj.).

But under Miss. Hutchinson Code, 888, art. 10, § 2, providing that a special venire is confined to cases where none of the regular venire are present, a plea in abatement that the original venire was ties of an officer without being a lawful officer," has its most salutary application to the acts of a grand jury, and of other official instruments of the courts which constitute judicial proceedings. The courts are supposed to select and determine the qualifications of their subordinate official instruments necessary to the administration of justice. Their acts cannot be questioned without seriously affecting the proceedings of the courts, and the conclusiveness of their judgments. The grand jury in question was summoned, selected, impaneled and sworn for the September term of the court, and held its session and did business during that term. There is no question but that it was a legal grand jury throughout the September term. On the last day of that term this same body adjourned, with the court, to the first day of the October term, and continued its unfinished business. It is contended that this body became functus officio as a grand jury on and after the last day of the September term. It was recognized by the court as a lawful grand jury, and the court received the indictments found by it, and finally discharged it from further service, and ordered the payment of its fees. The legal grand jury of the September term simply held over its term. There cannot be a more appropriate application of the de facto doctrine than to such a body as a grand jury de facto while thus holding over and doing business in the present, and that the court improperly set aside the whole panel, is a good plea. Baker v. State, 23 Miss. 243 (pl. abate.).

In Texas, although the court cannot order a new venire after the grand jury for the term has been discharged, the motion to set aside the indictment must be on two grounds one of which is that it was not found by at least twelve grand jurors, and this objection does not appear to be sustained in this case. Newman v. State, 43 Tex. 525 (mo. qu.).

And the fact that three of the grand jurors were disqualified would not authorize the court to set aside the whole panel and order another. State v. Jacobs, 6 Tex. 99 (mo. qu.).

The presumption is that the special grand jury was valid. Mackin v. People, 115 Ill. 812 (mo. new tr.); State v. Connell, 49 Mo. 233 (obj.); Dixon v. State, 39 Ark. 166 (mo. ar.); State v. Dusenberry, 115 Mo. 277 (mo. new tr.).

The number of grand jurors required in a special grand jury is not less than six under Virginia Code, section 3977, and this is held not to violate the Federal Constitution. The provision as to due process of law is held not to require a greater number of grand jurors, and the provision requiring a presentment or indictment by a grand jury for infamous crimes leaves the number of grand jurors to be determined by state law. Hausenfluck v. Com. 85 Va. 708 (mo. qu.).

It should be observed that the Fifth Amendment of the Federal Constitution has been held by numerous decisions of the federal courts to have no application to procedure in state courts.

An indictment found by such a special grand jury of six was held valid in Mesmer v. Com., 26 Gratt. 976 (mo. qu.).

And the same was held as to an indictment found by a special grand jury of seven. Lyles v. Com. 88 Va. 396 (mo. qu.).

A presumption that an indictment was found by a special grand jury under common law was held proper in Wilson v. People, 3 Colo. 325 (mo. ar.), where nineteen jurors were summoned while the constitution limited the grand jury to twelve. The court sustained the indictment on the presumption that only twelve acted or else it was a special grand jury.

X. Oath.

a. Affirmance.

For oath to officer, see supra, IV., h.

In Massachusetts it is not necessary to show that those affirming had conscientious scruples about taking the oath. Com. v. Fisher, 7 Gray, 492 (mo. ar.); Com. v. Smith, 9 Mass. 107 (pl. abate.).

But in New Jersey it was originally held that it was necessary to show this or the indictment would be invalid. State v. Rockafellow, 6 N. J. L. 405 (mo. ar.); State v. Sharp, cited in State v. Rockafellow, supra; State v. Fox, 9 N. J. L. 305 (mo. qu.); State v. Harris, 7 N. J. L. 423 (mo. qu.).

27 L. R. A

But in Engeman v. State, 54 N. J. L. 247 (obj.), it was held that these two latter cases were removed to the supreme court by certiorari and motion to quash was made before trial. Since then N. J. Crim. Code, § 53, provides that objection to the indictment for form or substance shall be by demurrer or motion to quash before the jury are sworn and not after, and an objection to affirmance not made as so provided will not avail.

In 9 Car. & P. 78, before Alderson, B., when the grand jury was called and a Quaker affirmed, the court directed that all indictments should commence: "The jury for our Lady the Queen upon their oath and affirmance" present.

Three and Four Wm. chap. 48, § 1, provides that Quakers and Moravians may affirm where an oath is required.

b. Form.

Where it is shown that the grand jury was duly sworn it will be presumed that the proper oath was administered. Williams v. People, 54 Ill. 422 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.); Potsdamer v. State, 17 Fla. 395 (mo. new tr.); Brown v. State, 10 Ark. 607 (mo. new tr.); Lumpkin v. State, 68 Ala. 56 (mo. qu.); Thomason v. State, 2 Tex. App. 550 (pl. abate.); State v. Weaver, 104 N. C. 758 (mo. ar.).

And the same was held in Parker v. People, 4 L. R. A. 808, 13 Colo. 155 (obj.) on the ground that objections cannot be made in the supreme court for the first time.

And the same was held in Battle v. State, 54 Ala. 96 (mo. ar.) and in State v. Watson, 31 La. Ann. 379 (obj.), on the ground that such objection must be made before a plea of not guilty.

And the same was held in Chase v. State, 46 Miss. 683 (pl. abate.), under Miss. Code 1837, art. 131, p. 499, providing that no objection, except to the array for fraud, is now available.

And that the form of oath is not shown by the record, cannot be questioned by motion to quash. Stout v. State, 98 Ind. 150 (mo. qu.).

Or by a plea in abatement. Smith v. State, 22 Miss. 723 (pl. abate.).

So it will be presumed that the proper oath was administered when the record is "who were—," and charged by the court as directed by law. Com. v. Pullan, 3 Bush, 47 (mo. set aside).

The form of oath was changed by Indiana Acts 1865, p. 155, and objection thereafter that the former oath was not administered is without force. Bond v. State, 52 Ind. 457 (mo. ar.).

Under Texas Crim. Code, art. 453, providing two grounds only for setting aside an indictment, and article 457, providing three grounds for substance, one accused of crime cannot question the form of oath, as it is not so provided. West v. State, 6 Tex. App. 435 (mo. qu.).

The indictment need not state when and where the oath was administered. Vaughn v. State, 40 Mo. 530 (mo. new tr.).

October term of the court. This doctrine, in its application to public officers and their acts, is well understood. Its history, object, and uses are exhaustively treated in the leading case of State v. Carroll, 88 Conn. 449, 9 Am. Rep. 409. In People v. Petrea, 93 N. Y. 128, an indictment for grand larceny was found by a grand jury drawn under a void statute. It was insisted, on behalf of the defendant, that the grand jury was not a lawful one, or within the requirement of the constitution. On behalf of the people it was contended "that it is sufficient to maintain the authority of the grand jury to investigate criminal charges and find indictments, valid in their nature, that the body acted under the color of lawful authority." The following cases are cited to this principle: People v. Dolan, 6 Hun, 282; Dolan v. People, Id. 498, 64 N. Y. 485; Carpenter v. People, 64 N. Y. 483; Thompson v. People, 6 Hun, 185; People v. Jewett, 3 Wend. 314; Oss v. People, 80 N. Y. 500; Priory v. People, 3 Keyes, 450; Ferris v. People, 81 How. Pr. 145. The court said: "The objection to the constitution of the grand jury which found the indictment lies solely in the fact that they were drawn under the provisions of a void statute, etc. In all other respects the proceedings were regular. The jurors were drawn by the proper officer; they were regularly summoned and retained by the sheriff; they were recognized.

And that the grand jury was not sworn to inquire of offenses in the county attached for judicial purposes, will not invalidate. Wau-kon-chaw-neek-kaw v. United States, 1 Morris (Iowa) 82 (obj.).

That an indictment was made on "their oath" and not on their several oaths will not invalidate. Com. v. Johnson, Thacher, Crim. Cas. 284 (dem.).

So an objection that it was upon the oaths and not upon the oath of the grand jurors will not avoid the indictment. State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 88 (mo. qu.); Com. v. Sholes, 13 Allen, 554 (mo. qu.).

So an indictment reciting "sworn" instead of "upon their oaths" is sufficient. Byam v. State, 17 Wis. 145 (mo. ar.).

But if the record purports to state the oath, it must conform substantially to the statute. Davis v. State, 54 Ala. 88 (obj.).

The oath in King v. Earl of Shaftesbury, 8 How. St. Tr. 769, was substantially that they should inquire and present matters given them in charge touching this present service, and that they should keep their doings secret, and act without fear or favor, and present the truth.

c. Objection that the grand jury was not sworn.

The fact that the grand jurors were sworn must affirmatively appear from the record or the indictment will be invalid. Foster v. State, 31 Miss. 421 (obj.); Abram v. State, 25 Miss. 589 (mo. new tr.); Cody v. State, 8 How. (Miss.) 27 (obj.); State v. McAllister, 26 Me. 374 (mo. ar.); Roe v. State (Ala.) June 12, 1887 (obj.); Clyncard's Case, Cro. Eliz. 654 (obj.).

The want of the words "onerati & jurati" was held not fatal on motion to quash, in King v. Gakee, 1 Keb. 101, on the ground that those words were "intended at Tryals at Nisi prius not in indictments."

But in King v. Cullye, 2 Keb. 367, the decision was just the contrary. See also infra, heading "Then and there."

And where the indictment does not show they were chosen, impaneled, and sworn for the county although it says "on their oath do present" it was insufficient. Territory v. Sevaillies, 1 N. M. 119 (mo. ar.).

And in Pennsylvania v. Bell, Add. Rep. 156, 1 Am. Dec. 293, it was said that indictments have been quashed for not stating that the grand jury inquired on their oath.

In State v. Creight, 1 Brev. 169, 2 Am. Dec. 656 (mo. ar.). It was held that the indictment might be amended in the caption at any time to show that it was "upon their oaths" if the minutes showed that fact.

And in Kneeland v. State, 63 Ga. 641 (pl. abate.), it was said that the failure to show the grand jury was sworn in record, transmitted from one court to another, might be amended if possible.

But in State v. Fields, Peak (Tenn.) 140 (obj.), it was held that the judge cannot from memory, six 27 L. R. A.

months after his term has ended, amend the record to show that the grand jury was sworn.

However in State v. Long, 1 Humph. 386 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.), it was held that an indictment is sufficient if it appears in the body thereof that the grand jury was duly sworn although it does not so appear in the caption.

And in State v. Davidson, 2 Coldw. 184, where the record did not show that the grand jury were sworn and had other defects which rendered it invalid, the court under Tenn. Code, § 542, providing that a new trial or a motion in arrest shall not be granted for any of the following causes, construed it to read for any one of the following causes, and if more than one exists a motion in arrest would be allowed.

If the record shows that the grand jurors were sworn it will be sufficient. Beavers v. State, 58 Ind. 530 (mo. ar.); State v. Peterson, 3 La. Ann. 921 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.; mo. qu.); Bailey v. State, 39 Ind. 438 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.); Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 569 (mo. qu.); Stone v. State, 80 Ind. 115 (mo. qu.); State v. Loving, 15 Tex. 558; Jeffries v. Cone, 13 Allen, 145 (mo. ar.); Lambert v. People, 34 Ill. App. 687 (mo. ar.; mo. new tr.).

And it will be presumed that the statute was observed when the record recites that they were duly sworn and the grand jury were present in court and the oath was read to them and no objection was made. People v. Rose, 52 Hun. 33 (mo. set aside).

And the record of each term need not show the swearing of the jury at a prior term, to serve during the year. Turns v. Cone, 6 Met. 224 (obj.).

In Long v. State, 46 Ind. 582 (mo. qu.; mo. ar.), it was held that it will be presumed that the grand jury was sworn after an indictment and nothing to the contrary appears from the record.

And in Bird v. State, 53 Ga. 602 (pl. abate.), where the record showed duly "impaneled," it is imported that they were sworn.

And an indictment showing that the grand jurors were duly sworn, upon their oaths present, or sworn in and for the county, will be sufficient. Cornelius v. State, 12 Ark. 732 (mo. new tr.); Lowell v. State, 45 Ind. 550 (mo. qu.); Byrd v. State, 1 How. (Miss.) 168 (dem.); McClure v. State, 1 Yerg. 206 (mo. new tr.).

But in Lyman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 845 (obj.), it was held that the recitals in the indictment could not supply the omission from the record.

Under N. Y. Penal Code, § 276, requiring only the statement in the indictment that the grand jury of that county, accuse the defendant of the crime alleged therein, the indictment need not show that the grand jury was sworn. People v. Beavey, 88 Hun. 418 (obj.).

And under Ala. Code 1876, § 4889, providing that no objection can be taken to an indictment in the formation of the grand jury except that the jurors were not drawn in the presence of the officer, an impaneled and sworn as grand jurors by the court, and as grand jurors they found the indictment; and, moreover, they were good and lawful men, duly qualified to sit as grand jurors. . . . The grand jury, although not selected in pursuance of a valid law, were selected under color of law and semblance of legal authority. . . . An indictment was found by a body drawn, summoned, and sworn as a grand jury, before a competent court, and composed of good and lawful men. The jury which found the indictment was a de facto jury, selected and organized under the forms of law." I cite largely from Judge Andrews' opinion, because it is in every respect applicable to the present case. In People v. Fitzpatrick, 66 How. Pr. 14, the indictment was found under a law void because unconstitutional. The above language in the Petrea Case was approved by the two judges, and the indictment was held good and valid, because found by a grand jury de facto. "The grand jurors are public officers" (Jacob's Law Dict.; Tomlins' Law Dict.; 7 Bacon, Abr. title Office and Officers), and they are therefore within the common doctrine, and their acts should be held valid, as those of any other officer de facto. In People v. Dolan, supra, it was not known how or by whom the names of the persons summoned, sworn, and acting as grand jurors were drawn. The court said: "It is sufficient to maintain the authority of the grand objection that the record does not show that the grand jurors were sworn cannot avail. Harrington v. State, 88 Ala. 9 (mo. ar.).

d. Time and person administering.

The recital in the record that the grand jury was sworn imports that the oath was administered by the proper officer. Brown v. State, 74 Ala. 478.

And an objection to negative this fact must be specific. Allen v. People, 77 Ill. 484 (mo. qu.).

And in State v. Chandler, 45 La. Ann. 49 (mo. qu.), it was held that the court erred in quashing an indictment where the oath was administered by the clerk of the court, and not in the presence of the judge.

The same was held in Com. v. Sanborn, 116 Mass. 61 (pl. abate.), on the ground that the statute was directory. The objection was also based on omission to charge a part of the jury.

Where the jurors are not all sworn at the same time it will not invalidate. Com. v. Sanborn, supra; Wadlin's Case, 11 Mass. 148 (obj.); Price v. State, 18 Tex. 210 (mo. qu.).

And in Findley v. People, 1 Mich. 284 (pl. abate.), the same was said to be the rule, but was not the question involved.

So under Ala. Code, § 3691, an objection on the ground that they were not sworn, cannot be made in the supreme court for the first time. Floyd v. State, 80 Ala. 511 (obj.).

And to the same effect, Holloway v. State, 58 Ind. 554 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.; mo. qu.); Alley v. State, 82 Ind. 476 (mo. qu.).

And after a plea of not guilty it is too late to object that the grand jurors were not sworn. People v. Griffin, 3 Barb. 427 (obj. ev.); State v. Smallwood, 68 Mo. 192; State v. Clifton, 78 Mo. 430.

And in State v. Lassley, 7 Port. (Ala.) 526 (mo. ar.), it was held that objection that the grand jurors were not sworn, must be made by plea and not by motion in arrest, where the record shows that they were sworn.

e. Then and there.

The omission of the words "then and there" in stating that the grand jurors were sworn will not invalidate the indictment or record, unless it be an indictment by an inferior court, and trial by a superior court. Woodside v. State, 3 How. (Miss.) 655 (obj.); Beauchamp v. State, 6 Blackf. 200 (obj.); State v. Price, 11 N. J. L. 169 (obj.); Greason v. State, 5 How. (Miss.) 38 (obj.).

But in People v. Guernsey, 3 Johns. Cas. 265 (mo. ar.), which was a case at oyer and terminer of C. county on an indictment found at the general sessions of the peace, it was held that the omission of the words "then and there" was fatal.

This case was based on King v. Turnith, 1 Mod. 26; King v. French, 2 Keb. 568, and Anonymous, 1 Vent. 60, and Rex v. Morris, 2 Strange, 901, and refers to Anonymous, 12 Mod. 82, and 502, 27 L. R. A.

But King v. Turnith, 1 Mod. 26, Mich. Term, 21 Car. II. B. R. quashed the indictment because it did not contain "ad tunc et ibidem onerati et jurati." This was an indictment for carrying on a trade at Hereford.

2 Keble, 588, is called King v. French, Mich. Term, 21 Car. II. B. R. and the indictment was agreed ill and was quashed because it said "onerati & jurati" but not "ad tunc & ibidem." The indictment was for carrying on trade at Hereford.

And "Anonymous," 1 Vent. 60, was at Hill. 21 & 22 Car. II. B. R. and the indictment was quashed because it was "per sacramentum duodecim, etc." and not "jurati & onerati." The clerk of the crown office informed the court that it must be also "ad tunc & ibidem jurati."

This may have been the case (it certainly was similar to the case) of King v. Greenway, 2 Keb. 610, Hill. 21 & 22 Car. II. B. R. which reports the indictment quashed because it said "onerati & jurati" and not "ad tunc & ibidem."

King v. Turnith is supposed to be "Anonymous," 1 Vent. 61, Mich. 21 Car. II. B. R., where the indictment was held insufficient because it was "super sacramentum suum" and not "ad tunc & ibidem jurati."

It will be thus seen that while the reports and the reasons given in the above cases relied upon are somewhat conflicting and impair their authority, that the words "ad tunc & ibidem" are held necessary in each case.

People v. Guernsey, supra, also relies upon King v. Morris, Fitzg. 266, also reported 2 Strange, 901, where the caption was "jurati pro, etc.," omitting "ad tunc and ibid."

But in England the caption was the record and if made out in inferior courts was transmitted with the indictment to the superior court and was an important record.

In "Anonymous," 12 Mod. 502, no attention was paid to a motion to quash because of the omission of "jurati and onerati ad tunc and ibidem." The remark was made that in case of nuisance, riot, etc., it was not useful to quash on motion.

But in Anonymous, 12 Mod. 80, the want of the words "ad tunc et ibid impanelati" was held fatal. The indictment was quashed not with the statement that "returnat" will not supply the omission.

In this note matters in regard to "Presentments" by grand juries; "Qualification of grand jurors;" "Class from which they are taken;" except in subhead "Excusing and Completing;" "Record," except as to "Oath" of grand jurors, are not intended to be included, and presumptions arising from indorsements of "true bill" are also omitted.

As to the number of jurors required or allowed to act in making an indictment, see note to State v. Belvel (Iowa) post, 848. I. T.

jury to investigate criminal charges and find indictments valid in their nature, and that the body acted under color of lawful authority." In Re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541, the grand jury organized in July, 1885, held over, and was not dissolved by the court, until March, 1886, notwithstanding a new grand jury had been selected and returned in January, 1886. A witness refused to testify before this old grand jury, on the ground that it was not a legal grand jury. He was imprisoned for contempt, and was seeking his discharge by habeas corpus. The court said: "As an organized grand jury, it would be competent to act under color of active authority. Having been appointed to office, and having taken the oath of office, the individual members are officers of the court, not only de jure, but de facto; and their acts are valid so far as the public rights are concerned, although the title under which they performed those acts may be questionable. An indictment found by a de facto grand jury is as regular as one found by a de jure grand jury." In Ex parte Haymond, 91 Cal. 545, a witness refused to testify before the grand jury on the ground that it was not a legal grand jury, and sought to be discharged from imprisonment on habeas corpus. The court said: "Without passing upon the question whether the grand jury before whom the petitioner was summoned to appear was impaneled in accordance with the provisions of the law relating to the subject, it is sufficient for us to say that such body has certainly a de facto existence." In Dolan v. People, 64 N. Y. 485, and in Carpenter v. People, Id. 483, the legality of the jury was challenged because illegally drawn by a commission under an unconstitutional statute, and the proceedings were sustained on the ground of de facto officers. In State v. Belvel (Iowa) 56 N. W. Rep. 545, post, 846, it is held that a grand jury composed of an improper number may find a valid indictment. In Ex parte Springer, 1 Utah, 214, the indictment was for a capital offense, and the court said: "The fact that the grand jury which found the indictment was illegal will not be considered upon the hearing of habeas corpus, as we conceive that we should stand upon the indictment. In reason and by analogy a person under an indictment seeking his discharge on habeas corpus has the same right to allege that the judge or the clerk of the court is not lawfully judge or clerk as that the grand jury is not a legal grand jury. The several members of the grand jury are officers of the court, as we have seen, and their acts should be protected by the same principle that they are de facto jurors." In Re Burke, 76 Wis. 357, it was alleged that there was no office of judge to be filled by the incumbent, but it was held that the incumbent was judge de facto. It would put an end to judicial proceedings if the legal title and qualifications of all judicial officers could be contested in collateral proceedings at the instance of aggrieved parties. This is a very important question, and a new one in this court. We have cited all the cases at hand, and from the high character of the courts they ought to be considered not only satisfactory, but sufficient, especially when based upon such cogent and conclusive reasons. We hold, therefore, that the indictments found against the defendants are not void, but good and valid indictments, so far as this collateral proceeding is concerned, because found by a grand jury acting under color of lawful authority, and a good and sufficient grand jury de facto. It follows, also, that the municipal court of Milwaukee had jurisdiction to issue the writ by which the defendants were arrested, and the commitments upon which they were imprisoned, and therefore the judge of the circuit court had no cognizance of the cases to discharge the defendants.

The orders of the judge of the Circuit Court discharging the defendants are reversed, and the cause remanded, with direction to remand the defendants to the custody of the sheriff of Milwaukee county.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

William LONG et al., Appts.,

George HESS et al.

(184 Ill. 482.)

1. An assignment of cross-errors is essential to the review on plaintiff's appeal of a denial of defendant's motion to suppress a deposition.
2. A provision of an antenuptial contract that, as regards the worldly success and substance of the parties, the bride agrees to receive the groom to live at her house, does not make the contract applicable to the future acquisitions of the parties, especially those after emigrating from their then residence and making their permanent domicile in a foreign country.

NOTE.—For the extraterritorial effect of the adoption of children on the right to inherit property, see note on the legal status of adopted children with the case of Warren v. Prescott (Me.) 17 L. R. A. 438.

27 L. R. A.

3. An antenuptial contract made in a foreign country, by which the children of a former marriage of the wife are adopted by the husband and the property settled upon them and the children of the marriage, approved by the courts, is not applicable to real property acquired by the husband in Illinois after his emigration to this country, so as to prevent his disposition thereof by deed or will.
4. An antenuptial contract made in a foreign country, by which children of a former marriage of the wife were adopted as heirs of the husband, will not prevent disposition of real property subsequently acquired in Illinois after his emigration thereto, although such children are infants at the time of such emigration incapable of consenting to a change of domicile, or waiving any rights, as, if they acquire the status of heirs, their inheritance must be in accordance with the laws of Illinois, by which the husband has an absolite right to dispose of his property by will to the exclusion of natural or adopted children.

(January 15, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Circuit Court for La Salle County in favor of defendants in an action brought to set aside the will of Jacob Hess, deceased, and to establish an interest in his estate. Affirmed.

Statement by Bailey, J.:

This was a bill in chancery, brought by William Long and Catherine Gleim against George Hess, Louis Hess, Henry Hess, and Mary Kopf, the children, Christina Hess, the widow, and Louis Hess, the executor of Jacob Hess, deceased, to set aside the will of Jacob Hess, and to declare a trust in favor of the complainants in two sixths of the estate of the testator. Jacob Hess died March 29, 1891, in LaSalle county, where he had lived for many years, leaving an estate consisting almost exclusively of lands situate in that county, and leaving a last will by which he gave his entire estate to his widow for life, and after providing for the payment of $100 each to the complainants divided the remainder among his four children above named.

Jacob Hess and Christina, his wife, were both natives of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, now a part of the German empire. Prior to their marriage in 1846, Christina Hess was the widow of Bernhardt Lang, then lately deceased, and the complainants are her children by her former marriage. She was then the owner of a small amount of property, consisting of a dwelling house and certain small tracts of land, but the amount and value of her property are not clearly shown by the evidence. Jacob Hess was at the same time the owner of a tract of land of the value of 350 florins, and of 150 florins in cash. Jacob Hess and Christina Lang being about to be married, the following ante-nuptial contract, as is claimed, was executed between them:

"Know all men by these presents, that, on the day hereinafter written, a true and irrevocable marriage contract has been agreed upon and concluded between Jakob Hess, single, lawful son of Adam Hess, citizen and baker of Beerfelden, deceased, as bridegroom, party of the first part, and Christina Lang, widow, of Beerfelden, as bride, party of the second part, as follows, to wit: The said parties have resolved to take one another as husband and wife, to remain in joy and sorrow until death shall separate them, and to have their marriage solemnized in the near future by a priest. As regards their worldly success and subsistence, the bride agrees to receive the groom to live at her house. The groom brings into the marriage that piece of land situated at Unter Beerfelden (district of Hetzbach), described at page 86. 144, N. 876. 4 1815 Klfr., and valued at 350 florins, also in cash 150 florins, in words one hundred and fifty florins. It is further agreed that the two children of the bride of her first marriage shall have an advancement of 100 florins, in words one hundred florins, with the understanding that in case of the death of one of the said children the surviving child is to inherit the whole of the said advancement. As to everything else the said two children of the first marriage and those to be begotten in this marriage shall inherit equally, share and share alike. In all other cases, not especially enumerated herein, the contracting parties subject themselves to the general laws of Germany, especially the rules and customs of the country.

"Beerfelden, May 11, 1846.

"Jakob Hess, Groom.

"Anna Christina Lang, Bride.

"Eva Christina Hess, Widow.

"Andreas Schmahl.

"Authenticated, Newer, Mayor."

It is further claimed that, for the purpose of obtaining a more full confirmation and validation of this contract, it was presented to a local court having jurisdiction of matters concerning matrimonial contracts, the rights of children, matters of probate, etc., and that the following is a transcript of the record of the proceedings of that court in relation thereto:

"Brf., July 3, 1846.

"Upon inspection of the files 1-5, and the production of the marriage certificate, it is, upon application of Jakob Hess, adjudged and decreed that the agreement of this date be made a part of the contract of marriage and agreement of the equal heirship of the children of the different marriages, and also that the certificate of the competent appellate court be hereto attached. Published the same date.

"Braun (Judge).

"Done in the Appellate Court of Freienstein, Beerfelden, June 26, 1846."

"In the matter of the re-marriage of Christina, née Schmahl, widow of Bernhardt Lang, of Beerfelden, Andreas Schmahl, blacksmith, and Oswald Lang, cloth-manufacturer, appointed as guardians of the children of the first marriage, were duly obligated and bound, and being informed of the contents of the marriage contract and agreement as to the equal rights (heirships) of the children of the different marriages, they were duly examined and declared, as follows: "Concerning the property affairs in question, we will first make inquiry and therefore request that another hearing be set at which we will report. Read and approved, and decreed that both guardians be summoned to appear on Friday, the 8d of next month, at 8 A. M. Published the same date.

"Braun.

"Beerfelden, July 8, 1846."

At this hearing there appeared Andreas Schmahl, guardian, who declared that he was instrumental in making the said marriage contract, and agreement as to the equal heirship of the children; that in so doing he exerted himself to protect the interests of said wards therein, that he considered the advancement of 100 florins as ample, and he therefore entered his consent to make said contract and agreement on behalf of his wards. Read and approved.

There also appeared the said Oswald Lang, who stated that in his opinion the advancement of 100 florins was too low, and he insisted on an increase of the same; that in case the contracting parties would not consent to an increase, he would insist on a further investigation of their financial circumstances. Read and approved.

The matter was thereupon taken under further advisement, both guardians consulted with the other relatives of their wards, and with them appeared the groom, Jacob Hess, for himself and on behalf of his bride, and after all circumstances had been once more fully considered, the following settlement was agreed upon, to wit:

"1. The groom, Jakob Hess, assumed the parentage of the two children.

"2. The said children are to receive together an advancement of 200 florins, that is, each child 100 florins.

"3. The advancement is to be paid when the children are twenty-five years of age. In case one of the children should marry before that age, it may demand payment of its advancement at that time and the money shall be paid at the marriage.

4. In case the son should become subject to conscription (military duty), and the father be not willing to ransom him and pay the ransom costs, the father upon the demand of the son shall be held to pay him the advancement at once.

"5. In all other respects the stipulations of the contract of marriage and agreement as to the equal heirship of the children, dated May 11th of this year, shall remain in force. Read, approved and subscribed.

"Jakob Hess.

"Oswald Lang.

"Andreas Schmahl."

"The court being fully advised in the premises entered the necessary order of alienation (transfer). Published the same date.

"Braun.

"A correct copy.

"Schnellbacher,

"[Seal] Clerk of the Grandducal Court of Beerfelden.

"The foregoing copy of marriage contract and court proceedings is hereby executed for Wilhelm Lang, of Hetzbach, on behalf of Wilhelm Lang, of Ottawa. (Signature).

"[Seal] Beerfelden, May 21st, 1891. Grandducal District Court Beerfelden."

Shortly after these proceedings, Jacob Hess and Christina Lang were married, and as the fruit of such marriage, their four children, now defendants to this suit, were afterwards born. After their marriage, Hess and wife lived in the house belonging to the wife, the complainants, then young children, being members of the family. There seems to have been a small bakery on the premises, and Hess, during the time he continued to live in Germany, carried on the business of a baker.

In May, 1851, Hess and wife sold the property they owned in Germany, the amount realized therefrom being a little over one thousand florins, or about $400, and they then came to this country bringing the complainants with them. They first settled at Buffalo, New York, where Hess seems to have carried on the business of a baker in a small way. About the year 1858, he removed with his family to LaSalle county, in this state, where he resided up to the time of his death, and where he accumulated the estate which he attempted to dispose of by will. There is no evidence, nor does it seem to be claimed, that any portion of the avails of the property sold in Germany went into or formed a part of the estate which he owned at his death.

The complainants insist that the antenuptial contract above set forth is to be construed and enforced according to the rules of law in force in the grand duchy of Hesse at the time it was entered into; that by that law the complainants were adopted by Jacob Hess, and became heirs of his estate jointly with the children born of the marriage then about to be solemnized; that their right to succeed to the estate of Hess at his death was a vested right, and one which, under the law where the contract was made, was incapable of being divested by will, and therefore that the will is void as to them, or, at least, that the devisees should be held to have taken the lands devised to them subject to the complainants' rights, and that the devisees should be charged as trustees for their benefit.

The deposition of an attorney residing in Hesse, and learned in the laws in force in that grand duchy at that time, was taken on behalf of the complainants, and it is claimed that the local law in force there at that time was substantially as above stated. A motion to suppress his deposition upon the ground, among other things, that it was not taken in conformity with the statute was made by the defendants and overruled by the court. The cause afterward coming on to be heard on pleadings and proofs, the court found the equities of the case to be with the defendants, and entered a decree dismissing the bill at the costs of the complainants. From that decree the complainants have now appealed to this court.

Messrs. Richolson & Seeley and Brewer & Strawn, for appellants.

Foreign unwritten laws, customs, and usages may be proved, and are generally proved, by parol evidence, and when such evidence is objected to, on the ground that the law in question is a written law, the party objecting must show that fact.

Dougherty v. Snyder, 15 Serg. & R. 87; Newsom v. Adams, 2 La. 154, 22 Am. Dec. 156; Bouvier, Dict.

Foreign law is presumed to be common law in the absence of rebutting evidence.

Chase v. Alliance Ins. Co. 91 Mass. 811; National Bank of Michigan v. Green, 33 Iowa, 140; Holmes v. Broughton, 10 Wend. 75, 25 Am. Dec. 536; Storr v. Peck, 1 Hill, 270; Throop v. Hatch, 3 Abb. Fr. 23; Cheney v. Arnold, 15 N. Y. 845, 69 Am. Dec. 609.

The usual course is to make such proof by the testimony of competent witnesses, instructed in the laws, customs, and usages, under oath.

1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 486-488; Rice, Ev. p. 65; Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. Eq. 187; 2 Saunders, Pl. & Ev. p. 54; Storch, Conf. L. 366, 367; Dougherty v. Snyder, 15 Serg. & R.

84; Brush v. Wilkins, 4 Johns. Ch. 520, 1 L. ed. 922; Church v. Hubbard, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 237, 2 L. ed. 265; Consequa v. Willings, 1 Pet. C. C. 225; Selon v. Delaware Ins. Co. 2 Wash. C. C. 175; Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147, 82 Am. Dec. 143; United States v. Jennegeen, 4 Cranch, C. C. 118; Warner v. Daniels, 1 Woodb. & M. 90; Brown v. United States, 5 Ct. Cl. 571.

The foreign law by which the contract or relation was created becomes an indispensable element, in order to translate such contract relation or duty into the vernacular language of the forum where the remedy is sought.

Story, Conf. L. § 88.

Under the law as it existed where the contract is made, and where the rights of said infants were made the subject of a judicial inquiry and determined by the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, to which all the parties in interest voluntarily submitted themselves, Jacob Hess was absolutely foreclosed by his said undertaking and the said decree, and rendered incapable of disposing of the property which should remain at his death, so as to cut off or prevent said infants from taking an equal share of said property with the children of his own blood.

Van Matre v. Sankey, 23 L. R. A. 665, 148 Ill. 559.

Marriage contracts are governed by the same general law as other contracts, i. e., the intention of the parties as shown by the contract must prevail.

Wallace v. Wallace, 82 Ill. 580.

Where the rights of children are in controversy all the presumptions are in their favor.

Ibid.; Gorin v. Gordon, 88 Miss. 205; Gale v. Gale, L. R. 6 Ch. Div. 144; Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239, 90 Am. Dec. 106; Merritt v. Scott, 6 Ga. 563, 50 Am. Dec. 865; Cole v. American Baptist Home Mission Soc. 64 N. H. 445.

Our courts enforce marriage contracts made abroad.

Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 625; Dunlap v. Buckingham, 16 Ill. 109; Scheffeling v. Huffman, 4 Ohio St. 241, 62 Am. Dec. 231; Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. 190, 1 L. ed. 587, 8 Am. Dec. 478; Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. 538, 6 L. ed. 754; Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. Eq. 187; Lott v. Bertrand, 26 Tex. 651; Murphy v. Murphy, 5 Mart. (La.) 88, 12 Am. Dec. 475; Le Breton v. Miles, 8 Paige, 261, 4 L. ed. 423.

A contract to make a will is valid.

Emery v. Darling, 50 Ohio St. 160; Johnson v. Hubbell, 10 N. J. Eq. 332; Schutt v. Missionary Soc. of M. E. Church, 41 N. J. Eq. 115; Roehl v. Haumesser, 114 Ind. 811; Sutton v. Hayden, 62 Mo. 101; Sharkey v. McDermott, 91 Mo. 647, 60 Am. Rep. 270; Rivers v. Rivers, 3 Desauss. Eq. 190, 4 Am. Dec. 609; Newton v. Newton, 46 Minn. 33; Carmichael v. Carmichael, 1 L. R. A. 596, 72 Mich. 76; Jones v. Martin, 3 Anstr. 832; Fortescue v. Hennah, 19 Ves. Jr. 66; Barkworth v. Young, 4 Drew. 1; McLeod v. Board, 30 Tex. 246, 94 Am. Dec. 301.

A minor cannot of his own accord change his domicile.

Jacob, Domicil, § 229; Freeport v. Stephenson County Supra, 41 Ill. 495.

A guardian cannot be permitted to remove his ward to another jurisdiction to the detriment of the ward.

ment of the ward and to the advantage of the guardian.

Wheeler v. Hollis, 19 Tex. 523, 70 Am. Dec. 368; Westchester School Directors v. James, 2 Watts & S. 572; Jacob, Domicil, § 242; Mears v. Sinclair, 1 W. Va. 185; Daniel v. Hill, 52 Ala. 430.

A marriage contract is irrevocable as to issue. Yeaton v. Yeaton, 4 Ill. App. 579; Wallace v. Wallace, 82 Ill. 580; Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 239, 90 Am. Dec. 106; Tabb v. Archer, 3 Hen. & M. 397, 8 Am. Dec. 657; Gorin v. Gordon, 88 Miss. 205; Lott v. Bertrand, 26 Tex. 654.

A wife does not waive her rights by emigrating with her husband.

Crosby v. Berger, 3 Edw. Ch. 538, 6 L. ed. 754; Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. 190, 1 L. ed. 537, 8 Am. Dec. 478; Bonati v. Welsch, 24 N. Y. 157.

Mears, F. P. Snyder and W. H. Stead for appellees.

Bailey, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants, in whose favor the decree was rendered, now urge, with a considerable degree of earnestness, that the court below erred in refusing to suppress the deposition taken in Germany, on the ground that the manner in which it was taken was a clear departure from that prescribed by the statute for taking the depositions of foreign witnesses. All we need say upon that point is, that the question thus raised is not before us for decision. The court below refused to suppress the deposition and considered it as evidence on the final hearing, but upon all the evidence as thus presented, the decision of the court was in the defendants' favor and the complainants have appealed. The defendants have assigned no cross-errors, and they must therefore be deemed to be content with the decision of their motion to suppress, and so, for all the purposes of this appeal, the deposition, however irregularly it may have been taken, must be regarded as having been rightfully retained and considered as evidence at the hearing.

The only question presented by the records is, as to the legal effect upon the property acquired by Jacob Hess in this state, of the ante-nuptial contract entered into in Germany between him and his then intended wife. It is claimed that the contract, when considered in connection with the judicial proceedings had thereon, constituted in legal effect an adoption of the complainants by Hess, so as to place them upon the same footing, so far as succession to his property and estate was concerned, with the children afterwards born of the marriage then in contemplation.

And it is further contended that, by the rules of law in force where the contract was made, and which entered into and formed a part of it, the property then owned by Hess and by his intended wife as well as that afterward acquired by them, became communal property, in which the children of the family, both natural and adopted, acquired a vested right, and that Hess could not by will divest their right to succeed to such estate as he might leave at his death.

After considering all the evidence, we are left in very grave doubt whether the laws of the grand duchy of Hesse upon which reliance is placed are sufficiently proved. But waiving that point and assuming that the proof is sufficient, and that the rules of law prevailing in Hesse at the date of the contract were as the complainants contend, the question remains whether the ante-nuptial contract should be enforced in this state, as to property, and especially real property, subsequently acquired by Hess in this state.

It should be remembered that at the date of the contract the parties were living at Beerfelden, in the grand duchy of Hesse, and so far as appears, were intending to remain there permanently. There is nothing either in the contract itself or in the evidence having the least tendency to show that their removal to any other place was then contemplated. The evidence furnished by the contract is all in the direction of showing that their intention was to make Beerfelden their permanent home. The agreement on the part of the bride was, "to receive the groom to live at her house," and the contract, after certain stipulations as to the property brought into the marriage by the groom, and as to the rights of the children of the bride by her former marriage, concludes with the provision that, "in all other cases not especially enumerated herein, the contracting parties subject themselves to the general laws of Germany, especially the rules and customs of the country." In point of fact, Jacob Hess, after his marriage, took up his residence at his wife's house, and made that his domicil, and thereupon engaged at that place in the business of a baker, which he carried on for five years. He then sold out his property there and emigrated to the United States.

It should also be observed that there is a total absence of any express provision in the contract making it applicable to the future acquisitions of the contracting parties. It deals with the property they then possessed, but makes no reference to such as they might afterwards gain. The only language in the contract on which any reliance is placed as having reference to future acquisitions is the following: "As regards their worldly success and subsistence, the bride agrees to receive the groom to live at her house." If these words are correctly translated from the original German in which the contract was written—and we have heard no suggestion that they are not—they are, to say the least, extremely ambiguous, and we are able to put upon them no rational construction which would make out of them an agreement to subject the future acquisitions of the parties to the provisions of the contract. The most probable and natural interpretation of the words would seem to be, that, with a view to providing for the worldly success and the subsistence of the family, the bride agreed to receive the groom to live at her house. They cannot, without importing into them a meaning which does not appear upon their face, be held to have any direct reference to the future acquisitions of the contracting parties, and especially their acquisitions after emigrating from their then residence, and making their permanent domicil in a foreign country.

The property rights of husband and wife, as affected by the marriage contract itself, or by an ante-nuptial agreement, where the marriage or the ante-nuptial agreement have been entered into in a foreign country, have always presented questions of no little perplexity and difficulty. Mr. Story, in his Treatise on the Conflict of Laws, § 143, says: "The principal difficulty is not so much to ascertain what rule ought to govern in cases of express nuptial contract, at least, where there is no change of domicil, as what rule ought to govern in cases where there is no such contract, or no contract which provides for the emergency. Where there is an express nuptial contract, that, if it speaks fully to the very point, will generally be admitted to govern all the property of the parties, not only in the matrimonial domicil, but in every other place, under the same limitations and restrictions as apply to other cases of contract. But where there is no express nuptial contract at all, or none speaking to the very point, the question, what rule ought to govern, is surrounded with more difficulty." The learned author then, after an extended examination of the opinions of the leading law-writers in this country and in Europe, and also of the decisions of the supreme court of Louisiana, the only court which at that time seems to have given these questions elaborate and careful consideration, lays down the following propositions which as he says, although not universally established or recognized in America, have much domestic authority for their support, and have none in opposition to them:

"(1) Where there is a marriage between parties in a foreign country, and an express contract respecting their rights and property, present and future, that, as a matter of contract, will be held equally valid everywhere, unless, under the circumstances, it stands prohibited by the laws of the country where it is sought to be enforced. It will act directly on movable property everywhere. But as to immovable property in a foreign territory, it will at most confer only a right of action to be enforced according to the jurisprudence rei sitæ.

"(2) Where such an express contract applies in terms or intent only to present property, and there is a change of domicil, the law of the actual domicil will govern the rights of the parties as to all future acquisitions.

"(3) Where there is no express contract, the law of the matrimonial domicil will govern as to all the rights of the parties to their present property in that place, and as to all personal property everywhere, upon the principle that movables have no situs, or rather that they accompany the person everywhere. As to immovable property, the law rei sitæ will prevail.

"(4) Where there is no change of domicil, the same rule will apply to future acquisitions as to present property.

"(5) But where there is a change of domi-cil, the law of the actual domicil, and not the matrimonial domicil, will govern as to all future acquisitions of movable property; and, as to all immovable property, the law res sita." Story, Conf. L. §§ 184 et seq.

The propositions thus laid down by Judge Story seem to have received the general approval of the courts of this country, so far as there has been occasion to consider them since he wrote. Thus, in Fuss v. Fuss, 24 Wis. 256, 1 Am. Rep. 180, parties domiciled in Prussia were married there, and afterward entered into a post-nuptial contract, whereby each granted and transferred to the other all real and personal property which should belong to the donator on the day of his death. The wife, at the time, owned real estate in Prussia, over which, by the laws of that country, she had full control and right of disposal. Several years afterward the property was sold, the husband taking the money and investing it in land in Wisconsin, to which the parties removed, and on which they resided until the husband's death. He also during his lifetime acquired other property both real and personal, situate in Wisconsin, which he owned on the day of his death. By his last will the husband devised and bequeathed all his property, both real and personal, to his widow for life, with remainder to the brothers and sisters of the testator. On bill filed by the widow claiming that, by force of the post-nuptial contract, she was entitled to an estate in fee in the lands, and to the absolute ownership of the personal property left by her husband, it was held that there was nothing in the contract which spoke to the very point, that it contained nothing which manifested any intention in the parties to regulate or control by it, according to the law of their matrimonial domicil, the future acquisitions and gains of property in any foreign state or territory, or any property which should be held by the husband in such state or territory, and consequently, that the property acquired and owned by the husband in Wisconsin in his own name was subject to be disposed of by him by will or otherwise, according to the laws of that state, and that the widow's rights therein were not determined by the contract.

In Castro v. Illies, 22 Tex. 479, 78 Am. Dec. 277, substantially the same doctrine was laid down, although as that case arose out of a controversy between a wife claiming under an ante-nuptial contract and execution creditors of the husband, the decision is not in all respects so directly in point as the one last cited. There parties domiciled in Paris, France, executed an ante-nuptial contract and married in Paris. Some years afterward they immigrated to this country and became domiciled in Texas, where the husband subsequently acquired certain real property. It was claimed that, by the rules of the French law, the contract vested in the wife a certain interest in the property acquired by her husband, which was not subject to seizure for her husband's debts, but it was held that, as there were in the contract no words "speaking to the very point," that is, no words making the contract specifically applicable to property subsequently acquired by the husband in a state or country foreign to that in which the contract was made, it had no operation upon lands subsequently acquired by the husband in Texas.

In Bease v. Pellochou, 78 Ill. 285, 24 Am. Rep. 242, an ante-nuptial contract was made between parties domiciled in Switzerland, in regard to property to be occupied during the marriage, it appearing that the contract contemplated no change of domicil, but was to be performed in the place where it was made, and it was held that the contract did not affect real estate acquired in this state by the husband after their immigration to this country. In the opinion, the doctrine laid down by Judge Story was cited with approval, and it was said that, in that case, there was nothing in the contract "speaking to the very point," that manifested any intention that all future acquisitions of property in foreign countries should be controlled by it. See also Lyon v. Knott, 26 Miss. 548; Kneeland v. Ensley, Meigs, 620, 33 Am. Dec. 168; Saul v. His Creditors, 5 Mart. N. S. 569, 16 Am. Dec. 212; LeBreton v. Miles, 8 Paige, 261, 4 L. ed. 422; Gale v. Davis, 4 Mart. (La.) 645.

The case of Decouche v. Savetier, 8 Johns. Ch. 190, 1 L. ed. 587, 8 Am. Dec. 478, is one where an ante-nuptial contract entered into by the parties in Paris was enforced in this country in favor of the wife, to the exclusion of the husband's relatives. But there the contract expressly provided:

"That there shall be a community of property between them, according to the custom of Paris, which is to govern the disposition of the property, though the parties should hereafter settle in countries where the laws and usages are different or contrary." There the intention to make the contract applicable to property afterwards acquired in foreign countries was expressly made to appear, by "words speaking to the very point."

Considerable reliance is placed by the complainants upon the case of Scheferling v. Huffman, 4 Ohio St. 241, 62 Am. Dec. 281, where an ante-nuptial contract entered into by the parties in Germany, in which it was agreed that all the property of the intended wife, which she then owned, or which should be mutually acquired by the parties during coverture, should be the property of the wife, was sustained and enforced, and held to apply to the property acquired by them in the state of Ohio after their immigration to this country. It will be noticed, however, that in that case the contract by its express terms was made applicable not only to the property then owned by the intended wife, but also to all property acquired during the continuance of the marriage. It is therefore clearly distinguishable from the present case where no express provision is made applicable to property acquired in this state, after the parties became domiciled here.

We are therefore of the opinion that the ante-nuptial contract in this case is not applicable to real property acquired by Hess in this state, after his immigration to this country, but that such property was subject to disposition by him by deed or will, according to the laws of this state. His will therefore must be held to be valid, so as to vest in his devisees a title which must prevail over any rights derived by the complainants from the ante-nuptial contract.

We are unable to see that any peculiar force is to be given to the fact that the complainants, at the time Jacob Hess and wife immigrated to this country, were infants, and therefore incapable of consenting to a change of their domicile, or of waiving any rights which were secured to them by the contract. As the contract cannot be held to have any application to the property sought to be reached in this case, no rights of theirs were affected by their being brought to this country, and they had nothing to waive. Even if it be admitted that, by reason of their legal adoption by Jacob Hess, they would have been entitled to succeed to his estate at his death as his heirs-at-law, the ante-nuptial contract furnished no obstacle to the exercise by Hess of his right to dispose of his estate by will, and he having done so, nothing was left to descend to the complainants as his heirs-at-law.

Although the complainants may have acquired the status of adopted children and heirs-at-law by the contract and judicial proceedings had in Germany, their inheritance of after-acquired real estate situated in this state must be in accordance with our laws, and by our laws a testator has an absolute right to dispose of his property by will, even to the exclusion alike of his natural or his adopted children.

We are of the opinion that the decree of the Circuit Court is justified by the evidence, and it will accordingly be affirmed.

Rehearing denied.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT

M. L. HOLLAND, Appt.,

COMMISSIONERS OF SILVER BOW COUNTY, Resp't.

(.....Mont.....)

A real-estate mortgage owned and controlled by a nonresident of the state is not subject to taxation as "property in the state."

(March 11, 1895.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the District Court for Silver Bow County in favor of defendant in a proceeding brought to compel payment of compensation alleged to be due to plaintiff as county assessor. Affirmed.

Statement by Hunt, J.:

The plaintiff and appellant, Holland, was, in 1891, the assessor of Silver Bow county. As such assessor, in the year 1891, he returned his assessment, amounting to $32,043,606, including the assessment on all mortgages, deeds of trust, contracts, and other obligations by which any debt was secured, and which remained unsatisfied on the records of the recorder's office of Silver Bow county, and which was not barred by the statute of limitations at 12 o'clock M. on the first Monday in March, 1891. On October 6, 1891, the board of county commissioners struck from the assessment roll the sum of $11,783,007, on the ground that the assessment list included mortgages for that amount which belonged to non-residents of the state, and for that reason were improperly assessed. The assessor claimed his compensation on the total assessment made by him. The commissioners disallowed the sum of $2,945.75 of his account, that sum being the commission charged on the mortgages held by nonresidents, which the commissioners struck from the roll. The plaintiff appealed to the district court. There was a trial without a jury. The court found that $11,783,007 of the assessment was upon mortgages owned by nonresidents, and that by the law the plaintiff could not recover compensation upon such assessment. There was some correction made by the court, so that plaintiff recovered a judgment for $10.37. A motion for new trial was overruled, and plaintiff appeals.

Mr. S. De Wolfe, for appellant:

The board of equalization at no time made any reductions on the returns of the assessor, and the board of county commissioners never had the right or authority to do so.

People v. McCreery, 84 Cal. 445.

The authority of a state is supreme over the question of taxation for all purposes of the state, and the mode in which the power is exercised, and the property which shall be subject to this burden, is a matter resting entirely in the discretion of the state.

The government of the United States has no more right or authority to interfere with this right of a state than the latter has to interfere with the agencies of the former in the exercise of the constitutional powers delegated to it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 479, 483; Lane County v. Oregon, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 77, 19 L. ed. 104; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 498, 25 L. ed. 558; Tappan v. Merchants Nat. Bank of Chicago, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 499, 22 L. ed. 198; State Treasurer v. Wright, 28 Ill. 509.

The law of Oregon taxing mortgages was held to be legal and constitutional.

Dundas Mortg. Trust Investment Co. v. Multnomah County School Dist. No. 1, 19 Fed. Rep. 369.

Messrs. Charles Mattison and M. L. Wines, for respondent:

The state has no jurisdiction to assess a tax as a personal charge against nonresidents.

Cooley, Taxn. pp. 21, 22, notes.

The indebtedness between the mortgagor and the nonresident mortgagee is the property which has grown out of the transaction between them and not the mortgage which is given to secure this indebtedness, and the mortgagee being a nonresident this indebtedness to him or credit in him is the property which is taxed, and upon every legal principle must be taxed with him at the place of his residence.

NOTE.—As to the power to tax mortgages, see Detroit v. Rents (Mich.), 16 L. R. A. 59, and note. 27 L. R. A.

Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 24 L. ed. 760; State v. Earl, 1 Nev. 397; Myers v. Seabarger, 45 Ohio St. 232; Territory v. Delinquent Tax-List (Ariz.) April 18, 1890; Arapahoe County Comrs. v. Cutter, 3 Colo. 350; People v. Eastman, 25 Cal. 602.

A debt for purposes of taxation is situated at the domicile of the creditor, although secured by mortgage upon real estate situated in another state.

Ex parte Clark, 100 U. S. 401, 25 L. ed. 715; Baltimore v. Hussey, 67 Md. 112; State v. Vansyckle, 49 N. J. L. 386; State v. Darcy, 2 L. R. A. 850, 51 N. J. L. 140; Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 8; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28, 88 Am. Rep. 547; Grant v. Jones, 39 Ohio St. 506; Cooley, Taxn. pp. 21, 22, notes.

Hunt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal question for decision is: Under the Revenue Law of 1891, was a tax imposed on mortgages, deeds of trust, and other instruments for the security of debts, when such securities were owned and held by non-residents of the state? It is well settled in this state that under section 871 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which declares that a mortgage of real property shall not be deemed a conveyance, whatever its terms, so as to enable the owner of the mortgage to recover possession of the real property without foreclosure and sale, the character of the instrument is restricted to purposes of security, and is, in this state, subject to the doctrines of equity. Fee v. Swingly, 6 Mont. 596; First Nat. Bank of Butte v. Bell Silver & Copper Min. Co. 8 Mont. 82; 2 Jones, Mortg. §§ 20, 89. In Gallatin County v. Beattie, 8 Mont. 173, the assessor of Gallatin county assessed certain mortgages in that county to a resident of another county. Justice Knowles says: "A mortgage is a security for a debt. It creates no estate in real property. The equity doctrine is that the mortgage is a mere security for the debt, and only a chattel interest. In regard to mortgages, we have followed the decisions of the courts of California, from which state we borrowed our statutes upon that subject. The rule established by the courts of that state upon this subject is an equity rule. . . . The record of a mortgage is not the mortgage itself, or any more than any other copy." McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655. Regarding a mortgage, therefore, for the purpose of taxation, as nothing more than a collateral security, depending upon some outside obligation to secure which it is given, it is established by the great weight of authority that the mortgage belongs to the owner of the debt, and passes with the debt to any lawful holder thereof. Taggart v. Sanilac County Supra. 71 Mich. 81. The debt, therefore, if owned and controlled by one not a resident of the state, is not "property in the state, subject to taxation," as provided by the Revenue Act of 1891, but can be assessed only at the domicile or place of residence of the creditor; without regard to the domicile of the debtor. Cooley, Taxn. 63; Kells v. Holder, 2 McCrary, 622, 13 Fed. Rep. 668; Grant v. Jones, 39 Ohio St. 514; State v. Vansyckle, 49 N. J. L. 386; Baltimore v. Hussey, 67 Md. 112; San Francisco City & County v. Mackey, 23 Fed. Rep. 603; State v. Darcy, 51 N. J. L. 140, 2 L. R. A. 850; St. Paul v. Morrill, 7 Minn. 258 (Gil. 198); Arapahoe County Comrs. v. Cutter, 3 Colo. 349; Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 1; Liverpool & L. & Globe Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 44 La. Ann. 760, 16 L. R. A. 56; Goldgart v. People, 106 Ill. 25; Foreman v. Byrns, 63 Ind. 247; 1 Deady, Taxn. pp. 62, 330; People v. Eastman, 25 Cal. 608; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; People v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 577; Territory v. Delinquent Tax-List (Ariz.) 24 Pac. Rep. 182; De Vignier v. New Orleans, 4 Woods, C. C. 206, 16 Fed. Rep. 11; Com. v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 27 Gratt. 344.

The appellant seeks to distinguish the State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds Case, supra, from the doctrine fully supported by the authorities listed above; but nearly every case which we have read by our original examination of this question, or which has been called to our attention by the briefs of counsel, regards the opinion of Justice Field in that case as upholding the general principle that personal property, consisting of mortgages and debts generally, owned by a nonresident of the state endeavoring to tax such property, "has no situs independent of the domicile of the owner." And until the same court which rendered that opinion declines to regard it as maintaining such a principle, we accept the general interpretation given to the language of Justice Field as the correct one, restricting its application, however, to mortgages in the possession of the owner. The case of Detroit v. Detroit Board of Assessors, 91 Mich. 78, 16 L. R. A. 59, cited by appellant, decided that the law of Michigan taxing mortgages owned by nonresidents was not unconstitutional. The statute of that state, however, expressly provided that any "mortgage by which a debt is secured, when land within this state is pledged . . . shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the land so pledged." The court held that the legislature could give a situs to mortgages where the land was situated, treating them as interests in realty, though held by nonresidents. In distinguishing the case from the state tax decision, supra, the court says that the statute of Michigan "imposes a tax upon an interest in real estate as such," while the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States was that a tax could not be imposed upon the bond itself, which had a situs at the domicile of its owner. A careful examination, therefore, of the Michigan case, demonstrates that the legislature, in the opinion of the court, had the power "to fix the situs for the purpose of taxation at the place of the location of the property mortgaged," and that real-estate mortgages, for the purpose of taxation, could be treated as interests in lands. The Oregon cases cited recognize a statute of that state similar to that of Michigan, and uphold its constitutionality. But until the legislature passes such a law in Montana it is unnecessary to inquire into its validity, for we are of opinion that in the Revenue Law of 1891 there is no provision giving a situs to mortgages owned by nonresidents as property within the state. The general rule must, therefore, control, and the case be determined adversely to plaintiff. See above authorities. It may be that if, as a fact, notes and mortgages owned by nonresidents are actually within the state, and are controlled by the agents therein, who retain them, and make the investments for the owners, such securities, under the present revenue laws, are subject to taxation, in the hands of such agents, as property in the state. That question is not before us. But, as said before, the case at bar is not excepted from the general rule that "securities, such as mortgages and the like, are deemed to have no situs except that of the domicile of the owner," hence are not subject to taxation in this state if the domicile of the owner is without the state. From the foregoing views it logically follows that the assessor, having assessed property not within the state, and therefore not taxable, cannot recover his fees for such assessment. Herriman v. Stowers, 43 Me. 499; Berry v. Missoula County Comrs. 6 Mont. 121.

The order overruling a motion for a new trial and the judgment are affirmed.

De Witt, J., concurs.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SUPREME COURT.

Lorinda WALKER

v.

James P. WALKER et al.

(.....N. H. ....)

1. A wife's distributive share of the personal estate of her husband at his death cannot be defeated by a transfer or change of title as a mere device for that purpose, while he keeps absolute dominion and enjoyment of the property during his own life.
2. A wife is within the class of "creditors and others" in a statute against fraudulent conveyances in respect to her distributive share in her husband's property at his death.
3. A complete gift inter vivos of stocks to the donor's sons is not made by taking the shares in their names and leaving them with a third person subject to donor's control.
4. A fraud on the wife of the purchaser is not made by taking a deed of their homestead in his name as trustee for his sons by a former wife, where the amount invested therein is but a small part of his estate and a reasonable provision for the sons.

(March 13, 1891.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendants to rulings of the Merrimack County Court made during the trial of a proceeding to establish a right to a share in the estate of plaintiff's deceased husband, Nathaniel B. Walker. Overruled.

Nathaniel B. Walker died in 1889, leaving a will in which he gave one third of his estate to plaintiff and the remainder to his two sons, by a former wife. Defendant Mellen holds in trust for such sons a large amount of corporate stocks which had been delivered to him by Nathaniel B. in his lifetime to be kept for the sons. In May, 1877, Walker purchased a house in Concord, taking the deed in his name as trustee for his two sons. This house was occupied as a homestead until his death. Plaintiff did not know the state of the title to this house and dower and homestead were consigned to her out of it. Upon learning the state of the title she moved to amend her bill so as to claim a share in that property. This claim was denied. The sons did not know the amount and kind of the securities which had been delivered to the trustee for them, until after the father's death; no part of which was ever delivered to them in the lifetime of the father. The trustee acted always in managing the estate under the father's directions. The gift was not intended to take effect until after the father's death.

The presiding justice ruled that the sons should pay to plaintiff one third of the value of the property in the trustee's hands, or that the trustee should deliver the property to the executor to be administered as part of defendant's estate.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Mr. William L. Foster, for defendants:

In cases of gifts in trust, of this nature, the donor may provide that the trustee shall retain possession of the property during the life of the donor, and at his death deliver it to the donee. And the donor may lawfully provide that the income from the property may be paid to the donor during his life.

Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray, 227; Love v. Francis, 63 Mich. 181; Bostwick v. Mahaffy 48 Mich. 342; Ex parte Pye, 18 Ves. Jr. 140.

The plaintiff, having waived the provisions of the will and released her right of dower and homestead, takes her share in the estate as heir of her husband.

Hunkins v. Hunkins, 65 N. H. 95.

Mrs. Walker is not a creditor.

Sandborn v. Goodhue, 28 N. H. 48, 59 Am. Dec. 398; Stone v. Hackett, supra; Sewall v. Roberts, 115 Mass. 272; Viney v. Abbott, 109 Mass. 300; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590, 28 Am. Rep. 272; Perry v. Cross, 182 Mass. 454; Stone v. Stone, 18 Mo. 889; Straat v. O'Neil, 84 Mo. 68; Davis v. Davis, 5 Mo. 183, McLaughlin v. McLaughlin, 16 Mo. 246, Pond v. Sweetser, 85 Ind. 144; Padfield v. Padfield, 78 Ill. 16; Chase v. Redding, 13 Gray, 418; Blasdel v. Locke, 52 N. H. 238; Spaulding v.

NOTE.—As to conveyance on eve of marriage to defraud wife, see Murray v. Murray (Ky.) 8 L. R. A. 86.

For claim of dower in case of deed to third person for husband's benefit, see Phelps v. Phelps (N. Y.) 25 L. R. A. 625.

For trust to defeat dower, see Stroup v. Stroup (Iod.) ante, p. 522.

27 L. R. A.

Andover, 54 N. H. 88; Kimball v. Norton, 59 N. H. 1; Smith v. Oseepsee Valley Ten Cents Sav. Bank, 64 N. H. 228; Fraser v. Perkins, 62 N. H. 69.

Messrs. Chase & Streeter, for plaintiff:

The so-called gifts were incomplete.

2 Bl. Com. 30; Cummings v. Bramhall, 120 Mass. 552; Shurtleff v. Francis, 118 Mass. 154; Miller v. LePiere, 186 Mass. 20; Reed v. Spaulding, 42 N. H. 119; Oraig v. Kittredge, 46 N. H. 58; Basket v. Hassell, 107 U. S. 602, 27 L. ed. 500; Sanborn v. Goodhus, 28 N. H. 56, 59 Am. Dec. 898; Toule v. Wood, 60 N. H. 484, 49 Am. Rep. 826; Bartlett v. Remington, 59 N. H. 866; Cutting v. Gilman, 41 N. H. 150.

A husband has no power to dispose of his personal estate for the express purpose of depriving his widow of her distributive share therein.

2 Bl. Com. 515, 516; Statute of Distributions, 22 & 23 Car. II.; McQueen's Law of Husband & Wife (1885) p. 110; 2 Roper, Husb. & W. p. 14; Smith v. Fellows, 2 Atk. 61; Turner v. Jennings, 2 Vern. 612; Hall v. Hall, Id. 277; Coomes v. Elling, 8 Atk. 676; Fairebeard v. Bowers, 2 Vern. 202; Edmundson v. Cox, 7 Vin. Abr. 202, pl. 11; Stone v. Stone, 18 Mo. 389; Straat v. O'Neil, 84 Mo. 68; Tucker v. Tucker, 29 Mo. 350; Tucker v. Tucker, 32 Mo. 464; Davis v. Davis, 5 Mo. 183; Hays v. Henry, 1 Md. Ch. 387; Sanborn v. Lang, 41 Md. 107; Rabbitt v. Gaither, 67 Md. 95.

As to the homestead, the retention of the property by the fictitious trustee, the use of it by him for twelve years without disclosing to his wife or sons the real facts, are badges of fraud, upon which the court must set aside the trust as a fraud in law.

Feigley v. Feigley, 7 Md. 587, 61 Am. Dec. 375.

Blodgett, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon the facts found at the hearing, the bill can be maintained. The attempt of the plaintiff's husband to dispose of nearly all of his personal estate so that he should have the enjoyment and control of it for life, and the plaintiff be deprived of any portion of it at his decease, cannot be sanctioned. It is settled law that conveyances of real estate made by the husband, during coverture, for the purpose of defeating the wife's rights, are, as to her, fraudulent and void. Whether the same rule obtains in transfers of personal property for the like purpose, when the husband reserves therein no right to himself, is a question upon which the authorities are somewhat at variance; but where the transfer is a mere device or contrivance by which the husband, not parting with absolute dominion over the property during his life, seeks at his death to deprive his widow of her distributive share, there is no substantial conflict of authority that the rule applicable to conveyances of realty prevails. Thayer v. Thayer, 14 Vt. 107, 39 Am. Dec. 211; Hays v. Henry, 1 Md. Ch. 387; Rabbitt v. Gaither, 67 Md. 95, 100, 105; Littleton v. Littleton, 18 N. C. 327; McGee v. McGee, 26 N. C. 105; Davis v. Davis, 5 Mo. 183; Stone v. Stone, 18 Mo. 389; Tucker v. Tucker, 29 Mo. 350; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216, 225, 78 Am. Dec. 538; 27 L. R. A.

Lord v. Hough, 48 Cal. 581; Oranson v. Oranson, 4 Mich. 230, 66 Am. Dec. 534; Holmes v. Holmes, 8 Paige, 863, 8 L. ed. 186; Richards v. Richards, 11 Humph. 429; Petty v. Petty, 4 B. Mon. 215, 39 Am. Dec. 501. Such, also, were the decisions under the ancient customs of London, from which our statute of distributions is said to have been borrowed. Thus, in Hall v. Hall, 2 Vern. 277, it was held that if a freeman gives away goods in his lifetime, and yet retains the deed of gift in his own power, or retains the possession of the goods, or any part of them, it is a fraud upon the custom, and will not conclude the widow; and in Fairebeard v. Bowers, Id. 202, a voluntary judgment by a freeman, payable after his death, was postponed to the widow's claim for her customary share. So, in City v. City, 2 Lev. 130, where the deceased had, by deed, assigned a term to his son, and the son had gone into possession, it was held that this did not bar the widow of her customary share, the assignment being without consideration; and it was said, "The same is the law as to goods." And Edmundson v. Cox, 7 Vin. Abr. 203, is of the like general purport. That case was a bill by the widow of a freeman of London for her customary share. The husband had made his will, and devised to the wife certain real and personal estate. There was sealed up in the will the bond of the testator, executed before the date of the will, conditioned to pay the defendant a given sum of money, or transfer to him a given amount of bank stock. The obligee was the testator's nephew, and the bond without valuable consideration. It was held by the master of the rolls that the widow, on first disclaiming all benefit under the will, could have a decree for her customary share, and that the bond should not stand in her way; and he adds, "Such sort of contrivances to evade the custom have always been set aside in this court." See also Smith v. Fellows, 2 Atk. 62, and Coomes v. Elling, 8 Atk. 676. These decisions well illustrate what should be the course of decision under our statute. The widow's claim for her share under the statute being strictly analogous to the claim of the widow of a freeman under the custom of London, if a contrivance to evade the rights of the widow under that custom was never tolerated there is no reason why it should meet with more favor under the statute. By the declaratory Statute of 18 Eliz., chap. 5, made perpetual by 29 Eliz., chap. 5, and adopted as part of the common law in this state, for avoiding feigned, covinous, and fraudulent feoffments, gifts, grants, alienations, conveyances, bonds, suits, judgments, and executions, as well of lands, tenements, and hereditaments as of goods, chattels, wares, and merchandise, which feoffments, etc., have been devised of malice, fraud, covin, collusion, or guile, to the end, purpose, and intent to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors and others of their just and lawful actions, suits, debts, accounts, damages, etc., not only to the let or hinderance of the due course and execution of law and justice, but also to the overthrow of all true and plain dealing, it was declared and enacted, in the second section, "that all and every feoffment, gift, grant, alienation and conveyance, and all and every bond, suit, judgment and execution, to or for any intent or purpose before declared and expressed, shall be from henceforth deemed and taken," as against such creditors and others, and their representatives, "to be utterly void and of none effect."

There is no ground to claim, and none is made by the defendants, that the act of the plaintiff's husband in relation to the stocks and bonds comes within the proviso in the sixth section exempting from the operation of the act transactions upon a good consideration and bona fide; but it is contended that the plaintiff is not within the act, as a creditor, and therefore is not within its protection. Technically, and in a strict legal sense, she may not, perhaps, be a creditor; but "the statute, by the words 'creditors and others,' embraces others than those who are strictly and technically creditors. Even the word 'creditor' does not receive a strict definition, for a party who is not, strictly speaking, a creditor, may stand in the equity of a creditor, and have an interest that may be defrauded. . . . The character of the claim, if it is just and lawful, is immaterial.

. . . and a contingent claim is as fully protected as one that is absolute." Bump, Fraud. Conv. 2d ed. 491, 492. Under this construction of the statute, which is fully supported by the decisions, it is not open to reasonable doubt that the plaintiff comes within its protection. The character of her claim is just and lawful, in the highest degree; she stands in the equity, if not in the attitude, of a creditor; she is as much injured as any creditor can be; and the fact that, at the time the securities were transferred, her distributive right therein was contingent, entitles it none the less to protection than if it had been absolute. And this should be so. Marriage is equivalent to a pecuniary consideration; that is to say, it is a valuable consideration. The plaintiff's right to her distributive share of her husband's large estate, and which is quite likely to have been one of the inducements to her marriage with him, is therefore in the nature of an actual purchase of that right, and may well be given the same effect, under the liberal and beneficial construction which the statute is entitled to receive for the suppression of fraud, the advancement of justice, and the promotion of the public good. But however this may be, inasmuch as the design of the statute, obviously, was to embrace others than those who are creditors, in a strict and technical sense, we think that under its designation of "creditors and others" the plaintiff is fairly included; "and if" in the language of Mason, J., in Feigley v. Feigley, 7 Md. 587, 61 Am. Dec. 875; "under such a comprehensive clause as 'creditors and others,' a wife who has been made the victim of her husband's fraud is not to be included, we are at a loss to ascertain to whom it was designed to relate." The same or equivalent statutory language is also held to apply to and include the defrauded wife in Tyler v. Tyler, 126 Ill. 525; Green v. Adams, 59 Vt. 603, 59 Am. Rep. 761; Jiggitts v. Jiggitts, 40 37 L. R. A.

Miss. 718; Reynolds v. Vance, 1 Heisk. 344; Boile v. Boile, 1 Coldw. 287; Brewer v. Connell, 11 Humph. 500; Killinger v. Residenhauer, 6 Serg. & R. 531; Bouslough v. Bouslough, 68 Pa. 495, 499; and Johnson v. Johnson, 12 Bush, 485. And if it were even held that the statute does not include the plaintiff, either as a creditor, or as one to whom the conveyancer owes a lawful duty in respect of his property, which he fraudulently attempts to avoid, it would not leave her remediless under the common law, which is still in force. "As the act is merely declaratory, resort may always be had to the principles of the common law whenever the statute fails to reach a case of fraud. The act itself is not affected by this doctrine, and will in general be received as true declaration of what the law was; but wherever the statute is ineffective, either through a change of custom, or the introduction of a new kind of property, or the concoction of some new device, there the common law intervenes, with its pure and elevated principles of morality and justice, and enforces the dictates of common honesty and common sense." Bump, Fraud. Conv. 11. But, irrespective of the statute and the common law, the obligations and duties of husbands and wives to each other disable each of them, alike, to successfully defraud the other by such a disproportionate, unreasonable, and fraudulent transfer of property as appears in this case (Laton v. Balcom, 64 N. H. 92, 94-96); and upon general principles of equity, alone, the plaintiff's bill may be supported. It is an established rule that a husband will, upon a proper case being made out, be restrained by injunction from transferring property in fraud of the legal or equitable rights of the wife. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 12th ed. § 955; Kerr, Inj. 2d ed. 534, and cases cited; Eden, Inj. 295, 296. And, if such transfers are made, equity puts her on the same footing with a creditor who finds himself hindered, delayed, or defrauded by his debtor. With these views of transaction, the plaintiff is entitled to her distributive share of the stock and bonds as if no transfer of them had been made or attempted. If, however, the transfer were not fraudulent as against her, the same conclusion follows. The gift was not perfected. It was not valid as a gift inter vivos, for that goes into absolute and immediate effect,—the donor parting not only with the possession, but with the dominion of the property; nor as a donatio causa mortis, for the securities were not delivered by the deceased in his last sickness, nor when in any particular peril of death, or under any special apprehension of such peril. Craig v. Kittredge, 46 N. H. 57, and authorities cited.

As to the house occupied by the plaintiff and her husband as a homestead, a different case is presented. At the hearing the plaintiff moved to amend her bill so as to claim one-third part of the homestead premises; but the claim was denied on the ground that, at the time her husband took the homestead deed as trustee for his sons, he had ample means remaining for a suitable provision for the plaintiff, to which denial she excepted. If the purpose which prompted the husband's act was not to defraud the plaintiff, but a desire to make a reasonable provision for his minor children, whose interests it was his duty to guard and protect, it would be a misnomer to call the transaction fraudulent, and it must be allowed to stand. In such cases the facts are always open to inquiry, "and it seems settled that the court is warranted in considering such circumstances as the meritorious object of the conveyance and the situation of the husband in point of pecuniary means." Schouler, Dom. Rel. 270. And this is right and reasonable. Marriage does not debar a man from all right to dispose of his property during his life according to his will and pleasure. On the contrary, "nothing is better settled than the power of a husband to dispose of his personal property in good faith, by gift or otherwise, during coverture, free from all post mortem claims thereon by his widow." Dickerson's App. 115 Pa. 198. It simply debars him from making gifts and conveyances with the view of defeating his wife's marital rights, and to this extent only is his power of disposal clogged and fettered. When his object is not to defraud her, he may therefore lawfully sell or convey, and he may even make a gift of his property for any lawful purpose. If possessed of large estate, the voluntary conveyance of a small portion of it to a stranger would scarcely be deemed fraudulent as against her; and if the conveyance is to his children by a former marriage, and he retained that which would, in the ordinary course of events, be ample provision for himself and wife and family, there surely would be no fraud upon her marital rights cognizable in equity. See Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 521, 30 Am. Rep. 441, and authorities generally. Taking into consideration Mr. Walker's pecuniary circumstances, the comparatively small amount invested in the homestead trust estate with reference to the entire amount of his property, the meritorious claims of his children, as such, upon him, and the pregnant fact that this trust was created long before his estrangement from the plaintiff, we are of opinion that the provision made by him for his children was, under the existing circumstances, a just and reasonable one, that on fraud upon the plaintiff was intended, and that her claim for a share of the homestead estate was properly denied.

Exceptions overruled.

Doe, Ch. J., and Allen, J., did not sit.
The others concurred.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

A. Lincoln FRAME

v.

George H. FELIX et al., Appts.

(187 Pa. 47.)

1. A citizen, taxpayer, and property owner in a city may invoke equity jurisdiction to restrain the execution of an illegal contract for public work involving an expenditure of public money.
2. A city cannot evade a requirement that contracts must be let to the lowest responsible bidder by acting indirectly through the agency of the water board which is only a department of the city government.
3. Proposals for bids for public work cannot fix the price to be paid for labor, where the statute requires all contracts for public work to be let to the lowest responsible bidder.

(March 18, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for Berks County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enjoin the execution of a contract for the construction of certain public work. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion of the court below which was delivered by ENDLICH, J., as follows:

"The bill filed December 20, 1894, in this case avers (1) that plaintiff is a citizen and tax-payer of the city of Reading owning real estate within the same taxable for municipal purposes; (2) that the said city is subject to the Acts of May 23, 1874 (Pub. Laws, 230), and May 23, 1889 (Pub. Laws, 277); (3) that Felix and others named as defendants are commissioners of the water department of said city, under the provisions of said acts; (4) that, having resolved to construct a new inlet at the Maiden Creek pumping station, they prepared plans and specifications, and invited proposals on the basis thereof, the same stipulating that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed by the contractor upon said work, and that the minimum wages to be paid by him to such employes shall be $1.50 per day; (5) that the contract was on December 18, 1894, awarded to the defendant Ahrens, upon his proposal made on the basis of said specifications, and that an agreement is about to be executed with him accordingly; (6) that the prevailing market price of labor in Reading is from $1 to $1.25 per day; (7) that the stipulation as to the minimum wages to be paid is illegal, unconstitutional, and void; and (8) that the said agreement, if executed, will do plaintiff irreparable injury. The prayers are (a) that the proceedings in awarding the contract be declared void; (b) that defendant be restrained from executing the proposed agreement; and (c) general relief. A preliminary injunction was granted. The answer (which it was agreed by counsel should stand as the answer of all the defendants) admits all the averments except the third, which is qualified by the statement that the commissioners of the water department are governed by the Act of March 21, 1865 (Pub. Laws, 458), and the sixth, seventh, and eighth, which are denied. The cause was tried and argued before the court on January 8, 1895.

NOTE.—For note on rights of lowest bidders on public contracts, see Anderson v. St. Louis Public School Board (Mo.) 28 L. R. A. 707.
27 L. R. A.

See also 33 L. R. A. 827; 37 L. R. A. 630.

"Upon the basis of the admissions in the pleadings, of the testimony taken, and of such matters as the court, under rule 27, § 5, takes judicial notice of, I make the following findings of facts:

"(1) The plaintiff, A. Lincoln Frame, is a citizen and tax-payer of the city of Reading, and the owner of real estate in the said city taxable for municipal purposes. (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 1 granted.)

"(2) The city of Reading is a municipal corporation, having accepted and being subject to the provisions of the act of the legislature entitled 'An act dividing the cities of the state into three classes,' etc., approved May 28, 1874, being a city of the third class, and is also subject to the provisions of the act of legislature entitled 'An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of cities of the third class,' approved May 28, 1889. (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 2 granted.)

"(3) George H. Felix, Matthan Harbster, Frank A. Tyson, and Frederick P. Heller, four of the defendants, are commissioners of the water department of the city of Reading, which department is governed by the provisions of the Act of March 21, 1865 (Pub. Laws, 458), and the supplements thereto; the former providing, in section 4, that said commissioners shall have power 'to purchase such materials as shall be requisite for keeping said waterworks in good repair, but not for the construction of new works, without the consent and direction of councils;' and that 'no new work of construction . . . shall be undertaken by said commissioners, without the consent of councils being first had and obtained.' (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 3 modified.)

"(4) In pursuance of an ordinance of the councils of the city of Reading of March 23, 1894, providing as follows:

"Section 1. Be it ordained, etc., that the sum of $35,000 be and the same is hereby appropriated to the department of water for the fiscal year of 1894, to purchase an additional pumping engine for use at Maiden-creek pumping station, and to make such alterations to the present pumping station as shall be necessary for the accommodation of said engine. . . .

"Sec. 2. That the board of water commissioners be and are hereby authorized and directed, immediately after the approval of this ordinance, to advertise for proposals for said pumping engine and alterations to building, and award contracts for the same to such party or parties as they may deem proper for the best interest of the city.

"—The said commissioners of the water department, having resolved to construct a new inlet at the Maiden-creek pumping station of the said city, prepared plans and specifications therefor, and invited proposals for the said work, on the basis of the said plans and specifications; and that in the said specifications it was stipulated that the person to whom the contract should be awarded should not employ any laborer, artisan, or mechanic upon the said work who was not a citizen of the United States, and that said contractor should not pay less for labor on the said work than $1.50 per day for every person employed. (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 4 granted, with the addition of the ordinance under which the commissioners were acting.)

"(5) A number of proposals were made for the said work upon the basis of the said specifications, and the said commissioners of the water department, on the 18th day of December, A. D. 1894, awarded the contract for the said work to Howard E. Ahrens, one of the defendants, who had made one of the proposals on the basis of the said specifications, and, unless restrained, will execute an agreement with the said Howard E. Ahrens for the performance of the said work in accordance with the terms of the said plans and specifications. (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 5 granted.)

"Under these findings of fact, and as applicable to them, I make the following findings of law:

"(a) In the inviting, awarding, and conclusion of contracts for new work of construction under authority of the councils of the city of Reading, the board of water commissioners is bound to act in conformity with the provisions of Act May 23, 1889, article 4, section 6; and the authority given it by the Ordinance of March 23, 1894, respecting the construction or alteration at the Maiden-creek pumping station, must be understood as having been given and as exercisable by said board subject to said provisions.

"(b) The fixing by the board of water commissioners, in the specifications for the work to be done at the Maiden-creek pumping station, of a minimum price to be paid for labor, and the inviting of proposals and the awarding of the contract upon the basis of such specification, are a violation of the statutory requirement in Act May 23, 1889, article 4, section 6, that such work be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder, and therefore void. (Plaintiff's request for findings of law No. 1 substantially granted.)

"(c) The plaintiff, as a citizen, tax-payer, and property owner in the city of Reading, has a right to invoke the equity jurisdiction of this court to set aside the action of the board of water commissioners in the premises, and to restrain the execution of the proposed agreement between it and the defendant Ahrens in pursuance of said action.

"(d) The plaintiff is entitled to a decree in accordance with the first and second prayers of his bill, with costs. (Plaintiff's request for findings of law No. 4 substantially granted.)

"The reasons which seem to compel the decision I have just indicated are (without regard to the order of the findings) the following:

"1. The present bill falls clearly within the category of bills quia timet.—a well-settled branch of equity jurisdiction.' Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. 388, 348; Wells v

Bain, 75 Pa. 89, 15 Am. Rep. 563; Baird v. Rice, 68 Pa. 489; Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. 888, 98 Am. Dec. 272. Nor can the standing of a citizen and a taxpayer, when money is to be raised by taxation or expended by the municipal treasury, to proceed in equity to test the validity of the proposed action claimed by him to be illegal, be questioned at this day (Wheeler v. Philadelphia, supra; Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. 147, 59 Am. Rep. 759; Moers v. Reading, 21 Pa. 188; Mott v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 80 Pa. 9, 73 Am. Dec. 664; Page v. Allen, supra; Mazet v. Pittsburgh, 187 Pa. 548), the recognized grounds of such standing being special injury to his interests as a taxpayer, and want of a common-law remedy. See Blapham, Eq. § 424; 1 Spelling, Extraordinary Relief, §§ 614, 717; Mott v. Pennsylvania R. Co. supra. It is therefore unnecessary for him to show any injury likely to result to him from the alleged illegal action, different in kind from that common to all other citizens and taxpayers, and inferable, as a matter of law, from the illegality of the proposed expenditure of the public money. The fact of a threatened injury entitling him to a relief is necessarily involved in the establishment of the illegality of the intended municipal action. Hence I have deemed it needless to make any special finding, as a finding of fact, that the contract here in question, if executed, will do irreparable injury to plaintiff. (Plaintiff's request for findings of fact No. 7 refused, etc.)

"2. It was decided in Reading v. Shepp, 2 Pa. Dist. Rep. 187, upon careful consideration of all the pertinent statutes, that the Special Act of 1865, creating and governing the water department of the city of Reading, is not repealed by the provisions of the Act of 1874, providing a system by which cities of the third class may purchase the franchises, etc., of existing water companies, nor by those of the Act of 1889, empowering such cities, having become the owners of water-works, to establish water departments; and that, therefore, the water department of the city of Reading is governed by the Act of 1865 and its supplements, and not by the General Laws of 1874 and 1889. The question then arises whether, in inviting proposals and awarding contracts, the board is required to conform to the provisions of article 4, section 6, of the last-named enactment, which is as follows: 'All work and materials required by the city shall be furnished, and the printing, advertising and all other kinds of work to be done for the city, shall be performed under contract, to be given to the lowest responsible bidder, under such regulations as shall be prescribed by ordinance.' It was decided in Bork v. Buffalo, 127 N. Y. 64, that a provision in the charter of the city of Buffalo prohibiting the same from entering into a contract for any work or improvement exceeding certain prices, and with certain exceptions, 'until the assessment therefor has been confirmed,' did not apply to the board of park commissioners of said city, or to the contracts made by them; but that the provisions mentioned had reference to contracts made by the regular officers of the municipal government, and not those made by a separate department possessing independent corporate powers. It appears from the opinion of Mr. Justice Vann in that case that the park commission was organized by a special statute passed 1869, subsequently to the enactment of the charter of the city, forming no part of it, and in no way dependent upon it; creating an independent department of the city government, and clothing it with power to locate parks, lay out approaches thereto, appropriate and condemn lands for these purposes, make rules for the regulation, government, and protection of the parks, etc., all powers which were to be exercised by the commission independently and without the consent or approval of any other body or officers. In 1885 the provisions of the Statute of 1869 were incorporated in a revision of the city charter as one of the titles of the same, with the apparent object of having all the laws relating to the city government in its various departments embraced in a single statute, for the sake of convenience. The park commissioners were not, however, in terms, made city officers, but were still given 'sole and exclusive power by contract or otherwise to open, grade, construct, repair and maintain the roadways,' etc., without leave or license from the council or other agency of the city. Of the cost of improvements determined upon by the commission (not exceeding the limitation of the statute as to amount), it was made the duty of the city council to raise one half by local assessment. The contract in question was executed in form by 'the city of Buffalo by the park commissioners.' Between the relation of the statute creating the Buffalo park commission to the charter of the city of Buffalo, and that of the Act of 1865 to the previously enacted charter of the city of Reading and the Act of 1889, which is its present charter, as well as between the relation of the park commissioners to the city government of Buffalo and that of the Reading water board to the city government of Reading, there are certain points of resemblance, so obvious that they need not be pointed out. But the points of distinction are no less striking though created by special statutes, separate from and forming no part of the charter of the city of Reading, with certain powers and duties defined by the legislature beyond the control of the city councils, and unaffected (as far as its composition, rights, methods, and privileges, and the resulting liabilities of property holders are concerned) by subsequent general legislation. The Reading water board is, nevertheless, not a separate body, possessing powers independent of the city councils in the management of the water department, or the construction of or contracting for new work within the same. By section 4, Act 1865, it is required to perform all such duties relating to the management of the department as the city councils may, consistently with the act, impose upon it; to submit, whenever called upon, estimates of the expense of new works, alterations, etc., contemplated by councils in the water-works; to carry out, with the aid of the city police, the regulations of councils as to the use of water by the residents of the city; and, while permitted to purchase such materials as may be requisite for keeping the works in repair, it is denied the right to do so for the construction of new works without the consent and direction of councils, and forbidden to undertake any such new work except with their consent. Without going any further, therefore, it seems very clear that the water board, existing and acting under the Statute of 1865 and its supplements, is, nevertheless, at least in all matters in which it is made subject to the direction of councils, but a department of the city government,—an established agency of the city for carrying on one branch of the municipal affairs. If it were needful, this conclusion might be fortified by a comparison between the relations of the Reading water board, under the statutes here governing, and the relation of the Sewickley water commissioners to that borough, under the enactments applicable to it, passed upon in Sewickley Water Works Comrs. v. Sewickley, 159 Pa. 194, where it is said by Mr. Justice Green, at page 198, 159 Pa.: 'They are mere officers, through whose agency the works were constructed, maintained, and operated.' If, however, the Reading water board is not a separate body, possessing independent corporate powers, but a mere department or agency of the city government, in the construction of new waterworks, then it is too plain for argument that the inviting and awarding of a contract for that purpose by the board at the direction of councils is the act of the city, through the agency of the board; and so are the execution of the contract and the work of construction. But, the city being required to do all such work by contract to be given to the lowest responsible bidder, it cannot be pretended that it may evade that requirement by acting indirectly through the agency of the water board. It was held in Re Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 75 N. Y. 388, that the city of New York, being required to do all public work exceeding a certain amount by contract to be awarded to the lowest bidder, could not escape that requirement as to a particular part of such work by delegating the doing of it to the park commissioners in such manner as they might 'deem expedient and for the best interests of the city and property owners.' It follows that when the city councils, by the Ordinance of March 28, 1894, authorized the water board to engage in the work of constructing a new inlet at the Maiden creek pumping station, and for that purpose to advertise for proposals and award contracts, it must be conclusively held to have intended a compliance on the part of the water board with Act 1889, article 4, section 6; and what is implied in a law or ordinance is just as much a part of it as what is expressed. United States v. Babbitt, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 61, 17 L. ed. 96, Hanchett v. Weber, 17 Ill. App. 114; Stegel v. Lauer, 148 Pa. 236. In a word, in inviting proposals and awarding a contract in this case, the water board was bound by the requirement that municipal work is to be given to and done by the lowest responsible bidder, and to make its specifications accordingly. Has it complied with that requirement? If not, then, as was said by Denio, J., in Brady v. New York, 20 N. Y. 812 (a case arising under a similar enactment), it does not require any argument to show that the proceeding was null and void and conferred no rights upon the person to whom the contract was awarded.

"3. The provision that contracts for municipal work shall be given to the lowest responsible bidder does not have sole reference to the more pecuniary ability of the contractor, but involves a discretion on the part of the municipal authorities in the selection of the agency best fitted for the performance of the work, etc., required. Com. v. Mitchell, 83 Pa. 843; Findley v. Pittsburgh, Id. 351; Douglass v. Com. 108 Pa. 559; Interstate Vitrified Brick & Paving Co. v. Philadelphia, 164 Pa. 477. But, that discretion being granted, the purpose of the provision, which was based upon motives of public economy, and originated, perhaps, in some degree of distrust of the officers to whom the duty of making contracts for the public service was committed (Brady v. New York, supra, per Denio, J., at page 816), clearly was 'to secure to the city the benefit and advantage of fair and just competition between bidders, and at the same time close, as far as possible, every avenue to favoritism and fraud in its varied forms (Mazel v. Pittsburgh, 187 Pa. 548, per Sterret, J., at pages 561, 563, 187 Pa.), and to insure 'the accomplishment of the work at the lowest price by subjecting the contract for it to public competition.' Re Mahan, 20 Hun, 301, per Brady, J., at page 302. In order to effectuate this purpose, it is manifest that, where something is to be done that is required to be submitted to competition, every essential part of it that goes to make up the whole of it must be submitted to such competition. Re Paine, 26 Hun, 431. If any one essential part can be withdrawn from competition, so may others; and in the end it will be found that contracts will be let to the lowest bidder on some single trifling element, while as to all important items there has been no competition at all. Such was, indeed, the case in Brady v. New York, supra. Upon items making up seven eighths of the expense of the work to be done no bids were asked; but a pretense of compliance with the statute was made by awarding the contract to the lowest bidder, upon the items making up the remaining one eighth of the entire expense. This was held clearly a violation of the law. Nor can it make any difference in principle whether items be withdrawn from competition by permitting (as in Brady v. New York, supra) the contractor to charge for them as he pleased, or by stating in advance what will be allowed for the same. Thus, in Re Mahan, supra, it was held that when the statute requires a public officer to advertise for bids for work to be performed, with a view to awarding the contract to the lowest bidder, he cannot lawfully, in such advertisement, fix an arbitrary price to be paid for certain specified kinds of work, included in that for which the bids are asked; e. g., in advertising for bids for the construction of a sewer, he cannot fix $4 per cubic yard as the price to be paid by the municipality for all rock excavation. 'If,' says Brady, J., 'the items of rock excavation may be omitted from the contract to be made by arbitrarily stating an allowance for it, the same course may be pursued as to the other items, and the advertisement made, therefore, to cover a few only of the items constituting the whole work to be done.' Accordingly, a contract made upon the basis of such an advertisement, and embodying its objectionable feature, was declared to be illegal. The principle of this decision, affirmed on appeal in 81 N. Y. 621, was followed under similar conditions in Re Mauger, 28 Hun, 658; Re Manhattan Sav. Inst. 82 N. Y. 143; Re Merriam, 84 N. Y. 596; Re Metropolitan Gas-Light Co's Petition, 85 N. Y. 528; Re Paine, 26 Hun, 481. The fact that the assessments laid to pay the amounts accruing to the contractor upon such contracts were in the earlier cases vacated, in the later simply reduced, is irrelevant here; the reason for the adoption of the latter rule, obviously justified where the work had been done, and the application was to avoid contribution on the part of property holders benefited to its expense being together with the rule itself inapplicable here. It seems, therefore, to be beyond question that, under a provision requiring the submission of contracts for municipal work to competitive bidding and the awarding of them to the lowest responsible bidder, it is not lawful to fix, in the specifications, on the basis of which the proposals are invited, any arbitrary sum to be paid for any part or item of the work to be done; and that the fixing of such a sum for any part or item of such work renders illegal the entire proceeding and the contract to which it may lead. Nor is it material whether the sum so fixed be or be not, in point of fact, in excess of what it is likely that the competition among the bidders would have made it. Says Brady, J., in Re Mahan, supra: 'In the consideration of this case it was thought that, inasmuch as it did not appear that the price allowed for rock excavation by the commissioner of public works was in excess of what would have been demanded by any contractor, the petitioner did not sustain any injury by the omission mentioned, and was not aggrieved, therefore, by any substantial error. But reflection upon that theory has led to the conviction that that is not enough to override the plain terms of the statute.' Manifestly this must be so. If not, the requirement to submit public work to competitive bidding could be practically disregarded by municipal officers whenever they might feel disposed to take the chance of being stopped by the taxpayers, and, in case they should be, of finding the ways and means of proving that the expenditure was not in excess of what it would probably have been had they obeyed the statute. Such a condition of the law would be simply intolerable, and cannot for one moment be thought of as a possible thing.

"Now, the difficulty with the specifications and proposed contract in this case is that the former undertake to fix arbitrarily and in advance the price of one of the important elements entering into the expense of the work to be done thereunder, by the stipulation that the contractor shall pay to the persons employed by him in the performance of the contract not less than $1.50 per day as wages. I am not going to decide, because, as I have shown, it is unnecessary to decide, whether or how much that is in excess of average wages paid to persons employed in the kind of work contemplated in these specifications and this proposed contract. The evidence offered by plaintiff upon this subject might, when objected to, have been excluded, which would have prevented any counter evidence by defendants on the subject. For that reason I have marked as refused the plaintiff's sixth request for findings of fact and his second request for findings of law. All that I am bound to say or that is proper for me to say is that, by attempting to fix in the specifications, on the basis of which proposals were invited, the minimum rate of wages to be paid by the contractor, the water board has withdrawn from possible competition one of the essential elements of the work, every part of which it was required to submit to competition, and that thereby its invitation of proposals for the remainder of the work, its award of the contract therefor, and the proposed execution of said contract have been rendered illegal as in contravention of the mandate of the statute.

"It may, in view of prevailing conditions, be unfortunate that the case before me had arisen at this time, and it may be, as urged at the hearing, that the plaintiff's motives for bringing it here, beyond these disclosed by the record, were not the most commendable. But, the case being here, every question necessarily to be passed upon in its decision is, of course, to be determined upon recognized legal principles, and upon no other consideration; and with the plaintiff's hidden motives the court has nothing to do. Maest v. Pittsburgh, 187 Pa. 548. It is, moreover, to say the least, extremely doubtful, and from what was said upon the argument it would hardly seem to be supposed by any one, that the fixing of a minimum rate of wages to be paid to laboring men in the performance of municipal contracts ever does put into the pockets of a single one of them employed by the contractors one penny more than what his labor would at the time command in the community. The wages of labor are not controllable in that way. If the average wages paid for labor of the kind required are equal to the rate thus prescribed, such a stipulation is an entirely nugatory one. If the average is less, the contractor, whoever he may be, will ordinarily pay just what the average is, and nothing more. In either event the laboring man will be none the better off because of such a stipulation, unless it be enforceable under a valid contract. But I am not now deciding, because it is not before me, that every contract between a municipality and a contractor containing a stipulation as to the minimum rate of wages to be paid by the latter is necessarily void, or that such a stipulation in any such contract is unenforceable. Nor, for the same reason, am I deciding anything as to the right of the city or any department to fix the wages to be paid to laboring men employed directly by it. I am dealing here only with the question of its right to prescribe in its specifications and invitation for bids the rate of wages to be paid by others in the performance of such works as it is required by law to throw open to competitive bidding and to award to the lowest bidder, and with the question of the legality of a contract to be made, in the face of such a requirement, upon the basis of specifications so framed and conditioned in advance of the bidding and awarding of the contract. Neither am I passing upon the city's right, in such work and such contract, to require the employment of American citizens only, and to insist upon the same,—a question which is not material to the decision of this case, and I repeat that I am not deciding that the average rate of wages in this city is or is not $1.50 per day, or that the labor required in the performance of the work contemplated by the proposed contract could or ought to be obtained at a less rate of wages. I am simply deciding that in asking for proposals as to that work, and in framing its specifications therefor as the basis of such proposals, the water board had no right to fix, in advance, any rate of wages to be paid by the contractor, whether it be too high or too low, and that, therefore, its past and intended action in the premises cannot be sustained.

"Counsel may prepare and submit the proper decree to be entered in this case in accordance with the foregoing decisions."

Mr. William J. Bourke, for appellants:

The commissioners of the water department of the city of Reading, are organized under and governed by the Act of March 21, 1865 (Pub. Laws, 455-460), and are not subject to any of the general laws governing the city of Reading (proper), and as a consequence they are not subject to section 6, of the Acts of 1874 or 1889 in the awarding of their contracts.

Reading v. Shepp, 2 Pa. Dist. Rep. 187.

It has not been proven that $1.50 per day is in excess of the market price of labor, and until that is clearly shown it cannot be argued that the constitution has been invaded against.

Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. 388; Re Northern Home for Friendless Children, 2 W. N. C. 849; Wilkesbarre City Hospital v. Luzerne County, 84 Pa. 55.

When specifications are first of all presented, fixing a minimum rate of wages, thus having all persons who bid upon the work put upon a common basis and plane, competition is not averted or done away with, and the proposals based upon such specifications are, therefore, not illegal; nor does it in any way affect the responsibility of bidders.

Com. v. Mitchell, 83 Pa. 348; Findley v. Pittsburgh, 82 Pa. 351; Douglass v. Com. 108 Pa. 559.

Mensa. Stevens & Stevens and Cyrus G. Derr, for appellee:

The inviting of proposals for municipal work upon the basis of a minimum price to be paid for labor, and upon the basis of the employment only of persons of a certain nationality as workmen, offends against the statutory provision, that contracts for city work shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder.

Brady v. New York, 20 N. Y. 816; Maset v. Pittsburgh, 187 Pa. 561; Re Mahan, 20 Hun, 301; Re Mauger, 28 Hun, 658.

Contracts such as that in question virtually appropriate out of the city treasury, when the current prices paid for labor are less than $1.50 per day, a sum equal to the difference between such current prices and such sum of $1.50 per day, gratuitously giving the said difference to the individual laborers, which is against public policy, and unlawful and unconstitutional.

Pa. Const. art. 9, § 159.

The said provision is also violative of the spirit of the constitutional inhibition against the regulation of labor by local laws.

Pa. Const. art. 3, § 7.

Per Curiam:

The important question in this case is raised upon the specifications forming part of the proposed contract for the new inlet and pumping station about to be built by the water department of the city of Reading. These specifications require the contractor to employ no one not a citizen of the United States, and to pay no man a less sum for his labor than $1.50 per day. The point made by the plaintiff is that such specifications are not consistent with the provisions of Act May 23, 1889, article 4, section 6, which require that such work shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder. The learned judge of the court below, in his findings of law marked "(a)," "(b)," "(c)," and "(d)," has sustained the contention of the plaintiff and fully vindicated his decree. We affirm it for the reasons so clearly stated in these findings. The question discussed in the remainder of the opinion, affecting the organization of the water department defendant, is not raised by the assignments of error, and we express no opinion upon it.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

PUGET SOUND DRESSED BEEF &amp; PACKING CO.

v.

William J. JEFFS et al., and Harry M. HEATH, *Appt.*O. E. GRIFFIN, Petitioner, Reapt.

(.....Wash.....)

The exemption of certain property from execution attaches to the proceeds of insurance thereon which the owner intends to invest in similar exempt property.

(March 22, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendant Heath from a judgment of the Superior Court for Pierce County, applying money reached by garnishment proceedings against the Oakland Home Insurance Company which had been instituted by C. E. Griffin as assignee of a judgment which had been obtained by the Puget Sound Dressed Beef & Packing Company against Heath and others, to reach money due for a loss by fire of property which Heath claimed to be exempt from execution. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Murray & Christian, for appellant:

There is probably no civilized state or country in the world in which some kind of an exemption is not allowed.

These statutes are designed as a protection for poor and destitute families.

They are based upon considerations of public policy and should be liberally construed.

7 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, pp. 180, 184; Cameron v. Fay, 55 Tex. 62; New Orleans Ins. Assn. v. Jameson, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 282; Tilston v. Wolcott, 48 N. Y. 190.

Where a homestead dwelling was insured and burned, the supreme court of California held that the sum due from the insurance company was not subject to garnishment by a creditor of the husband.

Houghton v. Lee, 50 Cal. 101; Ward v. Goggan, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 274; Reynolds v. Hanes, 18 L. R. A. 719, 83 Iowa, 842; Cooney v. Cooney, 65 Barb. 524.

Property purchased by a pensioner with his pension money is exempt.

Crow v. Brown, 11 L. R. A. 110, 81 Iowa, 844; Yates County Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 7 L. R. A. 557, 119 N. Y. 550.

A judgment for the wrongful conversion of property exempt from execution sale is itself exempt.

Below v. Robbins, 8 L. R. A. 467, 76 Wis. 600.

The debtor is no more responsible for a change in the character of the property through the destruction of his house by fire than he is for a change in its character the result of a wrongful seizure of his property by which it is transferred into a credit.

NOTE.—For note on exemption in respect to proceeds of exempt property, see Wylie v. Grundysen (Minn.) 19 L. R. A. 32.

27 L. R. A.

Bridgers v. Howell, 27 S. C. 425; Cone v. Lewis, 64 Tex. 381, 53 Am. Rep. 767; Rockwell v. Hubbell, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 197, 45 Am. Dec. 252; Broome v. Davis, 87 Ga. 584; Butner v. Bousser, 104 Ind. 255.

Messrs. R. W. Jamieson and C. P. Bennett, for respondent:

The right to sell the corpus of the debtor's real property for the payment of his debts and to divest him of title thereto being purely a creature of the statute law, statutes restrictive of this right are not in derogation of the common law and are not subject to the rule that statutes in derogation of common law are to be strictly construed.

But since the common law subjected all of a debtor's chattels, except "beasts of the plow," to execution, hence statutes exempting personal property from execution are in derogation of the common law and are to be strictly construed.

Thompson, Homestead & Exemptions, § 7; Temple v. Scott, 8 Minn. 431; Rue v. Alter, 5 Denio, 119.

When the language of a statute is plain and unambiguous, courts are not called upon to read into the statute, by construction, or judicial legislation, something not already there.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, §§ 4-9; Leschi v. Washington Territory, 1 Wash. Terr. 19; Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. 180; Virginia & T. R. Co. v. Lyon County Comrs. 6 Nev. 68; State v. Washoe County Comrs. 6 Nev. 105; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co. 49 N. Y. 455; Denn v. Reid, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 519; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258; Sneed v. Com. 6 Dana, 339; Dame's App. 62 Pa. 417; 29 Am. L. Rev. 88; Lippitt v. Huston, 8 R. I. 415, 94 Am. Dec. 117; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507, 91 Am. Dec. 563; Melver v. Rugan, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 29, 4 L. ed. 175; Hoke v. Henderson, 15 N. C. 1, 25 Am. Dec. 681; Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh, 42, 19 Am. Dec. 724; Gains v. Gains, 2 A. K. Marsh. 190, 12 Am. Dec. 877; Bepley v. State, 4 Ind. 264, 58 Am. Dec. 629.

Policies of insurance are contracts between the assured and the insurors, mere special agreements, and not insurance of the specific things mentioned, and the insurance is not an incident of the thing insured.

Lynch v. Daisell, 4 Bro. P. C. 482; Sadlers Co. v. Babcock, 2 Atk. 554; Columbia Ins. Co. of Alexandria v. Lawrence, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 507, 9 L. ed. 512; Carpenter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 496, 10 L. ed. 1044; Bernheim v. Bear, 56 Miss. 149; Smith v. Ratcliff, 66 Miss. 688.

In California the supreme court has held that the proceeds of a policy of insurance on a homestead came within the spirit and intent of the statute and have held insurance money on a homestead to be exempt.

Houghton v. Lee, 50 Cal. 101.

In this state we have no statute exempting the proceeds of a homestead from execution, no statute exempting the proceeds of an insurance policy on a homestead from execution; and no money exemption whatever except wages for services.

That which is not exempt by the words of the statute cannot be made so by the court.

Smith v. Ratcliff, supra; Horgan v. Amick, 62 Cal. 408; Whipple v. Foot, 2 Johns. 418, 3 Am. Dec. 442; Wooster v. Page, 54 N. H. 125, 20 Am. Rep. 128; Monniea v. German Ins. Co. 12 Ill. App. 240; Morse v. Towns, 45 N. H. 185; Manchester v. Burns, Id. 482; Edson v. Traak, 22 Vt. 18; Cook v. Holdbrook, 6 Allen, 572; Kellogg v. Waite, 12 Allen, 529.

Pension money after it has been paid over to the pensioner and deposited in a bank is not exempt from execution.

Webb v. Holt, 57 Iowa, 712; Tripllett v. Graham, 58 Iowa, 185; Goble v. Stephenson, 68 Iowa, 270; Baugh v. Barrett, 69 Iowa, 495; Foster v. Byrne, 76 Iowa, 295; Kellogg v. Waite, 12 Allen, 529; Spelman v. Aldrich, 126 Mass. 118; Robion v. Walker, 82 Ky. 60, 56 Am. Rep. 878; Eckert v. McKee, 9 Bush, 355; Sims v. Waleham (Ky.) March 3, 1888; State v. Fairton Saving Fund & Bldg. Assn. 44 N. J. L. 876; Cavanaugh v. Smith, 84 Ind. 380; Craws v. White, 27 Kan. 319, 41 Am. Rep. 408; Friend v. Garcelon, 77 Me. 25, 52 Am. Rep. 739; Hissom v. Johnson, 27 W. Va. 644, 55 Am. Rep. 327; Rozelle v. Rhodes, 116 Pa. 129; Manchester v. Burns, 45 N. H. 482.

The point involved in this appeal has already been passed upon in Carter v. Davis, 6 Wash. 327.

See also Eberhart's App. 89 Pa. 509; Thompson, Homestead & Exemptions, § 452; Huey's App. 29 Pa. 220.

The proceeds of the policy of insurance were not exempt property, and did not arise out of exempt property, but on the contrary, were the proceeds of property not exempt, money which the appellant had paid the insurance company in premiums, and as the money paid for premiums was not exempt the proceeds of the premiums, the insurance money, is not exempt either.

Bouyer's App. 21 Pa. 210; McWilliams v. Webb, 82 Iowa, 577; Pittman's App. 48 Pa. 815; Mandlore v. Burton, 1 Ind. 39; Scott v. Brigham, 27 Vt. 561; Edson v. Traak, 22 Vt. 18; Butt v. Green, 29 Ohio St. 663; Shelly's App. 86 Pa. 880; Hill v. Johnson, 29 Pa. 363; Garrett & Martin's App. 32 Pa. 162, 72 Am. Dec. 779; Hammer v. Freese, 19 Pa. 257.

HOYT, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On December 1, 1893, the Puget Sound Dressed-Beef & Packing Company recovered judgment against William J. Jeffs, James F. Myhan, and Harry M. Heath, copartners doing business under the firm name of the Rainier Market. On March 10, 1894, the said Puget Sound Dressed-Beef & Packing Company assigned said judgment to one C. E. Griffin, who thereafter caused a writ of garnishment to be issued against the Oakland Home Insurance Company, requiring it to answer as to its indebtedness to one of the judgment debtors, Harry M. Heath. Said insurance company answered, and admitted that a loss under one of its policies issued to said Heath had occurred, and that its liability therefor was in process of adjustment. Subsequently, the court found that the insurance company was indebted to said Heath in the sum of $650.50, and ordered that such sum be paid to the clerk of the court, which order was complied with by the garnishee. Thereupon, the said Heath filed in the cause a petition from which it appeared that he was a householder, and that the property which was covered by the policy upon which the liability of the insurance company arose was exempt from execution. It further appeared from such petition that it was the intention of the petitioner to use the moneys due upon the policy of insurance in the purchase of other goods of the same character as those destroyed, and the prayer thereof was that the moneys in the hands of the clerk of the court should be paid over to him, to be used for that purpose. To this petition the respondent C. E. Griffin interposed a demurrer on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to warrant the making of the order prayed for, for the reason that the moneys paid upon such policy of insurance were not exempt from execution. This demurrer was sustained by the court, and thereupon on motion of said C. E. Griffin, the court ordered that the money be applied upon his judgment. From this order said Harry M. Heath has appealed to this court, and, as reason for its reversal, alleges that the court committed error in sustaining the demurrer to the petition. The respondent made no claim in the lower court that it did not sufficiently appear from the petition that the property destroyed was exempt from execution, nor does he make any such claim here. His contention there was, and the only one of sufficient importance to be noticed here is, that the money paid upon the insurance policy was not exempt from execution by reason of the fact that the property, the destruction of which gave rise to the liability, was so exempt. The claim on the part of appellant was and is that such money was exempt for a sufficient time to allow it to be invested in the purchase of property to replace that which had been destroyed.

The question presented by these opposite contentions is an important one. Its determination must depend upon the construction to be given our statute relating to the exemption of personal property from sale on execution. If such statute is to be strictly construed, and exemptions thereunder confined to the articles specifically named therein, the contention of the respondent must be sustained for the reason that nowhere in the statute is there any specific provision for the exemption of money paid on account of the loss by fire of exempt property. But, if it is to receive such a liberal construction as to affect the evident object of the legislature in its enactment, it will well warrant the appellant's contention. Which of these constructions should this statute receive? Statutes exempting real property from sale on execution have received a liberal construction by nearly all the courts of this country. See Peverly v. Sayles, 10 N. H. 356; Deere v. Chapman, 25 Ill. 610, 79 Am. Dec. 850; Connaughton v. Sands, 32 Wis. 387; Campbell v. Adair, 45 Miss. 170; Kuntz v. Kinney, 33 Wis. 510; Robinson v. Wiley, 15 N. Y. 489; Howe v. Adams, 28 Vt. 541; Moss v. Warner, 10 Cal. 296; Bevan v. Hayden, 13 Iowa, 122; Montague v. Richardson, 24 Conn. 888, 63 Am. Dec. 178. And, if statutes exempting real property should be so construed, there is no good reason why those exempting personal property should not receive a liberal construction. The only reason given by those courts which have adopted a different rule of construction of such statutes, when applied to personal property, is that at common law real property was not subject to sale on execution, and was only made subject to such sale by statutory provisions, so that statutes exempting it were not in derogation of the common law, and did not come within the rule of strict construction applied to statutes of that kind, while those exempting personal property were in derogation of such law, for the reason that thereunder such property was subject to such sale. At one time there might have been some reason for a distinction of this kind, for the reason suggested; but in modern times, in this country, such reason has ceased to have much force, and most of the courts now refuse to recognize it. And a very great majority of the courts of this country now liberally construe all exemption statutes, without regard to the property to which they relate. Such courts say that such statutes are remedial, and should receive such a construction as to give effect to the intention of the legislature. See Carpenter v. Herrington, 25 Wend. 870, 37 Am. Dec. 239; Franklin v. Coffee, 18 Tex. 413, 70 Am. Dec. 292; Wassell v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 101; Hawthorne v. Smith, 3 Nev. 182, 93 Am. Dec. 897; Gilman v. Williams, 7 Wis. 829, 76 Am. Dec. 219; Alvord v. Lent, 28 Mich. 369; State v. Romer, 44 Mo. 99; Good v. Fogg, 61 Ill. 449, 14 Am. Rep. 71; Freeman v. Carpenter, 10 Vt. 433, 33 Am. Dec. 210.

The courts of some of the states have not adopted this broad rule of liberal construction but, in our opinion, reason, as well as the weight of authority, is with those that have. We shall therefore apply it in determining the rights of the parties to this appeal; and thereunder it is our duty to look for the object sought to be accomplished by the legislature, and give it effect, even although the provisions of the statute are not as full and specific as they should have been. What was the evident object of the legislature in providing that household furniture should be exempt from execution? There can be but one answer. It was that the family might have something which would enable them to maintain a home, and live together therein. This object can only be subserved by sustaining the contention of the appellant. If the householder is to be protected in the use and enjoyment of his household furniture, he should be protected in taking such steps as will enable him to replace it if lost or destroyed; and common prudence would require that he should make some provision which would enable him to replace it in case it was destroyed by fire, and the usual and economical provision in that regard is to procure a policy of insurance thereon. And when such policy is procured, and money paid on account of the destruction of the property, the object of the legislature can only be subserved by holding that such money takes the place of the property insured, and, until a reasonable time has elapsed for its being used in replacing the destroyed property, is exempt from execution, the same as the property would have been.

We have not lost sight of the argument made by the respondent to the effect that the insurance money is not the proceeds of the property destroyed, but, instead thereof, is money paid upon a contract for an independent consideration, which consideration had no connection with the property. But this course of reasoning has no substantial force when brought in contact with the intention of the legislature, which is made to appear from a liberal construction of the language used in the statute upon the subject of exemptions. The object of the insurance, it is true, is not to protect the insured property. It is, however, to procure the means by which such property can be replaced, if destroyed; and, for the purposes of the application of the exemption law, the money paid thereon should be held to bear the same relation to the property destroyed as would other property which might be obtained by way of direct exchange. The fact that the money paid for the insurance was not exempt from execution cannot affect the question. As well might it be claimed that, because money not exempt from execution was used in repairing household furniture, it would thereafter not be exempt. The exact question here presented has not often come before the courts. From the carefully prepared briefs of counsel, and from such examination as we have been able to give the matter, we are of the opinion that the weight of authority thereon is with the contention of the appellant. Especially is this true of the more recent cases upon the subject. In the case of Reynolds v. Hanes, 33 Iowa, 342, 13 L. R. A. 719, this exact question was, after careful consideration, decided by the supreme court of Iowa as contended for by the appellant. That learned court cited a large number of cases in support of its conclusions, and only mentioned one which held directly to the contrary. The statute of that state was substantially the same as ours, and the court conceded that if the object of its enactment could not be considered, and only the articles specifically mentioned therein held to be exempt, a contrary conclusion would have been compelled; but it held that the object of the legislature was the controlling consideration, and that the statute should be read as though apt words had been used to express the intention of the legislature. In the case of Cameron v. Fay, 55 Tex. 63, the supreme court of that state, under a statute substantially like ours, sustained a claim for exemption under facts substantially the same as in the case at bar. The case of Houghton v. Lee, 50 Cal. 101, presented facts so nearly like these that the holding of that court that moneys paid upon an insurance policy were exempt may be said to be exactly in point upon the question here presented. Other cases could be cited where this exact question has been decided in accordance with the contention of the appellant, and a few could be edited to sustain the contention of the respondent. We are best satisfied with the reasoning of those of the former class, and feel justified in following them. Besides the cases directly in point, there are a large number of cases, the holding of which can only be sustained by the same course of reasoning which will sustain the contention of the appellant in the case at bar. Thus, in the case of Crow v. Brown, 81 Iowa, 844, 11 L. R. A. 110, it was held that property purchased with pension money was exempt by virtue of the provisions of the federal statute which provided that such money should be wholly for the benefit of the pensioner. This decision was made after a careful consideration by that learned court, and the fact that there was a dissenting opinion by one of the judges cannot be said to detract from the authority of the case. On the contrary, the very fact that there was a division among the judges of the court would be likely to cause the case to be more carefully considered than it otherwise would have been. In the case of Belove v. Robbins, 76 Wis. 600, 8 L. R. A.

1467, it was held by the supreme court of Wisconsin that a judgment for the wrongful conversion of exempt personal property was itself exempt, and it is evident that the course of reasoning which led to such a decision would fully sustain the contention of the appellant above referred to. The cases which in principle cannot be distinguished from the one at bar, and which are in line with the contention of the appellant, are very numerous. We shall cite only a few of them. See Yates County Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 119 N. Y. 550, 7 L. R. A. 557; Bridgers v. Howell, 27 S. C. 425; Cone v. Lewis, 64 Tex. 381, 53 Am. Rep. 667; Broome v. Davis, 87 Ga. 584.

In our opinion the money paid upon the insurance policy was exempt from execution.

The judgment will be reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to overrule the demurrer to the petition.

Anders, Gordon, and Scott, JJ., concur.

OREGON SUPREME COURT.

L. VANBEBBER, Appt.,

v.

James PLUNKETT et al., Respts.

(.....Or.....)

The doctrine of an account stated does not apply to a single item, not of a debt due and owing, but of an unliquidated claim of damages for the breach of a parol or simple contract.

(January 14, 1896.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Benton County in favor of defendants in an action upon an account stated. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John Kelsay, and W. S. McFadden, for appellant.

Mr. W. S. Hufford, for respondents:

The plaintiff must prove an account stated against each of the defendants, as that, and nothing else, will support his allegations.

Truman v. Owens, 17 Or. 528; Holmes v.

NOTE.—What constitutes an account stated.

The primary meaning of account stated was a mutual examination by parties who had had dealings with each other of the respective items of claim on the different sides of the account and an agreement upon which items should be allowed and upon the balance properly due after subtracting the sum of the items on one side from the sum of those on the other. When the parties had themselves thus agreed upon a balance the courts treated it as conclusive in the absence of special circumstances and in any litigation between the parties would not permit them to go behind such balance. This principle was, however, very soon extended beyond its original application. In the earliest books of reports are cases in which the principle was extended to cases in which a statement of account was rendered by one of the parties and retained without objection by the other. And finally decisions were made to the effect that the mere admission of an existing liability was sufficient to make an account stated.

As stated in State v. Hartman Steel Co., 51 N. J. L. 446, the courts have drifted away from the original standard of a stated account. An account stated originally presented to the legal mind the idea of mutual accounts and of a balance struck on a comparison of such accounts made by the respective creditors. Such an account stated involved an agreement in respect to the items which were to be allowed and so implied an assent to the correctness of the balance found to be due against each of such creditors.

27 L. R. A.

General definitions.

There is a substantial agreement as to the definition of what was originally known as an account stated.

In stating an account two things are necessary: (1) That there should be a mutual examination of the claims by each of the parties; (2) that there be a mutual agreement between them as to the correctness of the allowance and disallowance of the respective claims and of the balance as it is struck upon the final adjustment of the whole account and demands on both sides. The minds of the parties must meet upon the allowance of each claim allowed and upon the disallowance of each item or claim rejected. They must mutually concur upon the final adjustment and nothing short of this in substance will fix and adjust their respective demands as an account stated. Lockwood v. Thorne, 18 N. Y. 286.

An account stated is an agreement between persons who have had previous transactions fixing the amount due, in which respect it is distinguished from a mere admission or acknowledgment. It is a new cause of action. It is not a contract upon a new consideration and does not create an estoppel but establishes prima facie the accuracy of the items charged without further proof. McKinster v. Hitchcock, 19 Neb. 100.

An account stated is an acknowledgment of an existing condition of liability between the parties. From it the law implies a promise to pay whatever balance is thus acknowledged to be due. It thereby becomes a new and independent cause of action so

Page, 19 Or. 232; Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60; Fleischner v. Kubli, 20 Or. 338.

An action upon an account stated is not an action founded upon the items of the account, but is founded upon the new promise or agreement to pay the balance found due on such accounting or settlement, and is entirely a new contract.

It is for the court to decide whether a conversation amounts to an account stated or not. Bishop v. Chambre, 8 Car. & P. 55.

A mere offer to pay a sum of money, unaccompanied by any admission that there is a debt due, will not constitute an account stated.

Wayman v. Hilliard, 7 Bing. 101; 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, pp. 114, 115, note.

far as that a recovery may be had upon it without setting forth or proving the separate items of liability from which the balance results. Chace v. Trafford, 116 Mass. 523, 17 Am. Rep. 171.

Where two persons by compromise liquidate and state at an agreed sum an unliquidated and disputed claim which one holds against the other, this constitutes a valid contract and the only remedy is upon the contract to recover the amount thus liquidated. Fred W. Wolf Co. v. Salem, 33 Ill. App. 614.

An account stated exists where an account is rendered and a debt in a specified sum is acknowledged as due from one person to the other or where persons who have had previous transactions agree upon a definite balance as due. Ware v. Manning, 86 Ala. 238.

An account stated is an agreement and acknowledgment that a certain sum of money or balance is due from one of the parties and an express or implied promise to pay it. Marmon v. Waller, 53 Mo. App. 610.

An account stated is an account balanced and rendered with assent to the balance express or implied; so that the demand is essentially the same as if a promissory note had been given for the balance. Volkering v. DeGraaf, 81 N. Y. 271.

Where there is a disputed claim and the parties settled the dispute by agreeing upon the amount due in an account stated which one party promises to pay, that promise is founded upon a sufficient consideration and can be enforced against him although he might be able to prove that nothing was in fact due from him. Dunham v. Griswold, 100 N. Y. 224.

A stated account, is an agreement between both parties that all the items are true. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 64.

An account stated is an agreement between persons who have had previous transactions fixing the amount due in respect of such transactions and promising payment. Zaccarino v. Pallotti, 49 Conn. 86.

Stated accounts are those which have been examined by the parties and where a balance due from one to the other has been ascertained and agreed upon as correct. McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Me. 308.

It is the consent of defendant to the balance claimed that imparts to an account the character of an account stated. McCall v. Nave, 52 Miss. 494.

If an account is presented, examined, corrected, and returned approved, it is an account stated. Sergeant v. Ewing, 36 Pa. 153.

Acknowledgment of and a promise to pay the balance may support an action upon an account stated. Fitch v. Leitch, 11 Leigh. 471.

If the balance is struck by the parties and interest computed on the balance it will be an account stated. McClelland v. West, 70 Pa. 188.

Where plaintiff went over the account in defend-

The original transaction in this matter was not for the payment of money, but it was a contract to build a certain amount of fence, which plaintiff claims was never built, and this supposed stated account, set up by plaintiff, is an entire new contract, for the payment of certain damages to plaintiff, for the defendant's failure to build said fence; and, to constitute an account stated, there already must be the relation of debtor and creditor existing between the parties, and as this action is for unliquidated damages the same could not be a subject of an account stated.

Truman v. Owens, 17 Or. 527; Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Met. 216; Volkering v. DeGraaf, 81 N. Y. 271; Gough v. Findon, 7 Exch. 48.

ant's presence and found an amount due to himself the result of which was not objected to by defendant, there was an account stated. Kook v. Bonitz, 4 Daly, 117.

An agreement that the items are correct will make the account a stated one. Claire v. Claire, 19 Neb. 54.

The term "account stated" is but an expression to convey the idea of a contract having an account for its consideration and is no more an account than is a promissory note or other contract having a like consideration for its support. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 64.

The making up of an account and signing an acknowledgment of its correctness and of the balance shown at its foot will make an account stated. Bullock v. Boyd, 3 Edw. Ch. 228, 6 L. ed. 405.

In some of the cases there is no distinction made between the terms "stated," "liquidated" and "settled."

Thus in Bainbridge v. Wilcock's, Baldw. C. C. 539, the terms "stated," "settled," or "liquidated," are treated as equally applicable.

In Baker v. Middle, Baldw. C. C. 394, the terms "settled" and "stated" seem to be treated as interchangeable, and it is stated that long acquiescence makes an account settled, and that though not signed by the party it is a stated account if it is in writing and shows a balance or that there is none.

But in Lockwood v. Thorne, 13 N. Y. 233, a settled account is defined to be one that has been paid or adjusted by the parties.

In Rapalje & Lawrence, Law Dictionary, a settled account is stated to be one which has been adjusted between trustee and cestui que trust. But since as shown by authorities cited below the term "stated" may be applied to such accounts it would seem that there is really no distinction which the courts have thought material to preserve.

In McNeel v. Baker, 6 W. Va. 153, the court recognizes the rule that a stated account properly exists only where accounts have been examined and the balance admitted as the true balance between the parties without having been paid. When the balance thus admitted is paid, the account is made a settled account.

Balances made in the debtor's books and assented to, may constitute an account stated. Mathewson v. Eureka Powder Works, 44 N. H. 238.

Where several items of claims are brought into account on either side and being set against one another a balance is struck and the consideration for payment of the balance is the discharge of the items on each side, there is a real account stated. It is then the same as if each item was paid and a discharge given for each and in consideration of that discharge the balance was agreed to be due. It is not necessary to make out a real account stated that the debts shall be debts in present or that they shall be legal debts. Es Laycock v. Pickles, 4 Best & S. 497.

Wolverton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought as for an account stated. At the trial in the court below, when plaintiff had rested his case, upon motion of defendant Ashnah Plunkett a judgment of nonsuit was rendered in her favor, from which the plaintiff appeals.

The evidence offered tended to show that on or about the 13th day of January, 1886, the plaintiff exchanged with defendants a 68-acre tract of land for a certain other 68-acre tract belonging to the defendant Ashnah Plunkett; that there was a difference in the value of the said tracts in plaintiff's favor, and that for the purpose of making up said difference the defendants agreed to build and construct for plaintiff about three fourths of a mile of fencing, 60 to 80 rods of which was to be of boards and posts, and the balance to be of the kind commonly known as a "worm fence." The defendants having failed and neglected to construct the fence, the plaintiff had it built by one J. R. Mays, whom he paid therefor. The plaintiff, testifying in his own behalf, said, among other things, "that on or about the 1st day of June, 1889, at the Occidental Hotel, in Corvallis, Oregon, the defendant James Plunkett agreed that we will pay you $300 for that fence [referring to the fence in the contract growing out of the exchange of lands], and that he

If the balance is reached while the parties are together looking over the account, it becomes final without any additional time for considering it. Darlington v. Taylor, 3 Grant, Cas. 196.

An account stated for the purpose of ascertaining what had been done with certain money and not for the purpose of ascertaining what is due between the parties will not be binding upon them. Holmes v. Morse, 50 Me. 102.

To make an account stated it is sufficient that the account has been examined and assented to as correct by both parties. This consent may be express or implied from circumstances. Lookwood v. Thorne, 11 N. Y. 170, 63 Am. Dec. 51.

There is no express agreement upon an account by a mutual looking over the same. But the law raises from such facts an implied agreement to the correctness of the account. Samson v. Freedman, 102 N. Y. 699.

The promise to pay need not be express. Kent v. Highleyman, 17 Mo. App. 9.

But the person to be charged must assent to the balance to make it an account stated. Bumsey v. Gant, 10 Humph. 238.

Illustrations of what have been held to be accounts stated.

A reply by a landlord upon being asked by a tenant to pay the amount which the tenant had expended for repairs and which the landlord had promised in advance to repay that, "I cannot pay you now, but will out of the next rent," will be an account stated. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459, 3 Car. & P. 170, Moore & P. 237.

Where turnips growing in a field were purchased and partly removed when the seller said to the buyer, "You owe me £3," to which the buyer answered, "I will send it before I draw any more turnips," it was held to be an account stated. Pinobon v. Chilcott, 3 Car. & P. 236.

A letter written upon receipt of an account for tolls due, in which £5 is enclosed and the statement made that the creditor "should have the remainder next week" is an account stated. Peacock v. Harris, 10 East, 107.

An acknowledgment of the amount due for trees which had been felled and converted to the use of the debtor will constitute an account stated. Knowles v. Michel, 13 East, 249.

In Elmes v. Wills, 1 H. Bl. 64, where the promise was to pay a certain amount unless the promisor should show within a month that it had been paid, was treated as an account stated.

Where the directors of a mine which needed money agreed among themselves to each give the secretary his L. O. U. for £100, to be used in the working of the mine, it was held that there was an account stated on which the secretary could maintain an action. Graves v. Cook, 2 Jur. N. S. 475.

Where an accounting was had between the parties, both being present and the clerk of one made entries of the items in a book which was copied by the other into another book and without acknowledging the correctness of the items, he admitted the balance to be correct it was held to be evidence of an account stated. Rigby v. Jeffrya, 7 Dowl. P. C. 551.

Where an insurance company entered the amount of a claim to the credit of the insured on its books and paid a portion or it to one having an order from the assured, the court held there was such an admission of the amount due as to enable the assured to maintain an action upon an account stated. Re Teignmouth & General Mut. Shipping Assn. L. R. 14 Eq. 148, 41 L. J. Ch. 679, 25 L. T. N. S. 684.

Where one person sold a library of books for another, some of which were returned as imperfect, after which the owner wrote to the seller that he had received the returned books which together with certain other credits left a balance of a certain amount, which he would pay in a certain time, it was held to be a stated account. Wheatley v. Williams, 1 Mees. & W. 533, Tyrw. & G. 1043.

In Plano Mfg. Co. v. Parmenter, 22 Ill. App. 633, a balance sheet between an agent for the sale of machines and a representative of the manufacturers, in which the number of the machines received and their disposition are stated, was treated as an account stated but the rule was applied that if he subsequently admitted the receipt of a machine not represented therein, he must pay for it unless he showed that the statement was erroneous.

Where two persons managing an estate had become indebted to plaintiff and one of them was shown the account by a clerk of plaintiffs and admitted that it was correct, except as to one item and subsequently both persons heard the account mentioned without objections and the other admitted that something was due, it was held that there was evidence to go to the jury of an account stated. Chisnam v. Count, 2 Mann. & G. 317, 2 Scott, N. R. 599.

Where the only objection made is the question of articles charged for and the amount is then made to conform with the objection after which the balance is paid, it will be regarded as an account stated. Gilchrist v. Brooklyn Grocers Mfg. Assn. 65 Barb. 390.

An agreement to the balance due accompanied by a member of the debtor firm writing an acknowledgment of the correctness of the amount due on the paper containing the statement of the account addressed to another member of the firm and delivering it to the creditor, will make an account stated. Heldenheimer v. Ellis, 67 Tex. 429.

Where an employer gives orders to his men for goods to be furnished by a merchant and the merchant renders to the employer his statement of the amount which he has furnished on the orders, which amount is deducted from the monthly pay roll of the men, there is an account stated between [plaintiff] assented to said proposition to accept the $300 for the said fencing and in payment therefor." One L. Haskins, a witness for plaintiff, testified that he was present at the Occidental Hotel at the time referred to by plaintiff, and "that he heard the plaintiff ask defendant James Plunkett what they were going to do about that fencing, and that Plunkett stated, 'We will pay you $300 for that fencing built by the Mays,' and that plaintiff assented thereto." Hiram Wood testified that in the year 1890 James Plunkett said to him, "We have settled with Uncle Van [referring to plaintiff] for the fencing the employer and merchant. Bull v. Brookway, 48 Mich. 523.

The fixing by way of statement and compromise of a disputed claim for extra work in the building of a house will be an account stated. Hanly v. Noyes, 35 Minn. 174.

A will or codicil thereto acknowledging a debt but afterwards revoked cannot figure as a liquidated or settled account. Settle v. Settle, 12 Heisk. 661.

A rough statement in writing exhibiting an estimate of the condition of a partnership and the situation of the partners in relation thereto and to each other, will not be an account stated. Burden v. McKimoye, 1 Bail. Eq. 375.

Where an account was rendered to a firm of transactions with an employe who was at the time absent and after retaining it for some months the firm disputed it when the creditor requested its retention until the return of the employe so that its accuracy could be ascertained, there is no account stated. Porter v. Lobach, 2 Bosw. 188.

The giving of an order on a third person for payment upon the receipt of a machine and the bill thereof in accordance with the contract of sale, but before any work is done or anything due on the contract, does not constitute an account stated. Truman v. Owens, 17 Or. 527.

In Memory v. Niepert, 38 Ill. App. 181, where a person who had undertaken to ship produce at a certain price failed to procure it at that price and authorized the other person to procure it at his home market and charge back the loss, which was done and a statement of the account of loss rendered to the first person, the court held that this does not constitute a new contract superseding the old one, but that the old one remained in full force and the rendering of the account was merely a method of adjusting the amount of damage under it.

The balance must be definitely fixed.

There must be a promise express or implied to pay a single sum whether such consists of a single item in a unilateral account or is a totality of all items admitted to be correct in such account, or is the balance remaining after the mutual application in payment of each other of such items in counter accounts as are mutually admitted to be correct. State v. Hartman Steel Co. 51 N. J. L. 445.

The general admission of a pecuniary demand not specifying the amount is not an account stated. Lane v. Hill, 18 Q. B. 253; Teal v. Auty, 3 Brod. & B. 99, 4 J. B. Moore, 542.

An acknowledgment of a debt without specifying the amount is sufficient to entitle the creditor to nominal damages. Bernasconi v. Anderson, Moody & M. 133; Kirtan v. Wood, 1 Moody & R. 233.

But there was an English not prius case which held that admitting the owing of a debt but not stating the sum will entitle to nominal damages. Dixon v. Deveridge, 2 Car. & P. 109.

The creditor must be definite.

The admission must be that the amount is due the plaintiff. Thus where the acceptor of a bill of exchange stated in a letter that if he had had the money he should not have let the bill go to protest, it was held that this was not sufficient to make an account stated, although the amount of the bill was mentioned in the letter, since it merely admitted the amount due to the proper holder of the 27 L. R. A.

bill, which might not be the plaintiff. Jardine v. Payne, 1 Barn. & Ad. 632.

Must be of a subsisting debt.

There must be an acknowledgment of a subsisting debt. Tucker v. Barrow, 7 Barn. & C. 623, 1 Mann. & R. 513, Moody & M. 130, 3 Car. & P. 83, 89.

Where the maker of a check which had been lost by bankers to whom it was given for collection, promised them to give another for the amount, it was held that there was no debt due from one to the other, which could be the subject of an account stated. Lord Abinger says: "There is a good deal of confusion in the books on the question of accounts stated. But they lay down this, that where there is a promise to pay a sum of money as due, it is evidence of an account stated, which means this, that the simple promise, if it stand unexplained and uncontradicted, is evidence to go to the jury that the plaintiff claims that sum to be due, and that there are matters of account between the parties; it does not go farther than that; and it is only when you come to look at the facts on which the promise was made that you are enabled to see whether it is an account stated or not." Lubbock v. Tribe, 3 Mees. & W. 613, 1 Horn & H. 180.

A promise to replace a wood boat which had been sunk by negligence or on failing to do so to pay a certain sum of money will not amount to an account stated. Rutledge v. Moore, 9 Mo. 533.

An account cannot become stated between parties who have had no dealings with each other, since as between them no account in fact exists. Field v. Knapp, 108 N. Y. 67.

Where a loan is made on securities which fail because of the negligence of the broker to search the records and who promises to make good the loss to his client, there is no account stated since there can be an account stated only where a debt actually exists. Whitehead v. Howard, 5 J. B. Moore, 105, 2 Brod. & B. 272.

In Hopkins v. Logan, 5 Mees. & W. 241, 7 Dowl. P. C. 380, it is suggested that there must be something to show that the amount is due at the time of the accounting in order to make a good account stated.

In Burlingame v. Shelmire, 35 N. Y. S. R. 161, where the account rendered contained charges for personal services in receiving and shipping fruit, the court says the cases relating to this subject are those where an actual account has existed between the parties. But in cases where the prices are not agreed upon or where they are not fixed by the market but depended solely upon the personal services, the general rule relating to accounts stated does not necessarily prevail.

Where there has been no pre-existing debt or previous dealings between the parties the mere retention of a statement of a single transaction will not amount to an account stated. Mellon v. Campbell, 11 Pa. 415.

There must be an admission of a debt due. And a promise to pay an amount on a contract which is never carried out is not sufficient. Lemere v. Elliott, 6 Hurlst. & N. 655, 30 L. J. Exch. 359, 7 Jur. N. S. 1208, 4 L. T. N. S. 804.

But there is one case which in accordance with the cases which have held that the mere acknowledgment of indebtedness was sufficient has held that the pre-existence of a debt was not absolutely necessary.

Thus where at an auction sale a lot was knocked built by John Mays, and we are to pay him for it." And one Mrs. Kisor testified that during the summer of 1890, or about that time, at her father's house, in King's valley, defendant Ashnah Plunkett, in speaking of the fence built by said Mays, stated, in effect: "We have settled with the plaintiff for that fencing built by the Mays, and are to pay him [Vanbebbber] for it." The foregoing is substantially all the evidence adduced by plaintiff, and the counsel for defendants contend that it was insufficient to go to the jury to charge defendant Ashnah Plunkett in an action upon an account stated, and, consedown to a person who had not money enough to pay the deposit and entered into an arrangement by virtue of which he gave his L. O. U. to the auctioneer for the amount, it was held that there might be a recovery on an account stated. Cleave v. Moors, 3 Jur. N. S. 48.

In that case Martin, B., says in the old form of account stated there must be an antecedent debt, but if two persons agree to make a thing a debt, it is such between them and the transaction acts as a sort of estoppel.

Need not be signed.

Signing the account is not necessary. Retention of it is sufficient. Willis v. Jernegan, 2 Atk. 252; Brown v. Vandyke, 8 N. J. Eq. 795, 55 Am. Dec. 260.

An acknowledgment is sufficient to constitute an account stated, although the paper is not signed. Vinal v. Burrill, 16 Pick. 401.

May be oral.

An account stated need not be in writing. It may be verbal, or partly verbal and partly in writing. Watkins v. Ford, 69 Mich. 387.

There may be an oral statement of account which consists of many writings. Newhall v. Holt, 6 Mees. & W. 662.

Where a commission merchant's account has been rendered showing that a balance has been struck between the parties and an acknowledgment by the debtor of its correctness though made verbally between the parties, it becomes a closed account. James v. Fellowes, 20 La. Ann. 116.

But in contrast with the above it has been held that the account must be in writing and likewise the balance must be in writing. Wood v. Gault, 2 Md. Ch. 483.

Vouchers need not be surrendered.

The vouchers need not be delivered up to make it an account stated. Willis v. Jernegan, 2 Atk. 252.

With third person.

There seems to be no settled rule with reference to how far a person other than the debtor or creditor himself may give or receive the admission.

It has been held that loose declarations by a person at different times to third persons not agents of the plaintiff that he owed the plaintiff or was in honor bound to pay him a certain sum, are not sufficient to sustain a claim on account stated. Thurmond v. Sanders, 21 Ark. 255.

Admission by the debtor to a person who is not an agent of the creditor and had no authority to make any demand, that defendant was liable to pay plaintiff the rent for certain property, is no evidence of an account stated. Hoffar v. Dement, 5 Gill, 132, 46 Am. Dec. 623.

Evidence of an admission to a third person not shown to be an agent of the seller that the buyer owed the seller a certain amount will not be sufficient to constitute an account stated for the price of certain goods sold and delivered. Breckon v. Smith, 1 Ad. & El. 483.

One court held that admission by assignees of an insolvent that a certain amount of rent is due by him to the landlord will not constitute an account stated, since an account stated must be of transactions between the parties making it. Clarke v. Webb, 4 Tyrw. 673, 1 Crompt. M. & R. 29, 2 Dowl. P. C. 671.

So where an administratrix of the debtor admitted the correctness of the debt to the administratrix of the creditor, it was held no account stated, because the debt was not owing to or by either party in her own right. Peich v. Lyon, 9 Q. B. 147.

But in Anonymous, 1 Vent. 268, the principle of account stated was applied in case of an executor called upon to pay the debt of his testator.

Amongst merchants it is looked upon as an allowance of an account current, if the merchant that receives it does not object against it in a second or third post. Sherman v. Sherman, 2 Vern. 276.

There may be an account stated against a personal representative. Bucklin v. Chapin, 1 Lans. 443.

There may be an account stated between a debtor to a partnership and the survivors after the death of one partner so that an action can be maintained on it without alleging the death of the partner and the survivorship of plaintiff. Holmes v. DeCamp, 1 Johns. 34, 3 Am. Dec. 293.

One of the contracting parties and the administrator of the other may state an account. Vandever v. Statesir, 39 N. J. L. 593.

There may be an account stated between partners and representatives of a deceased partner. Campbell v. Campbell, 40 N. Y. S. R. 817.

There may be an account stated between a debtor and the administratrix of the creditor. Smith v. Forty, 4 Car. & P. 123.

Where a surviving partner renders an account to the representatives of the deceased partner without vouchers and showing results merely and not the details it will nevertheless become stated account if acquiesced in without any objection on those grounds and without any claim for vouchers, details, or explanations. Ogden v. Astor, 4 Sandf. 811.

There may be an account stated between a legatee under a will and a debtor to the estate, whose debt is the subject of the legacy. Topham v. Morecraft, 8 El. & Bl. 972, 4 Jur. N. S. 611.

So it was held that where after a debt is contracted the creditor takes a partner, after which more transactions are had and then an account is stated with both, they may maintain an action upon it, as well that part contracted before the partnership as afterwards. Moor v. Hill, Peake, Add. Cas. 10.

The clerk of a partnership cannot without authority state an account with a creditor of the firm so as to bind the parties. Brettel v. Williams, 4 Exch. 623, 19 L. J. Exch. 123.

A bookkeeper of a corporation has not by reason of his office power to state an account showing claims against the corporation which will bind it as upon an account stated. Harvey v. West-Side Elev. (Patented) R. Co. 12 Hun. 392.

But the rendition by a bookkeeper with defendant's knowledge of an account to defendant's workmen of the amount which the books show to be due them will become an account stated against defendant. Wiley v. Brigham, 16 Hun. 106.

Where a maker of a bill of exchange admitted to the agent of the unknown holder that the amount was due, and on a subsequent date after he had learned who the holder was, stated to the same agent that he could not pay the amount, it was held to be an account stated with the holder. Baynham v. Holt, 8 Jur. 963.

An account of tolls due may be validly stated, quently, that the judgment of nonsuit was properly granted. "A motion for a nonsuit," says Lord, Ch. J., in Brown v. Oregon Lumber Co., 24 Or. 317, "is in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence. It admits not only all that the evidence proves, but all that it tends to prove. The evidence given for the plaintiff must be taken to be true, together with every inference of fact which the jury might legally draw from it. Whether there is any evidence tending to prove the material allegations upon which a cause of action is based is a question of law for the court, but whether a given amount of evidence is sufwith a toll keeper who has not been appointed as required by act of parliament if the trustees or creditors of the turnpike have made no objection. Peacock v. Harris, 10 East, 107.

An account cannot be stated by a member of an old firm which has been succeeded by a new one of which he is also a member which fraudulently states that goods consigned to the old firm came into possession of the new one so as to bind the members of the new firm. Newhall v. Wyatt, 68 Hun, 1.

The fact that a statement of account is signed by an agent out of the territory for which he is appointed will not vitiate it if it pertained to business over which he had authority, nor will the fact that he affixed to his name a wrong designation affect its validity. Stowe v. Sewall, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 67.

An agreement between the merchant and husband as to the amount due for supplies furnished to the family will not constitute an account stated, as against the wife. Holmes v. Page, 19 Or. 232.

But a husband may bind his wife by an account stated between him and one who has furnished supplies for her plantation. Klots v. Butler, 56 Miss. 333.

If the clerk of one partner states an account between the partners showing a balance due the other the latter may treat it as prima facie evidence of the adjustment of the partnership transactions. Goodin v. Armstrong, 19 Ohio, 44.

Where a tradesman brought suit for goods furnished defendant and when the writ was served defendant told the officer that he would pay the amount in a short time, and an undated paper, proved to be in his writing, was given in evidence stating the transmission of $4, with a promise to pay the balance in the book in a week. It was held there was no evidence of an account stated. Moseley v. Reade, 10 Jur. 13.

An acknowledgment of the amount claimed in the writ after the action is brought will not be sufficient to support an account stated, if there is no evidence of any debt existing prior to the bringing of the action. Allen v. Cook, 2 Dowl. P. C. 543.

In Nutt v. United States, 125 U. S. 650, 31 L. ed. 321, it was contended that an amount found by the quartermaster general to be due to a claimant for war damages was equivalent to an account stated between private individuals, and that it became such upon its acceptance by congress and the claimant; but the court held that congress had not adopted the report as its statement of what was due by the United States and that the report was never submitted to the claimant as a correct statement of indebtedness, and that therefore it was not an account stated. But there is no discussion of the question whether or not such a statement could be an account stated under any circumstances.

The law of account stated does not apply to the statement by officers of the government of the indebtedness of a railroad to the United States. Central Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 145.

An account stated grows out of commercial transactions being the rendition of a running account by one party to the other, and his acceptance or acquiescence in its accuracy and amount. It is therefore in legal effect but the liquidation of fractional items into a single amount by the agreement of the parties express or implied. In the official reports of an accounting officer of the government there is no single element of account stated. Ibid.; Nutt v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 63.

Agreement must be reached.

Where two partners meet and agree as to some items of an account and disagree as to others and the disputed items are put down by clerks in their employ with the agreed items just as they were claimed and left undecided, that is not an account stated. Rehill v. McTane, 114 Pa. 327, 30 Am. Rep. 341.

A parol statement of accounts between persons without arriving at a balance is not binding as an account stated. Bouslog v. Garrett, 39 Ind. 333.

Where a factor rendered an account of sales and the consignor called on him for a more detailed statement of the transaction and paid something on account upon receiving a promise of such further statement which he wrote for from time to time but never received, there was no account stated. Carpenter v. Nickerson, 7 Daly, 424.

A statement of an account showing the account of an individual partner with the firm will not enable him to sue at law if there is nothing showing the amount the other partners owe him. Ferguson v. Wright, 61 Pa. 263.

Where a member of a banking company wrote the management that his account had not been debited with the amount of certain calls on his stock and that he "thought" he owed a certain sum which they would please charge to his account, to which no reply was made, there was no evidence of an account stated. Hughes v. Thorpe, 5 Mees. & W. 663.

Where after a contract of sale of certain stocks the title failed and it was then agreed that a certain portion of the purchase money should be paid and the remainder stand to pay the expenses of making good the title the amount of which was to be ascertained by the arbitrators, it was held that prior to the ascertainment of the expense of perfecting title, there was nothing which could support an action on an account stated. Baker v. Heard, 5 Exch. 939, 20 L. J. Exch. 444.

Where the acceptor of a bill on being asked for payment stated that the bill had been altered as to the place of payment, that he had been prepared to pay the amount, and that the money might be had by calling at his house, there is no such acknowledgment of a subsisting debt as to constitute an account stated. Calvert v. Baker, 4 Mees. & W. 417, 1 Horn & H. 404, 7 Dowl. P. C. 17, 2 Jur. 1020.

Where the indorser of a bill of exchange stated to the holder that he thought it would not be paid at maturity, but that he would send money in part payment of it at a future day, there was no evidence of an account stated, since at the time the promise was made there was nothing to show that there was a debt then due. Burgh v. Legge, 5 Mees. & W. 413, 3 Jur. 323; Bird v. Legge, 7 Dowl. P. C. 314.

That the amount is to be paid at some time in the future will not prevent the account from becoming an account stated, if a balance is struck and admitted to be correct. Baird v. Crank, 33 Cal. 293; Tuggle v. Minor, 76 Cal. 63.

Want of consent.

Balancing an account in a person's own books and carrying the balance forward does not constitute an account stated where there is no evidence ficient to sustain such allegations is a question of fact for the jury. When there is no evidence tending to sustain the plaintiff's cause of action, it is the duty of the court to grant the nonsuit, and withdraw the case from the jury." See also Herbert v. Dufur, 23 Or. 467. Shattuck, J., in Tippin v. Ward,

5 Or. 453, says: "A case should be submitted to the jury, unless there is an entire lack of evidence tending to maintain the issues on behalf of the plaintiff, or unless, upon the whole case made by the plaintiff himself, it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff has no right to recover." Southwell that it was done with the consent of the other party. Nostrand v. Ditmas, 127 N. Y. 356.

Balancing an account on one's own books done without the consent of the other party, is not a stated account in law. Loventhal v. Morris (Ala.) May 22, 1894.

But the assent may be implied. Hendy v. March, 75 Cal. 566.

Refusal to pay.

Where one item of the account is objected to and all future dealings between the parties and the final statement are made with the understanding that that item remains open and unsettled, there is no account stated in regard to it. Dudley v. Geauga Iron Co. 13 Ohio St. 168.

A statement of a claim for damages because of an alleged breach of contract to sell and deliver a certain kind of material which the seller claims to have fulfilled does not by retention become an account stated. Fraley v. Bispham, 10 Pa. 320, 51 Am. Dec. 466.

There can be no account stated if the debtor at all times disputes the amount of the claim. Hall v. Morrison, 3 Bosw. 620.

If the debtor dissents from the balance found, there is no account stated. Cape Girardeau & S. L. R. Co. v. Kimmel, 58 Mo. 83.

Where defendant insisted that nothing was due from him and it was agreed that the balance might be ascertained by referees, which was never done, there was no account stated. Reinhardt v. Hines, 51 Miss. 344.

The refusal upon receiving an account to pay it, claiming an offset coupled with a subsequent payment into court of a portion of the amount claimed in the account does not make an account stated as to the whole of the demand. Kennedy v. Withers, 3 Barn. & Ad. 787.

But the repudiation of the debt before any statement is rendered is not conclusive that the retention of an account subsequently rendered has not ripened into an account stated. Putnam v. Peabody, 11 N. Y. Weck. Dig. 440.

But see contra, Edwards v. Hoeflinghoff, 38 Fed. Rep. 635, infra, under Effect of objection to rendered account.

Offer to pay less than claim.

An offer to pay a sum less than the sum claimed, if not accepted, cannot be used to prove an account stated for the larger sum claimed. Atkinson v. Woodall, 81 L. J. M. C. 174.

Where upon demand by an outgoing tenant for $40 to pay for growing crops, the incoming tenant offered to pay $17, this was held to be no account stated. Wayman v. Hilliard, 7 Bing. 104, 4 Moore & P. 729.

Compulsion.

An admission to assignees in bankruptcy of having received a sum from the bankrupt at a certain time, made under a compulsory examination, is not an account stated. Tucker v. Barrow, 7 Barn. & C. 623, 1 Mann. & R. 518, Moody & M. 139, 3 Car. & P. 55, 89.

A receipt signed by the captain of a vessel upon receiving from the consignee of a payment of freight less certain tonnage dues which he claimed the charterers must pay but which the consignees refused to pay, but which must be paid before the vessel could be cleared from the port, will not constitute an account stated as against the charterer. Smith v. Drew, 10 Ben. 616

37 L. R. A.

Obtaining acquiescence in the rendered account by threatening to sell certain property which the creditor has in pledge from the debtor will not make the account an account stated since the acquiescence is not voluntary. Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480.

There is no account stated where upon presentation of a claim the debtor expresses surprise at the amount and declares that it belongs to another person and after suggesting possible defenses promised to pay to avoid trouble. Stephens v. Ayers, 57 Hun, 51.

Conditional promise.

The assent, whether express or implied, must not be qualified by any condition or contingency which relieves it from the character of a promise to pay the amount. Where parties act together and reduce an account to a balance by agreement, such balance may amount to an account stated, although there may exist some outstanding independent claim which one of the parties at the time signifies his intention to produce as an offset against the balance, or as a demand in addition to the balance so agreed upon. But this can be so only when such unconsidered demand is an independent matter, having no connection with or relation to the subject-matter, the items of which are resolved into a sum certain by the agreement of the parties. State v. Hartman Steel Co. 51 N. J. L. 446.

A qualified acknowledgment is not sufficient. Evans v. Verity, Ryan & M. 239.

An acknowledgment by trustees for the separate use of a wife, that they have money which they hold to her separate use, but which they refuse to pay over without her separate receipt, does not constitute an account stated which would support an action by husband and wife for the money. Bond v. Nurse, 16 L. J. Q. B. 196, L. R. 10 Q. B. Div. 244, 11 Jur. 655.

If a part only of the items of an account are settled no account stated will arise as to those items nor will it arise on a promise to pay one account upon an unaccepted condition that the other party shall pay or allow a counterclaim arising out of the same transactions. State v. Hartman Steel Co. supra.

Where parties settle a disputed claim by striking a balance which the debtor promises to pay when able, an action to recover the balance is not an action upon an account stated, but upon the promise, and in order to recover ability to pay must be shown. Work v. Beach, 37 N. Y. S. R. 547, 53 Hun, 9, 35 N. Y. S. R. 22.

But the mere fact that the debtor refused to pay the balance unless an agreement is made as to other transactions between the parties will not prevent the account as to which the balance is struck from being an account stated. White v. Whiting, 8 Daly, 23.

Objection to some items.

That one item is disputed will not prevent the amount of the others from becoming an account stated. Mulford v. Caesar, 53 Mo. App. 233.

The objection to some only of the items in the account will admit the others to be correct. Joseph v. Southwark Foundry & Mach. Co. 90 Ala. 47; Buros v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 236; Tuggle v. Minor, 76 Cal. 96.

The acknowledgment of one part of the amount will be an account stated. Allen v. Cook, 3 Dowl. & C. 545.

v. Beasley, 5 Or. 458, and Grant v. Baker, 12 Or. 381. The doctrine now established by precedents has come to this: The court is the exclusive judge of the competency of evidence offered to prove a fact under the issues. If competent, and its tendency, however slight, is to prove such fact, the jury ought to have it, as they are the exclusive judges of its sufficiency. Hence a total failure of competent proof of some material allegation of the complaint will entitle the court to withdraw the case from the jury, and grant a nonsuit on motion of defendant. Grant v. Baker, supra.

But in a New Jersey case it was said that the notion that there can be an account stated of certain items of an account while other items of the same account are questioned and left open for further adjustment and litigation, cannot be supported by any rational view of the nature of an account stated. It confounds every admission with an account stated. State v. Hartman Steel Co. 51 N. J. L. 446.

Arbitration or court proceedings.

Where there is a regular submission to arbitrators their award is not an account stated. Bates v. Townley, 2 Exch. 153, 19 L. J. Exch. 399, 12 Jur. 606.

Proof of an award and an admission of the amount due will sustain a count upon an account stated. Buschman v. Morling, 30 Md. 384.

An account stated cannot be based on an appraisal where it does not appear that both parties mutually agree on the appraisers or recognize them as authorized to bind them by their action. Chicago & C. S. R. Co. v. Peters, 45 Mich. 686.

A statement of account produced before arbitrators who have been appointed by the parties to settle the accounts between them, which is shown to have been gone over by the parties without objection except as to one item, may go to the jury as evidence of a stated account. Tams v. Lewis, 43 Pa. 402.

Where a bankrupt and his creditor attended before the commissioners, and the bankrupt objected to some of the items on the creditor's account, and the commissioners checked off those which they allowed, to which the bankrupt made no objection, it was held that his conduct was evidence that he admitted the balance found by them to be due. Jarrett v. Leonard, 2 Maule & S. 266, 2 Rose, Bankr. Cas. 263.

Where matters of dispute are submitted to arbitration, but not on bond, and the arbitrators make an award, the transaction will amount to a statement of an account between the parties. Keen v. Batshore, 1 Esp. 194.

A statement of account contained in an answer to a bill in equity filed in another court which was dismissed is not an account stated and if the statement thus made is afterward accepted as correct it will not oust the jurisdiction of equity to compel the rendition of account. Adam's App. 113 Pa. 449.

Mistake.

There is no account stated if it is rendered under a mistake or misapprehension. Polhemus v. Helman, 50 Cal. 438.

If the acknowledgment is procured by misrepresentation there is no account stated. Upton v. Bedlow, 4 Daly, 516.

A promise by the executors to pay a debt of testator's which they erroneously supposed to be due will not constitute an account stated. Gough v. Findon, 7 Exch. 48, 21 L. J. Exch. 58.

In Kinney v. Heatley, 18 Or. 35, it was held that the retention by a shipper of canned fish on the Pacific coast to England should not be bound as upon an account stated by retaining accounts in which he was charged with bad condition of the fish upon its arrival at its destination, when the bad condition was caused by a peculiar stress of weather and the heat of the rest of the cargo, of which facts he did not learn until some time after he had received and acquiesced in the account.

Exception of errors.

The expression, "errors excepted," does not preclude it being an account stated. Johnson v. Curtis, 3 Bro. Ch. 266.

The placing upon the statement of the words "errors and omissions excepted," will not prevent the account from becoming stated. Fleischner v. Kubli, 20 Or. 823.

The insertion of the statement that errors and omissions are excepted is immaterial. Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 263.

Placing the letters E. and O. E., meaning errors and omissions excepted, on the account rendered does not prevent its becoming an account stated by its retention for the proper length of time. Kent v. Highleyman, 28 Mo. App. 614.

Effect upon person rendering.

It is sometimes held that if the bill as presented is not accepted it is no more binding on the one presenting it than on the other party.

Thus presenting a bill in which a gross sum is charged for services which is not acquiesced in any further than is shown by the fact that it is not objected to will not make an account stated which will preclude the recovery of a greater amount for the services if they are shown to be worth more. Williams v. Glenn, 16 N. Y. 389; Stryker v. Cassidy, 75 N. Y. 50, 53 Am. Rep. 232; Bronson v. Hoffman, 7 Hun, 675; Harrison v. Ayers, 18 Hun, 336.

A mere rendition of a bill for services will not preclude a recovery of a larger amount than is claimed in the bill. Nauman v. Zoerblaut, 21 Wis. 466.

The conclusiveness of the account does not apply against the one rendering it. Thus where one tenant in common rendered an account to the other and paid the amount shown to be due, it was held on the subsequent accountings he could show overpayment. Schettler v. Smith, 2 Jones & B. 17.

But in other cases it seems to be held that the mere rendition of a bill is conclusive upon the one rendering it.

Thus where an agent for certain real estate left word at the bank where he was in the habit of leaving money due his principal that he would pay in $10 upon the principal's giving him a receipt for $27, expended for repairs on the estate, which was never given, it was held that the agent had stated an account against himself, which he could not dispute upon being sued for the $10. Roper v. Holland, 3 Ad. & El. 63, 4 Nev. & M. 603, 1 Hurlst. & W. 107.

So where a person who negotiates a sale of land presents a bill for his services he cannot afterwards recover more than the amount so claimed. Daniels v. Wilber, 60 Ill. 536.

A painter who undertakes to superintend the painting of the house of another gratuitously, and who after the work is finished sends in the bill for the cost, payment of which is refused, cannot afterwards recover a larger amount for his time. Ayland v. Rice, 23 La. Ann. 75.

But in that case the ruling was placed upon the ground that there had never been any agreement to pay for his time and consequently there was nothing upon which to base a recovery.

Character of account necessary.

Number of items.

If the charges are all on one side it is sufficient if there is an acknowledgment or admission express or implied of a certain sum due, and there may be a stated account of the claims of one person only.

The question now recurs, Was it competent for the plaintiff to prove, under his declaration upon an account stated, the facts set forth in his bill of exceptions? Or, in other words, was the evidence introduced competent to support his cause of action as stated? This involves an examination of the question as to whether the facts of the case, giving them the full force claimed by plaintiff, constitute an account stated. The prior liability of the defendants to plaintiff was upon contract, and for breach thereof. The defendants had failed to construct certain fencing which they had agreed to make, for which although the other may have counter-demands which are not deducted. Ware v. Manning, 86 Ala. 228.

There may be an account stated although the items are only on one side of the account. Styart v. Rowland, 1 Show. 215; Kook v. Bonitz, 4 Daly, 117.

An account may be stated when there is only one item. Higmore v. Primrose, 5 Maule & S. 65.

There need not be items on both sides of the account. It is sufficient if there is one item on one side only and a bill rendered and retained without objection. Cobb v. Arundell, 26 Wis. 553.

Character of debt.

There can be no statement of account which will sustain assumption of the balance due on a specialty contract. Gilson v. Stewart, 7 Watts, 100.

The statement of the amount due on a mortgage will not support an action upon an account stated. Middleditch v. Ellis, 2 Exch. 633.

But in Massachusetts it was held that where two persons draw out an account of the sums due from each to the other, and on the same paper execute an instrument under seal with a penalty agreeing that the paper contained every claim which either had against the other, and that when the account should be balanced all the securities against each other should be canceled, the agreement would support an action on an instrument computant. Hoyt v. Wilkinson, 10 Pick. 81.

A claim which is absolutely void by reason of illegality or immorality in the consideration cannot be relied on in support of an account upon an account stated. Kennedy v. Brown, 13 C. B. N. S. 677, 32 L. J. C. P. 137, 9 Jur. N. S. 119, 7 L. T. N. S. 623, 11 Week. Rep. 234.

The binding effect of a statement of account will not be defeated by the fact that there were items included which could not have been recovered at law. Dawson v. Remnant, 6 Esp. 24.

To circumvent statute.

There may be an account stated between a vendor and vendee of land. Neff v. Wooding, 33 Va. 432.

Where after the making of a contract to purchase real estate the seller presented to the buyer a statement of the amount due, on which he wrote an acknowledgment that the account was correct, it was held to constitute an account stated. Yates v. Gardiner, 20 L. J. Exch. 327.

The purchase price of land of which possession has been given under a contract void under the statute of frauds may be recovered under an account stated, made by the parties after possession was taken. Cooking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858, 15 L. J. C. P. 246.

A binding promise to pay the debt of a third person which is fixed at a definite amount will support a count for an account stated. Morse v. Allen, 44 N. H. 33.

An admission of a claim upon a promise to pay the debt of another, void under the statute of frauds, will not bind the persons making the admission on an account stated. French v. French, 2 Mann. & G. 644, 3 Scott, N. R. 121, 5 Jur. 410.

A promise to pay a liability which has become due to pay the debt of another, but which is not enforceable under the statute of frauds, is not sufficient to constitute an account stated. Wilson v. Marshall, 14 Week. Rep. 609, 2 Ir. C. L. Rep. 354.

An account cannot be stated so as to take out of 27 L. R. A.

the statute of frauds a case by which one person agrees to rent the farm of another for fourteen years and take the crops then growing thereon and pay the value thereof, if the statement of the amount to be paid is attempted before the crops are out. Falmouth v. Thomas, 1 Cramp. & M. 89, 3 Tyrw. 26.

When mortgagor and mortgagee meet at a lawyer's office and have him make an estimate of the amount due on a mortgage, which he does, and agree to the amount as stated, it will become an account stated. Killors v. Stephens, 66 Wis. 571.

Where a tenant admitted that a certain amount of rent was due, it was held to sustain an action for account stated, although it appeared that he held under a written instrument which was not produced or accounted for. Arthur v. Dartoh, 9 Jur. 118.

If a suit for attorney's services fails because not presented as required by statute, there can be no recovery upon an account stated. Brooks v. Bookett, 9 Q. B. 847, 16 L. J. Q. B. 178, 11 Jur. 284; Scadding v. Eyles, 9 Q. B. 858, 15 L. J. Q. B. 364, 10 Jur. 945.

Where a bill for attorney's charges was not delivered as required by statute, it was held that the admission of the amount claimed in a proceeding before bankruptcy commissioners was not sufficient to constitute an account stated. Elicke v. Nokes, 4 Moore & S. 585, 1 Moody & R. 359.

In Ashby v. Ashby, 3 Moore & P. 183, where a promissory note was not valid because not on paper properly stamped, it was held that since defendant had acknowledged that he owed the amount, although there was no reference to the note and the acknowledgment was made to a third person, the action could be maintained on an account stated.

Admitting that a certain amount is due and promising to pay in installments and giving a writing containing the promise, is an account stated and may support an action as such, although the writing is void as not containing a stamp. Singleton v. Barrett, 2 Cramp. & J. 363.

Who may state accounts.

In Pratt v. Weyman, 1 McCord, Eq. 156, in which the question of the conclusiveness of the statement of the account was determined, the court intimated that the character of the parties who state the account may be material in determining its binding effect.

Married woman.

A married woman cannot state an account. Johnson v. Lucas, 1 El. & Bl. 659, 23 L. J. Q. B. 174, 17 Jur. 1086.

An account cannot be stated by husband and wife on one side with another person unless it is in regard to a matter in which the wife is interested. Ibid.

There can be no account stated between husband and wife. Southwick v. Southwick, 1 Sweeny, 47, affirmed, 49 N. Y. 510.

Infant.

An infant cannot bind himself by stating an account. Trueman v. Hurst, 1 T. R. 40; Bartlett v. Emery, Id. 42, note.

An account stated by an infant is not evidence even of the fact that he was supplied with the goods mentioned in it. Ingledeu v. Douglas, 2 Starke, 33.

The statement of an account by an infant is void.

failure they became liable in damages. This, be it understood, was the nature of defendants' prior liability to plaintiff. Now, it is claimed that there was an account stated about July 1, 1889, of the differences existing between plaintiff and defendants, and that defendants undertook and agreed to pay plaintiff an ascertained balance of $300,—the amount which plaintiff had paid to Mays for constructing said fencing. This is the foundation of the present action. "When two persons, having had monetary transactions together, close the account by agreeing to the balance appearing to be due from one of able merely. Williams v. Moor, 11 Mees. & W. 256, 2 Dowl. N. S. 993, 12 L. J. Exch. 253, 7 Jur. 817.

Illiterate or infirm person.

An illiterate person will not be bound by an account of the terms of which he had no knowledge. Guenivet v. Perret, 18 La. Ann. 356.

If one has health to understand all the material facts which appear on the face of an account and does understand them, the state of his health physically is sufficient for the occasion. Wilson v. Friable, 57 Ga. 299.

Banker and depositor.

There may be an account stated between banker and customer. Manhattan County v. Lydig, 4 Johns. 377, 4 Am. Dec. 230; Hutchinson v. Market Bank of Troy, 48 Barb. 302.

In Willis v. Jernegan, 2 Atk. 252, the account between banker and customer is referred to as a stated account.

In Williamson v. Williamson, L. R. 7 Eq. 542, the balance in a bank pass-book was treated as an account stated.

In Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 93, 29 L. ed. 811, which was an action by a bank depositor to recover the amount which the bank had paid out on forged checks, the court says it is a suit by the depositor in effect to falsify a stated account to the injury of the bank. But the case is not decided on the principle of account stated, but upon that of estoppel and the general rules governing the relations of bank and depositor.

In Weisser v. Denison, 10 N. Y. 76, 61 Am. Dec. 731, where the question of the conclusiveness of the writing up of a bank pass-book was under consideration, the court held that the most that can be claimed is that the writing up of a bank pass-book was a stating of an account by the bank, and that the depositor by retaining the account after a reasonable time for its examination had elapsed without objection must be deemed to have acquiesced in it and admitted it to be correct and so equally bound by it as by a stated account. And a similar ruling was made in Welsh v. German American Bank, 73 N. Y. 428, 29 Am. Rep. 175; Frank v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 213, 38 Am. Rep. 501.

In National Board of Marine Underwriters v. National Bank of the Republic, 9 Misc. 552, it was held that the doctrine of account stated did not apply to accounts rendered by a bank to its customer so as concluded him as to the fact that checks were paid to the right person.

The account stated by a bank to its depositor places upon him the burden of showing fraud or mistake in order to enable him to dispute the balance shown by it. Shipman v. Bank of the State of New York, 12 L. R. A. 791, 126 N. Y. 820.

The balancing of a bank pass-book and retention and cancelling of the checks is a settlement of the account. Peddicord v. Connard, 85 Ill. 102.

Entries in a bank pass-book do not constitute an account stated if the depositor within a reasonable time after they are made makes objections to them. Schneider v. Irving Bank, 1 Daly, 500.

Writing up a banker's pass-book and its retention without objection make it an account stated. Clark v. Mechanics Nat. Bank, 11 Daly, 239, 15 N. Y. Week. Dig. 505.

But the doctrine of retention merely of an account rendered has not been applied with its full effect to accounts between bank and depositor.

27 L. R. A.

An account between banker and customer, although balanced monthly, which is carried on for a period of years, constitutes together a running account and is in effect but one transaction. Pickett v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346.

In Ex parte Randleston, 2 Deacon & Ch. 584, it was held that a banker's pass-book in which the entries were only on one side, could not be held to be a stated account merely because the customer had assented to them.

Acquiescence in banker's balances does not amount to a settlement of account. Moses v. Salt, 32 Beav. 299; Clancarty v. Latouche, 1 Ball & B. 423.

On the other side, it has been held that balances of accounts on a banker's ledger, which are copied on the customer's pass-book every month and not objected to, will be regarded as account stated. Marye v. Strouse, 5 Sawy. 204, 5 Fed. Rep. 483.

Omitting to object to the state of the account shown in the bank pass-book for six years is such an unreasonable delay that the matter cannot be submitted to the jury as to whether it is accounted for. Hutchinson v. Market Bank of Troy, 48 Barb. 302.

But where after a depositor became a lunatic his account continued to be kept by his family and the pass-book was balanced as usual, it was held after his death that the balances could not be used as accounts stated as against his administrator, since there had been no account stated with the lunatic himself or with any one authorized to represent him. Tarbut v. Bispham, 2 Mees. & W. 7.

Partners.

Partners may state an account among themselves. Millaudon v. Sylvestre, 8 La. 257; Henry v. Chapman (Tex.) May 7, 1891; Stevens v. Bars, 74 Hun. 388; Kingsley v. Melcher, 56 Hun. 547; Lloyd v. Carrier, 2 Lane. 394; Powell v. Noye, 23 Barb. 184; Wilde v. Jenkins, 4 Paige, 481, 8 L. ed. 524; Cochrane v. Allen, 58 N. H. 250; Harrison v. Farrington, 40 N. J. Eq. 353; Dickinson v. Granger, 18 Pick. 315; Andrews v. Allen, 9 Serg. & R. 241; Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 473; Moravia v. Levy, Id. 483, note; Clarke v. Glennie, 3 Starkie, 10; Wray v. Milestone, 5 Mees. & W. 21.

Partners may state an account as to a branch only of the partnership transactions. Gibson v. Moore, 6 N. H. 547.

It was held that the adjustment of partnership accounts is valid and a settlement, in Peteet v. Crawford, 51 Miss. 48.

The principle of account stated is applicable between partners but the making of a mere balance sheet showing the state of the firm's affairs and not purporting to be a statement of the accounts of the partners as between themselves will not constitute an account stated. Bambrick v. Simms, 102 Mo. 158.

A statement of accounts between partners showing the amount of profits that had been made but which fails to state in whose hands they are or the amount each partner is entitled to receive or whether the partners had received the capital they had put in or had accounted for funds drawn out, will not be an account stated which will enable one partner to sue at law. Burns v. Nottingham, 60 Ill. 531.

Factor and consignor.

There may be an account stated between a factor and his consignor. Smith v. Marvin, 27 N. Y. 137; them, this is called an 'account stated.' It is of importance from the fact that it operates as an admission of liability by the person against whom the balance appears; or, in the language of the common law, 'the law implies that he against whom the balance appears has engaged to pay it to the other, and on this implied promise or admission an action may be brought.' 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 110. Wells, J., in Chace v. Trafford, 116 Mass. 529, 17 Am. Rep. 171, says: "An account stated is an acknowledgment of the existing condition of liability between the parties. From it the law

Brown v. Vandyke, 8 N. J. Eq. 795, 55 Am. Dec. 250; Austin v. Ricker, 61 N. H. 97; Wittowski v. Harris, 61 Fed. Rep. 712; Eichel v. Sawyer, 44 Fed. Rep. 845; Dows v. Durfee, 10 Barb. 213; Mertens v. Nottebohm, 4 Gratt. 163.

Broker and customer.

There may be an account stated between a broker and a customer. Lawson v. Douglass, 43 N. Y. S. R. 356; Beach v. Kidder, 28 N. Y. S. R. 500; Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 490; Champion v. Joelyn, 44 N. Y. 663.

Attorney and client.

There may be an account stated between attorney and client. Case v. Hotchkiss, 8 Keyes, 334, 37 How. Pr. 285; Gruby v. Smith, 13 Ill. App. 43.

A recovery of an attorney's fee may be had under a count for an account stated on proof of the performance of the services, and defendant's subsequent admission to a third person, not the attorney's agent, that he was indebted to the attorney in a specified sum for the services. Wharton v. Cain, 50 Ala. 406.

Officers.

The doctrine of accounts stated is not generally applied to the accounts of public officers.

But the doctrine of accounts stated appears to have been held to be applicable to officer's accounts, in Milwaukee County Supra v. Hackett, 21 Wis. 612.

And in Alabama it was held that a statement of his accounts by a tax collector to the county and its retention by the county for thirty-five days, will not make an account stated. Lott v. Mobile County, 79 Ala. 69.

Other cases.

A trustee and cestui que trust may state an account. Roper v. Holland, 3 Ad. & El. 99, 4 Nev. & M. 668, 1 Hurst. & W. 167; Howard v. Brownhill, 28 L. J. Q. B. 23, 2 C. L. Rep. 125.

An account may be stated between guardian and ward. Driggs v. Garretson, 25 N. J. Eq. 173.

There may be an account stated between landlord and tenant. Cartledge v. West, 2 Denio, 373.

A landlord and his agent for the collection of rents may become bound on a stated account. Phillips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch. 1, 6 L. ed. 236.

A landlord and receiver of rents may state an account. Davison v. Hanslop, T. Raym. 211.

There may be an account stated upon a claim for personal services. Baird v. Crank, 98 Cal. 293.

A statement of the amount due for personal services may have the effect of an account stated. Paulsen v. Schultz, 85 Cal. 538.

There may be an account stated for work and labor done (Sherkey v. Mansfield, 90 N. Y. 227, 43 Am. Rep. 161; Holler v. Apa, 43 N. Y. S. R. 529; McFarland v. Cutter, 1 Mont. 383; Warner v. Myrick, 16 Minn. 91); and for work done and materials furnished. Albrecht v. Gies, 33 Mich. 389.

There may be an account stated between insurer and insured as to the amount of loss under the policy. Smith v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. 66 Barb. 556.

There may be an account stated as to stone delivered to a contractor and a boat damaged in delivering the stone. Towsley v. Denison, 45 Barb. 490.

Effect to change contract or create debt.

If a special contract fixes the price of a commodity at a certain sum, the seller cannot render 27 L. R. A.

the buyer liable for a greater amount by rendering bills with the charges at a greater price although the buyer does not make any objections to them on that ground. Kusterer Brewing Co. v. Fiar, 99 Mich. 190.

A monthly statement of the amount due for getting out logs, which is approved, will not preclude the one rendering it from afterwards claiming the contract price for the work which is $1 per thousand higher than claimed in the statement. Gallinger v. Lake Shore Traffic Co. 87 Wis. 529.

There can be no liability on an account stated if no liability in fact exists. The mere presentation of a claim although not objected to cannot of itself create a liability. Austin v. Wilson, 33 N. Y. S. R. 508.

Subsequent events.

Looking over accounts and then giving a note for a balance found to be due, which states that if any more claims come in they may be deducted from the amount of the note will make the balance found an account stated. Moody v. Thwing, 46 Minn. 511.

Where after the rendition of an account there are payments from time to time, the creditor cannot sue for the balance as an account stated without rendering an account showing the amount claimed to be due after deducting the payments. Loventhal v. Morris (Ala.) May 22, 1894.

The fact that the debtor claims a sum due him on a former account which is to be deducted from the balance found will not prevent the balance found from being an account stated. Filer v. Peebles, 8 N. H. 223.

A proposal to extend time of payment, not accepted by the debtor, together with a sale of collateral securities, will not alter the nature of the transaction as an account stated. Lawson v. Douglass, 43 N. Y. S. R. 356.

That after the account is stated one of the parties receives something of value which ought to be credited on the account of the other person, will not prevent the action from proceeding on the account stated, but there may be a credit allowed on the amount which is found to be due. Vinal v. Burrill, 16 Pick. 401.

Retention of rendered account.

The retention for an unreasonable time without objection was at a very early time given the effect of a stated account when the transactions were between merchants, and the doctrine has been extended in most jurisdictions so that at the present time it embraces the accounts between all classes of persons generally.

It is not necessary in order to give the accounts the weight and quality of stated accounts that they should have been examined and approved. Greene v. Harris, 11 R. I. 5.

Courts of equity in adjusting mutual dealings between merchants established the rule that the rendition of an account and its retention by the party to whom sent, without objection within a reasonable time, should have the force and effect of a stated account, and be presumed correct until the contrary is clearly made to appear. Witkowski v. Harris, 64 Fed. Rep. 712.

When one merchant sends an account current to another residing in a different country between whom there are mutual dealings and he keeps it two years without making any objection, it should implies a promise to pay whatever balance is thus acknowledged to be due. It thereby becomes a new and independent cause of action so far as that a recovery may be had upon it without setting forth or proving the separate items of liability from which the balance results." And says Mr. Greenleaf:

be deemed an account stated, and his silence and acquiescence, shall bind him at least so far as to cast the onus probandi on him. Freeland v. Heron, 11 U. S. 7 Cranoh, 147, 8 L. ed. 297.

The fact that the account was not made out between the parties but that one made it out and sent it to the other who received and acquiesced in it, will not prevent its being a stated account. Toland v. Sprague, 87 U. S. 12 Pet. 384, 9 L. ed. 1107.

An account rendered and not objected to within a reasonable time is to be regarded as admitted by the person charged to be prima facie correct. Wiggins v. Burkham, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 120, 19 L. ed. 585.

Between merchants at home an account which has been presented and no objection made thereto after the lapse of several posts is treated under ordinary circumstances as being by acquiescence a stated account. Ibid.

If a merchant neglects over a reasonable time to object to an account current he is deemed to acquiesce in it and it is treated as an account stated. Richmond Mfg. Co. v. Starks, 4 Mason, 297.

Long acquiescence in letters containing accounts is prima facie evidence of an acquiescence in their contents. Hopkirk v. Page, 2 Brook. 20.

Where an author receives from a publisher a statement of his account and promises to examine it and correct it, he will become liable upon it, as an account stated, if he retains it for several weeks without objection and then gives an acceptance for the amount. Weed v. Dyer, 58 Ark. 155.

Leaving an account with defendant five years before trial, and repeatedly importuning him for payment, heat no time making any objection to any item in the account and finally going out of business is sufficient to justify a finding of account stated. House v. Beak, 48 Ill. App. 615.

Keeping a bill for the price of labor for over a month and then rendering a counter-bill in which credit is given for the former one will render the amount of the former one conclusive unless it can be impeached for fraud or mistake. Bewick v. Butterfield, 60 Mich. 203.

An account stated is shown by proof that one person mailed to the other a statement of the account between them and that the other admitted its receipt and promised to pay the balance shown thereby. McCormack v. Sawyer, 104 Mo. 38.

An account is to be considered as liquidated after a demand of payment with knowledge of what is claimed upon the part of the debtor and without objection by him; or after it has been rendered to him without objection to it upon his part within a reasonable time. Henderson Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Lowell Machine Shops, 86 Ky. 668.

An account is to be considered as liquidated when rendered if no objections are made to it. Walden v. Sherburne, 15 Johns. 409; Beiers v. Reynolds, 12 Barb. 238.

Accounts rendered monthly and after examination retained without objection constitutes accounts stated. Manchester Paper Co. v. Moore, 104 N. Y. 680.

Rendering a balance claimed to be due after rendering monthly statements of accounts may become an account stated. Robbins v. Downey, 45 N. Y. S. R. 379.

It is not necessary that objection to the correctness of an account should be made at the time of 97 L. R. A.

"The admission must have reference to past transactions; that is, to a subsisting debt, or to a moral obligation, founded on an extinguished legal obligation to pay a certain sum." 2 Greenl. Ev. § 126. "An account stated is commonly called 'an admission of a debt,' but it is merely evidence of it."

asking or receiving the balance struck. The party is not precluded from impeaching it within a reasonable time to be determined from all the attending circumstances. Lookwood v. Thorne, 18 N. Y. 236.

Rendering monthly statements of the amounts due to which the debtor makes no objection but gives his due-bill for the amount will constitute an account stated. Mackay v. Kahn, 44 N. Y. S. R. 236.

In Reading Fire Ins. & Trust Co. v. Reading Iron Works, 187 Pa. 232, it was held that where accounts were furnished annually by a corporation to its stockholders showing the state of their accounts with the company, a stockholder who annually for eight years received such a statement without intimating that it was incorrect, must be considered as consenting to its accuracy.

The principle of account stated was applied in McCulloch v. Judd, 20 Ala. 703, where the debtor came to the office of an attorney in whose hands a number of accounts had been placed for collection and after examining the one against him made no objection to it.

A request by an attorney for payment of his bill, followed by a promise to pay, will amount to an account stated. Pulliam v. Booth, 21 Ark. 420.

Rendering an account to a father for goods purchased by his son and its retention by him without objection will make it an account stated as to him which will preclude the objection that the son had no authority to bind the father by the purchase. Avery v. Leach, 9 Hun, 106.

Retention of the account makes the account liquidated. Field v. Reid, 21 Ga. 314.

Where a person on receiving the account took it with him promising to look it over but neglecting to do so, in the meantime writing that he would pay the balance and trying to fix some terms of credit, it was held to have become a stated account. Powell v. Noye, 28 Barb. 184.

In Quincey v. White, 63 N. Y. 370, it is intimated that to give an account delivered the force of an account stated because of silence on the part of the party receiving it the circumstances must be such as to justify an inference of assent upon his part to its correctness. Where he has disclaimed all liability upon the account he is not bound to examine the items upon its delivery to him and his omission to object will not be taken as an admission of their correctness.

If the creditor exhibits to the debtor his books containing a detailed statement of the account between them showing the balance which was examined by the debtor without objection and the account left to stand a year and a half without objection, it is an account stated. Rich v. Eldredge, 42 N. H. 153.

Where a bank received a check for collection and forwarded it to its correspondent from which it received a notification of its payment and credited the amount to its customer but was afterwards informed that the check was not paid, and attempted to charge it back to the customer who would not permit it, and accounts were then rendered for two years without any mention of it, there was an account stated which precluded the bank from afterwards looking to the customer for the amount. Harley v. Eleventh Ward Bank, 7 Daly, 476, affirmed, 76 N. Y. 618.

Retention by one person of a statement of ac-

Re Laycock v. Pickles, 4 Best & S. 504. Lord, J., in Truman v. Owens, 17 Or. 527, after citing many authorities, concludes that: "To constitute an account stated it must appear that the plaintiff and defendant accounted together on their mutual demands, or of the demands of the plaintiff against the defendant, and upon the accounting there was found due to the plaintiff from the defendant the amount claimed. It will be noted, then, that the account stated relates to some previous transactions or dealings between the parties, or to some article or articles formerly sold by one to the other, and that the relation of account in which he is charged with items of indebtedness incurred by a third person for which he was not responsible will not make the account conclusive against him as an account stated. Spangler v. Springer, 22 Pa. 454.

A letter containing an account if rendered by one to the other of the parties to the account and retained by the latter without objection within a reasonable time will be evidence of the correctness of the account. Smith v. Kennedy, 1 Wash. Terr. 55.

Retaining the statement of the account without objection and using the check sent to pay the balance will render the account stated as against the receiver. Schuyler v. Ross, 57 N. Y. S. R. 805.

Receiving and using a check for the balance of an account sent with a statement of the account will bind the one receiving it although at the time he received it he objected to the messenger who brought it that it was too small. Davenport v. Wheeler, 7 Cow. 221.

The retention of an account rendered will make the account a stated account. Ruffner v. Hewitt, 1 W. Va. 585; Lawson v. Douglass, 43 N. Y. S. R. 356; Manell v. Payne, 18 La. Ann. 124; Keane v. Branden, 12 La. Ann. 20; Thompson v. Mylne, 4 La. Ann. 206; Freeman v. Howell, 4 La. Ann. 195, 50 Am. Dec. 551; White v. Henderson, 2 La. Ann. 241; Terry v. Stokes, 13 Cal. 427; Lawrence v. Ellsworth, 41 Ark. 502; Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271; Hirschfelder v. Levy, 60 Ala. 351; Smith v. Kennedy, 1 Wash. Terr. 55; Manchester Paper Co. v. Moore, 104 N. Y. 690; Allen v. McConihe, 34 N. Y. S. R. 994; Vernon v. Simmons, 15 Daly, 390; Towles v. Denison, 45 Barb. 490; Blanc v. Scruggs, 26 La. Ann. 208; Darby v. Lastrapes, 23 La. Ann. 605; Verrier v. Guillou, 97 Pa. 63; Gooch v. Vaughan, 92 N. C. 610; Hawkins v. Long, 74 N. C. 781; Allen v. Stevens, 1 N. Y. Legal Obs. 359; Livermore v. St. John, 4 Robt. 17; Powell v. Pacific Railroad, 65 Mo. 558; Shepard v. Bank of State of Missouri, 15 Mo. 141.

But mere silence by a customer when a bill for goods is presented to him will not give rise to a conclusive presumption that the amount of the bill is correct. Hyman v. Coen, 22 Ill. App. 623.

An account rendered which does not pretend to be a final adjustment and settlement of the transaction between the parties will not become an account stated by mere failure to object to it. Glasscock v. Rosengrant, 55 Ark. 376.

The fact that a son for whose benefit his father has transferred property to a trustee but who has no knowledge of such fact, casually sees accounts which the trustee renders to the father, will not make them accounts stated as against him. Andrews v. Hobson, 31 Ala. 219.

Any circumstances calculated to rebut the inference to be drawn from the keeping of the accounts without objection are competent evidence to be submitted to the jury, in order that with a knowledge of all the circumstances of the case they may form their conclusion of the actual intention of the parties. Lockwood v. Thorne, 18 N. Y. 286.

Where a factor has transmitted to his principal accounts of two different sales of the same goods, the principal after having approved the first is not bound to notice or object to the second at the peril of its being taken as a stated account, and held to be binding on him. Cartwright v. Greene, 47 Barb. 9.

The acceptance and retention of an account without objection although tending to establish an admission of correctness is not conclusive. It may be met by proof of mistake undiscovered while the account was so retained and the question then becomes one of fact for the jury. Sharkey v. Mansfield, 90 N. Y. 227, 43 Am. Rep. 161.
37 L. R. A.

The conversion of an open account into an account stated is an operation by which the parties assent to a sum as the correct balance due from one to the other. The mere rendering of an account or the cessation of it by the death of one of the parties or a bare discontinuance of the dealings will not make the account a stated one. The inference of assent from mere passiveness has always been made against the passive party and never in favor of that party as against the other. A person who has chosen to hold an equivocal position in such a case is not at liberty to assert the rights which pertain to a definite and decided act. White v. Campbell, 25 Mich. 463.

Time necessary.

The time within which an account should be taken as a stated one unless objected to cannot be definitely fixed. It depends on the circumstances of the case whether an acquiescence or a presumed agreement to the correctness of the account exists. Bainbridge v. Wilcocks, Baldw. C. C. 539.

What shall be considered a reasonable time for the party to make objections so that the correctness of the account may be presumed from acquiescence must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case. It is to be determined by the situation of the parties and nature of their business. It would be unreasonable in the extreme to apply the rule applicable to merchants to the mechanic or the farmer. Lockwood v. Thorne, 12 Barb. 487.

Keeping the rendered account three or four years after receiving it without objection will make it a stated account. Bruen v. Hone, 2 Barb. 586.

Retaining an account without objection from September until the next January will render it a stated account. Standard Oil Co. v. Van Eiten, 107 U. S. 329, 27 L. ed. 320.

Where a merchant in one country sent an account current to another in a different country, who kept it about two years, it was held to be considered as a stated account. Tlockel v. Short, 2 Ves. Br. 239.

Between merchants at home an account which has been presented and no objection thereto made after the lapse of several posts, is treated under ordinary circumstances as being by acquiescence a stated account. Brown v. Vandyke, 8 N. J. Eq. 795, 55 Am. Dec. 250.

Merchants may be bound if they do not signify their objection within several mails after receipt of account. Freas v. Truitt, 2 Colo. 499.

If a person receives a stated account from abroad and keeps it by him for any length of time without objection he will be bound by it. Murray v. Toland, 3 Johns. Ch. 569, 1 L. ed. 719.

Where brokers on the 28th day of December mailed an account to their customer with notice that if it was not paid by December 31 they would bring suit against him, and suit was brought on January 14, it was held that the account had become stated. Knickerbocker v. Gould, 115 N. Y. 533.

debtor and creditor already exists between them and that subsequently to such transactions there is a mutual agreement between them as to the allowance or disallowance of their respective claims, and striking of the balance, or agreement as to the amount due, or some other assent, either expressly or fairly to be implied from the circumstances, as failure to object within a reasonable time from the presentation of the account. The idea is that there was an agreement between the parties, founded upon an examination of the transactions, either active or presumptive." In Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Met. 216,

Mere delivery not sufficient.

The mere rendering of an account by one person to the other is not sufficient to make it an account stated. Robertson v. Wright, 17 Gratt. 354.

The mere delivery of an account is not sufficient without some contemporaneous or subsequent conduct to show acquiescence. Irvine v. Young, 1 Sim. & Stu. 333.

The mere rendering of an account does not make it a stated one, but if the other party receives the account, admits the correctness of the items, claims the balance or offers to pay it, then it becomes a stated account. Toland v. Sprague, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 334, 9 L. ed. 1107.

Proof that a creditor mailed to his debtor an account does not without more prove an account stated. Rowland v. Donovan, 18 Mo. App. 554, App.

The averment that the plaintiff had made a statement and delivered it to the defendant who made no objections to it does not necessarily establish the conclusion which is necessary to sustain an action upon an account stated. Emery v. Pease, 20 N. Y. 62.

The mere rendering of an account does not make an account stated and the omission to object to it raises only a presumption of assent which may be represented by circumstances tending to a contrary conclusion. Guernsey v. Rexford, 63 N. Y. 631.

The mere delivery of an account without evidence of contemporaneous or subsequent conduct will not prove it to be a stated account but an acceptance implied from circumstances will suffice. Kepperling v. Bitzner, 10 Lanc. L. Rev. 332.

Effect of objection.

If when an account for goods sold is presented for payment the person does not dispute or deny but admits the correctness of the items but denies the liability to pay insisting that another person is justly chargeable with and ought to pay the same, it will not constitute an account stated. Ryan v. Gross, 48 Ala. 374.

The rule governing accounts stated does not apply if when it was sent the parties had already come to a disagreement and therefore assent from silence could not be reasonably inferred. Edwards v. Hoeflinghoff, 38 Fed. Rep. 635.

But see contra, Putnam v. Peabody, 11 N. Y. Week. Dig. 440, supra, under Refusal to pay.

The fact that the entire account is disputed will not prevent the account being stated so far as the running of the statute of limitations is concerned, if the items are not objected to. Toland v. Sprague, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 334, 9 L. ed. 1107.

To whom applicable.

In a few jurisdictions there has been an inclination to confine this rule to the case of merchants' accounts where it originated.

Thus, the rule making the retention of an account with objection a stated account applies only between merchants. Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 51, 34 Am. Rep. 435.

The rule of retention does not apply in cases where the parties are not merchants. Rich v. El-dredge, 42 N. H. 158.

But the great majority of the courts have either expressly or impliedly refused to so limit it and have permitted it to be extended to accounts generally.

The earlier rule in the law upon the subject of account stated was that it was applicable to merchants only, but this is not the rule at present. The needs of modern business have so enlarged it that it may be properly applied to all classes of business men. Fleissner v. Kubli, 20 Or. 323.

The rule is not confined to dealings between merchants. Brown v. Kimmel, 67 Mo. 490.

The rule of acquiescence is not confined to merchants but will apply equally to an account rendered by auctioneers to their employers. Townes v. Birchett, 12 Leigh, 173.

In Shepard v. Bank of State of Missouri, 15 Mo. 141, it is said: "It is true these cases (those holding the account to be stated) are between merchant and merchant and are only found in chancery proceedings, but there is no reason why the same doctrine should not prevail between any other persons with whom are accounts current or accounts of transactions in the ordinary course of business. And the rule was applied between bank and depositor."

An account by commission merchants of sales made, unobjected to, will be evidence of its correctness. Bailey v. Bensley, 37 Ill. 556.

Where a broker renders an account showing a sale of stocks, which the customer keeps in ignorance of the facts, his acceptance will not make it a stated account. Follonsbee v. Parker, 70 Ill. 11.

If a partner in a single partnership transaction receives from the other a statement of accounts between them and is silent for thirteen years afterward it amounts to an acquiescence. Atwater v. Fowler, 1 Edw. Ch. 417, 6 L. ed. 193.

Retention by one partner of an account rendered to him by the other is not sufficient to sustain an action of assumpsit for the balance. An express promise to pay is necessary to sustain such an action between partners. Killam v. Preston, 4 Watts & S. 15.

The rule will apply to accounts between partners which were entered in the partnership books and not objected to for a number of years. Lewis v. Loper, 54 Fed. Rep. 237.

Accounts between a factor and merchant repeatedly rendered and received without objection with requests for indulgence and repeated promises to pay, become stated accounts the items of which cannot be questioned. Flower v. O'Bannon, 43 La. Ann. 1042.

Failure of merchants to object to a statement by their factor of an account against them for losses on consignments will if not objected to in a reasonable time become a stated account. Talcott v. Chew, 27 Fed. Rep. 273.

The rule that if the account is presented it must be objected to within a reasonable time or it will become binding does not apply to accounts rendered by a trustee to his cestui que trust. Ahl's App. 129 Pa. 23.

If a trustee renders accounts of his cestui que trust who is sui juris, they will become stated accounts if retained an unreasonable time without objection. Powell v. Powell, 10 Ala. 300.

An account of land transactions retained for two years will become an account stated. Stebbins v. Niles, 25 Misc. 267; and the principle of that decision was followed in Coopwood v. Bolton, 23 Miss. 212.

Retention of an account rendered by an agent for management of lands will become conclusive. Tharp v. Tharp, 15 Vt. 105.

plaintiffs brought an action of trespass against Willard, who was sheriff of the county, for the alleged nonfeasance of one A. Matthews, his deputy, in not properly seizing, keeping, and disposing of a large amount of property, consisting of divers and sundry items of different values, upon execution then in the hands of the officer. A motion was made that an auditor be appointed by the court under the statute to state the account. Shaw, Ch. J., in passing upon the question, said: "The primary idea of account, computatio, whether we look to proceedings of courts of law or equity, is some matter of

In an action for a balance claimed to be due by a corporation, the court said the account was rendered and no objection being made to it as stated and balanced, the transaction may be deemed to have been acquiesced in. This is the rule of law in matters of account of a commercial nature if not in matters of account in general; and there is no reason why it should not apply to a private corporate body engaged in trade and conducting its affairs through the instrumentality of officers and agents as well as to individual natural persons carrying on similar business in the same way. Bradley v. Richardson, 23 Vt. 720, 2 Blatchf. 354.

Retention will make a stated account of a factor's statement. Harris v. Ely, 1 Selden Notes, 34; Smedley v. Williams, 1 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 359; Hall v. Sloan, 9 Phila. 138; Bevan v. Cullen, 7 Pa. 281; Thompson v. Fisher, 18 Pa. 310; Sentell v. Kennedy, 39 La. Ann. 679.

Death or cessation of dealing.

An account closed by the death of one of the parties is not a stated account so as to make the exception of the statute of limitations in favor of running accounts between merchants cease to be applicable and render the amount subject to the running of the statute. Bass v. Bass, 8 Pick. 187.

Neither the death of one merchant nor the cessation of dealings between them will have the effect of closing the account so as to start the running of the statute of limitations. McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Me. 508.

An account closed by the cessation of dealings between the parties is not an account stated. Mandeville v. Wilson, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch, 15, 3 L. ed. 23.

Balance brought forward.

The mere fact that the balance is carried forward on the books instead of being paid will not prevent the account from being a stated account. Thus where a banker balanced the pass-book of the depositor monthly and stated the balance due each statement became after a reasonable time an account stated, back of which the depositor cannot go to correct errors without leave of a court of equity. Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. 96, 15 Am. Dec. 181.

An account rendered and accepted and balance carried forward into a new account becomes an account stated. Allen v. Nettles, 39 La. Ann. 788.

The claim must be clear.

In order to have silence amount to an account stated the person sought to be charged must in terms be a party to the account or the grounds upon which it is sought to hold him liable should be clearly made known to him and a demand for payment should be made. Thus where an account was sent to one member of a firm under the name of a former firm of which he was not a partner with no accompanying explanation that he was to be held liable for it, the court held that his neglect to object to it did not make it an account stated as against him. Benites v. Hampton, 8 Utah, 369.

To become an account stated the bill rendered must have been unambiguous and clearly indicate the nature and extent of plaintiff's demand, therefore it was held that although a bill was rendered as follows: "One Portable Engine and take his 4 x 7 at Hack's, $399.50," and it was retained and payment made upon it, it did not become an account stated because it was not definitely stated 37 L. R. A.

what the seller claimed to be the amount which the buyer was required to pay. Manion Blacksmith & Wrecking Co. v. Carreras, 26 Mo. App. 220.

Admission of debt.

The rule has been in some cases extended to the mere admission or acknowledgment of indebtedness.

In regard to a promise to pay the costs of an action the court in Porter v. Cooper, 1 Cramp. M. & R. 337, 4 Tyrw. 456, 6 Car. & P. 354, says: "In the later cases the courts have deviated far from what was the original meaning of an account stated. I think the rule to be this that if there is an admission of a sum of money due, for which an action would lie, that will be evidence to go to the jury on the count for an account stated."

An acknowledgment that a certain sum is due from one person to another makes an implied promise to pay the amount and will sustain an action upon an account stated. Tassey v. Church, 4 Watts & S. 141, 39 Am. Dec. 65.

Where a borrower of money and his surety signed a memorandum in which they stated, "We jointly and severally owe you $80," the jury may find it to be an account stated. Buck v. Hurst, L. R. 1 C. P. 297, 12 Jur. N. S. 704.

Where a director of a corporation whose funds had been attached in the hands of their banker in order to obtain a release of them wrote a letter to the creditor that if he would accept a certain amount on his claim, the director and his brother directors would pay the balance of the claim, the amount of which was stated in the letter, there was an account stated. Barker v. Birt, 10 Mees. & W. 61, 6 Jur. 736.

A promise by the drawer to the indorsee of an over-due bill of exchange to pay the amount will support an action on an account stated. Oliver v. Dovatt, 2 Moody & R. 230.

Where a person who has agreed to take a house and purchase the fixtures at a valuation to be fixed by certain persons named, after the valuation is made takes possession and enjoys the fixtures, he will be liable upon an account stated. Salmon v. Watson, 4 J. B. Moore, 73.

Admission of a certain sum being due in respect of a demand for which an action would lie will support an action of account stated. Ware v. Dudley, 16 Ala. 742.

An admission that the amount claimed on an account rendered is due will make an account stated. Gregory v. Bailey, 4 Harr. (Del.) 256.

An admission, whether oral or written, of indebtedness in a specific sum makes the demand an account stated. Nooe v. Garner, 70 Ala. 443; Chapman v. Lee, 47 Ala. 143.

An admission of a balance or acknowledgment made by one person to another that a sum of money is due the latter is sufficient to make an account stated. Stevens v. Tuller, 4 Mich. 386.

Where defendant acknowledged his indebtedness for a specific sum upon a balance of an account the court was at liberty to treat it as an account stated. May v. Kloss, 44 Mo. 300.

Question for court or jury.

The question whether a conversation is sufficient to constitute an account stated is a question for the court and not for the jury. Bishop v. Chambré, 3 Car. & P. 55, Moody & M. 116.

What constitutes a reasonable time is a question-debt and credit, or demands in the nature of debt and credit, between the parties. . . . But in this action the plaintiffs charge the defendant's deputy with a tort, a non-feasance, and breach of duty. There is no relation of debtor and creditor, in relation of responsibility for money or property intrusted by one to another, either in fact or in law; and consequently refused the appointment of an auditor. It would seem that an account stated should be the result of computation between the parties concerning monetary transactions, or debts in the restrictive sense, as distinguished from liabilities and demands, either existing reciprocally or entirely upon the one side or the other. As to the ascertained balance the law implies a promise to pay, and an action is maintainable thereon. The promise is new in its nature, and the consideration therefor is the stating of the account. What existed before as an account between the parties is now an account stated, and in an action thereon it is not necessary to inquire as to particular items which go to make it up. To maintain the action as averred, the plaintiff must prove an account stated. That, and nothing else, will support his allegations. Volkening v. De Graaf, 81 N. Y. 271. An account may, however, be stated with reference to a single item, but that item must consist of a debt then due and owing. 2 Chitty, Cont. 962; Tucker v. Barrow, 7 Barn. & C. 625; Whitehead v. Howard, 2 Brod. & B. 372. In Lubbock v. Tribe, 8 Mees. & W. 612, Lord Abinger, C. B., said: "It is only when you come to look at the facts on which the promise was made that you are enabled to see whether it is an account stated or not. Here there was nothing due from the defendant to the plaintiff at all. The only thing in respect of which they had a claim upon him was upon his promise, and they might have had an action against him for not performing that promise, because, no doubt, it was made upon a good and sufficient consideration; but it was not in the nature of any debt due from one to the other at all;" and held that an action upon account stated would not lie. See also Gough v. Findon, 7 Exch. 48. So it is with regard to the ordinary account stated, as distinguished from an express settlement of cross-demands, it must consist of moneyed transactions or debts; and when there has been a statement of the account a promise to pay the ascertained balance arises by implication if no express undertaking is entered upon at the time.

Recurring to the facts of this case, it is apparent that the obligation of the defendants to construct the fence in question was not a debt due and owing from the defendants to plaintiff; it was merely a demand for unliquidated damages for breach of contract, and hence was not a proper subject upon which to base an account stated. To test the question as to the correctness of this conclusion, suppose the plaintiff had sued the defendants upon their agreement to build the fence, and for damages for their default. Would it be a good defense to plead an account stated with reference thereto, without also showing payment of the amount found to be due? In other words, is the mere statement of the account as alleged a discharge of the old cause of action for breach of contract? Unmistakably not. And, inasmuch as a new cause of action is not given until the old is discharged, it follows that the action upon an account stated cannot be maintained. The alleged account stated amounts to an accord, but an accord without satisfaction is no defense to the original action. An accord with satisfaction, however, gives a new action, and the old is barred. "A claim or demand may be satisfied by the party liable delivering, paying, or doing, and the claimant accepting, something different from that which was owing or claimed, if the parties so agree. It is a substantial payment. When such agreement is executed,—carried fully into effect,—the original demand is canceled, completely satisfied, and extinguished. It is thus discharged by what the law denominates 'accord and satisfaction.' It is a discharge of the former obligation or liable by receipt of a new consideration, mutually agreed on." 1 Sutherland, Damages, 425. Again, suppose the plaintiff had sent to defendants a statement in writing of his claim against them for $300 for building this fence, and the defendants had retained it an unreasonable or any length of time without objection, would a promise to pay such sum arise by implication? Undoubtedly not. If such were the rule, it would be an easy matter for any claimant to convert an action for unliquidated damages, whether arising from contract or tort, into an action upon a money demand, wherein it would not be permissible to inquire into the original cause of action. Every person against whom such a claim is made would be compelled to be constantly on the alert, and make due and timely objection, in order to prevent an undue advantage of law for the court. Standard Oil Co. v. Van Etten, 107 U. S. 329, 27 L. ed. 320.

What is a reasonable time when the facts are undisputed is a question of law. Fleischner v. Kubli, 20 Or. 323.

But it has also been held that the question of what is a reasonable time is one of fact for the jury. Austin v. Rloker, 61 N. H. 97.

The evidence being undisputed it is a question of law whether the facts constitute an account stated. Stevens v. Ayers, 32 N. Y. S. R. 15.

Whether on a given state of facts the transaction constitutes a stated account is a question of law. Lookwood v. Thorne, 11 N. Y. 170, 32 Am. Dec. 61.

If the evidence is not without conflict and free from adverse inferences, the question whether an account is stated or not is for the jury. Rice v. Schloes, 90 Ala. 416.

On any given state of facts it becomes a question of law whether the transaction constitutes an account stated. McPherson v. Small, 9 Jones & S. 534.

Whether an account presented in evidence is an account stated or not is in the province of the jury to determine from the facts. Davis v. Tiernan, 3 How. (Misc.) 738.

Whether silence for an unreasonable time after the receipt of a statement of account amounts to an admission of the correctness of the account, and whether the delay is unreasonable, are questions of fact for the jury. Moran v. Gordon, 33 Ill. App. 46.

H. P. F.

being taken of him. The doctrine of an account stated cannot be carried to this extent. A single item, not of a debt due and owing, but of an unliquidated claim of damages for the breach of a parol or simple contract, cannot form the basis for an account stated.

The lower court therefore properly granted the nonsuit, and its judgment is affirmed.
Rehearing denied.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, EIGHTH CIRCUIT.

NATIONAL WATER WORKS CO.

v.

KANSAS CITY.

(28 Fed. Rep. 862.)

(July 2, 1894.)

1. A provision in a statute authorizing a waterworks franchise that "at the expiration of the twenty years if the grant be not renewed the city shall purchase" is not an incidental, directory, or subordinate provision, but mandatory, vital, and controlling.
2. It is too late to say that a decree for performance of a contract is not responsive to pleadings where for three years the complainant has placed itself in the attitude of asking for such a decree and has never dismissed its bill or withdrawn its prayer, but any formal defect in this particular is subject to amendment, even in the appellate court.
3. The title and right of possession to a waterworks plant does not pass absolutely to a city on the expiration of the franchise without payment or tender of payment therefor, under a statutory provision that the city shall purchase if the grant be not renewed.
4. The disability of a city under its charter and acts of the legislature to take the title to waterworks cannot be set up by the waterworks company, if it has paid for the property, to defeat a purchase by the city under a statutory provision that the city shall purchase if the grant be not renewed when the franchise expires.
5. "The fair and equitable value" which by statute and ordinance a city is to pay for waterworks on the expiration of a franchise is not the amount on which the income or earnings would pay interest, neither is it merely the original cost of construction or the cost of reproduction, but it includes in addition to the cost of reproduction the additional value created by the fact of connection with buildings and of the actual operation of the plant.
6. The value of connections with buildings which is to be added to the cost of reproduction in determining the present value of a system of waterworks which a city must pay therefor is not merely the cost of making such connections, since they are not compulsory but depend upon the will of property owners and are secured only by effort and inducements.
7. A city which has for many years recognised and accepted a waterworks system as fully complying with a contract cannot afterwards repudiate such recognition and claim damages for failure to comply with the contract.

NOTE.—While the compulsory purchase of the plants of private corporations engaged in furnishing municipalities with water may be unusual the above case is of much importance on the general subject of such purchases whether voluntary or otherwise. For another phase of the relation of such private companies to the municipality, see Re Brooklyn (N. Y.) 28 L. R. A. 270, 37 L. R. A.

CROSS-APPEALS from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri, in an action to enforce a contract by defendant to purchase certain waterworks which had been erected by complainant. Reversed in part.

On March 24, 1878, the following Act was approved by the governor of Missouri:

"SECTION 1. The city of Kansas is hereby empowered to construct waterworks, to take and convey into and throughout the city, for the use of the same and others therein, water of the Missouri river, Blue river, or Kaw river, or all, from any point or points, and to that end to acquire, hold, use, control and dispose of real estate and personal property within and without the corporate limits of the city, and also in the state of Kansas, necessary for laying pipes, constructing reservoirs, aqueducts, appliances and means, and erecting buildings and machinery proper and convenient for such waterworks, and for operating and repairing the same; to receive, take, purify, store, conduct and distribute in and throughout the city such water, and in general to do all things necessary and proper to carry this act into effect and accomplish the object thereof."

"SEC. 22. The city of Kansas is hereby empowered to grant to any person or persons, or any corporation, the right to erect and operate such waterworks as the first section of this act provides for, and to accomplish the purpose therein mentioned on such terms and conditions as may be agreed on in a contract therefor: provided, that such grant shall only be made by or in all respects pursuant to ordinance, which shall not be valid till the same be approved by two thirds of the qualified electors of the city voting on the matter at a general election, or special election ordered and held for the purpose, when the matter of the approval of such ordinance shall be submitted to such electors; the power to order, hold, and declare the result of any election requisite being hereby conferred on the city, to be exercised by or pursuant to ordinance; and, provided further, that no grant so made shall confer the right to operate the waterworks for any period beyond twenty years from the time of approval of the ordinance as aforesaid; but the grant may be renewed by or pursuant to ordinance, approved as aforesaid, during the last of such twenty years, for another term not exceeding twenty years, on terms and conditions specified in the ordinance for the renewal of the grant; and, provided further, that in making such grant or renewing the same, the city shall reserve to itself the right, at its option, and at any time, to acquire and become sole owner of such waterworks, including all extensions and enlargements thereof, and everything of every nature and description belonging and pertaining thereto, on such terms as may be provided and agreed on between the parties at the time the grant is made; or if no right is expressly reserved, or the city cannot, according to any reservation, purchase and become sole owner as aforesaid, then the city may, at any time, at its option, acquire and become sole owner of such waterworks, including all enlargements and extensions thereof, and everything of every nature and description belonging and pertaining thereto, on paying therefor the fair and equitable value thereof, to be ascertained, if the parties cannot agree thereon, by the circuit court of said county, on the petition of the city; the property and subject of purchase to be transferred and belong to the city on payment therefor; and, provided further, that at the expiration of the twenty years, if the grant be not renewed, the city shall purchase and become sole owner of such waterworks as aforesaid, and pay therefor a price agreed upon by the parties or ascertained as they may agree, or, if the price cannot be thus fixed, then the city shall pay the fair and equitable value of the whole works, to be ascertained by said court on the petition of either party filed for the purpose; and, provided further, that the city may furnish any party to whom such grant may be made real estate and right of way for use in constructing and operating such waterworks, according to such agreements as may be made in the premises, and guarantee that the works shall earn a certain amount annually, to be specified in the grant, and guarantee, clear, over and above current expenses, taxes and assessments, and may secure by a proper deed or agreement for the purpose, to the party to whom such grant is made, the control and possession of any real estate and right of any [way] condemned or acquired in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, for use during the time such party may need the same under any such grant."

In accordance with that statute the city, by an ordinance, No. 10,524, approved October 27, 1873, and duly ratified by the people, granted to the National Waterworks Company a right to erect and operate waterworks.

The ordinance contained the following provisions:

"SECTION 1. That the National Waterworks Company of New York, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the state of New York, be and it is hereby authorized, subject to the limitations hereinafter or by law provided, to establish, construct, maintain and operate waterworks, in or adjacent to the city of Kansas, in the state of Missouri, to receive, take, purify, store, conduct, and distribute in and throughout the said city of Kansas, pure, well-settled, and wholesome water; to lay down pipes and extend aqueducts and conductors through the streets, avenues, lanes, alleys or public grounds of the said city of Kansas; to erect and maintain all necessary buildings, machinery and attachments, of any description, necessary and proper and suitable for such works, and to supply to said city and the inhabitants thereof such water by said waterworks. . . . The rights hereby granted to continue for twenty years from the date of the approval of this ordinance by a vote of the qualified voters of the city of Kansas.

"SEC. 4. The city of Kansas hereby reserves to itself the right at its option and at any time, to acquire and become sole owner of said waterworks, including all extensions and enlargements thereof and everything of every nature and description belonging and pertaining thereto, on paying therefor the fair and equitable value thereof, to be ascertained, if the parties cannot agree thereon, by the circuit court, or other court of record of the county of Jackson, at Kansas City, upon the petition of the city, and in such manner as the court may determine; provided, that a copy of such petition shall be served upon said company, at least fifteen days before the same shall be presented to said court. If, at the expiration of twenty years from the time this grant shall take effect the same shall not have been renewed, or the city shall not have become owner of said works, the city shall then be required to purchase and become sole owner of said waterworks as aforesaid, and pay therefor a price agreed upon by the parties, or ascertained as they may agree; or, if the price cannot be thus agreed upon, then the city shall pay the fair and equitable value of the whole works, to be ascertained by said circuit or other court of record as aforesaid, in such manner as said court shall determine on the petition of either party for the purpose; provided, that the party presenting such petition shall have served a copy thereof upon the other party, at least fifteen days before the day of presentation; and, provided also, that if upon examination it be found that such works are not in all respects in good condition, and of first class and sound materials, and in every way efficient, then the city shall not be required to purchase the same at any time nor at any price."

On December 26, 1891, the company filed a bill, alleging that under the contract thereby created the company completed the works for operation as required, and that they were duly accepted by the city; that on the 25th day of May, 1878, the city, by a certificate signed by its mayor and the president of the common council, did certify that said company was operating its works to the satisfaction of the city; that the company had kept and performed all the conditions, covenants, promises, and agreements on its part, and that it would at all times be ready, able, and willing to do so; that the company had expended large sums of money in building the works; and that in order to do so it has issued its bonds in the aggregate of $3,000,000, secured by mortgages covering the waterworks plant; that the defendant city falsely pretended that the ordinances and the contract embodied therein, were not in force, and were no longer binding and obligatory upon said defendant, and particularly that said defendant was not and would not be bound either to purchase said waterworks, as by said ordinance was provided and agreed, or to renew the company's said grant; that the mayor and common council, law officers, and legal advisers of the city had publicly declared and represented that said ordinances and contract were not binding and obligatory upon the city, and had threatened and did threaten and intend to repudiate the same, and refuse to keep and perform the covenants, agreements, and promises therein contained and expressed to be kept and performed on the part of the city with respect to the renewal of said contract, and the purchase of and payment for said waterworks; that in furtherance of said unlawful intent, purpose, and threats, the city had adopted certain charter amendments, and had passed ordinances providing for constructing and operating waterworks in the city, and for issuing bonds for the purpose, and authorizing plans, specifications, and details for the work to be prepared, and had publicly advertised for sealed bids for the purchase of said bonds. The bill prayed a decree "that the several ordinances accepted by your orator, hereinbefore set forth, as they are taken together, are in full force and effect, and that the contract embodied therein is a valid and subsisting contract, binding and obligatory upon your orator and the defendant, and that the defendant keep and abide by the same; and that, upon your orator's duly and faithfully doing and performing all things yet remaining to be done upon its part, the defendant, its officers and agents, keep and perform the covenants, promises, and agreements on its part, so far as they are executory and unperformed; and that your orator may have such other and further relief as the case may require, and as may be conformable to equity, and to your honors may seem meet, and the defendant, its mayor, common council, officers, and agents, may be perpetually enjoined and restrained by the decree of this court from proceeding to construct and maintain said separate and distinct system of waterworks, and from taking or appropriating to its own use, except under and in pursuance of its contract with your orator, any portion of your orator's said system of waterworks; and that your orator may have such other and further relief as the equity of the case may require, and as to the court may seem meet."

The answer of the city, filed December 6, 1892, admitted certain allegations of the bill, but denied that the company had complied with its contract by making a complete and sufficient system of waterworks for the city, as provided for in the ordinance. It alleged that by reason of such failure on the company's part the city was relieved from any obligation to purchase the company's system, or any part thereof; and admitted the purpose and intent of the city, in the immediate future, to acquire the ownership and control of a system of waterworks of its own. The city filed a cross-bill which set up the various breaches of the contract on the part of the company alleged in the answer, and alleged that the city had been and was by those breaches released from all obligations to the company; that the company, by its proceeding in this case, and by many other means and practices, was preventing the city from exercising its unquestioned right to provide itself with a new system of waterworks; and that the company had threatened, and was then threatening, to cut off the water supply from the city and its inhabitants, as an illegitimate means of forcing the city to comply with its demands, and to desist from its purpose of building its own waterworks,—and prayed that the city be released and absolved from all obligations under the contract to purchase its system of waterworks, or any part thereof, and the company be enjoined and restrained from interfering in any way with the city's proceedings to sell its bonds and construct its own waterworks, and also for the payment of damages on account of the failure of the company to furnish the degree of fire pressure stipulated for in the contract, which had been paid for years at the contract rates, and further restraining the company from carrying out its threat of cutting off the water supply pending the suit, and also that a receiver be appointed for the company.

After the expiration of the franchise, on the 15th day of November, 1893, the city filed a supplemental cross-bill setting up the expiration of the contract and alleging that the city had not renewed its grant to the company; that no terms of agreement could be entered into between the city and the company with reference to the matter; and that the company had failed to have such works as the city was bound to purchase. That since the company had no interest in or title to that portion of the plant within the limits of the city, and had coerced consumers into paying water rentals without making any allowance to the city for the use of its streets and property; that under the contract the necessary real estate and rights of way for the erection of the works was purchased and had been paid for by the city, but that the company was wrongfully withholding the title to the same from the city; that the city had been largely damaged by the want of the fire pressure guaranteed by the contract. It prayed a decree declaring that the company's right and title to the works, within the limits of the city, had expired, and that the same belong to the city; that the court ascertain and determine the interest of the company in the works described by the pleadings, and that the city be permitted to obtain the same upon making just compensation, to be determined by the court in such manner as the court may provide; that the company be required to convey the real estate standing in its name to the city; that the damages which the city had suffered by reason of the failure of the company to furnish the required fire pressure in the past be determined and adjudged in favor of the city; that the sum, if anything, which the city ought to pay to the company for furnishing water for public use, pending the litigation, be determined; that the company be enjoined from cutting off the supply of water to the city for public purposes; that, if necessary, a receiver be appointed to take and operate the works.

On January 2, 1894, an answer to the supplemental cross-bill was filed setting up inter alia:

"That the said city is without authority or power to purchase said system of waterworks for the following reasons and because of the following facts, to wit:

"(a) The Constitution of the State of Missouri, of 1875, withdrew from said city the power to become indebted to an amount sufficiently large to purchase said system of waterworks, and said city has no means to apply to such purpose, and could only accomplish the same by becoming indebted to an amount which would make its indebtedness exceed the limitations in said constitution contained, and the annual interest on such indebtedness larger than could be paid out of the taxes authorized to be levied for that purpose.

"(b) By section 17 of article 18 of the charter of said city, adopted in 1889, it is expressly provided, referring to the contract with this defendant embodied in said Ordinances Nos. 10,524 and 14,776, that 'the city can purchase such works, or renew the franchise thereof only by ordinance passed by a majority vote of the members elect of each house of the common council; and only then in the event that said ordinance shall be approved by a vote of two thirds of the qualified voters of the city voting at an election held for such purpose.' And the defendant states that no such ordinance has been passed, nor has any election been held, as provided in said charter.

"(c) Under Ordinance No. 2,263 of said city, approved August 21, 1890, an amendment to the charter of said city was adopted, the same being mentioned in the seventeenth paragraph of the original bill of complaint, and a copy thereof annexed to said bill as Schedule B; and in and by such amendment the said city expressly, and for the precise purpose of disabling itself from carrying out its contractual obligations to this defendant, limited its power to hold property for waterworks purposes to such property as might be located in the state of Missouri.

"(d) Questions having been made as to the validity of said charter amendments, the complainant caused the general assembly of the state of Missouri to enact 'An act concerning waterworks, and a supply of water for cities now having or that may hereafter have a population of more than one hundred thousand (100,000) and less than three hundred thousand (300,000) inhabitants, whether organized under general law or special charters, or under section sixteen (16) of article nine (9) of the Constitution of this state, and to issue bonds for acquiring waterworks, and to make contracts for supplying water to such cities, approved March 6, 1893, which is in substance the same, and contains the same limitations and restrictions upon the powers of the complainant as it imposed upon itself by its charter amendment, namely, to acquire only such property as is situated within the state of Missouri. The complainant is the only city to which said act has or can have application, and the same was caused to be enacted by said complainant for the same purpose which moved the adoption of said charter amendments, as hereinbefore stated.

"(e) Under section four of said Contract Ordinance No. 10,524, the said city could only become the owner of said system of waterworks by exercising its option to purchase the same on or before November 15, 1893; and the said city, until long after that date, adhered to the election made and purposes expressed in its original cross-bill herein. And the defendant shows that under the charter of said city the authority to act for said complainant in the premises is vested in its common council by the passage of a proper ordinance; that no action whatever has been taken by such body, or by an officer or person authorized to act for said city, relative to the matter; and that the only step taken in the premises has been through the solicitors in this cause, upon their own motion, by the filing of the so-called 'Supplementary Cross-bill' herein.

"(f) For more than four years prior to the filing of the said supplementary cross-bill, the city has claimed and contended that it was absolved and released from the contract with this defendant, and that it did not propose to, and would not, purchase the defendant's system of waterworks, or any part thereof, although said company has always denied, and does still deny, said claim.

"By reason of which facts this defendant avers that said city is disabled, debarred, and prohibited from purchasing its said system of waterworks, and that said city waived any and all right to do so."

The city subsequently filed an amendment to its supplementary cross-bill stating that it was and always had been willing to purchase the property at a reasonable price asking that it be allowed to do so.

Commissioners were appointed to estimate and fix the value of the works and system as a whole, to be predicated on the actual value of the works, and not upon the stock of the company, and to be the fair and equitable value of the whole works at the time. Upon the pleadings, evidence, and the report of the commissioners, the cause was heard and it was decreed:

"First. That under the act of the legislature and the contract between the National Waterworks Company of New York and the city of Kansas City, set out in the pleadings in this case, the said city is legally bound to purchase from said company, and said company is legally bound to sell to the said city, the full, complete, and entire waterworks plant by which the said city and its inhabitants are now supplied with water, including all portions of said plant, as well that portion in the state of Kansas, and commonly known as the 'Quindaro Supply Works and Flow Pipe' as that portion situated in the state of Missouri, together with all lots and lands belonging to or in any wise used as part of said plant, with the exceptions mentioned in the eleventh paragraph of this decree, and everything of every nature belonging or pertaining to said waterworks plant.

"Second. That said city, under the said contract, is bound to pay for said complete or whole waterworks plant, and the said company is bound to receive in full payment therefor 'the fair and equitable value of the whole work,' as provided in said contract.

"Third. The court finds that the fair and equitable value of the said complete and whole waterworks plant is two million seven hundred and fourteen thousand dollars ($2,714,000).

"Fourth. That said city is entitled to the possession, use, and control of said whole and complete waterworks plant, and said company shall, on the 30th day of April, 1894, surrender and deliver to the said city the said whole and complete waterworks plant, and everything pertaining thereto, and all rights, leases, or contracts relating thereto, and necessary or essential to the full enjoyment of said waterworks as they are now enjoyed and operated by the said company; and the said company is hereby enjoined from using or operating said works, or retaining possession or control of any part thereof, after the said 30th day of April, 1894, and is enjoined from refusing or denying to said city the complete and peaceable possession of said works on that day; and said city is enjoined from refusing or neglecting to demand and accept the possession of said works on that day, and no appeal of this cause by either or both of the parties thereto shall operate to suspend these injunctions.

"Fifth. In the event that said company is unable to deliver the possession of the whole and complete waterworks plant, including the Quindaro Supply Works, then said company shall deliver and the city shall receive on or before said 30th day of April, 1894, that part of the plant in the state of Missouri; and said company is hereby enjoined from interfering with the possession of said city to that part of said works situated in the state of Missouri; and this injunction shall remain in force pending any appeal in this case.

"Sixth. The said company, within six months from the date of this decree, shall make, execute, and deliver to the city a good and sufficient assignment and conveyance of said whole and complete waterworks plant mentioned in the first paragraph of this decree, acceptable to the city or approved by this court, and when such conveyance is accepted by the city, or approved by this court, the city shall become bound to pay to the said company the sum of two million seven hundred and fourteen thousand dollars ($2,714,000), being the fair and equitable value of said works in the manner following, that is to say: The city shall agree and assume to pay on the incumbrances and liens on said waterworks plant, to the holder or holders thereof, as their several rights and interests and priority thereto shall appear, an amount of said lien equal to said sum of two million seven hundred and fourteen thousand dollars ($2,714,000), and shall become bound to save said company harmless as to that amount of said lien. When said sale and transfer of said waterworks plant is made as provided in this paragraph, the liability of the city to pay therefor as herein provided shall relate back to the 30th day of April, 1894.

"Seventh. If the waterworks company shall fail to make and tender a sufficient conveyance of said whole and complete waterworks plant within said six months from the date of this decree, then the city shall not be required to pay the price fixed for the complete and whole plant; and the question whether the city shall pay, or is liable to pay, any sum whatever, for that part or fraction of the plant in Missouri which does not include the source of supply, is reserved.

"Eighth. That said city is not entitled to recover from said company any sum for or on account of any of the several claims for damages set up in its cross-bill.

"Ninth. The said city shall pay to said company the contract price for hydrant rentals down to and including the 30th day of April, 1894, amounting, principal and interest, after deducting all payments made thereon, to the sum of one hundred and thirty-nine thousand four hundred and fifty-two dollars and eighty-two cents ($139,452.82), to be paid in the time and manner following, viz.: One third of said sum shall be paid upon delivery by said company to the city of the possession of the whole and complete waterworks plant as required in the fourth paragraph of this decree, one third when said company shall deliver to the city a sufficient conveyance or transfer of the whole and complete waterworks plant, and the remaining third six months thereafter; each of said installments to bear interest at 6 per cent per annum from April 30, 1894.

"Tenth. That said company shall have the right to collect and retain all water rentals which were due prior to the 30th day of April, 1894, and no claim therefor shall be made by the city against the company or the consumers; and the city shall collect and appropriate to its own use all water rentals which may accrue after the 30th day of April, 1894, and said company shall have no claim against the city or the consumers therefor.

"Eleventh. That, conformably to the consent expressed by counsel for both parties at the hearing, the property described in the pleadings as the 'Kaw Point Pumping Station,' and the six or ten acres of land, more or less, connected therewith, and now owned by said company, shall remain its property, and shall not be conveyed to said city as part of said waterworks plant. The value of said Kaw Point pumping station has been deducted from the price to be paid for the complete works.

"Twelfth. That each party shall pay one half of the costs of these suits.

"Thirteenth. That this case is reserved for the purpose of making such other and further orders as may be found necessary to carry this decree into effect, and as may be equitable and just."

Before Brewer, Circuit Justice, Sanborn, Circuit Judge, and Thayer, District Judge.

Mr. C. O. Tichenor, for National Waterworks Co.:

The act complained of and which it is sought by the bill to prevent, is the building of a system of waterworks by the city, and for the reason that such act will destroy the value of complainant's plant.

It is similar in principle to that in the following cases:

Minturn v. Larue, 64 U. S. 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co. 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. ed. 187; Charles River Bridge Proprs. v. Warren Bridge Proprs. 36 U. S. 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; New Orleans Water Works Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 874, 29 L. ed. 525; Citizens Gas Light Co. v. Louisville Gas Co. 81 Ky. 263.

If, as decreed by the court, the company must sell, and the value of the plant is much less than the mortgages thereon, then this debt must be cut down; as a result of this forced sale many of these bondholders must lose, and yet, neither of the trustees in these mortgages is a party; not a single bondholder is a party.

Alexander v. Horner, 1 McCrary, 642; Shields v. Barrow, 58 U. S. 17 How. 189, 15 L. ed. 160.

All persons interested in the object of the suit, and whose rights will be directly affected by the decree, must be made parties to the suit.

McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 391, 28 L. ed. 1081; St Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, 114 U. S. 60, 29 L. ed. 66; Kendig v. Dean, 97 U. S. 425, 29 L. ed. 1062; Hoot v. Wilson, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 501, 19 L. ed. 782; Robertson v. Carson, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 95, 22 L. ed. 178; Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 450, 21 L. ed. 368; Carey v. Brown, 92 U. S. 171, 23 L. ed. 469; Coiron v. Millaudon, 60 U. S. 19 How. 115, 15 L. ed. 575; Barney v. Baltimore, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 285, 18 L. ed. 826.

The city has so disabled itself that it cannot elect to buy.

The contention that the city had no right to disable itself, would be true if the amendment of the act were sought to be used against the company seeking to compel the city to buy, but it is not true where the company does not wish to sell.

McCracken v. Hayward, 43 U. S. 2 How. 612, 11 L. ed. 399; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 600, 24 L. ed. 796; New York Guaranty & Indemnity Co. v. Louisiana Board of Liquidation, 105 U. S. 625, 26 L. ed. 1108; New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 603, 26 L. ed. 1185; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 206, 26 L. ed. 133; New Orleans v. New Orleans Water Works Co. 142 U. S. 88, 35 L. ed. 946; New York v. Squire, 145 U. S. 190, 36 L. ed. 671.

How the city can be entitled to any damage for being prevented from buying a system of works which it not only in various ways declared it would not buy, but took steps so that it could not do so, is not apparent.

Jenkins v. Hiles, 6 Ves. Jr. 654; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. p. 450, note; Western U. Tel. Co. v. Hull, 124 U. S. 458, 31 L. ed. 482; United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 844, 28 L. ed. 170; Smith v. 27 L. R. A.

Bolles, 132 U. S. 130, 33 L. ed. 281; Howart v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 199, 85 L. ed. 147; Hudley v. Hazendale, 9 Exch. 351; Hannibal Bridge Co. v. Schaubach, 57 Mo. 588; Wiley v. Athol, 6 L. R. A. 342, 150 Mass. 426; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 131, 30 L. ed. 1114.

Where a contract, entered into by the city, for the construction of certain public works, provides that they shall be completed under the supervision and to the satisfaction of an officer of the city, his action in finally accepting them is binding.

Omaha v. Hammond, 94 U. S. 92, 24 L. ed. 70; Comstock v. Sanger, 51 Mich. 502.

A party may waive any provision either of a contract or of a statute intended for his benefit.

Shutte v. Thompson, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 159, 21 L. ed. 125; Creswell v. Lanahan, 101 U. S. 347, 25 L. ed. 853; Murdock v. Lewis, 26 Mo. App. 244.

This is not a case where a company builds under a license given by law coupled with the right to purchase by the municipality where the works are built, in other words a naked right to furnish water until it had to sell; it is a case where the works were built under a contract with the city. This contract does not say simply that the company shall sell at a price to be fixed by an arbitrator; the terms used are, "on paying therefor the fair and equitable value thereof."

Wheeling Gas Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 329; Murray v. Stanton, 99 Mass. 349; Willard v. Tayloe, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 568, 19 L. ed. 504.

Messrs. Lathrop, Morrow, Fox & Moore, also for National Water Works Co.:

To base a decree for specific performance on the original bill of the company "would be to violate the obvious principle that in every case the cause of action must exist at the time the suit is brought.

Straughan v. Hallwood, 30 W. Va. 274; 1 Beach, Mod. Eq. Jur. § 496, p. 518; Turner v. Pierce, 81 Wis. 342; Evans v. Bagshaw, L. R. 8 Eq. 469; Cross v. De Valle, 63 U. S. 1 Wall. 5, 17 L. ed. 515; Langdale v. Briggs, 23 L. T. N. S. 467, 21 Week. Rep. 620.

With the pleadings of the city in such utter conflict and antagonism, a dismissal of the cross-bill with its supplement and amendment is inevitable.

1 Beach, Mod. Eq. Jur. §§ 491, 497, pp. 450, 514; Shields v. Barrow, 58 U. S. 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158; Verplank v. Mercantile Ins. Co. of New York, 1 Edw. Ch. 46, 6 L. ed. 54; Mavor v. Dry, 2 Sim. & Stu. 113; Huckley v. Mack, 60 Mich. 591; Waddell v. Beach, 9 N. J. Eq. 793; Hall v. Harrington, 41 Mich. 146; Lauts v. Gordon, 28 Fed. Rep. 264; Cross v. De Valle, supra; Ayres v. Carrier, 58 U. S. 17 How. 591, 15 L. ed. 179; Jackson v. Grant, 18 N. J. Eq. 145; Maynard v. Green, 30 Fed. Rep. 643; Hardin v. Boyd, 118 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 1141; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 30, 30 L. ed. 866.

The Constitution of Missouri of 1875, limiting municipal indebtedness to 5 per cent upon the assessed valuation, is an insuperable barrier to the acquisition of the company's works by the city at the present time.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Erans, 58 Fed. Rep. 433; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. pp. 230, 281, 289, 290, 334, 336; Maryland v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 44 U. S. 3 How. 551, 11 L. ed. 721; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699; New Orleans v. New Orleans Water Works Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943.

The city is not entitled to a decree against the company for specific performance of the contract of November 15, 1873, for the reason that the cross bill nowhere alleges that, prior to the filing thereof, it had put the company in default by offering to buy its whole plant and pay the purchase price thereof.

Pom. Spec. Perf. §§ 323, 324, 334, 361; 2 Beach, Mod. Eq. Jur. § 588, p. 658; Morgan v. Morgan, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 290, 4 L. ed. 242; Boone v. Missouri Iron Co. 58 U. S. 17 How. 340, 15 L. ed. 171; Weacott v. Mulcane, 58 Fed. Rep. 305.

By its disenabling legislation, by its adopted plan for a new system of waterworks, by its vote of two millions of dollars worth of bonds to construct the same, by its original answer, alleging that the contract of November 15, 1873, was no longer obligatory, and by its original cross-bill making the same allegation and praying a formal decree of cancellation, the city elected to treat the contract as at an end, and so far as itself is concerned, has no right now to ask for a decree for specific performance of the same contract under an equivocal allegation, filed by its counsel at the final hearing.

Fowler v. Bowers Sav. Bank (N. Y.) 4 L. R. A. 145, and cases cited in note; Scarf v. Jardine, 7 App. Cas. 345; Sanger v. Wood, 8 Johns. Ch. 416, 1 L. ed. 668.

The works were built substantially according to contract by the company and were accepted as such by the city. Any deviations which exist were made with the knowledge and acquiescence of the city and do not justify a refusal to take the works because not constructed as required by the contract.

Phillips & C. Constr. Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646, 23 L. ed. 341; American Electric Constr. Co. v. Consumers Gas Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 43.

In the eye of a court of equity, an executed parcel license is as effectual to create title which cannot be successfully attacked as a deed would be.

Baker v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 57 Mo. 265; Rersick v. Kern, 14 Serg. & R. 267, 16 Am. Dec. 497; House v. Montgomery, 19 Mo. App. 170; Chiles v. Wallace, 33 Mo. 84; Le Ferre v. Le Ferre, 4 Serg. & R. 241, 8 Am. Dec. 691; Campbell v. Indianapolis & V. R. Co. 110 Ind. 492; Buchanan v. Loganport, C. & S. W. R. Co. 71 Ind. 265; Simons v. Morehouse, 88 Ind. 394; Hodgson v. Jeffries, 52 Ind. 334; Russell v. Hubbard, 59 Ill. 335; Wilson v. Chalfant, 15 Ohio, 248, 45 Am. Dec. 574; Clark v. Glidden, 62 Vt. 702; Angell, Water-Courses, § 318; Cook v. Pridgen, 45 Ga. 331, 12 Am. Rep. 582.

Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co., 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961, says in reference to the effect of a repeal of a franchise to a street railway company: "Personal and real property acquired by the corporation during its lawful existence, rights of contract, or choses in action so acquired, and which do not, in their nature, depend upon the general powers conferred by the charter, are not destroyed by such a repeal."

See Dernott v. Jones, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 1, 17 L. ed. 762.

Messrs. Karnes, Holmes & Krauthoff, also for National Waterworks Co.:

There is in the cross bill a new substantive cause of action upon which a decree can be had without connecting it with the original bill. The complainant is here wanting to go entirely upon new ground, in fact to make a new case. If this is to be done, it must be by a dismissal of the present bill and the filing of a new one.

Calling the pleadings a supplemental cross-bill does not alter the case.

Hill v. Hill, 10 Ala. 527; Rotier v. Barclay, 15 Ala. 439; Dann v. Baker, 13 How. Pr. 521; Watson v. Thibou, 17 Abb. Pr. 184; Harrington v. Slade, 22 Barb. 161; Slavson v. Englehart, 34 Barb. 198; Milner v. Milner, 2 Edw. Ch. 114, 6 L. ed. 330; Gillett v. Hall, 13 Conn. 426; Clark v. Hull, 31 Miss. 520; Ledwith v. Jacksonville, 32 Fla. 1; Story, Eq. Pl. 9th ed. § 336.

The original and supplemental bills "make but one pleading and, so far as they conflict, destroy each other."

Story, Eq. Pl. 9th ed. § 332, note 4; Choteau v. Rice, 1 Minn. 106; Sanderlin v. Thompson, 17 N. C. 539; Bannon v. Comegys, 69 Md. 411.

A plaintiff cannot file a bill for one purpose and then by amendment convert it into a bill for an opposite purpose. Thus, a person cannot file a bill to set aside a deed, and then by amendment turn it into a bill to execute the trusts of the same deed.

Allen v. Spring, 23 Beav. 615; Holston v. Bail, 1 Phill. Ch. 177; Taylor v. Taylor, 1 Macn. & G. 397; Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 Sch. & Lef. 1; Deniston v. Little, Id. 11, note; Straughan v. Hallwood, 30 W. Va. 274; Maynard v. Green, 30 Fed. Rep. 643.

Every fact and circumstance negatives the fundamental essential that the city has been "doing equity." Its refusal to pay hydrant rentals, if that were the only non compliance disclosed by the record, would, alone, disentitle it to be heard in a court of equity.

Pensacola Gas Co. v. Provisional Municipality of Pensacola, 33 Fla. 322.

A bill to annul a contract for fraud or illegality and to specifically enforce it if the court shall hold that it is valid, is fatally defective.

St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 33 Fed. Rep. 440; Shields v. Barrow, 58 U. S. 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158.

The city is entirely without available means to apply to the purchase of waterworks. The full rate limited by the constitution has been continually levied, and the ordinary current expenses of the city have been barely met, and have several times exceeded the revenue collected.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 130; Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360; Lake County Comrs. v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1062; Lake County Comrs. v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1066; Doon Dist. Twp. v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 366, 35 L.

ed. 1045; Nesbit v. Riverside Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 88 L. ed. 562; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 87 L. ed. 1044; Barnard v. Knox County, 13 L. R. A. 244, 106 Mo. 382; State v. Columbia, 111 Mo. 365; Scott v. Davenport, 84 Iowa, 208; McDonald v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 245; Trustees of Public Schools v. Taylor, 80 N. J. Eq. 618; List v. Wheeling, 7 W. Va. 501; East St. Louis v. United States, 120 U. S. 600, 30 L. ed. 798; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 860.

Such contracts do not evidence an indebtedness, nor even an absolute obligation.

The city could renew or purchase.

Valparaiso v. Gardner, 97 Ind. 1, 49 Am. Rep. 416; Garrison v. Iows, 17 N. Y. 458; Weston v. Syracuse, 17 N. Y. 110; Budd v. Budd, 59 Fed. Rep. 735; Crowder v. Sullivan, 13 L. R. A. 647, 128 Ind. 486; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gas Light & Coke Co. 98 Ill. 415, 88 Am. Rep. 97; Dicely v. Cedar Falls, 27 Iowa, 227; McElfresh v. Kirkendall, 36 Iowa, 224; Grant v. Davenport, 36 Iowa, 396; Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49 Iowa, 58.

Under the Constitution of Missouri the interest upon the indebtedness created in the purchase of these waterworks must be included in and covered by the rate there limited.

State v. Columbia, supra.

The suggestion that this interest will be paid out of the proceeds of the operation of the waterworks is without force, for such proceeds cannot be "a basis for the creation of debt."

Millsaps v. Terrell, 60 Fed. Rep. 193.

The city did not hold its authority by contract binding on the state, and there could not be an impairment of a contractual obligation by reason of the action withdrawing or modifying that power.

Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440; Laramie County Comrs. v. Albany County Comrs. 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 51 U. S. 10 How. 511, 13 L. ed. 518; Conner v. Bent, 1 Mo. 285; St. Louis v. Russell, 9 Mo. 508; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943; Seibert v. United States, 129 U. S. 284, 30 L. ed. 1163; Scotland County Ct. v. United States, 140 U. S. 41, 35 L. ed. 351.

A clause of assumption by a vendee creates a personal liability, which can be enforced by the creditor in an action at law. The party assuming becomes charged with a primary obligation to pay, which inures to the benefit of the creditor.

Heim v. Vogel, 69 Mo. 529; Fitzgerald v. Barker, 70 Mo. 685; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 78 Mo. 389, 39 Am. Rep. 519; Ironwood Waterworks Co. v. Trebilcock, 99 Mich. 454; McPherson v. Foster, 43 Iowa, 48, 32 Am. Rep. 215; Citizens Bank of Texarkana v. Terrell, 78 Tex. 450.

Where such an option to purchase was reserved, subsequent legislation, inconsistent with the exercise of such option, operated by implication of law, as a surrender of the same.

People v. Kankakee River Imp. Co. 103 Ill. 491; State v. Field, 99 Mo. 352.

The Act of 1873, and the contract made 27 L. R. A.

with the company, both contemplated that the system therein provided for should be a permanent one, and that no further or different works should be built.

The effect of the Act of 1873, and of the contract made in pursuance thereof, was to exhaust the power of the city in respect to the construction of waterworks.

Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, 89 N. J. Eq. 367; Newport v. Newport Light Co. 84 Ky. 166; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525; St. Tammany Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. ed. 563.

The course and conduct of the city, illustrated by its legislation, its pleading, and the testimony in this case, conclusively establish an election on its part to stand upon the proposition that it is released from all its obligations under the contract with the company.

Rison v. Newberry (Va.) Feb. 1, 1894; Provisional Municipality of Pensacola v. Lehman, 57 Fed. Rep. 324; Pensacola Gas Co. v. Provisional Municipality of Pensacola, 33 Fla. 323; Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 341, 24 L. ed. 659; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Producing & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516; Asheville Street R. Co. v. Asheville, 109 N. C. 688.

No one, not even a city, can claim under a contract and against it at the same time, nor in the same proceeding.

2 Addison, Cont. 998, 999, 1218, 1219; Bishop, Cont. §§ 784, 785, 828, 835; Leake, Cont. 869, 871, 872; New Haven, M. & W. R. Co. v. Chatham, 42 Conn. 466; Calhoun v. Milard, 8 L. R. A. 248, 121 N. Y. 69; Society for Savings v. New London, 29 Conn. 174; Belleuve Water Co. v. Bellevue (Idaho) Dec. 23, 1893.

Cities have the right to own property outside of their limits and also in other states, to supply the needs of the public.

People v. Kelly, 76 N. Y. 475; Re New York, 99 N. Y. 569; Duluth v. Duluth Gas & Water Co. 45 Minn. 210; Ironwood Waterworks Co. v. Trebilcock, 99 Mich. 454; Pocantico Waterworks Co. v. Bird, 180 N. Y. 249; Tarrytown v. Pocantico Water Co. 15 N. Y. S. R. 816; Pelham Manor v. New Rochelle Water Co. 67 Hun. 98; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco City & County, 6 L. R. A. 756, 82 Cal. 286.

In respect to the subject-matter of this litigation, the city exercised a mere business power, and not a legislative function. It follows that the same rules are to be applied which would govern private persons, and that there is no question in this case involving rules peculiar to municipal corporations or franchises granted by them.

San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Vincennes v. Citizens Gas Light & Coke Co. 16 L. R. A. 485, 182 Ind. 114; Com. v. Philadelphia, 182 Pa. 288; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans, 42 La. Ann. 188; Tacoma Hotel Co. v. Tacoma Light & Water Co. 14 L. R. A. 669, 3 Wash. 316; Wagner v. Rock Island, 21 L. R. A. 519, 146 Ill. 139; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 27; Brumm's App. 22 W. N. C. 137; Cincinnati v. Cameron, 83 Ohio St. 886; Tindley v. Salem, 187 Mass. 171, 50 Am. Rep.

289; State v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 558; Lake Roland Elev. R. Co. v. Baltimore, 20 L. R. A. 126, 77 Md. 852; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Producing & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516; St. Tammany Water Works Co. v. New Orleans Water Works Co. 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. ed. 563; Columbus Water Co. v. Columbus, 15 L. R. A. 354, 48 Kan. 90.

Such contracts are an invitation to capital to build the system, and it is the duty of courts to see that the highest good faith is exercised by the municipality.

Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co. 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. ed. 187; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light & Heat Producing & Mfg. Co. supra; New Orleans Water Works Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525; Brown v. Atchison, 39 Kan. 54; State v. Crete, 32 Neb. 568.

In view of the large expenditure to be incurred and risks to be taken, the courts will always construe such contracts as an assurance that the investment will not be a losing one.

Atlantic City Water Works Co. v. Atlantic City, 39 N. J. Eq. 367; Searcy v. Yarnell, 47 Ark. 269; Foote & Everett, Law of Incorp. Companies, 72, 76, 80.

Courts exercise a broad equity and great liberality to protect the investor.

Winfield v. Winfield Water Co. 51 Kan. 70.

Where a contract was made for the furnishing of material at "its market value at the time of delivery," and it appeared that the contract called for a quantity so large that the manufacturer was willing to yield a large discount, it was contended that the contract should be construed as though it read "market value for the large quantity required."

Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, speaking for the court, held that there was no authority to import words into the contract as written.

Orchard v. Simpson, 2 C. B. N. S. 299.

It has been ruled that a somewhat similar property was justly to be valued at "its real worth or intrinsic value to a purchaser able and willing to operate it, . . . according to its capacity to make net earnings and according to what it would cost to build and equip such a road, then and there, if it had never been built, and the right of way had yet to be acquired and the road built from the stump.

Grant v. East & West R. Co. of Alabama, 54 Fed. Rep. 569.

It cannot be either fair or equitable to allow less than: (a) the system would have cost the city, net, if it had built the same itself, had received the same income from its private consumers, and paid the same hydrant rentals for public service; or (b) the cost of actually reproducing the system under the conditions as they exist to-day.

Citizens Water Co. of Bridgeport v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 55 Conn. 1.

The contract with the city relates to a supply of water for public purposes, but it differs in no respect from any contract the company might make with a private individual for the supply of water at a specified price.

Vincennes v. Citizens Gas Light & Coke Co. 16 L. R. A. 485, 132 Ind. 114; New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans, 42 La. Ann. 188; 37 L. R. A.

Wagner v. Rock Island, 21 L. R. A. 519, 146 Ill. 139; Brumm's App. 23 W. N. C. 187; State v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 558.

The conditions upon which such corporations are compelled to supply applications are that the latter shall "comply with the reasonable regulations of such company."

Portland Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. State, 21 L. R. A. 639, 135 Ind. 54.

It is an obligation to supply those "who pay" the company's rates.

New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co's Petition v. Metropolitan Gas Light Co. 5 Hun, 201; Com. v. Lowell Gas Light Co. 12 Allen, 75.

Courts of equity have uniformly required the party seeking relief against a company to conform to such conditions, and the rule has been alike applied where the complainant was the United States, the state of New York, a municipality, or a private consumer.

United States v. American Water Works Co. 37 Fed. Rep. 747; People v. Canal Board, 55 N. Y. 390; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

The obligation to pay in such a case rests upon the established principle that those who receive a commodity under a contract impliedly agree to pay the contract price.

Wagner v. Rock Island, 21 L. R. A. 519, 146 Ill. 139; Merrimack River Sav. Bank v. Lowell, 10 L. R. A. 123, 152 Mass. 556; Cincinnati v. Cameron, 33 Ohio St. 386; President Inst. for Savings v. Jersey City, 118 U. S. 506, 28 L. ed. 1102; Fiak v. Jefferson Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 29 L. ed. 587.

Even if construed as a condition precedent, the city was nevertheless bound to pay for the water actually furnished by the company.

Wiley v. Athol, 6 L. R. A. 342, 150 Mass. 426.

The city has not sustained a single dollar of damages; and even if there was evidence of damage, slight or large, to individual citizens, there was no liability therefor, either upon the city or upon the company, nor did it invest the city with a right to recoup such damages against the company's claim.

Montgomery v. Montgomery Water Works, 79 Ala. 233; Heller v. Sedalia, 53 Mo. 159, 14 Am. Rep. 444; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Trenton Water Co. 42 Mo. App. 118; Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 750; Black v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785; Mott v. Cherrysale Water & Mfg. Co. 48 Kan. 12; House v. Houston Waterworks Co. (Tex.) March 16, 1893; Britton v. Green Bay & F. H. Water Works Co. 21 Wis. 48; Eaton v. Fairbury Water Works Co. 21 L. R. A. 653, 37 Neb. 546.

Memors. Frank Hagerman, John C. Gage, L. C. Slavens, R. W. Quarles, O. H. Dean, and F. F. Rosselle, for Kansas City.

Brewer, Circuit Justice, stated the conclusions of the court as follows:

The urgency of the situation seems to forbid that this case should be retained by us for the length of time which would be required for the preparation of an opinion thoroughly and satisfactorily discussing all the difficult questions presented by counsel. All the time at our command we have given to an examination and consideration of the voluminous testimony, the elaborate briefs, and exhaustive arguments of counsel. We feel, therefore, that it is a duty to simply formulate briefly the conclusions to which we have arrived, and announce the decree which must be entered.

1. The Act of 1873 provided "that at the expiration of the twenty years, if the grant be not renewed, the city shall purchase." The ordinance passed in pursuance of that act, and in effect the contract under which the works were created, provided that on a failure to renew the grant at the expiration of twenty years "the city shall then be required to purchase." There has been no renewal of the grant. The twenty years have elapsed. The imperative voice of the act and the ordinance is that the city "shall purchase." This is not an incidental, directory, or subordinate provision, but one mandatory, vital, and controlling. The thought of the legislature was that the city should own its waterworks; that, if any arrangement was made with a corporation for their construction and operation, the control and right of such company should be temporary, and the city should become, willingly or unwillingly, at a certain time the owner. The time fixed was at the expiration of twenty years, with a privilege of extension for another twenty years. This vital, mandatory, and controlling provision compels a decree that the company sell and the city buy. Such was the will of the legislature; such the terms of the act and the ordinance.

2. With reference to the matter of pleading, nearly two years before the expiration of the twenty years the company filed a bill alleging performance on its part of the terms of the contract, and also threatened action on the part of the city in violation of its obligations, and praying a decree that the contract "is a valid and subsisting contract, binding and obligatory upon your orator and the defendant, and that the defendant keep and abide by the same, and that, upon your orator's duly and faithfully doing and performing all things yet remaining to be done upon its part, the defendant, its officers and agents, keep and perform the covenants, promises, and agreements on its part, so far as they are executory and unperformed, and that your orator may have such other and further relief as the case may require, and as may be conformable to equity, and to your honors may seem meet." At that time the obligation of the city to purchase had not yet arrived, but under such a bill a decree, after the lapse of twenty years, and when, there being no renewal of the term, the obligation of the city to purchase has arisen, may properly require the last act of compliance with the terms of that contract, to wit, purchase and payment by the city; so, notwithstanding the fact that the cross-bill of the city, and the amendments thereto, may not be altogether harmonious, and might, if they stood as the only affirmative pleadings, be obnoxious to the criticisms of the counsel for the company, yet there is in the original bill, with its prayer, coupled with the changes of right brought by lapse of time, sufficient allegation and prayer upon which to rest a decree for the completion of the sale and purchase. It is true, and indeed confessed in the argument of counsel for the company, that it would now prefer not to sell, but to continue the franchise; but, nevertheless, it has for nearly three years placed itself before the court in the attitude of asking a decree for performance of this contract; and, never having dismissed its bill or withdrawn its prayer, it is now too late to say that the decree for sale and purchase is not responsive to the pleadings. If there were any formal defect,—any omission or addition of statement necessary to distinctly present the issues and uphold the decree,—an amendment would be permissible at the present time, and in the appellate court. Pleadings in equity cases may be conformed to the proofs; and we have the parties before us, the entire facts of the controversy, and the arrival of the time when a final determination of the rights between them is necessary. No technical defect in the pleadings should stay the hands of a court of equity.

3. We dissent in toto from the claim of the city that at the lapse of the twenty years the title to this property, with the right of possession, passed absolutely to it, without any payment or tender of payment, leaving only to the company the right to secure compensation by agreement or litigation, as best it could. Much was said in argument of the relative rights of lessor and lessee to buildings erected during the term of the lease. The city and the company were called licensor and licensee, and it was insisted that, as the right to operate was to cease at the expiration of twenty years, the relation was equivalent to that of lessor and lessee; that full title and right of possession passed instantly to the city, leaving all questions of amount and time and manner of payment to be subsequently determined. Much was said, too, about the rule of construction of public grants; that rule being that the grants are to be construed favorably to the public, and unfavorably to the grantee. It is unnecessary to attempt to define the peculiar quality of the title held by the company, nor do we question the rule of construction of public grants; but all contracts involving property rights and obligations between municipalities and individuals must be presumed to be based upon and to recognize the ordinary laws of business transactions, and, if any departure therefrom is contemplated, such departure must be clearly manifested. Now, the familiar and ordinary law of business transactions is that he who parts with title receives, at the time, payment. In other words, payment of price and transfer of property are contemporaneous and concurrent acts. When it is affirmed that a contract made by a municipality contemplates that he whose money builds and constructs, and therefore establishes title to, property, shall surrender his title and possession without payment, or even the amount thereof determined, the language compelling such a construction must be clear and imperative. There is no such language in either the act or the ordinance.

While it is true that the act provides that no grant so made shall confer the right to operate the waterworks for any period beyond twenty years, yet such provision is no more imperative than the one that at the expiration of the twenty years the city shall purchase and pay therefor. If the city fails to purchase and pay, it acquires no title, no right of possession, to the property of the waterworks. There is no language which would justify the court in saying that it is clearly expressed that the purpose of this contract and the thought of the legislature were to vest the title and right of possession in the city at the end of twenty years, leaving to future litigation the fixing of the amount and the enforcing of the fact of payment. If at the expiration of the twenty years the city had tendered to the company, in payment for the property, an amount admitted or found to be "the fair and equitable value," doubtless the right of the city to the possession and future earnings would have immediately accrued, and the present decree would have been based upon such transfer of right, but no such tender was made. In so far, therefore, as the decree of the circuit court attempted to transfer the title and the possession to the city before payment, we are constrained to hold that it was erroneous.

4. It is objected that the city, by virtue of the certain amendments to its charter and certain acts of the legislature, has become disabled from taking the title to all the property which makes up the waterworks system. This is a matter in respect to which the company need not concern itself. If it is paid the fair and equitable value of the property, as provided by the contract, then its rights have ceased, and the city can settle with other parties the matters of title and possession.

5. The difficult question, however, still remains; and that is, What is "the fair and equitable value" which, by the statute and the ordinance, the city is to pay for the waterworks? This amount was found by the circuit court to be $2,714,000. The company insists that the test is to take the income or earnings, and capitalize them. The earnings pay 6 per cent on four millions and a half. In other words, the company has produced a property which earns 6 per cent on four millions and a half; and that, it is claimed, is the fair valuation of the property, 6 per cent being ordinary interest. On the other hand, the city insists that the franchise has ceased, and that basing the value upon earnings is in effect valuing a franchise which no longer exists, and which the city is not to pay for; that the true way is to take the value of the pipe, the machinery, and real estate, put together into a waterworks system, as a complete structure, irrespective of any franchise, —irrespective of anything which the property earns, or may earn in the future. We are not satisfied—that either method, by itself, will show that which, under all the circumstances, can be adjudged "the fair and equitable value." Capitalization of the earnings will not, because that implies a continuance of earnings, and a continuance of earnings rests upon a franchise to operate the waterworks. The original cost of the construction cannot control, for "original cost" and "present value" are not equivalent terms. Nor would the mere cost of reproducing the waterworks plant be a fair test, because that does not take into account the value which flows from the established connections between the pipes and the buildings of the city. It is obvious that the mere cost of purchasing the land, constructing the buildings, putting in the machinery, and laying the pipes in the streets—in other words, the cost of reproduction—does not give the value of the property as it is to-day. A completed system of waterworks, such as the company has, without a single connection between the pipes in the streets and the buildings of the city, would be a property of much less value than that system connected, as it is, with so many buildings, and earning, in consequence thereof, the money which it does earn. The fact that it is a system in operation, not only with a capacity to supply the city, but actually supplying many buildings in the city,—not only with a capacity to earn, but actually earning,—makes it true that "the fair and equitable value" is something in excess of the cost of reproduction. The fact that the company does not own the connections between the pipes in the streets and the buildings—such connections being the property of the individual property owners—does not militate against the proposition last stated, for who would care to buy, or at least give a large price for, a waterworks system without a single connection between the pipes in the streets and the buildings adjacent. Such a system would be a dead structure, rather than a living and going business. The additional value created by the fact of many connections with buildings, with actual supply and actual earnings, is not represented by the mere cost of making such connections. Such connections are not compulsory, but depend upon the will of the property owners, and are secured only by efforts on the part of the owners of the waterworks, and inducements held out therefor. The city, by this purchase, steps into possession of a waterworks plant,—not merely a completed system for bringing water to the city, and distributing it through pipes placed in the streets, but a system already earning a large income by virtue of having secured connections between the pipes in the streets and a multitude of private buildings. It steps into possession of a property which not only has the ability to earn, but is in fact earning. It should pay therefor not merely the value of a system which might be made to earn, but that of a system which does earn. Our effort has been to deduce from the volume of testimony that which, in this view of the situation, can be safely adjudged "the fair and equitable value." The original cost of the works is not accurately and satisfactorily shown. If it would have assisted us in reaching a conclusion,—if, in consequence of our ignorance thereof, we have not placed the value upon this property which it deserves,—the company is alone to blame, for by the production of its books it could have clearly shown the actual cost of every part and of the whole of this property. There is a large amount of testimony as to the probable cost of reproducing the system, to which strenuous objection is made on the ground of an alleged temporary and extreme depression in the cost of labor and material. We have before us the estimate placed by two gentlemen of experience and capacity, appointed as commissioners, with direction to report "the fair and equitable value;" but neither by the order of the court appointing them, nor by their report, are we advised as to what they considered a criterion of the present "fair and equitable value." If they added anything beyond what in their judgment was the reasonable cost of reproduction, we are not advised as to how much they added, or what they took into consideration in making such addition. We have the fact of liens placed upon the property to the extent of $3,000,000, with the qualified approval of the city officials. We have also the statement of the earnings, and the estimate of the value upon the basis of a capitalization of those earnings, amounting, as stated, at six per cent, to four and one-half millions. Rejecting the latter as too high, and the cost of reproduction as too low, and taking into consideration the entire history of the transaction between the company and the city, from its commencement to the present time, we have sought to place a value upon the property as it stands, with all the connections already made between the pipes and the private and public buildings, and with the work which it is in fact doing of supplying all these buildings with water, and receiving pay therefor. That valuation, after much discussion, comparison of figures, and readjustments, we have all agreed, is three millions of dollars; and in reaching this result we have excluded from our estimate the value of the Jarboe street reservoir property, which as we understand the testimony, has heretofore been paid for by the city.

6. In its cross-bill the city has made claim for damages, and insisted that the waterworks system does not come up, in efficiency and completeness, to the requirements of the contract. We agree with the circuit court, after reviewing carefully the testimony, that the city is not entitled to maintain this claim. It has for many years recognized and accepted this waterworks system as having been constructed in full compliance with the demands of the contract, and it is now too late to repudiate such recognition.

This is perhaps all that it is necessary for us to say. We have stated our conclusions, and outlined our reasons therefor. Further than that we are unable to go, without, as stated in the opening, taking more time than the circumstances will permit. In order to close as far as possible all disputed matters, we have prepared the form of a decree which is to be entered by the circuit court.

This case is accordingly remanded to the circuit court, with directions to vacate its former decree, and in lieu thereof to enter the following decree, to wit:

First. It is ordered, adjudged, decreed, and determined that under the Act of the legislature of the state of Missouri of March 27 L. R. A.

24, 1878, and the contract evidenced by Ordinance No. 10,524, between the National Waterworks Company, of New York, and the city of Kansas City, Missouri, which act and ordinance are referred to in the pleadings in this case, the said city is now legally bound to purchase from said company, and said company is legally bound to sell to the said city, the full, complete, and entire waterworks plant and appurtenances by which the said city and its inhabitants are now supplied with water, including therein that portion of said plant situated in the state of Kansas, and commonly known as the "Quindaro Supply Works," and the flow pipes leading therefrom as well as that portion of said works which is situated in the state of Missouri, together with all lots of land, buildings, and reservoirs belonging to, or in any wise used as a part of, said plant, with the exception mentioned in the eleventh paragraph of this decree, and everything of every nature pertaining to said waterworks plant.

Second. That said city, under the said contract, is bound to pay for said complete waterworks plant aforesaid, and the said company is bound to receive in full payment therefor, "the fair and equitable value of the whole works," as provided in said contract evidenced by Ordinance No. 10,524.

Third. The court finds, adjudges, and decrees, that the fair and equitable value of said complete and whole waterworks plant, excluding the Jarboe street tract, which belongs to the city, is three million dollars, and that said city is legally obligated to pay that sum therefor.

Fourth. That said company is entitled to retain the possession, use, and control of the whole and complete waterworks system and plant aforesaid until final payment therefor shall be made by said city as hereinafter provided; and said city is hereby enjoined from interfering with such possession, use, or control until such payment is made, and said company, on its part, is hereby enjoined from refusing or neglecting to supply water to the city, and from refusing or neglecting to provide private consumers with water, as heretofore during such period.

Fifth. It is further ordered and decreed that on or before the 1st day of December, A. D. 1894, the said company shall cause to be executed, and shall deliver to the clerk of this court, who shall hold the same in escrow, good and sufficient deeds, assignments, releases, bills of sale, and other conveyances whereby the whole and complete waterworks system and plant aforesaid, including that portion thereof which is situated in the state of Kansas, may be transferred to said city free and clear of all burdens, obligations, liens, and incumbrances of every kind, save the lien created by the two mortgages executed by the waterworks company, respectively, on August 1, 1883, and June 1, 1885, each of which mortgages secures bonds of said company, said to be now outstanding in the sum of one million five hundred thousand dollars; that said deeds, releases, assignments, bills of sale, or other conveyances shall be retained by said clerk, but said clerk shall furnish full and complete copies of all such instruments to the city or its attorneys of record, for their inspection.

Sixth. It is further ordered and adjudged that after the execution and delivery to the clerk of the deeds, assignments, releases, and bills of sale aforesaid, the said city shall be entitled to thirty days in which to except to the sufficiency of such conveyances; and power is hereby reserved to hear and determine such exceptions, and to make all needful orders in relation thereto. When such deeds, assignments, releases, and bills of sale shall have been executed and filed as aforesaid, and after the approval thereof by the court, if the same shall be excepted to by the city shall thereupon pay to the clerk of this court the said sum of three million dollars, being the fair and equitable value of said waterworks plant as heretofore assessed, or it shall cause the same to be so paid. Said payment shall be made to said clerk for the benefit of whom it may concern, and power is hereby reserved to the court to determine who are entitled to said fund after the same shall have been so paid into the court; and power is also reserved to permit any person or persons or corporation who may hereafter claim to have a legal or equitable lien upon said fund to intervene for the protection of his or their interest.

Seventh. It is further ordered and adjudged that upon payment being made by said city as aforesaid of said sum of three million dollars, and of the hydrant rentals mentioned in paragraph nine, said clerk shall deliver to said city or its authorized representatives all deeds, assignments, releases, bills of sale, and other muniments of title then held by him in escrow; and thereupon said city shall become vested with the title to said waterworks, and it shall forthwith be entitled to the exclusive possession, control, use, and enjoyment of said entire waterworks system and plant, and to all revenues, of whatsoever nature, thereafter resulting therefrom; and said waterworks company shall forthwith surrender the possession and control thereof to said city, and the interest of said company therein shall thenceforth cease and determine.

Eighth. It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said city shall have the right to enter into any agreement which it may deem proper for the assumption, continuation of the lien, payment, or cancellation of any of the outstanding mortgage bonds, aggregating three million dollars, which are referred to in paragraph five of this decree, and that any arrangement which said city may so enter into with the owners and holders of said bonds, which shall result in the cancellation or payment of any thereof or in the continuation of the lien, or in the assumption of any thereof by the city, and in the release of the waterworks company from its obligations thereon, shall operate pro tanto to discharge said city from its obligation to pay the three million dollars as provided in the sixth paragraph of this decree; and, for the purpose of enabling said city to avail itself of the provisions of this paragraph of the decree, power is hereby reserved to the court to ascertain hereafter to what extent, if any, said bonds have been canceled, paid, continued, assumed, or otherwise discharged by agreement between said bondholders and the city, and to make all needful orders in that behalf.

Ninth. It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that in addition to the value of said waterworks plant, fixed and to be paid as aforesaid, the said city shall also pay all unpaid hydrant rentals which accrued prior to November 15, 1893, and all subsequently accruing hydrant rentals according to the rate heretofore fixed by agreement between said city and company until such time as the said city shall become entitled to the possession and use of said waterworks by virtue of compliance on its part with the previous provisions of this decree. Until the last-mentioned date, said waterworks company shall be entitled to all the earnings and revenues of said plant, whether derived from individual or public consumers; but said company on its part shall be compelled, during said period, to keep said waterworks plant in good repair, and shall also pay, as and when the same shall mature, the several interest installments that may accrue on the mortgage bonds mentioned in paragraph five of this decree. Said payment of hydrant rentals, as well as the assessed value of the works, shall be made before said city shall assume possession and control of said waterworks; and power is hereby reserved to the court to hereafter state an account, if necessary, for the sum due for hydrant rentals, and to make all needful orders necessary and proper to enforce this paragraph of the decree.

Tenth. It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the city is not entitled to recover from said company any sum for or on account of any of the several claims for damages set up in its cross-bill, and as to said claims for damages said cross-bill is hereby dismissed.

Eleventh. That, conformably to the consent expressed by counsel for both parties at the hearing, the property described in the pleadings at "Kaw Point Pumping Station," and the six or ten acres of land, more or less, connected therewith, now owned by said company, shall remain its property, and shall not be conveyed to said city as part of said waterworks plant. The value of said Kaw Point pumping station has been deducted from the price to be paid for the complete works.

Twelfth. It is further adjudged that each party shall pay one half of the costs that have accrued in these suits up to the entry of this decree.

Thirteenth. That the court doth now reserve to itself the power to make any further order or orders that may hereafter be found necessary to carry this decree into full effect, and as may be deemed equitable and just.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

PITTSBURGH, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO
& ST. LOUIS R. CO., Appt.,

v.

William SULLIVAN.

(.....Ind.....)

1. Willful and unauthorized acts by an agent of a corporation will render the employer liable when performed while he is engaged in the discharge of duties within the general scope of his agency.
2. A corporation which voluntarily provides a physician for injured or sick employes whose services they are free to reject or accept, is liable only, if at all, for negligence in the selection of the physician and not for his negligent or tortious acts in the treatment of those who accept his services.

(April 9, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Cass County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by the negligence of defendant's servant. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. N. O. Ross, G. W. Funk, and B. C. Moon, for appellant:

There is no charge that appellant failed to use ordinary care in the selection of its surgeon, nor that he was not a competent surgeon. For the want of such averment the complaint is bad.

McDonald v. Massachusetts Gen. Hospital, 120 Mass. 432, 21 Am. Rep. 529; Secord v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 18 Fed. Rep. 221; Laudheim v. De Koninglyke Nederlandsche Stoomboot Maatschappij, 107 N. Y. 228; South Florida R. Co. v. Price, 32 Fla. 46; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Artist, 23 L. R. A. 531, 60 Fed. Rep. 365; Pfirs Ins. Patrol of Philadelphia v. Boyd, 1 L. R. A. 417, 120 Pa. 642; O'Brien v. Cunard S. S. Co. 13 L. R. A. 329, 154 Mass. 272; Elghmy v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Iowa) ante, 296; Haas v. Missionary Soc. of Most Holy Redeemer, 6 Misc. 281.

A charitable corporation, organized for the purpose of giving gratuitous surgical treatment to indigent persons, is not liable for injuries resulting from performing an operation on a patient, where the corporation has exercised due care in the selection of its skilled employes and surgeons.

Van Tassel v. Manhattan Eye & Ear Hospital, 89 N. Y. S. R. 781; McDonald v. Massachusetts Gen. Hospital, supra.

Many of these companies employ physicians and surgeons and erect hospitals for the treatment of their sick and injured employes, and their sick families, free of charge. When they thus engage in acts of charity, they are entitled, as to such charitable acts, to the rights of exclusively charitable corporations.

NOTE.—See similar cases in note to Williamson v. Louisville Industrial School of Reform (Ky.) 23 L. R. A. 200, also later cases, Union Pac. R. Co. v. Artist (C. C. App. 8th C.) 23 L. R. A. 531; Elghmy v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Iowa) ante, 296, 27 L. R. A.

Richardson v. Carbon Hill Coal Co. 20 L. R. A. 338, 6 Wash. 52; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 381; 9 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 773; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Artist and Laudheim v. De Koninglyke Nederlandsche Stoomboot Maatschappij, supra.

Where the law requires the performance by a corporation of a charitable act, it imposes upon such corporation no greater liability for damages resulting from the manner of its performance by the servants employed by it therefor than such corporation would assume by voluntarily performing such charity.

O'Brien v. Cunard S. S. Co. supra; Allan v. State S. S. Co. 15 L. R. A. 166, 132 N. Y. 91.

Mr. Dudley H. Chase, for appellee:

The principal is liable for the tortious acts of his agent committed against third persons whilst acting as such agent and within the scope of his agency.

Oakland City Agricultural & Industrial Soc. v. Bingham, 4 Ind. App. 545; Du Bois v. Decker, 14 L. R. A. 429, 130 N. Y. 325; Rucker v. Smoke, 37 S. C. 377; 1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 410.

Did not the appellant, by employing Dr. Fertich, as stated in the complaint, "hold him out as competent and fit to be trusted, and thereby in effect warrant his fidelity and good conduct in all matters within the scope of his agency?"

Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. McKee, 99 Ind. 519, 50 Am. Rep. 102.

The question of authority to do or not to do the particular act complained of is not the criterion by which the liability of the principal is to be determined.

Mechem, Ag. § 732, p. 563; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. McKee, 99 Ind. 519, 50 Am. Rep. 108; Bank of California v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 5 Cent. L. J. 265; Dickson v. Waldron, 135 Ind. 507; Story, Ag. § 452.

It is enough that confidence is tendered and accepted—that is a sufficient consideration; and the fact that the service is rendered gratuitously is immaterial. The confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it.

Glavin v. Rhode Island Hospital, 13 R. I. 411, 84 Am. Rep. 675; Cogges v. Barnard, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 218; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 55 U. S. 14 How. 463, 14 L. ed. 502; Whart. Neg. §§ 640, 641.

The tendency of all modern legislation is to enlarge the responsibility of the master in favor of the servant, instead of abridging it.

Pennsylvania Co. v. Weddle, 100 Ind. 138.

The relation of principal and agent existed between appellant and Dr. G. W. Fertich, under the facts stated in the appellee's complaint and as found by the special verdict.

Story, Ag. § 8; Bishop, Contr. § 1027.

The act of Dr. Fertich in cutting off appellee's arm was a crime against the laws of Indiana and amounted in law to an assault and battery, or a mayhem.

Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, §§ 1911, 1913; Cooley, Torts, *164; Buswell, Personal Injuries, p. 193, and cases cited; Com. v. Stratton, 114 Mass.

803, 19 Am. Rep. 350; Com. v. Pierce, 138 Mass. 165, 52 Am. Rep. 264.

For such act by Dr. Fertich the appellant is liable in damages to appellee.

Rucker v. Smoke, 87 S. C. 377; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. McKee, 99 Ind 519, 50 Am. Rep. 102; Dickson v. Waldron, 135 Ind. 507.

Although the appellee was not expecting to pay anything for Dr. Fertich's services, and such services were tendered to appellee gratuitously by appellant, yet the appellant is liable for the crime of its agent in damages to appellee.

Whart. Neg. §§ 640, 641; Du Bois v. Decker, 14 L. R. A. 429, 130 N. Y. 325; Story, Ag. § 452; Reynolds v. Witte, 13 S. C. 5, 86 Am. Rep. 686; Glavin v. Rhode Island Hospital, 12 R. L. 411, 84 Am. Rep. 675.

Jordan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee brought this action to recover damages against the appellant (a railroad corporation, engaged in the business of a common carrier) for "unlawfully, wrongfully, and unnecessarily amputating appellee's right arm." The principal errors assigned in this court are: First, overruling demurrer to complaint; second, sustaining demurrer to second paragraph of answer; third, overruling a motion for judgment in favor of appellant upon the special verdict of the jury.

The complaint, inter alia, alleges "that on November 21, 1891, the appellee was a servant of appellant, engaged as a brakeman, that while at the station of Red Key, in Jay county, Indiana, in making a coupling, his right arm was accidentally caught, crushed, and injured; that immediately after plaintiff's said injuries, he was taken by the servants of said defendant to the office of one Dr. G. W. Fertich, being then and there one of a number of physicians employed by the defendant to render medical and surgical assistance to the servants and employés of said defendant, while engaged in their respective duties as such employés and servants; that, immediately after plaintiff's arrival at said Dr. G. W. Fertich's office for medical and surgical treatment, said G. W. Fertich proposed to give the plaintiff chloroform, in order to render plaintiff insensible to and unconscious of pain while his said hurts and injuries were being examined and treated; that, before plaintiff consented to take said chloroform, he informed said Dr. G. W. Fertich that he would not take chloroform unless he (said Dr. G. W. Fertich) would promise plaintiff that his arm should not be amputated while he was under the influence of chloroform, and insensible and unconscious therefrom; that thereupon said Dr. G. W. Fertich promised plaintiff that he would not amputate and cut off plaintiff's injured arm, and plaintiff, relying on such promise, consented to and did then and there take chloroform, and became then and there unconscious and helpless from the effects thereof, said chloroform being then and there administered to plaintiff by the order and direction of said Dr. G. W. Fertich, by his assistant, one Dr. Shepherd; that, while plaintiff was then and there insensible, unconscious, and helpless from the effects of said chloroform, the said Dr. G. W. Fertich did then and there wrongfully, unlawfully, and unnecessarily cut off the plaintiff's right arm about six inches above the elbow; that by reason of the unlawful, unnecessary, and wrongful act of said Dr. G. W. Fertich in amputating and cutting off plaintiff's right arm, as aforesaid, plaintiff suffered great bodily and mental anguish and pain, and is now suffering great pain of body and mind; that plaintiff has thereby been rendered totally incapacitated from doing manual labor, and permanently injured physically in his means of livelihood and support; and that, at the time of his injuries complained of, there was no good or sufficient reason or cause, in fact or in the science of medicine and surgery, for the amputation of plaintiff's said arm; that plaintiff's said arm could and would have been saved to him by competent and ordinarily skillful medical and surgical treatment." To this complaint, after having unsuccessfully assailed it by a demurrer, appellant filed an answer in two paragraphs. The first was a denial, and the second was as follows: "And, for a second and further answer, the defendant says that, at the time complained of, it owed the plaintiff no duty, nor was it under any legal obligations, to furnish him the services of a physician or surgeon to treat him for the injury stated in his complaint; that, at the time complained of, G. W. Fertich, of Dunkirk, in Jay county, Indiana, was employed by the year to give and render services as a physician and surgeon to persons injured upon the defendant's road, whether employés or others, which services were gratuitous to the persons receiving them, and were provided for the exigencies of each case, temporarily, until the patient could be removed or otherwise provided for; and that such services could be accepted or refused by each person at his own pleasure. And the defendant further says that, in the selection and employment of said Fertich for the purpose aforesaid, it used due care to procure a skillful and competent surgeon and physician, and believes him to be such, and, if incompetent or incapable in any respect, it had no knowledge of the fact at the time of his employment or since; and that he was the most competent and skillful surgeon and physician in that locality. And the defendant further says that if said Fertich made any promise or agreement with the plaintiff, as charged in the complaint, it was outside his duties under said employment, and not authorized by the defendant." A demurrer was sustained to this second paragraph of answer, and appellant excepted.

The contentions of the learned counsel for the appellant are: First, that the complaint is not sufficient to entitle appellee to recover against appellant; second, that the second paragraph of answer was a defense to the complaint; third, that the gravamen of the complaint is that of malpractice upon the part of Fertich, the physician, and for such appellant is not liable in damages; fourth, that the complaint does not allege that Fertich was an agent of plaintiff, nor do the averred facts sustain such an assumption, neither do they show that a duty, by virtue of any law or contract, existed upon the part of appellant to furnish to appellee the services of the surgeon in question, nor do they establish that appellant failed to exercise ordinary care in the selection of said physician. The contentions of the learned counsel for appellee are: First, that the relation of principal and agent existed between appellant and Fertich, under the facts stated in the appellee's complaint; second, that the act of Fertich in cutting off appellee's arm was within the scope of his authority as agent of appellant, under the facts alleged in the appellee's complaint; third, that the act of Dr. Fertich in cutting off appellee's arm, as alleged in appellee's complaint, was a crime against the laws of Indiana, and amounted, in law, to an assault and battery, or mayhem; fourth, that for such act by Fertich the appellant is liable in damages to appellee.

The first and essential point to be determined is as to the sufficiency of the complaint to constitute a cause of action against appellant. It is well settled by numerous decisions of this court and others that a corporation is responsible for the acts of an agent performed while engaged in the discharge of duties within the general scope of his agency, although the particular act was willful, and was not directly authorized. A corporation that intrusts a general duty to an agent is responsible to an injured person for damages flowing from the agent's wrongful act done in the course of his general authority, although in doing the particular act the agent may have failed in his duty to his principal, and disobeyed its instructions. The doctrine formerly enunciated and adhered to by the courts was that the master could not be held liable for the willful wrongs of his servant, but that rule has been quite generally abrogated by the modern decisions. Pennsylvania Co. v. Weddle, 100 Ind. 188, and cases cited; Oakland City Agricultural & Industrial Soc. v. Bingham, 4 Ind. App. 545, and authorities there cited.

But a different question is raised, under the facts set up in the complaint and the second paragraph of the answer, in the case at bar, and the rule supported and adhered to by the decisions above cited is not decisive of the point involved in this cause. The complaint must be construed upon the theory which is most apparent and clearly outlined by the facts stated therein. Jones v. Cullen (at this term) (Ind.) 40 N. E. Rep. 124, and cases cited. Considering the complaint with reference to all of its alleged facts, it is apparent that it proceeds upon the theory that Dr. Fertich was a physician, employed or retained by appellant to render gratuitously medical or surgical services to its servants or employes, and that the appellee, who had been accidentally injured while in the employ of appellant, was, with his own consent, and by the aid of his fellow servants, conducted to the office of Fertich, and that while there the doctor placed him under the influence of chloroform, from the effects of which he was rendered unconscious, and while in that condition, and in violation of the doctor's promise that he would not amputate his arm, he (Fertich) did "wrongfully, unlawfully, and unnecessarily cut off appellee's right arm." Counsel for appellee, in his well-prepared brief, makes the claim that, under the facts alleged, this physician was the agent of appellant, and that the alleged tortious and unlawful act perpetrated by Fertich was within the scope of his authority as such agent, and is the gravamen of the action. There is an entire absence in the complaint of any facts to establish that Dr. Fertich was employed by appellant to discharge any legal or contractual duties which it, as a corporation and common carrier, owed to appellee, as its servant. Neither do the facts show expressly or inferentially that in amputating appellee's arm the surgeon was in the exercise or discharge of any duty which appellant, as a master, owed to appellee, as its servant. The appellant was engaged in the business of a common carrier, and the presumption must, at least, be that it was engaged in that business alone, and such other as was necessarily incident thereto or connected therewith. The acts complained of are in no manner governed by the law which applies to the omission of the master to provide his employes with safe machinery and appliances. This is a duty enjoined by law, and one which he cannot delegate so as to exempt himself from liability by casting it upon an agent, officer, or servant employed by him. The question of appellant's liability, presented by the facts, does not come within the scope of, nor is it controlled by, the general principle just stated; hence, if there is any liability, it must result from the application of a rule more limited in its character, and one under which the principle of respondet superior in a more narrow sense can be applied. There was no general legal obligation resting upon appellant to provide surgical aid for its injured servants. Terra Haute & I. R. Co. v. McMurray, 98 Ind. 858, 49 Am. Rep. 752.

27 L. R. A.

Appellant having assumed the duty to provide a physician, and tender to its injured or sick employes his services, which they were free to reject or accept,—a duty which was voluntarily assumed, and one which was not due from appellant to its employes,—its liability cannot be extended beyond its negligence, if any, in the selection of the physician or surgeon. In other words, the appellant would be liable only, if at all, for its negligence in the employment, in the first instance, of an incompetent person, and not for his negligence or tortious acts in the treatment of its servants who had accepted his professional services. When this duty is voluntarily assumed by a corporation such as appellant is shown to be, it is only bound to exercise reasonable care and diligence, and is not required to select a physician of the highest skill and longest experience in the practice of medicine. If it exercised this required care and diligence, its duty terminated, and it was not liable for the subsequent malpractice or wrongs of the physician, committed in or about the treatment of its servant. This principle of law is firmly settled and sustained by a long line of decisions of the higher courts of other states, of well-recognized authority, and also by the adjudications of our federal courts. This, we think, is the correct rule, and the one to which we yield our approval and adherence. It is not shown in any way that appellee was under any obligations to accept the services of Dr. Fertich. He was, so far as it appears, wholly free and at liberty, from a legal standpoint, to reject the same, and call to his aid a physician of his own choice and selection; but this right he did not exercise, but, as it appears, willingly accepted the services of the physician in question. Hence, in accordance with the rule stated, if it is not shown that appellant was guilty of negligence in the employment of its surgeon, and that he was incompetent, appellee, under the law, will not be permitted to call upon appellant to respond in damages for the negligence or wrongs of which he complains. There are no allegations of facts in the complaint to show that the appellant violated this rule, which enjoined upon it the duty to exercise ordinary diligence in the selection or employment of the physician in controversy. Therefore it follows, when tested by the principle of law above mentioned, the complaint in the case at bar must be held insufficient to constitute a cause of action. The following cases fully support and sustain the conclusion we have reached. Laudheim v. De Koninglyke Nederlandsche Stoomboot Maatschappij, 107 N. Y. 338, and cases cited; Edgmy v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Iowa) ante, 296; McDonald v. Massachusetts Gen. Hos- pital, 120 Mass. 432, 21 Am. Rep. 539; Secord v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 515, 18 Fed. Rep. 221; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Artist, 9 C. C. A. 14, 60 Fed. Rep. 865, 23 L. R. A. 581; Fire Ins. Patrol of Philadelphia v. Boyd, 120 Pa. 642, 1 L. R. A. 417; O'Brien v. Cunard S. S. Co. 154 Mass. 272, 13 L. R. A. 329; Haas v. Missionary Soc. of Most Holy Redeemer, 6 Misc. 281; Van Tassell v. Manhattan Eye & Ear Hospital, 15 N. Y. Supp. 620, and cases cited in note; Allan v. State S. S. Co. 132 N. Y. 91, 15 L. R. A. 166; South Florida R. Co. v. Price, 32 Fla. 46.

We have examined the authorities cited by appellee, but, under the facts in this case, they do not sustain his contention. The case of Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. McMurray, supra, where it is held that, under a certain emergency or necessity, a railroad company may be held liable for the services of a physician employed by its agent to attend one of its wounded servants, lends no support to the theory of appellee's action. It follows that the court erred in overruling the demurrer to the complaint; and, as the special verdict of the jury substantially finds and states the same facts as are alleged in the complaint, the law is with the appellant, and the court erred in not sustaining appellant's motion for judgment in its favor, upon the special verdict.

The judgment in favor of appellee is reversed, with costs, and the trial court is directed to sustain appellant's motion for judgment in its favor upon the finding of the jury.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

R. E. LEAVELL

v.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.,
App't.

(.....N. C. ....)

A telegraph company which has a continuous line between points in the same state over which it might transmit a message received for that purpose, but which passes through another state on the route, cannot claim that the message is interstate commerce and therefore exempt from state authority limiting the charge for transmission, although the company does not in fact transmit the message the whole distance but delivers it at an intermediate point in another state to another company because its own line for the remainder of the distance was fully occupied by other business.

(April 2, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a ruling of the board of railroad commissioners subjecting it to the penalty for violating the prescribed rates for transmission of telegraph messages. Affirmed.

NOTE.—For similar question as to shipment on railroads, see Campbell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Iowa) 17 L. R. A. 443, and note. 27 L. R. A.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert Stiles for appellant.

Mr. Frank I. Osborne, Atty-Gen. for appellee.

Clark, J., delivered the opinion of the court: In Atlantic Exp. Co. v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 111 N. C. 463, 18 L. R. A. 393, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 294, this court affirmed the constitutionality of the act (chapter 320, Acts 1891) establishing the railroad and telegraph commission. In Mayo v. Western U. Teleg. Co., 112 N. C. 843, it sustained the power of such commission, under section 26 of said Act, to establish rates for telegraph companies. In State v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Albee's Case) 118 N. C. 218, 22 L. R. A. 570, the court held that telegraphic messages transmitted by a company from and to points in this state, although traversing another state in the route, do not constitute interstate commerce, and are subject to the tariff regulation of the commission. In this it followed the unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, delivered by Fuller, Ch. J., in Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 672, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 87. To the same purport, Campbell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 86 Iowa, 587, 17 L. R. A. 443. In the present case the commission find as a fact that "the defendant has a continuous line by which messages may be transmitted from Wilson to Edenton and other adjacent points in North Carolina, but this line traverses a part of the state of Virginia, passing through the city of Norfolk;" and it properly holds, upon the evidence, "that the telegraph office at Edenton is under the control of the defendant, and the operator, though employed by the railroad company, is the agent and operator of the defendant." It necessarily follows from this state of facts that, as the defendant could have sent the message the whole distance over its own line, it cannot be heard to say that it did not do what it ought to have done, and thus collect fifty cents for the message, instead of twenty-five, as allowed by the commission tariff. The defense set up, that in fact it only carried the message to Norfolk, and then paid another company to forward it to Edenton, cannot be regarded when it might itself have completed the delivery of the message. The defendant seeks to excuse itself on the plea that it has only one wire to Edenton, and that this is fully occupied at that office by the work it does for the railroad company. But it is the duty of the telegraph company to have sufficient facilities to transact all the business offered to it for all points at which it has offices. If the press of business offered is so great that one wire or one operator at a point is not sufficient, it is the duty of the company to add another wire or an additional employé. It is not a mere private business, but a public duty, which the defendants, by their franchise, are authorized to discharge. It is further to be noticed that in giving to the railroad company the preference in the use of their line to Edenton, while at other points, as Moyock, Centreville, and Hertford, on the same line, the public is admitted to the use of the wire, the defendant is making a forbidden and illegal discrimination in favor of one customer, and against the public at large, as was intimated in State v. Western U. Tele. Co. (Albea's Case). 118 N. C. 228, 23 L. R. A. 570. The findings of fact and evidence are fuller, and present a somewhat different and stronger case against the defendant, than in State v. Western U. Tele. Co. (Albea's Case). By section 11 of the defendant's contract with the railroad company, the defendant remains owner of the telegraph line to Edenton, N. C., and its belongings, which are to remain "part of its general telegraph system," and "to be controlled and regulated by the telegraph company." Section 8 of the contract gives the railroad messages precedence over commercial business, but stipulates that, when railroad business shall require the exclusive use of one wire, the telegraph company shall, on sixty days' notice, furnish material for a second wire, which second wire shall be used for railroad business exclusively, and such commercial business as can be done without interfering with railroad business. Section 6 provided that, where the railroad company shall open offices, the operators, "acting as agents of the telegraph company," shall receive such commercial and public telegrams as may be offered, collecting rates prescribed by the telegraph company, and render monthly statements, and pay over the receipts to the telegraph company. Section 7 provides that, whenever the volume of business at any point justifies it, the telegraph company shall put in an additional operator. It will be thus seen that the line to Edenton is an integral part of the defendant's general telegraph system. It is only by virtue of its franchise as a telegraph company that it can operate its line to Edenton at all. It cannot discriminate at that point in favor of or against any customer. It cannot subtract itself from obedience to the rates prescribed by the authority of the state, acting through the commission, by a contract giving one customer—the railroad—preference in business, and pleading that such business occupies the only wire it has. The discrimination is itself illegal. Besides, if it were not, the small cost of an additional wire, which it is common knowledge does not exceed $10 per mile, furnishes no ground to exempt the defendant from furnishing the additional facility to do the business for all. The charge of a double rate between Edenton and other points in North Carolina is a far heavier imposition upon the public than the cost of the additional wire to defendant, and is just the kind of burden and discrimination which the commission was established to prevent. In State v. Western U. Tele. Co. (Albea's Case), supra, no commercial message was tendered, and the point now decided was not presented by the record.

The ruling of the commission is in all respects affirmed.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

SOUTHERN HOME BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Pf. in Err.,

v.

HOME INSURANCE CO. of New Orleans.

(.....Ga.....)

"The so-called 'New York Standard Mortgagee Clause' in a policy of fire in-

Headnote by SIMMONS, J.

NOTE.—As to the rights given by the attachment of the mortgagee clause to an insurance policy, see note to Phoenix Ins. Co. of Brooklyn v. Omaha Loan & T. Co. (Neb.) 28 L. R. A. 879.
27 L. R. A.

surance, which declares, in substance, that no act or neglect of the mortgagor shall defeat the insurance as to the interest of the mortgagee, does not dispense with making the proof of loss stipulated for in the policy, and within the time stipulated. If the mortgagee would not have the right in all cases to furnish the proof, he certainly would have in a case in which the mortgagor refused, but in every case, unless waived by the underwriter, it must be furnished by one or the other.

(July 16, 1894.)

ERROR to the City Court of Savannah to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. G. B. Whitley and Robert L. Sibley for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Denmark & Adams, for defendant in error:

The contract required that the insured, "within sixty days after the fire shall render a statement to the company, signed and sworn to by the insured, stating the knowledge and belief of the insured as to the time and origin of the fire, the interest of the insured, and of all others in the property."

Regulations like these are valid and binding. See Ga. Code, § 2818; Underwriters' Agency v. Sutherland, 55 Ga. 266; 2 Wood, Fire Ins. §§ 488 et seq. *981 et seq.; 2 May, Ins. § 589; Perry v. Phœnix Assur. Co. 8 Fed. Rep. 645; Richards, Ins. § 160, *178, 179.

This New York mortgagee clause does not make unnecessary the furnishing of these proofs of loss.

Richards, Ins. § 158, p. 176; Johnson v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 113 Mass. 49, 17 Am. Rep. 65.

Simmons, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The Southern Home Building & Loan Association sued the Home Insurance Company upon a policy of insurance issued by the defendant insuring Rosa Tutty upon certain property for one year from December 17, 1892, to an amount not exceeding $1,000, "loss, if any, payable to the Southern Home Building and Loan Association, as their interest may appear." Attached to the policy was what is called the "New York Standard Mortgagee Clause," in which it was stated that loss under the policy should be payable to the Southern Home Building & Loan Association, as mortgagee, as its interest might appear, and that the insurance, as to the interest of the mortgagee only therein, should not be invalidated by any act or neglect of the mortgagor or owner of the property. The declaration alleged that while this policy was in force, on June 4, 1893, a fire occurred in the premises covered by the policy, by which the property insured was entirely destroyed; that immediately after the fire occurred notice was given the insurance company of the loss, and afterwards during August, the usual "proof of loss" was made out by Prioleau, adjuster of the defendant, showing the premises insured under the policy to be of the value of $1,948.80, but, failing to obtain the signature of the assured, Rosa Tutty, to the proof of loss, the defendant refused in consequence to pay over the loss to petitioner; that petitioner demanded payment of the loss as required by the policy, but the defendant refused to pay, etc. The defendant demurred to the declaration on the ground that it did not set forth any cause of action against defendant. In the argument upon the demurrer the defendant urged that the demurrer should be sustained, because the declaration did not aver that any proof of loss had been submitted to defendant, as required by the contract or policy of insurance, or that any effort had been made by plaintiff to make such proof, or comply in any way with this 27 L. R. A. requirement of the policy. The demurrer was sustained, and the plaintiff excepted. The policy, a copy of which was attached to the declaration, contained a stipulation that if fire occurred the insured should give immediate notice of any loss thereby in writing to the insurance company, and should render a statement to the company, signed and sworn to by the insured, stating the knowledge and belief of the insured as to the time and origin of the fire, the interest of the insured and of all others in the property, the cash value of each item thereof, and the amount of loss thereon, etc. Under this stipulation, it was a condition precedent to the payment of the loss that the proof of loss stipulated for should be made out and submitted to the insurance company, and within the time stipulated. If the mortgagee failed or refused to comply with the condition, it was incumbent upon the mortgagee to comply with it. If the mortgagee would not have the right in all cases to furnish the proof, he would certainly have that right in a case in which the mortgagor refused to do so. In every case, unless waived by the insurance company, it must be furnished by one or the other. See Richards, Ins. § 158, and cases cited. It was contended that, so far as the mortgagee was concerned, this requirement was dispensed with by the stipulation in the "mortgagee clause" that the insurance, as to the interest of the mortgagee, should not be invalidated by any act or neglect of the mortgagor or owner of the property. We do not think so. We think this refers to acts or neglect in connection with the property while the risk is subsisting, and which, under the terms of the policy, would invalidate the insurance, such as conduct increasing the hazard, and not the omission, after a fire has occurred, to comply with provisions designed to secure evidence as to the nature and extent of the loss. It is apparent from a reading of this clause, which, in addition to the stipulation referred to, contains others enumerating various acts which shall not invalidate the insurance as to the mortgagee, that the object of the clause was to afford protection to mortgagees against conduct beyond their control on the part of the mortgagor or others which, under the terms of the policy, would invalidate the insurance. We see no reason for holding that it was intended also to relieve a mortgagee, where loss occurred, from proving the loss as a condition precedent to collecting his claim against the insurance company,—a condition which, as we have shown, the policy required the mortgagee himself to comply with, unless the mortgagor should do so. The declaration failing to show that the insured or the mortgagee complied or attempted to comply with this condition, or that there was any waiver thereof on the part of the insurance company, the court below was right in sustaining the demurrer. The allegation that the adjuster of the company made out a proof of loss does not of itself show a waiver on the part of the company. If he made it out on behalf of the insured, it does not appear that she authorized or adopted it, for it is alleged that he failed to obtain her signature thereto.

We affirm the judgment of the court below, with direction that the plaintiff may, if it can, make good its declaration by alleging the facts necessary to show its interest as mortgagee, and the amount thereof, and by alleging also that the proof of loss was waived, and how and when waived, or else that it was made within due time, and how and when made; these amendments to be filed not later than the time of entering in the court below the remittitur from this court.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Iowa

v.

BELVEL, Appt.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. The right to object to the panel of the grand jury because the required number of jurors were not drawn for it is waived by filing a plea of guilty to the indictment.
2. An indictment is not void because presented by a jury of five persons in a county where the statute requires seven, especially where all concur, and under the statute five of the seven could present a valid indictment, and failure to make timely objection will waive the irregularity.
3. An abuse of discretion of the trial court in denying a change of venue for prejudice is not shown where affidavits are filed showing that there is nothing to prevent a fair trial, where the indictment was found.
4. Affidavits in opposition to a motion for continuance may be received for purposes other than to contradict statements as to what the testimony of absent witnesses will be.

5. A continuance because of absence of witnesses should be denied when not made in good faith, as shown by the fact that the applicant made efforts to prevent the attendance on behalf of the state of one of the absent witnesses, and used no diligence to procure the testimony of the others.

6. A fine of $500 for the publication without provocation of a grossly offensive libel will not be reduced on appeal as excessive.

(October 16, 1908.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Taylor County convicting him of the publication of a libel. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. John F. Martin, Charles Thomas, Mark Atkinson, Charles Mackenzie and Dale & Brown for appellant.

Messrs. John Y. Stone, Atty. Gen., and Thomas A. Cheshire for the State.

Robinson, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The indictment on which defendant was convicted was presented by the grand jury

NOTE.—Number of grand jurors necessary or proper to act.

Unless the statute is mandatory as to the number acting, the excusing or absence of some of the panel will not affect the indictment if enough remain to concur. State v. Miller, 3 Ala. 348; Tanner v. State, 92 Ala. 1; People v. Hunter, 54 Cal. 65; People v. Butler, 8 Cal. 435; People v. Gatewood, 20 Cal. 147; People v. McDonnell, 47 Cal. 134; State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 435, overruling Norris's House v. State, 8 G. Greene, 513; State v. Shelton, 64 Iowa, 333; State v. Billings, 77 Iowa, 417; State v. Causey, 43 La. Ann. 897; Com. v. Wood, 2 Cush. 149; State v. Williams, 35 S. C. 844; State v. Clayton, 11 Rich. L. 581; Pybos v. State, 3 Humph. 49; Watts v. State, 22 Tex. App. 572; Drake v. State, 25 Tex. App. 296; Jackson v. State, Id. 814; Trevino v. State, 27 Tex. App. 372; State v. Brainerd, 56 Vt. 532, 48 Am. Rep. 618; United States v. Wilson, 6 McLean, 604.

But a greater number present than allowed by the statute will invalidate an indictment. People v. Thurston, infra; Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 591; Downs v. Com. 92 Ky. 605; Wells v. Com. 15 Ky. L. Rep. 179; Box v. State, 34 Miss. 614; Miller v. State, 33 Miss. 356, 69 Am. Dec. 361; Com. v. Lelsenring, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 466; Com. v. Salter, Id. 461; Texas cases, infra; United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 226.

Objections, however, to an improper number must be made in time and in proper manner. Tanner v. State, supra; Kirby v. Territory (Ariz.) Feb. 7, 1891; Ex parte Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. ed. 513; Shropshire v. State, 13 Ark. 190; Wilson v. People, 8 Colo. 225; Reynolds v. State, 38 Fla. 301; Veatch v. State, 56 Ind. 584, 36 Am. Rep. 44; Hall v. State, 4 G. Greene, 73; State v. Scirborough, 55 Md. 345; State v. Pate, 67 Mo. 438; Conkey v. People, 27 L. R. A.

1 Abb. App. Dec. 418, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 31; State v. Davis, 24 N. C. 158; Young v. State, 6 Ohio, 435; Turk v. State, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, p. 240; Rex v. Marsh, 1 Nev. & P. 187, 6 Ad. & El. 236, 2 H. & W. 369, W. W. & D. 150.

If the statute is mandatory, the number required must be impeached and act. State v. Hawkins, 10 Ark. 71; Harding v. State, 22 Ark. 210; Gladden v. State, 12 Fla. 562; Brannigan v. People, 8 Utah, 433; Fitzgerald v. State, 4 Wis. 335.

The number required to make a panel depends on the local statutes of the several states.

Power of legislature to change number of grand jurors required at common law.

A question of much importance is that of the power of the legislature to change the common-law number of grand jurors. In several states the general provision of the constitution for indictment by grand jury is held to require a grand jury substantially like that required by common law. Thus in Florida it is held that a constitutional provision "for indictment by a grand jury" means that the grand jury shall be that which existed at common law numbering not less than twelve and of whom at least twelve must concur to find an indictment. Therefore it is held that the legislature cannot so change the common-law organization of the grand jury as to make the concurrence of eight sufficient for an indictment. Donald v. State, 31 Fla. 225; English v. State, Id. 340.

Likewise in North Carolina it is decided that, as a grand jury had a well-understood meaning at the adoption of the declaration of rights, and one of its most essential features was that the concurrence of twelve of its members was necessary to of Taylor county on the 5th day of March, 1892. It charges that on or about the 18th day of February, 1892, in the county named, the defendant "unlawfully and maliciously, to injure the good name and character of G. L. Finn, and to expose him to public hatred and contempt, and deprive him of public confidence, and to bring him into public scandal and disgrace, did on the said 18th day of February, 1892, write and publish and cause to be written and published in said county, in the Southwest Democrat, a newspaper published in said county, a false, scandalous, malicious, and defamatory libel, in the form of a letter. . . ." The matter alleged to be libelous is set out at length, and the sense in which it was written and published is specified. On the 27th day of April, 1892, the defendant filed a demurrer to the indictment, which was overruled. The defendant then petitioned for a change of the place of trial on the ground of excitement and prejudice on the part of the people of Taylor county. The petition was supported by affidavits, and was overruled. A motion for a continuance was made, based on the absence of certain witnesses. It was supported by affidavits, and was resisted by counter-affidavits. A motion of defendant to strike the counter-affidavits from the files on the ground that they are not allowable was overruled. Some of the persons whose affidavits were used were examined in open court, and the application for a continuance was overruled on the 5th day of May, 1892. Thereupon the defendant entered the plea of guilty, and judgment was rendered as has been stated. On the 28th day of the same month an appeal was taken to this court. On the 11th day of April, 1893, the defendant filed in the district court a paper entitled a "motion and petition to vacate judgment," in which he asked that the judgment rendered be vacated, that he have leave to withdraw his plea of guilty, and that the indictment be quashed. The application was based upon the following grounds: (1) An official bulletin of the superintendent of the federal census, issued on the 21st day of July, 1891, showed that the population of Taylor county was more than 16,000 inhabitants. (2) The law requires that in counties having more than 16,000 inhabitants the grand jury shall be composed of seven members, and, for the purpose of selecting them, that twelve jurors shall be drawn. (3) The grand jury which returned the indictment in question was composed of but five members, and for the purpose of selecting them but eight jurors were drawn. On the 25th day of April, 1893, the state and defendant having been duly represented by attorneys, the motion was overruled. The petition was dismissed, and judgment was rendered against the defendant for costs. Two days later he took an appeal from that judgment. The two appeals are submitted together for the determination of this court.

1. Section 231 of the Code, as amended by chapter 42 of the Acts of the 21st General Assembly, provides that in counties having more than 16,000 inhabitants, the grand jury the finding of a presentment or indictment, an act of the legislature making the concurrence of nine sufficient is not authorized by the constitution. State v. Barker, 10 L. R. A. 50, 107 N. C. 913. See further note to State v. Hartley (Nev.) 28 L. R. A. 33, as to number of grand jurors necessary to concur.

In Wisconsin the court pursued somewhat similar reasoning in Brucker v. State, 16 Wis. 334, although the decision was that the legislature could change the number "within the limits prescribed by the common law," and therefore a statute providing for a grand jury of from fifteen to seventeen was not unconstitutional since it left the number between twelve and twenty-three as at common law.

In Georgia the power of the legislature to provide for an indictment by nine grand jurors for an offense triable in corporation courts was sustained under the constitutional provision giving those courts jurisdiction of minor offenses under rules and regulations fixed by the legislature. This case manifestly does not touch the question of the construction of the general constitutional provision for indictment by grand jury, but turns on its express grant of legislative power over proceedings in these courts in respect to minor offenses. Thurman v. State, 25 Ga. 220.

No decisions have been found directly in conflict with those preceding as to the interpretation of the general provision of a state constitution for "indictment by grand jury." But it has been decided that the provision of the Federal Constitution for "due process of law" does not require that a grand jury finding an indictment shall be composed as at common law with the common-law number of grand jurors. Parker v. People, 4 L. R. A. 803, 18 Colo. 155.

This case is based upon the decision of the 27 L. R. A.

United States Supreme Court in Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 23 L. ed. 232, which decided that due process of law in criminal cases did not make any grand jury necessary but might be satisfied by information even in cases of felony.

Substantially to the same effect is the decision in Virginia that a provision for a special grand jury not less than six in number is not contrary to the 5th or 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution. Hausenfluok v. Com. 35 Va. 702.

If the Federal Constitution does not limit the power of the state in respect to the number of grand jurors the provision of a state constitution must clearly control no matter how many or few may be the prescribed number. So in Iowa the constitution as shown in STATE V. BELVEL has reduced the number from that required at common law to such number between five and fifteen as the legislature may prescribe. The legislature is authorized to fix the number between these limits and as shown in STATE V. BELVEL has prescribed a number varying according to the population of the county.

In Montana the constitution has fixed the number of the grand jury at seven of whom five must concur, and this is held in State v. Ah Jim, 9 Mont. 107, to be a self-executing provision.

In several other states, as in Oregon, the number has been reduced below that required at common law, and the change seems to have been acquiesced in without challenge.

Rule in various states.

Alabama.

Under Ala. Dig., 296, § 6, providing that not less than thirteen nor more than eighteen shall be drawn, the absence of one will not invalidate the indictment. State v. Miller, 3 Ala. 343 (pl. abate.).

shall be composed of seven members. Section 241 of the Code, as amended, provides that when the grand jury is to be composed of seven members, twelve jurors shall be drawn from which to select them. The population of Taylor county, as shown by the federal census of the year 1890, is 16,884, and it is not disputed that the grand jury which presented the indictment in question should have been composed of seven members, and that twelve jurors should have been drawn for it. See State v. Braskamp, 87 Iowa, 588. The record submitted shows that it was in fact composed of but five members, and that but eight jurors were drawn for it. The state contends, however, that, as the defendant failed to make the objections now presented before the judgment on his plea of guilty was rendered, they were waived, and that the first appeal deprived the district court of jurisdiction to determine the motion and petition on their merits. The defendant contends that the defect goes to the jurisdiction of the district court, and that want of jurisdiction cannot be waived, but will be considered at any time when it comes to the knowledge of the court, even though not urged by either party. That the general rule is as claimed by defendant has been settled by numerous decisions. Lansing v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 85 Iowa, 215; Orcutt v. Hanson, 71 Iowa, 517; Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 59 Iowa, 485; Groves v. Richmond, 58 Iowa, 570; St. Joseph Mfg. Co. v. Harrington, 53 Iowa, 880; Viola Dist. Twp. v. Audubon Dist. Twp. 45 Iowa, 104; Walters v. The Mollie Dozier, 24 Iowa, 199, 95 Am. Dec. 722; Burlington University v. Stewart, 12 Iowa, 442; Dicks v. Hatch, 10 Iowa, 384. In most of the cases cited it appeared that the trial court did not have jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the action, but that is not true in this case. The district court had jurisdiction of the offense charged in the indictment and of the defendant. The real question we are required to determine is whether the fact that the grand jury was composed of but five members, and the further fact that but eight jurors were drawn for it, were defects so serious that they could not be waived.

Section 4260 of the Code authorizes a challenge to the panel before indictment when the jurors were not appointed, drawn, or summoned as prescribed by law. The defendant was not held to await the action of the grand jury by the order of any committing magistrate, and had no opportunity to object to the grand jury until after the indictment had been presented. But subdivision 5 of section 4337 of the Code provides for a motion to set aside an indictment, and requires that it be sustained when it appears "that the grand jury were not selected, drawn, summoned, impaneled, or sworn as prescribed by law." Section 4339 of the Code provides that the ground stated shall not be allowed to a defendant who has been held to answer before indictment, thus in effect clearly providing for a waiver of the right of challenge when founded upon any of the defects contemplated by the subdivision

A local act of Alabama, February 13, 1879, reducing the number of grand jury to fifteen, is not retroactive but prospective. Marler v. State, 68 Ala. 580 (obj.); Creamer v. State, 70 Ala. 13. (mo. ar.); Thompson v. State, 70 Ala. 26 (mo. ar.)

And under an act requiring fifteen, where the panel was filled to make fifteen, and fourteen only were sworn, but no objection was made until in the supreme court, the objection would not avail, under Ala. Code, section 4445, providing no objection can be made for organization except that they were not drawn in the presence of officers. Tanner v. State, 22 Ala. 1 (obj.)

Arizona.

And under Arizona statute, providing that the grand jury shall be not less than seventeen nor more than twenty-three, the objection that the grand jury was fifteen only will not avail where the same does not appear in the case and is made in the supreme court for the first time. Kirby v. Territory (Ariz.) Feb. 7, 1891.

And this objection cannot be made collaterally by habeas corpus, where a sufficient number indicted. Ex parte Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. ed. 513 (hab. corp.)

Arkansas.

But under Ark. Dig., chap. 52, § 64, and Ark. Dig., chap. 98, providing that the grand jury shall be sixteen, an indictment must be by that number or it will be void. State v. Hawkins, 10 Ark. 71 (pl. abate.); Harding v. State, 22 Ark. 210 (pl. abate.)

But an objection to meet this must be by plea in abatement. Shropshire v. State, 13 Ark. 190 (obj.)

California.

In California in 1856, a statute provided for seventeen to twenty-three, and in 1876, Cal. Code, section 27 L. R. A.

242, provided for thirteen, fourteen or fifteen, respectively, and Cal. Code of Civ. Proc., section 192, provided for nineteen, but the change in the number did not change the rule as to the effect of the absence of any of the grand jury at the finding, and an objection to the formation cannot be made on a motion to set aside as the death of one or more will not affect the indictment found by twelve. People v. Hunter, 54 Cal. 65 (mo. set aside).

This followed People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 215, holding that if twelve concur it is not fatal that less than seventeen, the minimum number, were present.

So if the statutory number has been reduced by challenge but there remain twelve who concurred in the indictment the same is valid. People v. Butler, 8 Cal. 435 (obj.); People v. Gatewood, 20 Cal. 147 (obj.); People v. M'Donnell, 47 Cal. 124 (mo. new tr.; mo. set aside).

And under Cal. Code Civ. Proc., §§ 204-211, there is no distinction in the selection of grand or trial jurors and an order designating the number need not separate the number of each class. People v. Crowley, 56 Cal. 36 (mo. new tr.)

But where the number is limited to twenty-three an indictment found by a grand jury of twenty-four is void. People v. Thurston, 5 Cal. 69 (obj.)

Colorado.

Under Colo. Rev. Stat., 390, providing that a grand jury shall be from sixteen to twenty-three, an indictment by twenty-one is sufficient. Mackey v. People, 2 Colo. 13 (chal.).

Under Colo. Const., art. 1, § 23, limiting the grand jury to twelve, although nineteen were summoned, it will be presumed only twelve acted or that they were convened as a special grand jury under common law and the objection must be by plea. Wilson v. People, 8 Colo. 325 (mo. ar.)

quoted. State v. Gibbs, 39 Iowa, 319; State v. Hart, 39 Iowa, 369. Electors of the state only are qualified to act as jurors. Code, § 227. But a person held to await the action of the grand jury waives his right to object to an indictment presented against him by a grand jury of which an alien was a member by failing to challenge the alien before the jury was sworn. State v. Gibbs, supra. In State v. Reid, 20 Iowa, 423, it appeared that the grand jury had submitted its final report, and been discharged. Afterwards, but during the same term of court, it was again summoned and impaneled, and it then found the indictment on which the defendant was convicted. It was objected that the court had no power thus to organize a grand jury. This court held that it had, and also that the objection was not taken in due time, because not made before a plea to the indictment was entered. It is clear, under the statute and the decisions, that the defendant waived his right to object to the panel because a sufficient number of jurors were not drawn for it.

It is more difficult to determine what effect should be given to the acts of a grand jury composed of but five jurors when seven are required by law. Section 11, art. 1, of the Constitution of this state provides that no person shall be held to answer for any criminal offense higher than those in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of $100, or imprisonment for thirty days, "unless on presentment or indictment by a grand jury. . . ." Section 15 of article 5 of the Constitution adopted in the year 1884 is as follows: "The grand jury may consist of any number of members not less than five, nor more than fifteen, as the general assembly may by law provide, or the general assembly may provide for holding persons to answer for any criminal offense without the intervention of the grand jury." Acting under that section, the general assembly amended section 231 of the Code, and provided that in counties having more than 16,000 inhabitants "the grand jury shall be composed of seven members." The defendant contends that this provision is mandatory, and that his right to have his case considered by a grand jury of seven members is guaranteed by the Constitution. It is true that the right is guaranteed as claimed, but the obligation to provide a grand jury of seven members in certain cases is no greater than is that to furnish a trial jury of twelve. The Constitution provides that "the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate." Section 9, article 1. That means a jury of twelve persons; and the general assembly cannot require the parties to an action to accept a jury containing a smaller number, excepting in inferior courts. Eshelman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 67 Iowa, 296; Kelsh v. Dyersville, 68 Iowa, 187. It was said in Coules v. Buckman, 6 Iowa, 163, that a party may waive his right to a trial by jury of twelve persons, and consent to a trial by one containing a less number. See also State v. Grooms, 10 Iowa, 315. And in civil actions he may wholly waive a jury. Code, § 2814.

Florida.

Under Florida Act, February 20, 1875, providing that the grand jury shall be not less than twelve nor more than fifteen, an indictment found by sixteen is invalid. Keesh v. State, 15 Fla. 591 (mo. qu.).

And where a statute required fifteen, an indictment where only fourteen are drawn and impaneled is invalid. Gladden v. State, 13 Fla. 562 (pl. abate.).

And Fla. Rev. Stat., 2302, providing for twelve grand jurors and a concurrence of eight is valid as to twelve but void as to the eight, under the Bill of Rights, section 10. English v. State, 31 Fla. 340 (pl. abate.); Donald v. State, Id. 255 (pl. abate.).

But the motion in arrest cannot reach an objection that the indictment was found by a grand jury of only twelve, and that less than that number concurred. Reynolds v. State, 33 Fla. 501 (mo. ar.).

Georgia.

Under Georgia Const., art. 3, providing that corporation courts may have such jurisdiction as the legislature may direct, the number of grand jurors in such courts may be reduced to twelve with a provision that nine may concur. Thurman v. State, 25 Ga. 220 (exception).

Where the court told the grand jury that if there were twenty-four to excuse one and to strike the last man off the list and come back and be sworn, there was no error. Ridling v. State, 56 Ga. 601 (cert.).

Idaho.

In Idaho a grand jury may be composed of seven under the territorial statute, and this is not contrary to article 5, Amendment of the United States Constitution.

27 L. R. A.

Illinois.

Under Ill. Stat., chap. 73, § 16, providing twenty-three persons should be summoned and sixteen should be sufficient to constitute the grand jury, an indictment found by nineteen is valid, where no objection was made to quash the indictment or to challenge the array. Barron v. People, 73 Ill. 256 (mo. ar.).

And a grand jury of twenty-two is valid. Beasley v. People, 59 Ill. 571 (mo. qu.).

Indiana.

Objection by an attorney of one not under prosecution that the panel was less than the statutory number of eighteen will not avail, as twelve may act. Hudson v. State, 1 Blackf. 317 (chal.).

And Indiana Act 1875, p. 54, providing for a grand jury of six did not take effect until the March session of 1876 and until then the prior statute controls and the grand jury of twelve summoned prior to that time may indict afterwards. Meters v. State, 56 Ind. 336 (chal.; mo. qu.); State v. Myers, 51 Ind. 145 (pl. abate.); State v. May, 50 Ind. 170 (obj.).

And that the grand jury was twelve instead of six will not be considered in a motion in arrest. Veatch v. State, 56 Ind. 534, 26 Am. Rep. 44 (mo. ar.).

Iowa.

In Norris's House v. State, 3 G. Greene, 513 (pl. abate.; mo. set aside), it was held that under Iowa Code, section 1642, providing that the number of grand jurors must be fifteen, and one was excused for drunkenness, an indictment found by fourteen was invalid.

But this case was overruled in State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 435 (mo. set aside), attempting to make a distinction that in the Norris House Case one of the jurors was discharged but in the Ostrander Case one of the jurors being challenged was not present

In Wilkens v. Treynor, 14 Iowa, 898, it was said that "the right of trial by jury, guaranteed by the Constitution, may be lost or waived by the act or covenant of a party. This right is not an attribute, or inalienable in its nature and character, but rather a privilege that may be waived or forfeited." It was therefore held that a party in default, who nevertheless had the right to appear in the case, had lost his right to demand a trial by jury. See also Clute v. Hazleton, 51 Iowa, 859; Henny Buggy Co. v. Patt, 73 Iowa, 489; Re Hooker's Assignment, 75 Iowa, 880. A jury may be waived by failing to demand it at the proper time. Davidson v. Wright, 46 Iowa, 383. See also Hawkins v. Rice, 40 Iowa, 437. It was held by a majority of this court in State v. Carman, 68 Iowa, 180, 50 Am. Rep. 741, that a defendant in a criminal action triable on indictment cannot waive a trial by jury; and that decision was followed in State v. Larrigan, 66 Iowa, 426. But in State v. Kaufman, 51 Iowa, 578, 33 Am. Rep. 148, it was said to be the settled doctrine of this state that a defendant in a criminal action may waive a statute enacted for his benefit, and it was held to be competent for him to consent to a trial by eleven jurors. The case of State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 438, was decided under a statute which fixed the number of persons required to constitute a grand jury at fifteen, and required the concurrence of twelve to find an indictment.

The defendant, before pleading, had filed a motion to quash the indictment, because found by a grand jury consisting of only fourteen members. It appears that a challenge to one member of the panel had been sustained, and that but fourteen members had acted upon the indictment. It was held that the indictment was good. The court made prominent the fact that, although more than twelve persons were required to constitute a grand jury, yet "from the earliest authorities down it is shown that a presentment by twelve is good, although no more than twelve be impaneled, or, if more are impaneled, although all the other jurors dissent." See also State v. Shelton, 64 Iowa, 335. The case of Norris's House v. State, 3 G. Greene, 514, in which this court held an indictment presented by a grand jury of fourteen members, one having been discharged, to be illegal, was referred to, and apparently doubted, although it was not overruled. In that case objection was made to the indictment by answer. It had been urged that it was made too late, because not made before the grand jury was sworn, under a statute which provided that no objection could be interposed by a defendant to a grand jury for any cause of challenge after they were sworn. In commenting upon that provision, this court said that it must be confined to such defendant as had an opportunity to interpose the objection therein allowed, but that persons who had and took no part in the indictment and also on the ground that objection must be made before plea of not guilty.

So where three of fifteen were excused on a challenge and the court refused to add more and the twelve concurred, the indictment was valid. State v. Shelton, 64 Iowa, 333 (obal.).

Iowa Const. Amendment 1884, provides for a grand jury from five to fifteen. State v. Salts, 77 Iowa, 198 (dem.).

And the main case, STATE v. BELVEL, decides that under Iowa Code, section 231, as amended, providing that in counties of certain population the grand jury should be seven, of whom five must concur, and that twelve should be drawn from which to select them, where only eight were drawn in such a county and only five acted but all concurred, on failure of the defendant to object before plea, the indictment was a waiver of the objection.

And where the grand jury should be composed of five and one was challenged the indictment by the remainder will be valid. State v. Billings, 77 Iowa, 417 (obj.).

And the court will take judicial notice of the federal census before its announcement, where it determines the number of grand jurors. State v. Braskamp, 87 Iowa, 588 (mo. set aside).

And under Iowa Constitution of 1884, the number of grand jurors need not be uniform throughout the state. State v. Standley, 76 Iowa, 215 (mo. set aside).

A plea in abatement should not impeach the record to show that less than fifteen grand jurors may be impaneled under the Iowa law. Hall v. State, 4 G. Greene, 73 (pl. abate.).

Kentucky.

Under the new Kentucky Constitution of 1891, providing that the grand jury shall be twelve, it cannot exceed that number. Downs v. Com. 92 Ky. 605 (mo. set aside); Wells v. Com. 15 Ky. 27 L. R. A.

L. Rep. 179 (obj.); Sanders v. Com. 13 Ky. L. Rep. 820 (obj.).

Louisiana.

That one of the sixteen grand jurors was disqualified at the time of the drawing and was excused on objection of accused, will not render the indictment invalid. State v. Causey, 43 La. Ann. 897 (mo. qu.).

The object of the statute fixing the number of grand jurors at sixteen was only to make definite what was before an indefinite number between twelve and twenty-three, and the statute does not make an indictment for which twelve concur invalid because only thirteen were present. State v. Swift, 14 La. Ann. 839.

And the Louisiana Act of 1858, requiring the grand jury to be impaneled on the first day of the term, is only directory, and where of the sixteen names drawn there was one who had been previously appointed foreman, and there were but sixteen, the panel was valid. State v. Davis, 14 La. Ann. 889 (mo. qu.).

Maine.

Less than twelve cannot act to find an indictment. State v. Symonds, 36 Me. 123.

That less than twelve acted may be shown by the accused when arraigned, there being nothing on the face of the indictment to show the number. Low's Case, 4 Me. 439, 16 Am. Dec. 271.

Maryland.

A plea that only twenty-two persons acted is insufficient as one of the panel may have been excused for cause, and the plea must show that the panel was never more than twenty-two. State v. Scarborough, 55 Md. 325 (pl. abate.).

Massachusetts.

And Mass. Rev. Stat., chap. 136, providing for a venire of twenty-three, is merely directory and twenty-two may act. Com. v. Wood, 2 Cuah. 14 (pl. abate.).

been held to await the action of the grand jury, by failing to make their objection before it was sworn, would be "forever barred from objecting afterwards." In People v. Petrea, 93 N. Y. 143, it was held that no constitutional right of the defendant was invaded by holding him to answer to an indictment presented by a grand jury not selected in pursuance of a valid law, but selected under color of law and semblance of legal authority. It was said that "an indictment was found by a body drawn, summoned, and sworn as a grand jury, before a competent court, and composed of good and lawful men. This, we think, fulfilled the constitutional guaranty." In State v. Feller, 25 Iowa, 71, it was said that "courts do not favor objections based on irregularities respecting preliminary matters and proceedings, while they will sedulously guard all rights secured to the accused while undergoing the ordeal of a trial which is to be decisive of issues momentous and weighty alike to the defendant and to the state." Section 231 of the Code, as amended, provides that the grand jury in counties having a population not exceeding 16,000 shall be composed of five members, and that in counties having a greater population it shall be composed of seven members. Section 241 provides that when the grand jury is to be composed of five members only, eight jurors shall be drawn for it, and that when it is to be composed of seven members the number of jurors drawn shall be twelve. Section 4291 provides that an indictment cannot be found without the concurrence of four grand jurors when the grand jury is composed of five members, and not without the concurrence of five grand jurors when it is composed of seven members. When it is required to consist of five members, and a challenge to one has been sustained, a valid indictment may be presented by the remaining four. State v. Billings, 77 Iowa, 421. In this case the indictment was presented by a grand jury which would have fully met the requirements of the law had the population of the county been 400 less. It was presented by five jurors acting as the grand jury, or by as many members as would have been required in any event to concur in the finding of the indictment. No constitutional guaranty was violated by impaneling a grand jury of five persons. The defendant could have interposed the objections he now urges before pleading to the indictment, and no reason for his failure to do so is shown. We are of the opinion that under these circumstances the indictment cannot be regarded as void, and that the defects of which defendant now complains were waived by a failure to take advantage of them before pleading to the indictment. The court had jurisdiction of the case, and the defendant had an opportunity to make defense on the merits to the charge against him.

2. Complaint is made of the refusal of the #### Mississippi.

The Mississippi Act March 1, 1854, providing that the grand jury shall be not under thirteen nor over eighteen is mandatory, and indictment by nineteen is void. Box v. State, 34 Miss. 614 (pl. abate.); Miller v. State, 33 Miss. 356, 69 Am. Dec. 361 (mo. ar.).

It will be presumed that the proper number was summoned. Easterling v. State, 35 Miss. 210 (mo. qu.); Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490 (mo. new tr.).

Missouri.

An objection that there were only sixteen grand jurors instead of eighteen, as required by statute, is too late when made in the supreme court for the first time and should be made before they are sworn. State v. Pate, 67 Mo. 482.

A grand jury of twelve only was held good in State v. Green, 66 Mo. 631, citing State v. Dearing, 65 Mo. 530, as deciding the same point.

Montana.

Montana Const., art. 3, § 8, changed a grand jury panel from sixteen to seven and was self-executing. State v. Ah Jim, 9 Mont. 187; State v. King, Id. 445 (chal.).

New York.

It is error to swear twenty-four persons on a grand jury. People v. King, 2 Cal. Cas. 93, Col. & Cal. Cas. 364.

But it is too late after trial to object that there were twenty-four grand jurors. Conkey v. People, 1 Abb. App. Dec. 418, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 31 (obj.).

North Carolina.

North Carolina Rev. Stat., chap. 31, § 34, providing for eighteen grand jurors, is directory only, and after pleading to an indictment, objection cannot be made that the grand jury was only twelve. State v. Davis, 24 N. C. 158 (mo. ar.).
27 L. R. A.

Ohio.

The presumption is that the statutory number composed the panel where the record says "the grand jury impaneled." Young v. State, 6 Ohio, 435 (mo. ar.).

And in Turk v. State, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, p. 240 (mo. qu.; pl. abate.), it was held that a plea that only fourteen acted instead of fifteen as required by the statute, cannot contradict the record.

Pennsylvania.

An indictment found by twenty-four under a statute providing for twenty-three, is invalid. Com. v. Leisenring, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 466 (mo. qu.); Com. v. Salter, Id. 461 (mo. qu.).

Rhode Island.

If the minute books and indictment show that fifteen were summoned as required, it will by R. I. P. L. chap. 886, be sufficient. State v. O'Brien, 13 R. I. 96 (mo. ar.).

South Carolina.

Although the number required by South Carolina statute is eighteen yet if twelve were present the indictment will be valid. State v. Williams, 35 S. C. 344 (pl. abate.); State v. Clayton, 11 Rich. L. 581 (mo. new tr.; mo. ar.).

Tennessee.

Under Tennessee Act 1779, chap. 6, providing first eighteen drawn shall be grand jurors, and Act 1811, chap. 72, providing that not more than thirteen shall be drawn, the statutes are only directory as to the minimum number, and twelve can indict. Pybos v. State, 3 Humph. 49 (mo. qu.).

Texas.

Under Tex. Const., art. 5, § 3, providing for a grand jury of twelve, a panel of a greater number is invalid. Williams v. State, 19 Tex. App. 265 (obj.); Rainey v. State, Id. 479 (obj.); Ex parte Swain, Id. 323 (hab. corp.); McNeese v. State, Id. 48 (obj.); district court to change the place of trial on the application of defendant. It is erroneously stated in argument that no affidavits were filed on the part of the state denying the existence of the prejudice alleged. There was a showing to the effect that there was but little discussion in Taylor county in regard to the merits of the case, and that there was neither prejudice nor excitement against defendant, nothing to prevent him from having a fair trial in the county. Applications of the nature of that under consideration are to be decided by the trial court, in the exercise of a sound discretion. Code, § 4374. We think the action of the court in denying the change asked is fully supported by the counter-showing made by the state.

3. It is said the court erred in not sustaining the motion of defendant to strike from the files the affidavits filed by the state in resistance of the application for a continuance. Affidavits cannot be used to contradict statements contained in affidavits filed in support of an application for a continuance as to what the testimony of the absent witnesses will be. State v. Dakin, 52 Iowa, 395. But counter-affidavits for other purposes—as, to show want of diligence to procure the testimony desired—are permissible. State v.

Murdy, 81 Iowa, 605; State v. Rainsbarger, 74 Iowa, 199. Portions of some of the affidavits sought to be stricken out were objectionable, but there was no attempt to designate those portions. The motion was based upon the theory that counter-affidavits were not permissible for any purpose. Each of the affidavits at which the motion was aimed contained something which it was proper to urge against the application, and the motion was therefore rightfully overruled.

4. We are also of the opinion that the action of the district court in overruling the motion for a continuance is fully justified by the record presented. The motion was based on the absence of certain witnesses, whose testimony was alleged to be material for the defendant. Counter-affidavits showed in regard to one of those witnesses that defendant not only did not attempt to secure her attendance in good faith, but that by himself and his attorney he made extraordinary and unjustifiable attempts to prevent it after she had been required to appear by the state. She was present at court before the continuance was denied, and defendant then relied upon the absence of six witnesses, whose names are given, as ground for a con-

Lott v. State, 28 Tex. App. 37 (mo. ar.); Wells v. State, 21 Tex. App. 594 (bail bond); Harrell v. State, 22 Tex. App. 602 (bail bond).

But the excusing or removal of one of the grand jurors reducing the panel to eleven will not invalidate. Watts v. State, 22 Tex. App. 572 (pl. abate.); Drake v. State, 25 Tex. App. 293 (mo. qu.); Jackson v. State, Id. 814 (mo. qu.); Trevino v. State, 27 Tex. App. 372 (mo. set aside).

Utah.

Under Utah Statute, Grand Jury Act, chap. 83, § 4, requiring the grand jurors to be twenty-four, an indictment by seventeen is invalid. Brannigan v. People, 8 Utah, 488 (pl. abate.).

So Under Utah Statute requiring the grand jury to be fifteen, an indictment by grand jury of twenty-three is invalid. United States v. Reynolds, 1 Utah, 226 (pl. abate.).

And a grand jury of fifteen may indict. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244.

In People v. Green, 1 Utah, 11, the court declared that a grand jury in the district court of the United States in Utah must consist of twenty-three men. The point in question was whether a territorial statute requiring the grand jury to be drawn from the county, was applicable. The statute also fixed the number at fifteen of whom twelve must concur, but the controversy does not seem to have been over the number, but over the locality from which the grand jurors were to be drawn.

Vermont.

Under Vermont Rev. Laws, § 284, providing for eighteen, the absence of one or more will not invalidate where twelve indicted. State v. Brainerd, 56 Vt. 523, 48 Am. Rep. 818 (pl. abate.).

Virginia.

The Virginia Code, § 2977, providing that the special grand jury may not be less than six, is not contrary to the 8th or 14th Amendment, U. S. Const. Hausenfluck v. Com. 85 Va. 702 (mo. qu.; me. new tr.).

And an indictment found by a special grand jury 27 L. R. A.

of six is valid. Mesmer v. Com. 20 Gratt. 976 (mo. qu.).

And so where the special grand jury is seven. Lyles v. Com. 58 Va. 306 (mo. qu.).

A special grand jury of eight was held to be lawfully drawn during the same term in which a grand jury had been dismissed for incompetency of a member. Shinn v. Com. 22 Gratt. 890.

Such a special grand jury may indict for a murder. Lyles v. Com. supra; Robertson v. Com. (Va.) Nov. 8, 1894.

A statute providing that twenty-four grand jurors or any sixteen of them shall be a grand jury does not require more than twelve to concur. Com. v. Bayers, 8 Leigh, 722.

Wisconsin.

Under Wis. Rev. Stat., chap. 97, § 12, providing that the grand jury shall not be less than sixteen nor more than twenty-three, an indictment by twelve is invalid. Fitzgerald v. State, 4 Wis. 306 (obj.).

Under Wis. Const., art. 1, § 8, providing that a person shall not be held to answer for a crime except on presentment or indictment, does not prevent a statute fixing the number at not less than fifteen nor more than seventeen. Brucker v. State, 18 Wis. 394 (pl. abate.).

Where fifteen grand jurors were impaneled, the absence of one will not invalidate. United States v. Wilson, 6 McLean, 604 (mo. qu.).

English cases.

Where after a plea to the indictment, a motion to quash was made because the number was twenty-eight, and twenty-five were in the grand jury room, but there were no data to make the record show that fact, the motion to quash should be overruled. Rex v. Marsh, 1 Nev. & P. 187, 6 Ad. & El. 226, 2 H. & W. 366, W. W. & D. 150 (mo. qu.).

It was said in Clyncard's Case, Cro. Eliz. 654, that the indictment was "clearly bad" because "it appeareth not that it was per sacramentum 12."

For matters about the organization of grand juries in general, see note to State v. Noyes (Wa.) ante, 776.

L. T.

tinuance. It appears that the defendant and others were examined in open court in regard to the diligence used to obtain the attendance or testimony of those witnesses. That examination and the affidavits filed disclosed facts which justified the court in concluding that the application for a continuance was not made in good faith, and that defendant had not used due diligence to procure the testimony which he claimed to need. Therefore there was no sufficient reason shown for granting the application.

5. It is said that the fine imposed is excessive. The libel was grossly offensive, and, so far as the record shows, was without any provocation which can justly be urged in mitigation of the punishment. We cannot say that the amount of the fine exceeds the demands of justice. We have examined the entire record with care, but without finding any ground for interfering with either of the judgments of the district court. They are therefore affirmed.

Kinne, J., dissenting:

I concur in the opinion of the majority of the court, except as to the holding that the indictment was not void, and that defendant has waived his right to object thereto. As to these conclusions I dissent. I am not unmindful that it is the policy of our law, as is evidenced by statute and the decisions of this court, to require that mere irregularities and informalities touching the manner of impaneling the grand jury and the like must be taken advantage of before pleading to the indictment. I cannot agree, however, that the original organization of a grand jury, composed of a less number of persons than the constitution and laws require, is such an irregularity as is contemplated, or as may be waived by any act of the defendant. It is conceded that in this case the grand jury which found the indictment was composed, when it was impaneled, of but five persons, whereas in the county of Taylor it required seven persons to constitute a legal grand jury. It will be observed that this is not a case where the grand jury was, in the first instance, made up of the legal number, and afterwards refused by challenge or otherwise. A grand jury originally composed of a less number of persons than is provided by the constitution and laws is in fact not a grand jury at all. Such a body possesses no more power than any other five men who should assume to act as a grand jury. Nor can it be said that the fact that they are impaneled by the lawfully constituted authorities will validate their illegal organization. The jurisdiction of the trial court is obtained only by virtue of an indictment found and returned by a grand jury. If, then, there is a fatal defect in the organization of the body which must find the indictment, it renders void all subsequent proceedings. It is not a mere irregularity which can be cured or waived, but an essential matter which avoids an indictment found by the body thus illegally constituted. This question has never been decided in this state. It is an important one. If the doctrine of the majority opinion is to prevail, what is to prevent the finding of an indictment under color of law by any body of men greater or less than is provided for by our constitution and laws, and the trial of a defendant thereon in case he fails to make timely objection thereto? Thus may the absolute guaranty of the constitution and the protection which the law affords to the citizen charged with crime be abrogated and annulled because of a failure of defendant to insist upon his legal rights. Such a doctrine carries the law of waiver, as applied to persons on trial for a crime, to an unwarranted extent. The statutes of Florida require that fifteen persons shall be drawn to serve as grand jurors. In Gladden v. State, 12 Fla. 566, it appeared that only fourteen persons were thus drawn. No error was assigned by the plaintiff. The court said: "From a careful inspection of the first page of the record we find only fourteen persons were drawn to serve as grand jurors during the term at which the indictment was found. The statute regulating the organization of grand juries cannot, by any known rule of construction, be held to authorize this; and, while no such error is assigned by the plaintiff, yet it is apparent upon the record, and, this being a capital crime, the court cannot pass it by without notice. No man should be tried for a capital crime upon an indictment of this character." It was held that there must be fifteen grand jurors on the panel as originally drawn, and that the error vitiated all the subsequent proceedings in the case. In Branigan v. People, 8 Utah, 489. It was held that, where a grand jury of seventeen men was impaneled, and the statute required that the grand jury should consist of "twenty-four eligible men to serve as grand jurors," and that "said twenty-four men shall constitute a grand jury," an indictment returned by a grand jury organized with seventeen members was void. It was also held that it was not too late after the verdict to look into the record when the indictment by which the prisoner was charged was found by an unlawful grand jury. In Finley v. State, 61 Ala. 205, it is said: "But if its records affirmatively disclose that a body of men has been organized as a grand jury, in violation of the statutes which prescribe the mode of organizing such a jury, clothed with the powers of making presentments which operate as criminal accusations against the citizen, all the acts of that body must be pronounced void; no solicitation or laches on the part of the accused can cure the illegality. It would be ground of motion in arrest of judgment, and, if no such motion is made, of assignment of error in an appellate tribunal; and, if not assigned, it is of that class of errors this court must notice in obedience to the statute, and render such judgment on the record as the law demands." As the indictment proceeded from and was the act of a body of men organized as a grand jury in violation of law, the judgment of conviction was reversed. In Lott v. State, 18 Tex. App. 627, an indictment for burglary found by a grand jury composed of thirteen instead of twelve persons was held by the lower court not such an error as could be taken advantage of by a motion in arrest of judgment. The court of appeals, while holding that the ground of the motion was one not provided by the statute, said: "This exclusion of other ground could not, however, extend to the extent of depriving the defendant of a constitutional right, nor to the extent of conferring jurisdiction inhibited by the constitution."

... If he is tried in a court having no jurisdiction, he may interpose this objection to the proceeding at any stage thereof, and in any form. ... Our conclusion is that the matter presented by the motion in arrest of judgment is fundamental, and reaches to the very foundation of the prosecution. It shows that the court in which this trial and conviction were had was without any jurisdiction of the case. ... Such being the case, it matters not in what manner, or at what stage of the proceedings, this want of jurisdiction is presented. If presented for the first time on this appeal, it would be held fatal to the conviction; or, if it affirmatively appeared from the record that the defendant had been convicted of a felony without being indicted therefor by a grand jury, we would set aside the conviction and dismiss the prosecution for want of jurisdiction in the trial court, although the defendant had not, in any manner, made the objection."

It is not profitable to pursue this inquiry further. The importance of the question presented seemed to justify, on my part, a brief statement of the grounds of my dissent. I am of the opinion that the failure to impanel a legal grand jury was an error fatal to the jurisdiction of the trial court, and that it was an error of a grave character, and as to a matter absolutely essential to jurisdiction, and hence could not be waived by any act, or failure to act, on part of the defendant. Inasmuch as the jurisdiction of the trial court can only be based upon an indictment found by a grand jury legally organized, and as the indictment in this case was not found by such a body, no conviction can be based thereon; and the question of the court's jurisdiction in such a case can be raised at any time, and in any manner; and when such want of jurisdiction appears, no matter how, it is fatal. For the reasons given the judgment below should be reversed.

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT.

GLOBE PUBLISHING CO. et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

STATE BANK OF NEBRASKA, at Crete, et al.

(41 Neb. 178.)

*1. A suit pending to enforce a right or remedy conferred solely by statute is abated by the unconditional repeal of such statute before judgment rendered in such suit.

2. A penal statute is an act by which a forfeiture is imposed for transgressing the provisions of the act. It may also be remedial in one part, and penal in another. The effect, and not the form, of the statute, is to be considered; and if its object is clearly to inflict a punishment on a party for doing what is prohibited, or failing to do what is commanded to be done, it is penal in its character.

3. When a law prescribes what the liability of a stockholder in a corporation to the creditors thereof shall be, as that the shareholder shall be liable for double the amount of his stock, or for a sum equal to the amount of his stock, or for the amount remaining unpaid on his stock subscription,—such law is one prescribing the liability of a stockholder in a corporation de jure, as, without an express statute, a stockholder in such a corporation would not be liable for any debt of the corporation whatever.

4. When such a statute so prescribes and fixes the amount for which a stockholder in a corporation shall be liable, it is in-

*Headnotes by RAGAN, C.

NOTE.—For partnership liability of stockholders in case of defective or illegal incorporation, see note to Rutherford v. Hill (Or.) 17 L. R. A. 549, also the recent case of Wechselberg v. Flour City Nat. Bank (C. C. App. 7th C.) 28 L. R. A. 470.
27 L. R. A.

tended to be a limitation upon the stockholder's exemption from liability for the debts of the corporation, which, but for the law, he would enjoy.

5. When such a statute is in force, and persons organize themselves into a de jure corporation, such statute is incorporated into, and becomes a part of, the charter of such corporation; and the stockholders thereof impliedly assent and agree that their liability for the debts of the corporation shall be as fixed by such law.

6. Such a statute, and the rights of creditors acquired, thereunder, are contractual in their nature.

7. Where a statute provides that, until certain things are done by persons forming a corporation,—such as the filing of its articles of incorporation in the office of a public officer,—the stockholders of such corporation shall be liable for the debts thereof, such a statute is declaratory of the common law.

8. Until the requirements of such a statute have been complied with, a de jure corporation does not exist, and the stockholders thereof are jointly and severally liable for the debts contracted by such voluntary unincorporated association of persons; and such a statute, and the rights of creditors acquired thereunder, are contractual in their nature.

9. Where a law commands corporations to do certain acts, as to publish annually a notice of their indebtedness, such a law is addressed to the stockholders of corporations de jure; and when such statute declares that all the stockholders thereof shall be liable for the debts of the corporation in case it fails to comply with the requirements of the statute, then the law is designed as punishment of the stockholders for a violation of the law, and is penal.

10. Abbott v. Omaha Smelting & Ref. Co. 4 Neb. 418, and White v. Blum, Id. 555, reaffirmed. Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 488, and Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 708, 10 L. R. A. 658, overruled.

11. Where persons attempt in good faith to incorporate themselves into a valid corporation, and such a corporation actually enters upon the discharge of corporate functions, and so continues for a considerable time, unchallenged by the state, persons who contract with such a corporation cannot hold the stockholders thereof liable on such contract because it transpires that, by some mistake or oversight, the corporation had never become a technical de jure corporation.

12. Section 136 of chapter 11, Gen. Stat. 1873, repealed by an act approved April 6, 1891, was penal.

13. The word "ascertained," in section 4, article 13, of the Constitution, means "judicially ascertained;" and to "judicially ascertain" the amount due from a corporation to a creditor thereof means to have the finding and judgment or decree of a court as to such amount.

14. The creditors of a de jure corporation have no right of action against the stockholders thereof until they have reduced their claims against the corporation to judgment and until execution issued upon such judgment has been returned wholly or in part unsatisfied.

15. Such a creditor's cause of action does not accrue until the return, unsatisfied in whole or in part, of an execution issued on a judgment rendered in his favor against the corporation for the corporate debt.

(June 6, 1894.)

ERROR to the District Court for Saline County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enforce the individual liability of stockholders in defendant corporation for a corporate debt. Reversed in part.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert Ryan, with Messrs. James W. Dawes and Abbott & Abbott, for plaintiffs in error:

The note declared upon was signed "Globe Publishing Company, by S. L. Andrews, president, L. I. Abbott, M'gr.," and recited that, "we promise to pay."

The note does not bind the Globe Publishing Company.

Zoller v. Ide, 1 Neb. 489; Gregory v. Lamb, 16 Neb. 207; Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 820; Hallowell & Augusta Bank v. Hamlin, 14 Mass. 180; Delta Lumber Co. v. Williams, 73 Mich. 86; McOulough v. Moss, 5 Denio. 575; Columbus Co. v. Hurford, 1 Neb. 161; First Nat. Bank of Central City v. Lucas, 21 Neb. 280; Herman, Estoppel, 1448; Anderson v. Hubble, 98 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 894; Bigelow, Estoppel, 699; Robbins v. McGee, 76 Ind. 881; Cole v. Lafontaine, 84 Ind. 446; Gilbreath v. Jones, 66 Ala. 129; Texas Bkg. & Ins. Co. v. Hutchins, 58 Tex. 61, 37 Am. Rep. 752.

Section 4 of article 13 of the Constitution provides that "in all cases of claims against corporations and joint stock associations the exact amount justly due shall be first ascertained."

This has the meaning of definitely or conclusively fixed by trial (State v. Boyd, 81 Neb. 734) for the same reason that in creditor's bill proceedings it is universally required that by a judgment shall be indisputably fixed the amount to be collected.

Well v. Lankins, 8 Neb. 884; Weinland v. 37 L. R. A.

Cochran, 9 Neb. 490; Crowell v. Horacek, 12 Neb. 622; Brooks v. Stone, 19 How. Pr. 395.

Proof that a creditor has exhausted his legal remedy against the corporation is shown by the judgment and an execution thereon returned unsatisfied.

Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 588; Baines v. Story (Cal.) Sept. 23, 1891; Potter v. Dear (Cal.) Aug. 10, 1892; Cambridge Water Works v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co. 4 Allen, 243.

The Globe Publishing Company was sued upon its alleged note. As to the Globe Publishing Company the action was ex contractu; as to the remaining defendants, the action was for failure to comply with the statute; it was ex delicto and these causes of action should not be joined.

Brugman v. Burr, 30 Neb. 406; Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 897; Bliss, Code Pl. § 412, note 1; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; Flash v. Conn., 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966; Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 458, 28 L. ed. 1041.

Plaintiff must by competent affirmative evidence establish the failure to publish or the stockholders are not liable for the alleged failure to publish.

Patillo v. Smith, 61 Ga. 265; Goddard v. Rawson, 180 Mass. 97; Connell v. Hill, 30 La. Ann. 251; Giens v. Tidmore, 8 Ala. 750; Gillen v. Riley, 27 Neb. 158.

The debt arose as early as the fore part of 1884.

The amended petition alleged a failure during the years 1888 and 1889 to publish annual notice of the debts of the Globe Company, and in Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 118; Cady v. Smith, 12 Neb. 628; Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 486; Providence Steam-Engine Co. v. Hubbard, 101 U. S. 188, 25 L. ed. 786,—a right of action founded upon sections 136 and 139 of chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, is in no sense founded upon contract. Such actions are penal, and a repealing statute extinguishes all rights of action founded upon a penal statute.

Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill, 325; People v. Livingston, 6 Wend. 526; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. 477; Trott v. Warren, 11 Me. 234; Macnabwhoc Plantation v. Thompson, 86 Me. 365; Johnson v. Hahn, 4 Neb. 146; Key v. Goodwin, 4 Moore & P. 341; Providence Steam-Engine Co. v. Hubbard, supra; Veeder v. Baker, 88 N. Y. 156; Gadsden v. Woodward, 103 N. Y. 242; Cady v. Smith, 12 Neb. 630; Hanson v. Donkersley, 37 Mich. 184.

Messrs. Charles Offutt and Charles S. Lobingier, for defendants in error:

Section 136 of chapter 16 of the Compiled Statutes of 1889:

1. Was not remedial;
2. Did not provide for the recovery of a penalty;

3. Is a part of the charter of the Globe Publishing Company; and is,

4. Rather a part of the contract by virtue of which the shareholders were permitted by the state to do business as a corporation; compliance therewith was the condition on which the shareholders were to escape personal liability, and by incorporating under the laws of Nebraska and accepting the stock of the corporation, every shareholder agreed — contracted—to accept the terms of this section; hence,

5. The repealing act could not affect the rights of creditors which had accrued before the repeal.

Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 488; Coy v. Jones, 10 L. R. A. 658, 80 Neb. 798; Abbott v. Omaha Smelting & Ref. Co. 4 Neb. 416; Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 118; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 818; Dartmouth College Trustees v. Woodward, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Doolittle v. Marsh, 11 Neb. 244; State v. Cathers, 25 Neb. 250; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. p. 515; Hathorn v. Calef, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. ed. 776; McDonnell v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. 85 Ala. 401.

A distinction should be noticed at the outset between the usual liability imposed upon stockholders for the corporate debts and the liability occasionally imposed upon the officers of a corporation for its debts, because of their failure or neglect to perform some duty with which they are charged.

Thompson v. Reno Sav. Bank, 19 Nev. 108; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 871, 27 L. ed. 966; Chase v. Curtis, 118 U. S. 452, 28 L. ed. 1038.

Neither the statute nor the authorities warrant the interpretation that the original basis of the indebtedness sued upon must have been incurred during the time of default. The language of the statute is: "All debts of the corporation then existing and for all that shall be contracted before such notice is given."

Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 118; Castleman v. Holmes, 4 J. J. Marsh. 1; Fisher v. Marwin, 47 Barb. 159; Milliken v. Whitehouse, 49 Me. 527; Hutchins v. Olcott, 4 Vt. 549, 24 Am. Dec. 684.

The burden was upon defendants below to prove publication of indebtedness as required by the statute.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 79; 1 Whart. Ev. § 367; Blann v. Beal, 5 Ala. 857; Van Etten v. Eaton, 19 Mich. 187; Huggins v. Ward, 21 Week. Rep. 914; Toole v. State, 88 Ala. 168; Nash v. Hall, 4 Ind. 444; Gillen v. Riley, 27 Neb. 158; 25 Am. L. Rev. 308; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 445, 24 L. ed. 207; Legal Idea of Corporations, 19 Am. L. Rev. 144.

The note is sufficient in form.

Liebacher v. Kraus, 5 L. R. A. 496, 74 Wis. 887; Latham v. Houston Flour Mills, 68 Tex. 127; Heffner v. Brownell, 70 Iowa, 591.

The note was signed by the proper officers. Whitaker v. Kilroy, 70 Miss. 635; Topeka Primary University of Builders Assn. v. Martin, 39 Kan. 750; Seely v. San Jose Independent Mill & Lumber Co. 59 Cal. 22; Kraft v. Freeman Printing & Pub. Assn. 87 N. Y. 628; Poole v. West Point Butter & Cheese Assn. 30 Fed. Rep. 518; National Park Bank of New York v. German-American Mt. Warehousing & Secur. Co. 21 Jones & S. 367; Morrell v. Long Island R. Co. 15 Daly, 127; Siemens Regenerative Gas Lamp Co. v. Horstmann, 24 W. N. C. 896.

Since the corporation was insolvent, the action was properly brought against both it and the stockholders simultaneously; and the question of misjoinder does not arise in the case.

Cropey v. Wiggernhorn, 8 Neb. 115; Cambridge Water Works v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co. 4 Allen, 243; Smith v. Steele, 8 27 L. R. A.

Neb. 115; Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 488; Abbott v. Omaha Smelting & Ref. Co. 4 Neb. 416; White v. Blum, 4 Neb. 555; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. 219; Morgan v. Lewis, 46 Ohio St. 1; Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 585; Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700, 80 Am. Dec. 797; Richards v. Beach, 22 N. Y. S. R. 296; Walton v. Cos, 110 N. Y. 109.

The creditor need not wait for a return of nulla bona against the corporation if the latter is insolvent and has ceased to do business.

Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Kinoid v. Duinelle, 59 N. Y. 543; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 871, 27 L. ed. 966; Munger v. Jacobson, 90 Ill. 849; Toucey v. Bowen, 1 Biss. 81; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 84; Simpson v. Greeley, 8 Kan. 586; Finley v. Hayes, 81 N. C. 363; Feld v. Hurst, 9 S. C. 277; Wiles v. Sydnam, 64 N. Y. 173; Brugman v. Burr, 30 Neb. 406.

There has been no release of the stockholders' liability, as the latter is primary and not that of sureties.

Hanson v. Donkersley, 87 Mich. 187; Coleman v. White, supra; Shafer v. Moriarty, 46 Ind. 9; Brown v. Herr, 21 Neb. 113.

Petition for rehearing.

The repealing of the Act of April 6, 1891, is in violation of the Federal Constitution in that it impairs the obligation of contracts, because—

The previous decisions of this court holding that the liability imposed by section 136 of the Corporation Act of Nebraska was contractual had become and were a rule of property in Nebraska when the Act of 1891 was passed; this court cannot divest rights acquired in reliance upon the rules of property announced by those decisions (whether the decisions were right or wrong is immaterial), and the legislature must be presumed to have enacted the repealing statute with respect to this rule of property and the adjudged construction of the act which they repealed.

Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483; Coy v. Jones, 10 L. R. A. 658, 80 Neb. 798; Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 118; Doolittle v. Marsh, 11 Neb. 244.

The decisions now overruled formed a rule of statutory construction which cannot be changed without impairing vested rights.

Douglass v. Pike County (Mo.) 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. ed. 968; Inland Revenue Comrs. v. Harrison, L. R. 7 H. L. 9; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 894, § 810; Bates v. Relyea, 23 Wend. 841; Fisher v. Horicon Iron & Mfg. Co. 10 Wis. 855; Smith v. Steele, supra; Godman v. Converse, 88 Neb. 657.

The decisions now overruled laid down a rule of property or business which cannot now be changed without destroying vested contractual rights acquired thereunder.

21 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 439; Allen v. Fairbanks, 45 Fed. Rep. 445; Chase v. Curtis, 118 U. S. 452, 28 L. ed. 1038; Kearny v. Buttles, 1 Ohio St. 362; Knedand v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 455; Fearne, Contingent Remainders, p. 264; Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 188; Hihn v. Courtis, 81 Cal. 402; Grignon v. Astor, 43 U. S. 2 How. 843, 11 L. ed. 292; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 833.

The liability imposed by section 136 is contractual because a part of the charter of every business corporation in Nebraska and a condition upon which shareholders in corporations are permitted to do business as a corporation without any risk to their private fortunes; hence, the right to recover under this section had become invested in the defendant in error when the repealing act was passed, and the repeal could not affect rights of action which had become complete before the enactment of the repeal.

California v. California Pac. R. Co. 127 U. S. 41, 32 L. ed. 157; Home Ins. Co. of New York v. New York, 134 U. S. 599, 33 L. ed. 1029; Paul v. Virginia, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 181, 19 L. ed. 360; Ashley v. Ryan, 153 U. S. 486, 38 L. ed. 773.

A penal statute in the sense that its repeal destroys the right of action for acts done or prohibited to be done prior to its repeal, is a statute which imposes a liability solely for the purpose of punishment, and to deter others from offending in like manner, without any idea of reparation to the party aggrieved; and statutes are not penal in the sense named which imposes a liability for certain acts, primarily as a preparation to the party injured, and not for the sole purpose of punishing the one who violates the law. Under statutes of the latter class, the right of recovery under the statute is vested as soon as the act prohibited is committed, and a repeal of the statute after the action accrues cannot affect that right.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 808; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 666, 36 L. ed. 1127; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. § 223; Com. v. Marshall, 11 Pick. 350, 22 Am. Dec. 377; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 306; Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; Streubel v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co. 13 Wis. 74; United States v. Quincy, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. ed. 403; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 879.

In determining whether the liability imposed by statutes, such as section 136, is contractual or penal, we find that where the liability for failure to comply with the requirements of the corporation law is imposed upon the corporate officers, it is penal; where it is imposed upon the entire body of stockholders, it is contractual.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders, 2d ed. § 223; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. p. 849, § 877; Queenan v. Palmer, 117 Ill. 627; Breitung v. Lindauer, 87 Mich. 217; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173.

Every case relied upon or cited by the commissioner to show that the Nebraska statute was penal, but one (and that one did not involve the effect of a repeal), was a case imposing a liability on officers, either directors or trustees.

The tests of penal liability as intimated in the commissioners' opinion are contrary to the authorities.

This liability is not in the nature of a penalty for a breach of duty.

Aspinwall v. Sacchi, 57 N. Y. 331; Flash v. Conn. 16 Fla. 428, 26 Am. Rep. 721; Flash v. Conn. 109 U. S. 871, 27 L. ed. 966; Terry v. Calnan, 18 S. C. 220; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 510, 23 L. ed. 788; Hathorn v. Caley, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. ed. 776; Hodg- 27 L. R. A.

son v. Cheever, 8 Mo. App. 319; Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason, 296; Central Agricultural & Mechanical Assn. v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. 70 Ala. 134; McDonnell v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. 85 Ala. 401.

The apparent distinction between limited and unlimited liability, making the former alone contractual, is opposed by the authorities.

Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. 98; Corning v. McCollough, 1 N. Y. 47, 49 Am. Dec. 287; Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. 327; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 126; Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93; Dennis v. Los Angeles County Super. Ct. 91 Cal. 543; Carver v. Braintrees Mfg. Co. 2 Story, C. C. 450.

Ragan, C., filed the following opinion:

The State Bank of Nebraska at Crete, Neb., sued the Globe Publishing Company and the stockholders thereof in the district court of Saline county to recover the amount of a promissory note owing by said Globe Publishing Company to the said State Bank. Both the bank and the Globe Publishing Company were domestic corporations, having their principal places of business in said Saline county. The bank had a verdict and judgment, and the stockholders of the publishing company bring the case here for review.

The liability of the stockholders of the publishing company for the debt due from it to the bank was based on the failure of the publishing company to publish an annual notice of its existing debts, as provided by section 136, chap. 11, Gen. Stat. 1873, in force at the time the debt sued for here was contracted. That section is as follows: "Every corporation hereafter created shall give notice annually in some newspaper printed in the county or counties in which the business is transacted, and in case there is no newspaper printed therein, then in the nearest newspaper in the state, of the amount of all the existing debts of the corporation; which notice shall be signed by the president and a majority of the directors; and, if any corporation shall fail to do so, all the stockholders of the corporation shall be jointly and severally liable for all debts of the corporation then existing, and for all that shall be contracted before such notice is given." After this suit was brought, but before judgment was rendered therein, the legislature repealed this section 136, without a saving clause. The argument of counsel for plaintiffs in error now is that the repeal of said section abated this action. Whether this is true depends upon the nature of the statute repealed. If it was a statute contractual in its nature; if the right of action acquired by the bank against the stockholders of the publishing company by virtue of said statute, and the corporation's violation thereof, was a vested right,—then the repeal of the statute could not and did not take it away. But if the statute repealed was penal in its nature, then its repeal abated the action.

1. A suit pending to enforce a right or remedy conferred solely by statute is abated by the unconditional repeal of such statute before judgment rendered in such suit. Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Victory Webb Printing & Folding Mach. Mfg. Co. v. Beecher, 97 N. Y. 651; Gregory v.

German Bank of Denver, 8 Colo. 832, 25 Am. Rep. 760; Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 217; Yeaton v. United States, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch, 281, 8 L. ed. 101; Norris v. Crooker, 54 U. S. 18 How. 429, 14 L. ed. 210.

2. Was this a penal statute? This question must be answered by the authorities.

In 1948 the legislature of New York enacted a statute governing manufacturing corporations. Section 12 of that Act was as follows: "Every such company shall annually within twenty days from the first day of January, make a report which shall be published in some newspaper in the town, city, or village, or if there be no newspaper published in said town, city, or village then in some newspaper published nearest the place where the business of said company is carried on, which shall state the amount of the capital and the portion actually paid in and the amount of existing debts, which report shall be signed by the president and a majority of the trustees and shall be verified by the oath of the president or secretary of such company and filed in the office of the county where the business of the company shall be carried on; and if any such company shall fail so to do all the trustees of the company shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing and for all that shall be contracted before such report shall be made." A New York corporation organized under this law failed to give the annual notice of its indebtedness, as provided by said section 12, and during such default became indebted to a bank. The bank then sued the trustees of the corporation for the amount of the debt. The court of appeals of New York, in Merchants' Bank of New Haven v. Bliss, 85 N. Y. 412, discussing said section 12 and another section, said: "The liability of the trustees under said section 12, it must be observed, is not limited to the injury or damage sustained by the creditors in consequence of the violation; but, upon failure to file a report, the trustees are subjected to the payment of the whole amount of the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted. These provisions appear to be severally punitive, inflicted, on grounds of public policy, for the protection of creditors, and the prevention of frauds upon the public in respect to the financial condition of such corporation. It is clear that the liability of the trustees is not imposed as an indemnity, because it has no relation to the actual loss or injury sustained by the party in whose favor the action is given. The action depends wholly upon the statute. There never was any such remedy or cause of action, in whole or in part, at common law. If any action could have been maintained at common law for either of the causes mentioned in sections 12 and 13 of the General Act in relation to manufacturing corporations, it could extend only to the actual damages or injury sustained. But those elements have nothing to do with the actions given by these sections, nor, indeed, is it necessary that the creditor should have sustained any injury or damage by reason of a violation of those sections. It is sufficient that the party prosecuting the action should be a creditor when the violation of the law takes place. The right of action is given to the creditors, and they must be held to be the parties aggrieved. For these reasons, I am satisfied that sections 12 and 13 impose a penalty." The question of the nature of this section 12 arose again, and was discussed and decided by the court of appeals of New York, in Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 137, and the court said: "It will be observed that this is a highly penal act, extremely rigorous in its provisions." In Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173, the statute was again before the New York court of appeals. In that case the Imperishable Stone Block Pavement Company, a domestic corporation, became indebted to Wiles et al. Suydam was a stockholder in the corporation, and indebted to it on his stock subscriptions. He was also a trustee of the corporation. The suit was brought by Wiles et al. against Suydam to recover the amount of the debt owing them by the pavement company; and Wiles set out in his petition against Suydam two causes of action, viz., his indebtedness on his stock subscription to the stone Pavement Company, and the failure of that corporation to publish annually the statement of its existing debts. The court held that the indebtedness of Suydam on his unpaid subscription constituted one cause of action against Suydam, and in discussing the other right of action of Wiles against Suydam, originating by the failure of the corporation to publish its annual statement, said: "The allegations against the defendant as trustee also constitute a distinct and perfect cause of action. Here the liability is created by statute, and is in the nature of a penalty imposed for neglect of duty, in not filing a report showing the situation of the company." The nature of this section 12 has been before the New York court of appeals, and the construction placed upon said section in the leading case (Merchants' Bank of New Haven v. Bliss, supra); and reaffirmed in the following cases; Easterly v. Barber, 65 N. Y. 252; Knob v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Veeder v. Baker, 83 N. Y. 156; Pier v. Hanmore, 86 N. Y. 95; Stokes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 323; Victory Webb Printing & Folding Mach. Mfg. Co. v. Beecher, supra. And in Gadsden v. Woodward, 103 N. Y. 242, the nature of said section 12 was again before the New York court of appeals, and the court said: "This action is brought against the defendant to recover a debt due by a manufacturing corporation, of which he was a trustee, and he is sought to be made liable therefor on the ground that he failed to make the annual report required by the general manufacturing law. The action is not to recover a debt which he owes, but to impose upon him, as a penalty for his default, the payment of the debt of the corporation. We have repeatedly held that such an action is for a penalty or forfeiture. The penalty sought to be enforced against the defendant does not arise out of any contract obligation, but is imposed by the statute for disobedience of its requirements." This section 12 of the New York law was construed by the Supreme Court of the United States in Chase v. Curtis, 118 U. S. 452, 28 L. ed. 1038, the court saying of said section 12; "But, as we have already seen, the statute involved in this discussion is not a remedial statute, to be broadly and liberally construed, but is a penal statute, with provisions of a highly rigorous nature, to be construed most favorably for those sought to be charged under it, and with strictness against their alleged liability." Section 15 of chapter 18 of the Revised Statutes of 1868 of the state of Colorado is a copy of section 12 of the New York Act. The nature of this section 15 of the Colorado Act was before the supreme court of that state in Gregory v. German Bank of Denver, 3 Colo. 832, 25 Am. Rep. 760, and of that statute that court said: "This statute is, in its nature, penal. It prescribed a determinate penalty for neglect of a duty imposed by law upon the trustees of corporations organized under our general incorporation act. The amount of the forfeiture is measured by the aggregate debt contracted by the company. The liability is not founded upon contract but arises from misconduct in office." This case was reaffirmed by the supreme court of Colorado in Larsen v. James, 1 Colo. App. 818.

A statute of Michigan required annual reports of certain corporations to be filed, and provided that, if the directors neglected to file such reports, they should be liable for all the debts of the corporation contracted during the period of such neglect. Construing that statute, the supreme court of that state held that the liability imposed was in the nature of a penalty, and conferred no contract obligation, upon which creditors could rely.

A statute of Connecticut provided that, in the case of every corporation, certificates showing their condition should be filed annually by the president and secretary with the town clerk, and that in case of neglect those officers should be liable for all the debts of the corporation contracted during the period of such neglect. The supreme court of that state, construing this statute in Mitchell v. Hotchkiss, 48 Conn. 9, 40 Am. Rep. 146, said: "We do not see how it is possible to construe this statute as creating, or attempting to create, any relation or duty between the creditors of a corporation and its president. The adoption of such a construction would suggest grave doubts as to the validity of the act which should attempt so arbitrarily to make a debtor out of a stranger to the debt, or, in other words, to make the debt of one person the debt of another. There was no privity between Hotchkiss and the plaintiff. They had no transaction with each other, and the former owed the latter no private duty, from which a promise might be implied." This Connecticut statute came before the Supreme Court of the United States, and its nature was construed by that court, in Providence Steam-Engine Co. v. Hubbard, 101 U. S. 188, 25 L. ed. 786, and that court held that the Connecticut statute was penal, and must be strictly construed.

The supreme court of Illinois, in Diversey v. Smith, 108 Ill. 378, 42 Am. Rep. 14, defines a "penal statute" thus: "A penal statute is an act by which a forfeiture is imposed for transgressing the provisions of the act. It may also be remedial in one part, and penal in the other. The effect, and not the form, of the statute, is to be considered; and if its object is clearly to inflict a punishment on a party for doing what is prohibited or failing to do what is commanded to be done, it is penal in its character."

Cook on Stock and Stockholders, 2d ed. § 223, in discussing the enforcement of the statutory liability of stockholders in the courts of a state other than the one in which said corporation was created, uses this language: "In general, when the courts of one state are asked to enforce the statutory liability of stockholders in a corporation created by another state two things are to be considered: First, Is the statutory liability itself a contract liability, or a mere penalty? The law is clear that the courts of one state will not enforce penalties imposed by another state. But the usual statutory liability of stockholders is not a penalty. The ordinary statutory liability of stockholders is a contract liability, and will be enforced as such by the courts of all the states. A different rule prevails as to the statutory liability of corporate officers for failure to file reports, or give certain notices or make certain contracts. Such liability is generally construed to be penal, and will not be enforced by the courts of other states."

The section of the Nebraska statute under consideration is almost a literal copy of the eighteenth section of the first article of the corporation act of the state of Missouri, approved March 19, 1845; the section of the Missouri law being in the following words: "Every corporation hereafter created shall give notice annually in some newspaper printed in the county where the corporation is established, and in case no paper is printed therein then in the nearest paper, of the amount of all the existing debts of the corporation; which notice shall be signed by the president and a majority of the directors; and if any of the said corporations shall fail to do so all the stockholders of the corporation shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted before such notice shall be given." A corporation of that state having failed to publish an annual notice of its existing debts, and during such default having become indebted, an action was brought against all the stockholders of the corporation for the debt so contracted, on the ground of the default in publishing the annual notice required by the section just quoted. The right of the creditor to maintain the action against the stockholders depended upon whether the statute was in its nature penal; and the supreme court of the state of Missouri, in Cable v. McCune, 26 Mo. 371, 72 Am. Dec. 214, decided that the statute in question was a penal one. The court said: "Our opinion in this case is based entirely upon the penal character of the statute we are called upon to construe. The corporation is required to publish an annual notice of its condition, for the information of the public; and the failure to do so renders the stockholders liable for a specified class of demands, existing prior to, or at the time of, such publication. This liability in the event of there being no required publication does not depend upon the actual injury which the failure to publish may have occasioned in a case, but is absolute, depending only on the proof of publication or no publication. Such a statute can be regarded in no other light than a penal one."

Thus far, we have been reviewing authorities which show that the Nebraska statute under consideration (and statutes like it) is a penal one. We now direct our attention to the argument of counsel for the defendants in error—and the authorities cited by them—that section 136 of the Nebraska statute is, in its nature, contractual; in other words, that the right of action given thereby to the creditors of a corporation against its stockholders for the failure of the corporation to publish the annual statement of its indebtedness is a right of action arising by contract, and therefore a vested right, and one that the legislature could not take away by repealing the statute. It is contended that, as section 136 was in force at the time of the organization of the Globe Publishing Company, it became a part of its charter, and that the stockholders thereof, by virtue of such statute, and the organization of such corporation while it was in force, impliedly contracted and promised that, in case the corporation failed to publish its annual statement they (the stockholders) would pay all the debts that the corporation contracted during the period of such default. But counsel lose sight of the distinction between the liability of a member of a voluntary unincorporated association for the debts thereof, as it existed at common law, and as fixed by statutes declaratory thereof, and the statutory liability of a stockholder of a corporation de jure. When the law prescribes what the liability of a shareholder shall be,—for instance, that such shareholder shall be liable to the creditors of the corporation for double the amount of his stock, or for a sum equal to the amount of his stock, or for the amount remaining unpaid on his subscription to the stock of such company,—the law is then speaking of, and fixing, the liability of a stockholder in a corporation de jure, as, without an express statute, a stockholder in such a corporation would not be liable for any debt whatever of such corporation. And, when a statute so prescribes and fixes the amount for which the stockholders in a corporation shall be liable, such a law is intended to be a limitation upon the stockholder's exemption from liability for the debts of the corporation, which he would otherwise enjoy; and persons who organize themselves into a de jure corporation when such a statute is in force incorporate it into, and it becomes a part of, their charter, and they impliedly agree and assent that their liability for the debts of the corporation shall be as fixed by such a law. Where a statute provides that until certain things are done by persons forming a corporation,—such as the filing of its articles of association in the office of a public officer,—the stockholders in such corporation shall be liable for the debts thereof, such a statute is only declaratory of the common law. Until the requirements of the statutes have been complied with, a de jure corporation would not exist, and the parties thereof would be jointly and severally liable for all the debts contracted by such voluntary unincorporated association of persons. At least, since the time our Norse ancestors settled on the shores of the Baltic sea, it has been the law that, where two or more persons engaged in a common enterprise, each one was liable for the act of the others, and for the debts incurred by the others, in aid of the common object for which the association was formed, or the enterprise undertaken. It is evident that the statute which makes all the stockholders of a corporation liable for the debts thereof until the requirements of the statute have been complied with, necessary to make such a corporation one de jure, cannot be considered a penal statute, as such statute adds nothing to the liability of such parties, nor takes away any right which a creditor of such parties might have had. But where the law commands corporations to do certain acts, as to publish annually a notice of their indebtedness, such a law is addressing itself, not to de facto corporations or copartnerships or unincorporated associations, but to corporations de jure, and the stockholders of such corporations; and, when such a statute declares that all the stockholders of such a corporation shall be liable for all the debts of the corporation if it fails to comply with the requirements of the statute, then such a law is designed as a punishment of the stockholders, and is penal.

Among the authorities relied upon by the eminent counsel for the defendants in error to sustain their argument that the section of the Nebraska statute under consideration was contractual in its nature is the case of Hathorn v. Calef, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 10, 17 L. ed. 776. An examination of that case, however, discloses that it does not by any means sustain the contention of counsel. A statute of Maine, passed in 1836, provided that the shares of the individual stockholders of a corporation should be liable for the debts of the corporation, and, in case of deficiency of attachable corporate property or estate, the individual property rights and credits of the stockholder should be liable for the corporation's debts, to the amount of the stockholder's stock. A corporation organized under this law became indebted, and soon after the debt was contracted the legislature of the state repealed the law making the stockholder of a corporation individually liable to a creditor thereof. The creditor, however, sued the stockholder, alleging that the statute referred to was contractual in its nature, that the right of action he had acquired against the stockholder was a vested right, and that it was not within the power of the legislature of Maine to take that power away by repealing the statute. This contention the Supreme Court of the United States sustained in the case just cited. Another case relied on by counsel to support this argument is Flash v. Conn, 169 U. S. 871, 27 L. ed. 966. The tenth section of the corporation law of the state of New York provided that all the stockholders of every company incorporated under the act should be severally and individually liable to the creditors of the corporation to an amount equal to the amount of stock held by them in such corporation. A corporation having become indebted the creditors sued its stockholders for the debt, under the section just quoted; and the Supreme Court of the United States, in construing said section 10, held that the liability created thereby was contractual in its nature. With the doctrine announced by the two cases last cited we entirely agree. The statute of the state of Maine, which fixed the liability of a stockholder of a corporation for the debts thereof at the amount of the stock held by him in such corporation, was contractual; and whoever became a stockholder in a corporation while that law was in force impliedly assented and agreed that he would be liable for the debts of the corporation, to an amount equal to the stock held by him therein. It was a fixed, ascertained, and determined liability at the time he became a member of the corporation. It was a law addressing itself to stockholders of de jure corporations, and a law of limitation upon the exemptions that such stockholders would have otherwise enjoyed, but for such statute. And the same may be said of section 10 of the New York Law, construed by the supreme court in Flash v. Conn. But it is said that this court is committed to the doctrine of the contractual nature of the statute under consideration; and, to sustain this contention, we are cited to Abbott v. Omaha Smelting & Ref. Co. 4 Neb. 416; and White v. Blum, Id. 555. But these cases decide, and decide only, that where persons have attempted to form a corporation, until they shall have complied with the requirements of the statute for that purpose, they are jointly and severally liable for the debts of such association. This conclusion is right and we adhere to it. But the conclusion reached in these cases resulted not alone from the statute, but could and would have been the same had no statute on the subject existed. Until the statute had been complied with, the Omaha Smelting Company and the Midland Pacific Railroad Company did not become corporations de jure; and until they had become such corporations the parties organizing them were simply members of voluntary unincorporated associations, and as such were liable, both at common law and under the statute, for the debts of such associations, contracted by a member thereof within the scope of his authority, and for the purposes for which the associations existed. But we do not mean by anything said here to deny the correctness of the doctrine, expressed in many cases, that where persons attempt, in good faith, to incorporate themselves into a valid corporation, and, in such corporation's name, actually enter upon the discharge of corporate functions, and so continue for a considerable time, unchallenged by the state, persons who contract with such corporation cannot hold the stockholders thereof liable on such contract because it transpires that, by some mistake or oversight, the corporation had never become a technical de jure corporation. On the contrary, we approve of that rule.

It is conceded by counsel for defendants in error that section 12 of the New York Act, construed in the cases cited above, was and is penal; but it is said that, as that act made the trustees of the corporation liable for not publishing a notice of the corporation's existing debts, a distinction exists between the nature of that act and section 186 of the Nebraska Act, wherein the liability is made to attach to all the stockholders of the corporation. We have reflected much upon this argument, and confess our inability to comprehend the distinction which counsel would draw. We have been unable, after a patient search, to find any decided case or any text-writer supporting the counsel's argument. It may be that the directors of a corporation would be liable for fraud or deceit practiced by them in the name of the corporation upon another; and it may be that they would be liable for any damage which another should sustain, in dealing with such corporation, by the failure of such directors to comply with the law in force, governing the corporation. But, if such liability exists, it is not a statutory liability, but a common-law liability, and in either of the cases supposed the liability of the directors would be measured by the damages sustained. If section 12 of the New York Act is penal, because it compels the directors to pay the debts of the corporation because they (its managing officers) did not comply with the requirements of the law, it would seem that a statute which makes all the stockholders of a corporation liable for the default of the corporation's directors would also be penal. If the section of the Nebraska statute under consideration is not a penal one, we are at a loss to know how the legislature could frame a penal statute. It certainly is not a statute of rewards. True, the punishment inflicted is pecuniary, but by the provisions of this statute a stockholder who owns $10 of stock in a corporation may, under certain contingencies, be compelled to pay a debt of $10,000 that he did not owe—that he did not contract,—and suffer that liability because of the default of another. True enough, the object of the statute was to annually notify to the world the financial condition of the domestic corporations of the state, that parties having transactions with them might have a basis upon which to do their business safely. But this is not the only object of the statute. It is the exercise by the state of its police power. It is based upon principles of public policy, and it was intended as an incentive to stockholders of corporations to see to it that the law of the state was obeyed, and, if they neglected their duty in that regard, to punish them for such neglect. We cannot recognize the argument that persons were induced to give the corporations of the state credit because of the existence of this section 186, for this would be to concede that the creditors parted with their property upon the understanding that when they did so the officers of the corporation would violate the law which it was their duty to obey.

But, again, counsel for defendants in error say that the nature of the statute under consideration is no longer an open question in this court, as we have decided that the statute was not penal, but contractual. In Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 488, and again in Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 798, 10 L. R. A. 658, we did so decide. A somewhat extensive re-examination of the subject, however, constrains us to say that the conclusion reached by us in those cases was wrong, and they must be overruled. We did say, in those cases, that said section 186 of the Nebraska statute was contractual in its nature. We were mistaken. The rule we announced in those cases is not supported by the weight of authority, nor, indeed, is it supported by any authority that we have been able to find. We conclude, therefore, that said section 186 was a penal statute, and that all rights of action which accrued thereunder to the creditors of a corporation against the stockholders thereof, and which had not been reduced to judgment, were abrogated by the repeal of said section.

This suit was brought against the Globe Publishing Company and the stockholders thereof jointly. Was the action against the stockholders prematurely brought? We think it was. Cook on Stock & Stockholders, sec. 219, thus lays down the rule: "Even when not expressly provided by statute, it is the rule, according to the weight of authority, that corporate creditors, before they can proceed against the shareholders upon their statutory liability, must first exhaust their remedy against the corporation and its assets." We have no doubt but that this is the general rule, and the better practice, especially in the absence of a statute which authorizes a different procedure, but we are not concerned with what the rule may be in other states and courts. Section 4, article 12, of the Constitution, provides that: "In all cases of claims against corporations and joint stock associations the exact amount justly due shall be first ascertained, and after the corporate property shall have been exhausted the original subscribers thereof shall be individually liable to the extent of their unpaid subscription, and the liability for the unpaid subscription shall follow the stock." The word "ascertained," in this provision, we take to mean "judicially ascertained;" and to "judicially ascertain" the amount due from a corporation to a creditor means to have the finding and judgment or decree of a court as to such amount. Such an ascertainment of a debt due from a corporation could then be ascertained, and ascertained only, within the meaning of this constitution, in a suit brought by a creditor of a corporation against it; not against the stockholders thereof, nor against the stockholders and corporation jointly. The expression in the constitutional provision just quoted above, "that after the corporate property shall have been exhausted," means "exhausted by judicial proceedings;" that is, when executions issued on judgments or decrees rendered against corporations shall be returned unsatisfied. This constitutional provision is the supreme law of the land, and we are not at liberty to, or desirous of, evading it or construing it away. We think, therefore, that the creditors of a de jure corporation have no right of action against the stockholders thereof until they have reduced their claims against the corporation to judgment, and until an execution issued upon such judgment has been returned wholly or in part unsatisfied. It follows from this that a creditor's cause of action against the stockholders of a corporation under said section 136 would not accrue until such creditor had sued the corporation for the corporate debt, obtained a judgment thereon, and an execution issued on such judgment had been returned, at least in part, unsatisfied. The judgment of the district court is affirmed as to the Globe Publishing Company and reversed as to all stockholders who prosecuted error, and the action as to them is dismissed.

Judgment accordingly.

Norval, Ch. J., concurs in the judgment solely on the ground last stated in the above opinion.

Ryan, C., having been of counsel, took no part in the decision.

Rehearing denied.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

John M. MORGAN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

Isalah HUDNELL.

(62 Ohio St. —)

*1. The owner of a domestic animal is not in general liable for an injury committed by such animal while in a place where it rightfully may be, unless it is shown that the animal was vicious in the particular complained of, and that the owner had notice of such vicious propensity.

*2. But if the animal breaks into the close of another, and there damages the real or personal property of the one in possession, the owner of the trespassing animal is liable without reference to whether or not such animal was vicious and without reference to whether such propensity was known to the owner.

* Headnotes by the Court.

NOTE.—The doctrine of the above case to the effect that scienter of the vicious character of an animal is unnecessary to render the owner liable for injuries committed by the animal when trespassing, is fully supported by the very few decisions. 27 L. R. A.

3. One tenant in common of a pasture field may maintain an action against the owner of a domestic animal which breaks into the field and injures the live stock of such tenant rightfully grazing therein; and the other tenants are not necessary parties to such action.

(April 23, 1905.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Ross County to review a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for the killing of plaintiff's horse by one of defendant's horses. Affirmed.

Statement by Spear, J.:

The action below was for the unlawful killing of Hudnell's horse by a horse belonging to plaintiff in error. The evidence at the trial tended to show that Hudnell's horse was rightfully in a pasture field belonging ions which have been rendered upon the question. They are mostly comprised in the brief list cited in the opinion of the court. As to the liability for acts of such animals on the owner's premises, see note to Conway v. Grant (Ga.) 14 L. R. A. 196.

to one Houser; "that under a contract with said Houser, plaintiff had the right to keep the horse in question in Houser's pasture field on pasture, and that on the night he was killed, the said horse was in said pasture field under said contract, along with horses belonging to other parties who had like contracts, and who, as well as the plaintiff, paid a certain price per month for said right, and plaintiff offered other testimony tending to prove that defendant's horse had broken over the part of said fence to be kept up by defendant's wife, into the field of said Houser, and had while in said field, attacked and killed plaintiff's horse, and testimony tending to show that defendant's horse was breachy and that he knew it, and tending to show that defendant's horse was vicious and that he knew it, and testimony was offered by defendant tending to show to the contrary."

The court charged the jury among other instructions the following:

"(1.) If the defendant's horse was at the time trespassing in plaintiff's field, on plaintiff's land, or on the land of a third party where plaintiff was pasturing his horse by the month, for a consideration paid by plaintiff to such owner, and there attacked and killed plaintiff's horse, defendant is liable for the injury, whether he knew or not of the vicious propensity of his horse.

"(2.) If the jury find that the defendant's horse was in pasture on his wife's premises, and while there broke over her part of the partition fence, separating her said lands from the field in which plaintiff's horse was being rightfully pastured by him, then the defendant's horse was unlawfully in the place where the plaintiff's horse was on pasture, and in such case, if the jury find that he killed plaintiff's horse, the defendant is liable to plaintiff for the injury, whether his horse was in fact vicious or not, and whether he knew of such viciousness or not."

A verdict for plaintiff followed and judgment thereon, to reverse which this proceeding in error is brought.

Messrs. Mayo, Yapple & Phillips for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John C. Entrekin for defendant in error.

Spear, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The contention of the plaintiff in error is that the charge of the court is wrong, and that there should have been no recovery in favor of Hudnell, because, (1) the owner of domestic animals cannot be held liable for injuries committed by them unless the owner has notice of their vicious propensities, and (2) the plaintiff below, not being in possession of the lot where his horse was being pastured, could not maintain an action of trespass.

Undoubtedly it is settled law that the owner of a domestic animal is not in general liable for an injury committed by such animal while in a place where it rightfully may be, unless it is shown that the animal was vicious in the particular complained of, 37 L. R. A.

and that the owner had notice of such vicious propensity.

But we regard it as equally well settled that if the animal breaks into the close of another, and there damages the real or personal property of one in possession, the owner of the trespassing animal is liable without reference to whether such animal was vicious and without reference to whether such propensity was known to the owner, for the law holds a man answerable not only for his own trespass but for that of his domestic animal. The natural and well-known propensity of horses, as well as other cattle, is to rove, and the owner is bound to confine them on his own land; so that, if they escape and do mischief on the land of another under circumstances where the other is not at fault, the owner ought to be liable. Beckwith v. Shoredike, 4 Burr. 2092; Angus v. Radin, 5 N. J. L. 815, 8 Am. Dec. 626; Dolph v. Ferris, 7 Watts & S. 367, 42 Am. Dec. 246; 3 Bl. Com. 211.

The question, then, in this case, is whether or not Hudnell was in possession of the pasture field in such sense as to authorize him to maintain the action.

It is the duty of this court to give such construction to the record as will sustain the judgment of the court below if it can be reasonably done.

Looking to the bill of exceptions we find that the plaintiff "had the right to keep the horse in question in Houser's pasture-field on pasture," and "paid a certain price per month for such right." That is, Hudnell, the plaintiff, was keeping the horse there; Houser, the owner of the land, was not keeping the horse there. It does not appear that he was keeping any animal there. Other persons who had like right with plaintiff had their horses in the same field on pasture. It does not appear that Houser reserved any right to use the field for his own stock, nor for the stock of others. Indeed, the circumstances are consistent with the idea that Houser had, for the time these contracts remained in force, given up the possession to those who had thus hired the pasture. In this view they were, then, the owners of the growing herbage. The rule that tenants so in possession may maintain trespass against even the owner of the fee, seems to rest on reason and abundant authority. Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602; Tompkinson v. Russell, 9 Price, 287; Clap v. Draper, 4 Mass. 266, 3 Am. Dec. 215; 1 Addison, Torts, 371, 372. It would follow from this that had damage to the herbage been the ground of complaint, the tenants might have maintained a joint action for trespass.

If the conclusion just stated is justified, and we think it is, the only question remaining is as to the right of one of several tenants in possession, holding by separate contracts, to maintain an action in trespass, where the damage for which he seeks to recover is to his own individual property rightfully in the close, by virtue of his rental contract. That the damage is to personality will not, according to the authorities, stand in the way of a recovery. True, such damage is treated by many authorities as an incident, and in the nature of aggravation. But this distinction seems to have arisen from a desire to preserve the common-law form of action, and at the same time not deny the injured party a remedy. The old action for trespass quare clausum fregit was strictly an action for damages to the land following a unlawful entry, and hence could not be resorted to for the purpose of a recovery for damages to personalty only. But forms of action not being important in this state, since the adoption of the code, we need not be embarrassed by any such distinction. The question in every case is not, What is the proper form of action? but, Has the party a right of action?

Upon this phase of the inquiry we do not find authorities. But, upon principle, why should not one of several tenants in common have such an action? Had he been in exclusive possession no doubt would exist. Why should the mere fact that others are interested in the growing herbage bar a recovery? They are not concerned in the special damage suffered by plaintiff; and holding, not by virtue of a joint contract, but by separate several contracts, are not necessary or proper parties. It cannot prejudice the defendant that others having the same right of pasture do not join in the action, for they have no concern with it. If the claim were for damage to the herbage, the case would be different, inasmuch as it might be urged that the defendant's entire liability should be determined in one action, and hence all should be parties. In Virginia and Vermont it is held that even in that case one alone may maintain the action, though it appears that the trend of authority is the other way. Probably the latter view would prevail in this state. And yet, if it were attempted to recover in one action for damages to the real estate suffered by all and for damages to the personalty of one alone, a vexed question of misjoinder would arise, because all the parties would not be interested in each ground of action. To hold, therefore, that one tenant could have no standing to recover for damages to his personalty save by joining with him the other tenants, is practically to refuse him any relief whatever. And this would in effect be to say that the law will take cognizance of a claim for damage to real estate, though it may amount only to a few cents, and refuse a hearing to a claim for destruction of personal property under like facts which may reach hundreds of dollars. It would be to say farther that a party suffering injury to his personalty by an animal trespassing upon premises of which he has sole possession may be made whole, but if it happens that the possession is shared by others he is without remedy. Such a result would cast discredit on the power of the law to work out justice.

To deny the right of the injured party to maintain action for damage to his separate personalty upon any of the grounds referred to would, we think, be to interpose a technicality for the purpose of defeating justice. It is the duty of courts, as we understand it, to override mere technicalities where they stand in the way of doing justice between man and man.

Stated in brief, the case is this: The plaintiff's horse was in a close were the owner, having rightful enjoyment, had a right to keep him; he had a right in the field; the defendant's horse, by breaking the fence which his landlord was bound to maintain, became a trespasser, and while thus unlawfully invading the close as a trespassing animal inflicted the damage to plaintiff's property. For such wrong we think the law should, and does, afford a remedy.

In this view the charge of the court was right, and the judgment will be affirmed.

37 L. R. A.

RÉSUMÉ OF THE DECISIONS PUBLISHED IN THIS BOOK.

SHOWING the Changes, Progress, and Development of the Law during the Third Quarter of the Judicial Year Beginning with October 1, 1894, Classified as Follows:

- I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.
- II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.
- III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.
- IV. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.
- V. FIDUCIARIES.
- VI. TORTS; NUISANCE; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES.
- VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; GIFTS; WILLS.
- VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES.
- IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.

Common law.

That the common law of one of the states in this country may include the practice which has grown up there and was never known in England, is the doctrine of a Pennsylvania case which recognizes the right to give judgment by default on indictment of a corporation for a misdemeanor, although no precedents were found in criminal cases. (Pa.) 281.

Curative statute.

Invalid county warrants are held to be made valid by a subsequent statute so as to defeat a plea of ultra vires. (N. Dak.) 696.

Plumbers.

The constitutionality of a statute making it unlawful to do business as an employing or master plumber without examination and certificate of competency, and compliance with regulations of the board of inspectors as well as the board of health, is sustained as an exercise of police power. (N. Y.) 718.

Tenement house.

A statute compelling owners of tenement houses on order of the board of health to provide water on every floor is sustained as constitutional. (N. Y.) 710.

Privileges of citizen.

The constitutional privileges and immunities of a citizen of Indian blood are held not to be infringed by a statute prohibiting the sale or giving of intoxicating liquors to any Indian. (Cal.) 158.

Garbage monopoly.

Restricting the business of scavengers to clean cess-pools, privy vaults, and remove garbage, by making it unlawful for any except licensed appointees of the mayor to do such business, is held to be an unconstitutional attempt to create a monopoly. (Kan.) 545.

A municipal contract giving the exclusive right to the removal of garbage is upheld against a claim that it violates the constitutional provision against local or special laws granting an exclusive privilege or franchise. (Neb.) 540.

27 L. R. A.

Vested defenses.

The right to a complete defense under the statute of limitations is held to be one of the rights protected by the constitution against subsequent change of law. (Ky.) 590.

Cattle guards.

A statute requiring railroads to build cattle-guards on demand of adjacent land owners is held constitutional. (Ala.) 268.

Use of public money.

The use of the money of a city or county to pay the expense of treatment and cure of an impecunious habitual drunkard is upheld under a Maryland statute. (Md.) 646.

The rule that taxes can be levied only for public purposes is enforced in a Maryland case where a statute authorized a county to issue bonds in aid of a railroad company which was in the hands of a receiver, with a provision for first payment from the proceeds of claims due to residents of that county. (Md.) 72.

Taxes.

Real estate mortgages owned by a nonresident are held not to be "property in the state" for purposes of taxation, in the absence of any express provision of statute for taxing. (Mont.) 797.

The Pennsylvania limited partnership is held in New Jersey to be a corporation for the purpose of taxation. (N. J.) 694.

Interstate commerce.

A tax on a foreign pipe-line company by way of license, being based on gross receipts for transportation in the state, which is taken to be such proportion of its gross receipts from the whole line as the length of that part in the state bears to the length of the whole line, is held not to be an unconstitutional burden on commerce. (N. J.) 684.

There are several interesting questions as to interstate traffic in intoxicating liquors in an Iowa case, arising before the Wilson Bill was passed, which holds, among other things, that the protection of the original package is not lost by taking a small quantity therefrom as a test for the purpose of exercising an option as to rejecting the purchase. (Iowa) 219.

A claim that a telegram was interstate commerce although sent between points in the same state where the telegraph company at an intermediate point in another state delivered it to another company on the ground that its own line was occupied with other business, is denied. (N. C.) 848.

Licenses of tow boats.

A state restriction on commerce is condemned in case of an attempted license tax for the operation of tow-boats between different states on navigable waters. (La.) 414.

Fisheries.

Absolute prohibition of the taking of fish otherwise than by hook and line, with certain specified exceptions, is held within the police power. (Minn.) 76.

Voters.

A Maryland case denies the necessity of any particular place as a home to entitle a person to vote, where he resides within the limits of the state and district, in the sense of having no other home. (Md.) 880.

The use of a paste covering the whole right-hand column of an official ballot is held illegal under a statute which provides no mode for voting for persons not named on the official ballot except by inserting their names in blank spaces provided in that column. (Pa.) 284.

Navy yard.

The manufacture of cannon in a navy yard of the United States, although a patent may be infringed thereby, will not be restrained even when the United States is not made a party, since the work of the government would thereby be embarrassed. (C. C. App. 4th C.) 67.

Court records.

The right to obtain a copy of the proceedings in a divorce suit for publication is denied in Rhode Island, in the absence of any statutory provision on the subject. (R. I.) 82.

Municipal corporations.

The power of the legislature over municipal corporations is sustained to the extent of upholding a statute for the annexation of other municipalities to cities without consent of the authorities or inhabitants of such municipalities. (Ohio) 787.

Non-contiguous territory is held beyond the power of the legislature to annex to a city. (Colo.) 751.

The attempt of a city to evade a statutory requirement for letting municipal contracts to the lowest bidder by acting through a water board is held ineffectual. (Pa.) 802.

The question whether or not a contract to pay an annual sum for the use of water for a term of years constitutes a debt for the whole amount that may ultimately become due within the meaning of a restriction on city indebtedness is decided in the negative in a Missouri case. (Mo.) 769.

A case which is likely to be an important precedent is decided by the circuit court of appeals in respect to the purchase of waterworks by a city on the expiration of a franchise under a statute providing therefor. The "fair and equitable value" to be paid is held to include not merely the costs of reproducing the plant but also the value of the existing connections with buildings; and the value of the connections is not merely the cost of making them, but includes something for the effort and inducements required to obtain the consent of property owners. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 827.

Streets and roads.

The control of streets by municipal authorities is held to include the power to prohibit by ordinance the beating of any drum in a street without special permission from the president of the board of trustees. (Cal.) 529.

The right of a gas company to take up and repair its pipes laid in streets acquired by accepting an ordinance, is held to be protected against a subsequent ordinance prohibiting any street to be cut or dug without consent of the aldermen and common council. (Ind.) 514.

A grant of permission for the use of a public road for a street railway nominally made to a company not yet having legal existence is held ineffective on its subsequent incorporation as against a company previously chartered but obtaining a later grant of permission to use the road, the statute allowing not more than one franchise on the same highway. (Pa.) 383.

The power of a city to vacate a strip upon each side of a street to make it narrower is sustained where this was done in the interest of the public and not of private owners. (Ill.) 580.

Eminent domain.

Denying that an ordinance selecting the site of a court house and authorizing condemnation of property thereon in case of failure to agree with the owners, constitutes the beginning of condemnation proceedings, it is held that this, with mere delay in acquiring property, gives no right of action for damages. (Md.) 648.

Additional servitude.

An electric railway over a country road between distant places is held to constitute an additional servitude requiring the consent of the owner of the land notwithstanding consent of the town authorities. (Pa.) 766.

The question of injury to abutting owners by a structure in a street is presented in a Virginia case, which holds that an elevated approach to a bridge over railroad tracks is not an additional burden and gives no right to damages where access to his premises can still be had. (Va.) 551.

Control of hackmen.

The effect of an ordinance excluding hackmen from depots at train time is held not to be limited by a prior contract between the railroad company and a hackman giving him the exclusive right to enter the depot for soliciting passengers, whatever may be the rule as to the validity of his contract. (Ala.) 436.

Public improvements.

A South Carolina case denies the constitutionality in that state of assessments on abutting owners for the cost of highway improvements, except those for sidewalks and sewers, which are upheld because recognized prior to the adoption of the constitution. (S. C.) 284.

Lots on one side of a street are held to abut on the improvement made by widening the street on the other side. (Ohio) 588.

Judgment.

Judgment against a city in an action against a railway company is held to bar proceedings on the same cause by quo warranto in the name of the attorney-general. (Mich.) 211.

An order in a divorce suit for the execution of a mortgage on land in another state to secure the payment of alimony will not be enforced in equity by the courts of the state where the land lies, because the action was in personam and the decree can be enforced only by the court that made it. (N. J.) 218.

Judicial sale.

The right of a purchaser at a sale for a special assessment or tax to recover back his money on failure of title is denied on an extensive review of the authorities. (Neb.) 121.

Execution.

Due process of law in the enforcement of the liability of members of a limited partnership is held to exist in an execution against them for unpaid subscriptions, after execution against the association returned unsatisfied, where they have a right to judicial investigation of the amount unpaid. (Mich.) 577.

Mandamus.

The secretary of state is held subject to a writ of mandamus to compel him to affix the great seal to a commission issued by the governor on the ground that such act is merely ministerial. (Wyo.) 45.

Officer's liability.

A mayor's honest attempt in good faith to enforce an ordinance not yet judicially declared invalid is held not to be at the peril of an action for malicious prosecution. (Tenn.) 660.

The question whether or not a justice of the peace is liable for judicial acts in excess of jurisdiction is decided in his favor with a declaration that it is unreasonable and unjust to hold him liable and hold superior court judges exempt from such liability. (Iowa) 92.

Board.

The claim that the disqualification of two members prevents any lawful organization of a board of fifteen freeholders elected under the California constitution to prepare a city charter, is denied in accordance with the rule that a majority may organize where a majority may act after organization. (Cal.) 203.

Ayes and noes.

The provision for recording the ayes and noes on a motion to employ a teacher is held mandatory and failure to comply therewith fatal to an election of a teacher although it was by unanimous vote. (Ohio) 77.

Schools.

While a committee empowered to hire and discharge teachers is held incompetent to engage as teacher himself, where he did so without objection, and the district had the benefit of his services as a basis for drawing public money, it was held liable to pay for the services. (Vt.) 588.

II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

As to interstate commerce, see supra, 1.

A bailee for hire is held not liable for destruction of the property without his fault. (Iowa) 738.

Deed.

A condition is held not to be created by an habendum clause stating that land is to be kept as a public highway, where the granting clause absolutely conveys a portion of a larger tract acquired for public use and which was immediately devoted to use as a public square. (Md.) 343.

Carrier's contract.

A new application of the general doctrine denying carriers the right to contract against their own negligence is found in a decision denying effect as to negligence of a condition that the shipper shall insure his goods for the carrier's benefit, which he fails to do. (Pa.) 228.

Telegraph.

The dissimilarity of conditions justifying difference in telegraph rates is held to exist in case of a morning and evening paper receiving exactly the same report at the same time, but one of which required the report earlier than the other to the hindrance of other business. (Neb.) 622.

Surety.

The refusal to resort to security held which is ample is held not a defense to a surety where no prejudice to him is shown. (N. Dak.) 257.

Composition with creditors.

The effect on a composition with creditors of a secret agreement for a preference is discussed, with a review of English and American authorities, in a New York case which denies that the whole composition is thereby made void. (N. Y.) 88.

Payment in gold.

An agreement to give notes and mortgage in the usual form of a broker procuring a loan is held not to bind the borrower to a provision for payment in gold according to the usual custom of the broker. (Ill.) 822.

Sale.

The question of acceptance of property purchased by using it after opportunity to inspect it, is held to depend on the existence of a warranty, and a provision that it shall answer to certain specifications does not constitute an implied warranty. (Mich.) 96.

A so-called renting of articles to be paid in installments is held to constitute a sale and not a lease and the person traveling from place to place making such contracts is held to be a peddler. (Pa.) 388.

Bills and notes.

The usury law is held to apply to a promissory note for the purchase price of real estate. (S. C.) 569.

The claim of usury in a note was rejected where the agreement for interest was merely a form of expressing the difference between the cash and the credit price on a sale of property. In the same case it is held that the payment of a principal debt pending suit on a note held as collateral subjects the note to all defenses which existed against the pledgor although the suit need not be dismissed. (Tenn.) 565.

RÉSUMÉ OF DECISIONS. (CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.)

The negotiability of a draft payable "with exchange" is denied in a case which reviews the conflict of decisions on the subject. (Iowa) 222.

For transferring a note in order to impose a liability on a prior indorser in favor of a bona fide holder for the ultimate benefit of the transferer, who knew of the infirmity of the indorsement, the latter was held liable to the indorser for the damages. (Tenn.) 519.

The rights of assignees of different notes in a series, all of which are secured by mortgage or vendor's lien, are considered, where an express assignment of the security to a portion of the notes in preference to the others had been made, and this is held to give them a preference. (Tenn.) 668.

Checks.

The duty of a depositor in respect to discovering the forgery of checks and giving notice thereof to the bank is discussed in a case which declares it his duty to examine returned vouchers and report forgeries, and that if he intrusts this duty to a clerk he takes the risk of the honesty of the clerk. (Ala.) 426.

Against strong dissent the Minnesota supreme court follows the general doctrine that a drawee of a forged check after payment to a bona fide holder cannot recover back the amount. (Minn.) 685.

Sending a bank check directly to the drawee for payment is held to be negligence on the part of the collecting bank. (Kan.) 248.

The necessity of diligence in collecting a substituted check taken by one who held a check for collection does not make the holder liable to the drawer of the original check because of delay in presenting the new check if both checks were worthless and no amount of diligence could have obtained payment. (Md.) 832.

Insurance.

A contract of insurance made by mail with a foreign corporation is held to be made at the place where the policy was executed and mailed. (Wis.) 862.

But a contract of insurance made by mail with a foreign company was not upheld for the purpose of collecting an assessment, where the company was prohibited from doing business in the state directly or indirectly. (Wis.) 558.

The provision in a policy that no person "unless authorized in writing" shall be deemed the agent of the insurer is held insufficient to prevent the company from being bound to recognize as its agent a person whom it sends out to solicit business. (Wash.) 86.

The mortgagee clause providing that the interest of the mortgagee shall not be invalidated by any act or neglect of the mortgagor, etc., is held to make a new and separate contract with the mortgagee, which is not affected by false statements of the mortgagor not known to the mortgagee, whereby the insurance never became valid as to the mortgagor. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 614.

But such a clause is held not to relieve the mortgagee from the necessity of proof of loss by one of them within the specified time. (Ga.) 844.

Technical warranties as well as representations are held to be included in the misrepresentations mentioned in the Massachusetts statute restricting the effect to those intended to deceive, or material to the risk. (Mass.) 396.

A wound causing tetanus is held the proximate cause of death, where a person in the consequent delirium and agony cut his throat. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 629.

The period of one year for bringing action on a life and accident policy is held to begin at the date of the injury and death and not at the time when cause of action on the policy accrues. (Wyo.) 48.

III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.

An interesting point of corporation law is decided in a Massachusetts case holding that an agreement permitting a corporation to take the shares of any subscriber in case of any transfer at its election and at a value appraised by the directors is not invalid and may be specifically enforced. (Mass.) 271.

The rights of the holders of preferred stock are involved in a case which holds that such stockholders are not creditors, and that until a dividend is declared, although there are net profits available for that purpose, an action at law cannot be maintained against the corporation, and that equity will not compel the dividend unless the withholding of it is plainly in disregard of the rights of such stockholders. (Mass.) 186.

The forfeiture of shares in an unincorporated joint stock company is held to depend for its validity on a strict compliance with the conditions provided, and publication of notice in Philadelphia only, when the articles provide for publication in Detroit also, is fatal. (Pa.) 805.

The effect of forfeiture of stock on liability of stockholders is involved in case of a foreign corporation, and it is held that the articles of association substantially repeating the provision of a statute which it had refused to adopt could not give the right to enforce a liability for a deficiency after forfeiture. (Ill.) 313.

The statutory liability of stockholders for failure to publish notice of corporate debts is held, overruling prior decisions, to be penal, and therefore unenforceable in a suit which was pending when the statute was repealed. (Neb.) 854.

Minority stockholders on successfully maintaining a suit to preserve the property of the corporation are held entitled to have the corporation pay their necessary expenses, including reasonable attorney's fees. (Tenn.) 93.

The power of the secretary of a loan association to indorse a check is implied in his power to collect it. (Mo.) 401.

The mere insolvency of a corporation known to a creditor is held not to preclude a valid attachment. (Wis.) 857.

The continued existence of a corporation for the purpose of being sued is denied where by judicial sales it had been divested of its property and franchises for the operation of a railroad which it was organized to run, and a new company had acquired and operated the road for many years. (Wis.) 869.

A corporation is held to be in itself an illegal combination where its purpose is to control the price of food products. (Ill.) 298.

Foreign corporation.

The taking of a single mortgage for a past-due debt is held not to be the doing of business by a foreign corporation. (Ark.) 505.

Receiver.

An unusual case of the appointment of a receiver of a corporation is that where the winding up of the company is not asked, but where charges of fraud on the part of the majority stockholders and managers are being investigated in a suit by the minority stockholders. (Mont.) 892.

The receiver of the property of a foreign corporation is held to have no title to debts due from nonresidents of the state as these were payable at the domicile of the company. (Ill.) 824.

Partnership.

Another of the cases in which a partnership is held to exist notwithstanding the agreement is called something else, is a case in which a so-called lease is held to create a community of interest in the capital, or a part of it, as well as in the profits. (Fla.) 126.

See supra, I., for taxation and levy of execution in case of limited partnership.

See infra, VII., for partnership real estate.

VI. TORTS; NUISANCE; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES.

A Louisiana case sustains the broad doctrine that malicious injury to the rights of another is an actionable wrong. The case was one where employes were compelled to withhold patronage from a dealer. (La.) 416.

Arrest of passenger.

A question, on which decisions are not in harmony, as to a carrier's liability for the act of an agent in causing the arrest of a passenger is presented in a Maryland case, which holds that there is no implied authority of a superintendent of a street railway company to cause such an arrest for giving counterfeit money to pay fare. (Md.) 68.

Nuisance.

The liability for continuing a nuisance on the part of one who did not create it is held, following a long line of authorities, to be conditioned on prior request and notice from the person injured. (C. C. App. 8d C.) 181.

Vicious animals.

The doctrine of scienter in respect to vicious animals is denied application to injuries committed by a vicious animal while trespassing. (Ohio) 862.

Dangerous premises.

Liability for dangerous premises attractive to children is enforced in case of a dangerous pit filled by water on vacant lots owned by a city. (Ill.) 206.

Disapproving the doctrine of a number of cases respecting turntables, the New York court of appeals denies that they are such dan-

IV. Domestic relations.

A claim that a wife was liable for the injuries of a domestic who fell from a ladder while obeying her orders in trying to get into a pigeon loft for pigeons, is rejected on the ground that she was acting simply as an agent for her husband. (Mo.) 441.

Following what is coming to be a clear majority of the decisions, the Nebraska court sustains an action by a wife against those who have caused her abandonment by her husband, on the ground that he is her property. (Neb.) 120.

An action in the nature of crim. con. by a married woman against another woman is held unsustainable in Minnesota, without deciding as to the right of action for enticing away a husband. (Minn.) 685.

The question of public policy is raised in respect to a contract for a money consideration by which a mother agrees to allow her child to live with his grandfather until of age. But the claim that this was a mere sale of the child is denied and the contract upheld as for the benefit of the child. (Pa.) 56.

V. Fiduciaries.

A judgment against an administrator is held to have no binding force or effect against another administrator of the same estate in another state. (Mont.) 101.

A donation to aid the building of a hotel near trust property is sustained in a case where comprehensive powers were given to the trustees under a will, and the gift was for the benefit of the trust estate. (Mo.) 653.

gerous and enticing machines that a railroad company must use active vigilance to keep children from playing with them. (N. Y.) 724.

Following the Indiana decision in 22 L. R. A. 198, it is again held in Rhode Island that the owner of a building is not liable for its condition to firemen who enter by license of law. (R. I.) 512.

Electricity.

One of the most important cases yet decided respecting the conflict of telephone and street railway companies as to the use of electricity is a Tennessee case which decides among other things that an electric street-car company which so charges the earth for half a mile on each side of its line as to destroy the use of the ground circuit of a telephone company must pay the expense of substituting return wires for the telephone plant. (Tenn.) 286.

The liability of a trolley railway company for injury to a person from contact with a broken telephone wire lying across the trolley wire where no guard wires intervene, is held a question for the jury and to depend on the question of negligence and proximate cause. (Wis.) 865.

Shipping oil.

The burning of a mill by oil escaping from a tank car into the furnace room of the mill is held not to result from negligence of the shipper in failing to have a valve in the tank outlet as the proximate cause, and the oil is not regarded as a dangerous agency within the rule that it must be so guarded that no one can be injured by it. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 588.

Injury to passenger.

Riding on a freight train by permission of the conductor, knowing it to be against the rules of the road, is held to prevent recovery for an accident. (Tenn.) 549.

Injury to servant.

The law as to providing a safe place for workmen is held not to apply to a scaffold built by carpenters employed by a shipbuilder, whose negligence causes the injury of other workmen using the scaffold. (Mich.) 266.

Negligence of physician.

The liability of a corporation which gratuitously furnishes the services of a physician to employes is again held not to extend to liability for tortious or negligent acts of the physician, at least if due care in his selection was exercised. (Ind.) 840.

Negligence of physicians in a hospital gratuitously maintained for employes is held to create no liability on the part of the employer. (Iowa) 296.

Acts of servant.

The liability of the master for prohibited acts by an employe is denied in case of a child injured while riding on a hand-car contrary to the rule of the company. (Ark.) 190.

The scope of employment of a servant leading a colt to his stall is held not to include an invitation to a boy to ride it. (N. H.) 178.

Deviation of a servant driving a team from his direct course on an errand of his own is held insufficient to relieve the master from liability for his negligence in driving the team. (Conn.) 161.

The wanton and malicious conduct of an engineer and fireman in blowing the whistle of a railroad locomotive to frighten a horse is held to be within the scope of their employment so as to make the employer liable. (C. C. App. 5th C.) 179.

Negligence of contractor.

One of the exceptions to the rule that a person is not liable for the acts of an independent contractor is furnished in a case that holds persons having a franchise to lay pipes in a street liable for the negligence of an independent contractor in doing the work, where injury to a traveler results. (Cal.) 590.

Discharge of water.

Bringing water in large quantities to a brewery and then discharging it on the surface of the ground to the injury of adjoining proprietors, is held actionable. (Md.) 294.

Proximate cause.

The proximate cause of the drowning of a horse which breaks the guard-rail on a ferry-boat when frightened by a whistle is held to be the defect in the rail and not in the whistle. (Pa.) 390.

Obstructing a highway by an excursion train is held not to be the proximate cause of injury to travelers on the highway by misconduct of passengers on the train, or by jumping from the buggy after dark on a rough road, which was caused by the delay. (Ky.) 680.

Injury on highway.

A man playing with a dog on a sidewalk is denied the right to recover for injuries caused by defects therein. (Miss.) 527.

A peculiar distinction as to right of action for injuries on highways appears under the Michigan statutes in the denial of a recovery against a city for loss of services of a wife and expenses incurred, because the statute provides for recovery only by the person injured or by the owner of property injured. (Mich.) 572.

The liability of a city for injuries caused by a cow running at large is held to be sufficiently charged in a complaint which alleged that the running at large of such stock had become a common nuisance and danger and no attempt was made by the city to stop it. (Md.) 728.

VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; GIFTS; WILLS.

A novel case of bailment holds that a check given to a customer by a bath-house keeper for a watch and other valuables is not sufficient to show right to the property, and that if wrongfully obtained will not justify delivery of the property to the holder where the bailee knew both the owner and the property. (Ark.) 502.

Descent and distribution.

An antenuptial contract made in a foreign country is denied effect as against the laws of descent and distribution of property. (Ill.) 791.

A transfer of title to corporate stock by placing it in the name of the owner's sons with the purpose of defeating the wife's distributive share therein at his death, is held fraudulent as to her. (N. H.) 799.

Dower.

A right of dower is held to attach to land purchased by the husband but conveyed by an invalid naked trust to another for his benefit. (Ind.) 523.

The inchoate dower interest of the wife of a partner in partnership real estate is considered in a Minnesota case, which holds that this interest is cut off by a sale under order of court in winding up the partnership. (Minn.) 840.
27 L. R. A.

The provision of the statute that dower in land aliened by the husband during his life, and afterwards enhanced in value, shall be estimated as at the time of alienation, is construed to mean that the value of improvements made by the alienees shall be deducted, but that in other respects the value shall be taken as at the time of assigning dower. (Neb.) 252.

Partnership property.

What constitutes a partnership interest in real property used by a firm is involved in a case which holds that property paid for by individual funds on the purchase of undivided interests therein is not firm property, although used by a partnership of which the purchasers become members, and that the holder of the record title of an interest therein can convey his interest to a bona fide purchaser, even if it were in fact partnership property. (Ill.) 449.

Entering individual real estate on partnership books as partnership property is held insufficient as against individual creditors to make it so. (Md.) 476.

Trade-names.

The question of trade-names is well illustrated in a New York case which denies the right of a New Jersey corporation to use the name "Higgins Soap Co." where this name has been previously used to some extent as that of the "Chas. S. Higgins Co." which manufactures various kinds of soap known as "Higgins Soap." (N. Y.) 42.

Waters.

The right to prevent the overflow of river banks by flood water is discussed in the case of a railroad embankment where it is said that such an embankment if built with due regard to the rights of adjacent and proximate owners will not create a liability for resulting damages by overflow, and that flood water of a stream which in time of ordinary floods extends to railroads, cities, and numerous farms, cannot be within the strict rule against obstructing streams. (Miss.) 762.

Timber.

Forfeiture of timber by failure to remove it within a reasonable time is denied where the conveyance of the timber specified no time for removal. (Ala.) 434.

Mortgage.

The interest of a vendee in a conditional sale of goods is held to pass under a mortgage of all his stock so that the mortgagee can maintain replevin for the goods against an insolvency receiver. (Mich.) 553.

Gift.

A gift causa mortis is held not to defeat the donor's seisin or possession within the meaning of a statute giving his wife a share of the property of which he died seised. (Ark.) 507.

Wills.

A gift to churches to buy coal for their poor is sustained as a direct gift and not a trust for indefinite beneficiaries. (N. Y.) 423.

Distinguishing the case from a spendthrift trust a condition in a devise that the land shall never be subject to debts or liabilities of the devisee, is held void. (Wis.) 778.

Signature by mark of a witness to a will is held insufficient unless the witness himself makes the mark or at least touches the pen with which it is made. (Tenn.) 662.

VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES.

A novel decision as to the right to reach proceeds of goods obtained by fraud and resold to bona fide purchasers upholds the right as against a general assignee for creditors, where the proceeds received for the goods and claims for unpaid purchase money thereon can be identified. (N. Y.) 757.

The conflicting doctrines as to the right of a discharged employé to successive actions for installments of wages are considered in a case which allows such actions. (Minn.) 409.

Equity.

Equitable jurisdiction to decree the rescission of an executed contract for land is denied where there is no other ground shown except mutual mistake as to the title. (Wash.) 335.

Garnishment.

The garnishment of a debt due to a nonresident is sustained in a Missouri case. (Mo.) 651.

The garnishment of a foreign corporation under a statute providing that only a person who resides in the state shall be summoned as trustee, cannot be maintained merely because the corporation operates a road which extends into that state. (Vt.) 511.

Attachment.

Attachment of the property of an insolvent bank is denied under the California statute providing for the winding up of such banks by commissioners. (Cal.) 562.

Account stated.

A single item consisting of a right of action for breach of contract is held not to be the basis of an account stated. (Or.) 811.
27 L. R. A.

Exemption.

The proceeds of insurance on exempt property are held within the exemption. (Wash.) 808.

Notes in renewal of others outstanding when a homestead was acquired are held unaffected by the homestead exemption. (Vt.) 303.

Execution.

Mere consent by a creditor to the postponement of a sale on an execution is held to defeat his priority of lien as against a junior execution coming into the hands of the sheriff pending the postponement, even when the motive of the consent was kindness to the debtor. (Ill.) 874.

Limitation of actions.

A novel question of the effect of payment by heirs to interrupt the statute of limitations as against purchasers from their ancestor of part of the land mortgaged by him, is decided against such power. (N. Y.) 418.

Presumption of negligence.

Presumption of negligence under the maxim res ipsa loquitur is applied in a Maryland case to the falling of cross-ties from a railroad car striking a person walking near the right of way. (Md.) 154.

The running and kicking of a team on a public carriage and the inability of the driver to control them makes a prima facie case of negligence as to a passenger who is injured in consequence. (Or.) 279.

IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE

Several important questions of criminal procedure are decided in a murder case which holds that a statute providing that a trial judge may call in another judge on affidavit of his bias and prejudice is mandatory, and that an attorney from another state employed by private persons may be allowed to aid the prosecuting attorney on his request. (N. Dak.) 868.

The constitutional guaranty of trial in the "county district" is held not to entitle a person to trial in the judicial district in which the indictment was found, or prevent a change of venue to another district in which the adjoining county is included, on motion of the accused. (Ohio) 584.

The statutory right of the state to appeal after an acquittal for a new trial on account of errors of law is upheld in Connecticut as not in violation of the common law of that state. (Conn.) 498.

Disapproving if not overruling an earlier decision in 15 L. R. A. 441, the Virginia supreme court holds that a right to a jury trial in a criminal case may be satisfied by the right to a jury on appeal; especially where there is a right to elect to be tried first in either court. (Va.) 676.

The necessity of disclosing the name of or identifying the principal where an infant is sold intoxicating liquors for others, is sustained where he claimed to be buying it for two sick teachers in a college whom he did not name. (Ark.) 508.

Forgery.

The materiality of a second initial of a name which gives only initials except for the surname is declared by holding the change of the second initial to be forgery (Minn.) 74.

Obscenity

The mere sitting for the negative of an obscene picture is held insufficient to show a purpose to exhibit, loan, and circulate it contrary to statute. (Mich.) 448.

Indictments.

An indictment for libel is held to charge but 27 L. R. A.

one offense where it states a libel on more than one person by a single writing. (Minn.) 412.

Grand jury.

An indictment presented by five grand jurors all of whom concur, while the statute requires seven to act and five to concur, is sustained in the absence of timely objection to the irregularity. (Iowa) 846.

The fact that a grand jury was impaneled for the term prior to that at which the indictments were found is held sufficient to make the indictments invalid, and the court refuses to inquire into the legality of a de facto grand jury upon habeas corpus. (Wis.) 776.

Sentence.

An escaped convict sentenced under another name to the same penitentiary is held lawfully retained after serving the later sentence to complete his original sentence. (Ohio) 290.

Suspension of a sentence in a criminal case after it has been pronounced is held void in a case which distinguishes it from the mere postponement of sentence, and an attempt to enforce the sentence after the expiration of the time named in it is therefore held void. (Wis.) 356.

Labor.

Requiring prisoners imprisoned for non-payment of fine, imposed for violating an ordinance, to work on streets or other places, with a credit of $1 a day on the fine is held not to violate constitutional provisions against slavery or involuntary servitude. (Kan.) 593.

Pardons.

A board of pardons with power to investigate facts and report with recommendations is held to constitute no infringement of the executive power to pardon. (Mich.) 573.

Witnesses' fees.

The claim of expert witnesses for the state to compensation beyond ordinary witness fees is denied in an Arkansas case. (Ark.) 669.

INDEX TO NOTES.

(The General Index follows this.)

Abstracts; right of abstracters to inspect records	89	to parties in part delicto ; (IV.) form of action	519
Account stated; what constitutes—general definitions; illustrations; balance definitely fixed; creditor definite; debt must be subsisting; signature; may be oral; surrendering vouchers; with third person; agreement reached; want of consent; refusal to pay; offer to pay less than claim; compulsion; conditional promise; objection to some items; arbitration or court proceedings; mistake; exception of errors; effect upon person rendering; character of account necessary; character of debt; to circumvent statute; who may state accounts; married woman; infant; illiterate or infirm person; banker and depositor; partners; factor and consignee; broker and customer; attorney and client; officers; other cases; effect to change contract or create debt; subsequent events; retention of rendered account; time necessary; mere delivery not sufficient; effect of objection; to whom applicable; death or cessation of dealing; balance brought forward; claim must be clear; admission of debt; question for court or jury	811	Bonds; statutes legalizing	696
Animals; liability of municipality for permitting in streets	728	Checks; duty of depositor as to forgery of, see BANKS .
Banks; duty to know signature of drawer	685	Duty of drawee to know signature upon	685
Sending checks directly to drawee bank	248	Sending directly to drawee bank	248
Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper	401	Power of agents to indorse	401
Duty of depositor in respect to forged checks charged to him by the bank:—(I.) in general; (II.) as to forged indorsements; (III.) as to raised or altered checks; (IV.) examination entrusted to agent	426	Composition with creditors; effect of giving one creditor a secret advantage in a composition:—(I.) effect on the composition; (II.) action on original claims; (III.) contracts to induce assent to a composition; (IV.) action for balance; (V.) reservation of part of the original claim from the composition; (VI.) liability of creditor on obtaining a fraudulent preference; (VII.) composition not general	88
Bills and notes; drawee's duty to know signature of drawer:—(I.) duty of bank; (a) in general; (b) negligence or fault of party obtaining payment; (II.) duty of other parties	685	Constitutional law. See CRIMINAL LAW .
Provision for exchange as affecting negotiability of instrument:—cases holding that negotiability is not impaired; cases holding that negotiability is destroyed; reasons for the different rules	228	Contracts. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS .
Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper:—(I.) checks; (II.) other negotiable paper: (a) of agents in general; (b) of corporate officers and agents; (c) of bank officers and agents; (III.) indorsement for accommodation	401	Validity of contract for transfer of parental responsibility or authority:—parent cannot relieve himself of his obligations; exceptions; right to revoke; contract not enforced; children restored; right under statute; rights of third person; estoppel of parent; child's welfare will be regarded; effect of child's choice; child may enforce contract; agreement as to residence of child	54
Liability for transferring negotiable note to bona fide holder so as to cut off defenses:—(I.) in general; (II.) cutting off defense of indorser; (III.) effect of rule as		Monopoly in contract for removal of garbage	540
		Convicts. See CRIMINAL LAW .
		Corporations; restrictions by by-laws or articles of association on the right to sell shares of stock:—(I.) by by-law: (a) in general; (b) of national banks; (II.) by articles of association; (III.) exercise of power to approve or disapprove	271
		Preferred, guaranteed, and interest-bearing stock:—(I.) power to issue: (a) in the first instance; (b) given by change of charter or articles; (II.) estoppel to deny validity; (III.) nature of interest created by; (IV.) rights and preferences as to assets; (V.) rights and preferences in dividends: (a) in general; (b) payment out of capital; (c) payment when capital is impaired or debts unpaid; (d) guaranteed dividends; (e) preference over common stock; (f) accumulations and arrears; (VI.) remedy to obtain or protect dividends; (VII.) guaranty of dividends by outside party; (VIII.) interest-bearing stock; (IX.) special stock; (X.) reduction of shares; (XI.) miscellaneous matters	126
		Forfeiture of corporate stock:—(I.) power to forfeit; (II.) validity of exercise of power: (a) in general; (b) necessity of

- notice; (e) sufficiency of notice; (III.) redemption or other remedy of stockholder; (IV.) effect of forfeiture on personal liability of stockholder; (a) as to unpaid assessments; (b) as to creditors; (V.) miscellaneous 305
- Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper 401
- Costs; compelling labor in payment of, see CRIMINAL LAW.
- Courts; personal liability for excess of jurisdiction 92
- Criminal law; right to compel prisoners to labor:—(I.) The power generally; (II.) constitutional restrictions; (III.) necessity of express authority; (IV.) exception when labor is a part of the prison discipline; (V.) construction of statutes conferring the power generally; (a) upon what courts conferred; (b) for what crimes imposed; (c) place of performance; (d) the term or duration; (VI.) imposition for nonpayment of costs; (VII.) necessity of strict compliance; (VIII.) delegation of the power; (IX.) hiring out convicts: (a) power to hire out; (b) the contract; (c) hiring by surety; (d) leasing prisons; (e) assignability of contract; (f) custody and management of convicts; (g) termination of contract; (h) recovery of agreed compensation; (i) disposition of proceeds; (X.) effect of delay in execution of sentence; (XI.) discharge because of inability to pay; (XII.) remedy for improper imposition 598
- Curtsey; right of tenant by the curtesy in partnership real estate 340
- Debtor and creditor. See COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.
- Descent and distribution; rights of heirs in partnership real estate 340
- Dividends; preferences in, see CORPORATIONS.
- Dower; right of, in partnership real estate 340
- Execution. See LEVY.
- Executors and administrators; foreign judgments against 101
- Rights of, as to partnership real estate 340
- Experts. See WITNESSES.
- Forfeiture; of corporate stock, see CORPORATIONS.
- Garbage; monopoly in contract for removal of 540
- Grand jury; number of grand jurors necessary or proper to act:—general rule; power of legislature to change number required at common law; rule in various states 845
- Organization of grand jury:—(I.) pleading and practice generally: (a) mode; (b) party; (c) time; (II.) writ; summons: officer: (a) precept; venire; (b) form; (c) seal; (d) officer; (e) oath; (f) summons; service; return; (g) name; (h) time; (III.) excusing and completing panel: (a) discharging and excusing from panel; (b) power to complete panel; (c) class; (IV.) drawing: (a) irregularities; (b) certificate; (c) manner: (1) mode; (2) machinery; (d) notice; (e) number; (f) name; (g) officers; (h) oath to officer; (i) officer's presence; (j) fraud; (k) power to draw; (V.) time and term: (a) adjournment; (b) first day, first week, first term; (c) legal term; (d) time limited; (e) prior to term; (f) time designated; (VI.) reconvening; (VII.) court; (VIII.) special term; (IX.) special grand jury; (X.) oath: (a) affirmation; (b) form; (c) objection that grand jury was not sworn; (d) time and person administering; (e) "then and there" 778
- Guaranteed stock. See CORPORATIONS.
- Highways; liability of a municipality for permitting animals in 728
- Indictment. See GRAND JURY.
- Infants. See PARENT AND CHILD.
- Insolvency. See COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.
- Intoxicating liquors; inspection of liquor records 32
- Judges. See COURTS.
- Judgment; of another state or country rendered against an executor or administrator:—(I.) general rule; (II.) in proceedings commenced in decedent's lifetime; (III.) reasons for the rule; (IV.) the effect of the United States Constitution and Act of Congress; (V.) how affected by state statute; (VI.) as evidence of indebtedness; (VII.) exceptions to the general rule; (VIII.) English decisions 101
- Jury. See GRAND JURY.
- Justice of the peace; personal liability for exceeding jurisdiction 92
- Labor; of convicts, see CRIMINAL LAW.
- Lease; of prisons, see CRIMINAL LAW.
- Legislature; power as to municipalities, see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
- Levy; loss of priority of execution by consent of creditor to delay or postponement of sale:—execution cannot be used as a cover; leaving property in debtor's hands; delaying sale; temporary postponement; indefinite postponement; contract to suspend; property which requires delay; land; effect as to debtors; effect on alias execution 874
- License; local license tax on vessels licensed by the United States 414
- Master and servant; master's civil responsibility for the wrongful or negligent act of his servant or agent towards one who has no claim upon the master by reason of a contract incipient or perfected:—(I.) Liability for acts expressly directed to be done; (II.) grounds of liability in case the servant is not obeying orders; (III.) the servant must have been acting in the capacity for which he was employed; (IV.) master liable for acts within scope of servant's employment: (a) liability the general rule; (b) liability for negligent acts; (c) liability for fraudulent and tortious acts; (d) limitation of scope of employment; (e) disobedience of orders; (f) performance of unlawful acts; (g) acts of master of vessel; (h) willful and malicious acts; (V.) when the result of abuse of authority will be serious or the temptation to abuse is strong; (VI.) neglect or disobedience of statutory requirements; (VII.) question for jury; (VIII.) contribution to injury 161
- Monopoly; in contract for removal of garbage 540

Municipal corporations; power of legislature to annex territory to municipalities:— power as against municipality; power as against the inhabitants of the town; as against owner of annexed territory; power of court to control legislature; rights of land owner; taking property without compensation or due process of law; annexation by special law; interference with election districts; other constitutional requirements; held valid on facts; limitation on legislative power; making special taxing district 787

Statutes legalizing invalid municipal contracts:— general rules; bonds; general power to validate; validating elections; authorizing bonds for past debt; form of statute; constitutional provisions; the Illinois doctrine; subscriptions to internal improvements; contract to pay bounties; land grants; other contracts; excessive indebtedness; construction of statutes 696

Monopoly in contract for removal of garbage 540

Liability for permitting animals in streets 728

Name; of person summoned as grand juror 780, 783

Negligence. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

Oath; to grand jury 788

To officer in charge of grand jury 779, 784

Officers; right to inspect books of Personal liability of judge 92

Parent and child; contract to transfer parental responsibility or authority 56

Partnership; the position of tenants in dower and by the curtesy and of the heirs and personal representatives of a deceased partner in partnership real estate:— (I.) The widow's right to dower: (a) general doctrine; (b) must yield to partnership claims, liens, and accounts; (c) when dower attaches; (d) in lands purchased for the purpose of resale; (e) effect of an agreement converting real estate into personality; (f) right to dower in improvements; (g) when widow entitled to an equivalent; (h) widow's right to retain possession; (i) how affected by husband's private debts; (j) homestead rights; (k) right of widow to join in deed, action, or suit affecting such estate; (II.) the rights of the heirs: (a) the legal estate passes to the heirs of deceased partner; (b) nature of the title vested in the heirs; (c) the heir bound to convey the legal title; (d) when a necessary party to suit relating to such lands; (e) when heirs not entitled; (f) as between the surviving partner and the heirs; (g) power of the heirs as against the surviving partner; (h) as between the heir and personal representatives of deceased partner; (i) powers vested in executors and administrators of a deceased partner; (j) ultimate position of the heirs; (III.) English decisions: (a) relating to dower; (b) position of the heir 840

When real estate will be considered partnership property:— (I.) general doctrine; (II.) the question of intention: (a) in general; (b) Pennsylvania doctrine; (III.) in whom the legal title vests: (a) the common-law doctrine; (b) Pennsylvania doctrine; (c) how vested at law; (IV.) immaterial to whom legal title is conveyed; (V.) parol evidence: (a) when held admissible; (b) when not admissible; (VI.) implied and resulting trusts: (a) when created in partnership lands; (b) when no such trust created; (VII.) equitable conversion; (VIII.) out and out conversion; (IX.) reconversion; (X.) statute of frauds: (a) in general; (b) within the statute; (c) not within the statute; (XI.) form of conveyance; (XII.) when not considered personality; (XIII.) the question of notice; (XIV.) when partnership formed for the purchase and sale of real estate; (XV.) real estate acquired in payment of debts; (XVI.) real estate held under lease: (a) in general; (b) the question of renewal; (XVII.) the effect of improvements; (XVIII.) lands owned by partner prior to partnership; (XIX.) position of incoming partner; (XX.) facts and circumstances held sufficient to constitute real estate partnership property; (XXI.) facts and circumstances held not sufficient to create a partnership in real estate; (XXII.) Louisiana doctrine 449

Patents; inspection of patent records 89

Preferred stock. See CORPORATIONS.

Promissory notes. See BILLS AND NOTES.

Public lands; statutes legalizing invalid grants 696

Railroads; statutes legalizing invalid subscriptions to 696

Records; right to inspect public records:— (I.) abstractors; (II.) suits; (III.) record making or copying; (IV.) account books of public officers: (a) in general (b) toll books; (c) as to boundaries and titles; (V.) as to title to office; (VI.) liquor records; (VII.) patent records 89

Seal; on writ of venire for grand jury 779

Shipping; local license tax on vessels licensed by the United States 414

Special stock. See CORPORATIONS.

Stockholders. See CORPORATIONS.

Tolls; inspection of public toll books 89

Usury; in deferred payments of purchase money:— making interest a part of the purchase price; cash and credit prices; agreement as to interest made after original contract completed; other contracts 565

Waters; disposal of waters brought in unnatural quantities upon property 294

Witnesses; compensation of expert witnesses:— (I.) as to matters of fact; (II.) as to requiring examination or preparation; (III.) cases denying the right to additional compensation; (IV.) cases affirming the right to additional compensation; (V.) reasons given for the different rulings; (VI.) statutory provisions; (VII.) by whom paid; (VIII.) the English rule: (a) in common-law courts; (b) in courts of chancery; (c) the modern rule 609

Writ; for summoning grand jury, see GRAND JURY.

GENERAL INDEX

TO

OPINIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

(Separate Index to Notes precedes this.)

ABANDONMENT. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 8.

ABSTRACTS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of abstracters to inspect records. 89

ACCOMPLICE. See WITNESSES, 2, 8.

ACCOUNTS. See BANKS, 7.

ACCOUNT STATED.

1. The doctrine of an account stated does not apply to a single item, not of a debt due and owing, but of an unliquidated claim of damages for the breach of a parol or simple contract. Vanbebber v. Plunkett (Or.) 811

2. A stated account is open to rectification upon proof at any time before the limitation period has run from the time of its rendition. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Account stated; what constitutes:—general definitions; illustrations; balance definitely fixed; creditor definite; debt must be subsisting; signature; may be oral; surrendering vouchers; with third person; agreement reached; want of consent; refusal to pay; offer to pay less than claim; compulsion; conditional promise; objection to some items; arbitration or court proceedings; mistake; exception of errors; effect upon person rendering; character of account necessary; character of debt; to circumvent statute; who may state accounts; married woman; infant; illiterate or infirm person; banker and depositor; partners; factor and consignor; broker and customer; attorney and client; officers; other cases; effect to change contract or create debt; subsequent events; retention of rendered account; time necessary; mere delivery not sufficient; effect of objection; to whom applicable; death or cessation of dealing; balance brought forward; claim must be clear; admission of debt; question for court or jury. 811

ACTION OR SUIT. See also CORPORATIONS, 17; NUISANCES, 1, 2.

1. Successive actions may be brought by a servant wrongfully discharged, for successive deficiencies, without his fault, in his earnings, measured by the installments of wages that he would have earned if allowed to perform 27 L. R. A.

his contract. McMullan v. Dickinson Co. (Minn.) 409

2. The secretary of a defunct corporation against which process has been served by publication may be allowed to intervene and inform the court of the facts which work the dissolution and death of the corporation. Combes v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co. (Wis.) 869

3. One tenant in common of a pasture field may maintain an action against the owner of a domestic animal which breaks into the field and injures the livestock of such tenant rightfully grazing therein; and the other tenants are not necessary parties to such action. Morgan v. Hudnell (Ohio) 863

4. An abuse of discretion of the trial court in denying a change of venue for prejudice is not shown where affidavits are filed showing that there is nothing to prevent a fair trial where the indictment was found. State v. Bevel (Iowa) 846

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Action; venue of criminal trial. 534

ADDITIONAL SERVITUDE. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 8, 4.

ANIMALS. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 19-22.

1. The owner is not in general liable for an injury committed by a domestic animal while in a place where it rightfully may be, unless it is shown that the animal was vicious in the particular complained of, and that the owner had notice of such vicious propensity. Morgan v. Hudnell (Ohio) 863

2. If an animal breaks into the close of another, and there damages the real or personal property of the one in possession, even if it is by viciously attacking another animal, the owner of the trespassing animal is liable without reference to whether or not such animal was vicious, and without reference to whether such propensity was known to the owner. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Animals; liability of municipality for permitting in streets. 728

Ownership of, when fera natura. 76

ANTENUPTIAL CONTRACT. See CONFLICT OF LAWS, 2, 3; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 2.

APPEAL AND ERROR. See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

1. The jurisdictional amount for an appeal exists where a judgment for the necessary amount is rendered consistently with the pleadings, although it includes exemplary damages. Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) 92

2. A statutory right of appeal by the state in a criminal case to obtain a new trial for errors of law after an acquittal is not in violation of the fundamentals of the common law of Connecticut, or inconsistent with the principle that enforces the conclusiveness of a valid and final judgment. State v. Lee (Conn.) 498

3. After acquittal by a jury, as well as after trial by the court, an appeal may be taken by the state, under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 1687, authorizing the state to appeal in the same manner and to the same effect as the accused on questions of law. Id.

4. A stay of an order of discharge in a habeas corpus case may be made by the appellate court without fixing any terms, under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 8725, providing for a stay of execution of a judgment or final order on such terms as may be prescribed. Henderson v. James (Ohio) 290

5. A final order of discharge on habeas corpus, of a person imprisoned for crime, may be reviewed and reversed on error by a higher court. Id.

6. The finding of facts by the presiding judge for the purpose of an appeal is sufficient evidence as to permission to appeal, although formal permission should appear on the record. State v. Lee (Conn.) 498

7. The requirement of a distinct statement of errors complained of is not made by four or five pages of claims consisting mostly of argumentative comments as to errors in the charge of the court. Id.

8. An assignment of cross-errors is essential to the review, on an appeal by plaintiff, of the decision upon a motion by defendants to suppress a deposition. Long v. Hess (Ill.) 791

9. It is too late to say that a decree for performance of a contract is not responsive to pleadings, where for three years the complainant has placed itself in the attitude of asking for such a decree, and has never dismissed its bill or withdrawn its prayer; but any formal defect in this particular is subject to amendment, even in the appellate court. National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.) 827

10. Striking a paragraph from a complaint on motion is not reversible error, if it was not sufficient to authorize a recovery. Braithwaite v. Harvey (Mont.) 101

11. An objection that defendant was not given time to demur to an amended complaint after the allowance of the amendment is not available on appeal, if it is not fairly included in the assignments of error, and it nowhere appears that an offer to demur was made, or the right to do so questioned or denied. Ritchie v. Waller (Conn.) 161

12. An instruction in an action on an insurance policy, that the jury should be satisfied by a "clear" preponderance of proof that plaintiff burned the buildings, before finding the fact, is not misleading in connection with an instruction that the action is a civil one, and it is not required to establish the facts beyond a reasonable doubt, but only by a fair preponderance of proof. Hart v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (Wash.) 86

13. A fine of $500 for the publication, without provocation, of a grossly offensive libel, will not be reduced on appeal as excessive. State v. Belvel (Iowa) 846

APPROACH. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 2, 3.APPROPRIATIONS. See BONDS; PUBLIC MONEY.*ARMY AND NAVY. See INJUNCTION, 1.ARREST. See CARRIERS, 2, 3.ASSAULT.

The marshal and policemen of a city, and any persons aiding and abetting them, are liable in damages for unnecessary cruelties and indignities inflicted by them on prisoners in their charge. Topeka v. Boutwell (Kan.) 593

ASSESSMENT. See PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.*ASSIGNMENT. See MORTGAGE, 2-4; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.*ATTACHMENT. See also CONTEMPT, 2, 4; CORPORATIONS, 21.

An attachment of property of an insolvent bank which has failed and closed its doors cannot be allowed under the California Bank Commissioners' Act, § 11, which fully provides for the winding up of insolvent banks by commissioners, and takes them out of the operation of the insolvent Act applicable to other corporations. Orans v. Pacific Bank (Cal.) 562

ATTORNEY GENERAL. See JUDGMENT, 8.ATTORNEYS.

A lien for counsel fees attaches to the property recovered in a suit by minority stockholders to recover corporate property wrongfully conveyed by the corporate officers at the instance of the majority stockholders. Grant v. Lookout Mountain Co. (Tenn.) 98

ATTORNEYS' FEES. See COSTS AND FEES.*BAILMENT.

1. Lack of care by a bailor in keeping a check for his property, given him by the bailee, will not prevent recovery for wrongful surrender of the property by the bailee to one who presented the check, but who had no right to it, if the bailee could have avoided the loss by the exercise of reasonable care. Tombler v. Kocling (Ark.) 502

2. Possession of a check for a watch and other valuables, given by the keeper of a bath-house to a patron as a means of identifying his property, is not proof of a right to the property, and will not justify its delivery to one who has no right to the check, where the custodian knows both the bailor and the property and would have known that the person presenting the check was not entitled to the property if he had looked at him. Id.

3. A hirer of personal property under an agreement to return it at the expiration of the lease in as good condition as when taken, usual wear excepted, is not liable for its loss by fire without his fault. Seevers v. Gabel (Iowa) 738

BALLOT. See VOTERS AND ELECTIONS, 2.

BANKS. See also ATTACHMENT; CHECKS, 1, 2; ESTOPPEL, 1; SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

1. A collecting bank is chargeable with the loss, where it sends a check directly to the drawee bank, with instructions to remit in exchange upon another place, and the drawee, although having a deposit against which the check was drawn and continuing to do business for one whole day after receiving it, mails back the check at the close of that day with the statement, "No funds," and immediately suspends business. Anderson v. Rodgers (Kan.) 248

2. A bank on which a check is drawn, after payment to a bona fide holder, cannot recover back the amount. Germania Bank v. Boutell (Minn.) 635

3. A bank depositor owes to the bank the duty of examining returned vouchers and reporting forgeries to the bank. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

4. In case a bank depositor fails to notify the bank of forged checks returned in his vouchers, the bank is entitled to hold him liable for damages caused to it by such failure. Id.

5. A bank depositor who entrusts the duty of examining vouchers to a clerk who has forged his employer's name on checks is charged with the clerk's knowledge of the forgery. Id.

6. A bank depositor will be held responsible to the bank for failure to impart to it knowledge of forgeries of checks possessed by his clerk, if he entrusts to his clerk the duty of examining the vouchers, although the clerk deceives him and keeps him in ignorance of the forgeries. Id.

7. In balancing an account between a bank and its depositor, whose clerk has forged checks which were cashed by the bank, when the vouchers are lost so that the stubs of the checks are relied on to show the amount for which the checks were drawn, the court is not authorized to charge the bank for the whole amount of a check for which there is a stub corresponding in number but not in amount, unless it is shown that the depositor did not owe money or draw checks for the amount expressed in the stubs. Id.

8. That a mortgage to cover advances by a 27 L. R. A.

bank runs to the cashier individually, and not to the bank, will not prevent its enforcement in favor of the bank, if no one will be prejudiced by the fact that it was taken in that form. Chafey v. Mathews (Mich.) 558

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Banks; duty to know signature of drawer. 685

Sending checks directly to drawee bank. 248

Duty of depositor in respect to forged checks charged to him by the bank:—(I.) in general; (II.) as to forged indorsements; (III.) as to raised or altered checks; (IV.) examination entrusted to agent. 426

Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper. 401

Proceeding against, when insolvent. 562

BATH-HOUSE. See BAILMENT, 2.

BIDDERS. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 9-11.

BILLS AND NOTES. See also BANKS; CONFLICT OF LAWS, 1; MORTGAGE, 4, 5; VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

1. An assignee of negotiable notes is not a bona fide purchaser as between himself and a prior assignee of other notes secured by the same mortgage or vendor's lien, with respect to rights in such security. Nashville Trust Co. v. Symthe (Tenn.) 663

2. The transfer of a negotiable note, by which an indorser is made liable to a bona fide holder for the ultimate benefit of the transferrer, who knows the indorsement is ultra vires and void, makes him liable to such indorser for the damages thereby sustained. Nashville Lumber Co. v. Fourth Nat. Bank (Tenn.) 516

3. The words "with exchange," in a draft, destroy its negotiability. Culbertson v. Nelson (Iowa) 222

4. Statutes providing that negotiable notes should be for "any sum of money," or for "a sum of money in property or labor," do not change the common-law rule as to the certainty of amount. Id.

5. Payment of a principal debt pending suit on a note held only as collateral security leaves it subject to any defense that existed against the pledgor, although the suit may be continued. First Nat. Bank v. Mann (Tenn.) 566

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Bills and notes; drawee's duty to know signature of drawer:—(I.) duty of banks: (a) in general; (b) negligence or fault of party obtaining payment; (II.) duty of other parties. 685

Provision for exchange as affecting negotiability of instrument:—cases holding that negotiability is not impaired; cases holding that negotiability is destroyed; reasons for the different rules. 222

Liability for transferring negotiable note to bona fide holder so as to cut off defenses:—(I.) in general; (II.) cutting off defense of indorser; (III.) effect of rule as to parties in pari delicto; (IV.) form of action. 519

Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper:—(I.) checks; (II.) other negotiable paper: (a) of agents in general; (b) of corporate officers and agents; (c) of bank officers and agents; (III.) indorsement for accommodation. 401

BOARDS. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 5; OFFICERS, 1.

1. The consent of supervisors to the construction of a street railway over a road must be given when they are together and acting in their official character, and should appear upon the township books kept by the town clerk. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Montgomery County Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 766

2. A majority may organize and act where a majority of the body may act after organization. People, Hoffman, v. Hecht (Cal.) 203

3. The disqualification of two out of fifteen freeholders elected to prepare a city charter under Cal. Const. art. 11, § 8, which does not in terms require the joint action of all the members of the board, but does provide that it shall be signed by the members or a majority of them,—does not prevent the lawful organization and action as a board by the other members. Id.

BONA FIDE HOLDER. See BANKS, 2; BILLS AND NOTES, 1, 2.

BONDS.

An unconstitutional attempt to tax the citizens of a county for the benefit of certain residents thereof is made by a statute authorizing the issue of county bonds for the benefit of an insolvent railroad company in the hands of a receiver, with a provision that from the proceeds thereof proper and legal claims held by bona fide residents of the county should be first paid. Baltimore & E. S. R. Co. v. Spring (Md.) 72

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Bonds; statutes legalizing. 696

BOYCOTT.

Compelling employes to withhold their patronage from a merchant as a condition of their employment may be an actionable wrong when done solely from motives of malice. Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. (La.) 416

BRIDGE. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 2, 3.

BROKERS. See EVIDENCE, 11.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

The power to indorse a check which the secretary of a loan association, who is its general financial agent, has authority to collect, is implied in the power given him to collect its securities and pay the money for them to the treasurer. Gate City Bldg. & L. Assn. v. National Bank of Commerce (Mo.) 401

27 L. R. A.

BUILDINGS. See also NEGLIGENCE, 2.

One place of water supply on each floor of a tenement house, fairly accessible to all occupants of the floor, is all that can usually or reasonably be required for health and fire protection, and therefore all that the board of health has power to order under N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 84, amending § 663 of the New York City Consolidation Act. Health Department v. Trinity Church (N.Y.) 710

BY-LAWS. See CORPORATIONS, 12.

CARRIERS. See also EVIDENCE, 5; HACKS, 1, 2.

1. A passenger on a freight train with the conductor's permission, but knowing that he is violating the rules of the road, assumes the risk of accidents. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hasley (Tenn.) 549

2. The superintendent of a street-railway company has no implied authority to cause the arrest of a passenger for placing in the fare box a counterfeit coin in payment of fare, so as to make the company liable for false imprisonment in case of such arrest, without proof of precedent authority or subsequent ratification of his act. Central R. Co. v. Brewer (Md.) 63

3. Ratification of the act of a street railway superintendent in arresting a passenger for putting counterfeit coin in the box for his fare is not shown by the fact that the president of the company, the superintendent, and the driver of the street car, gave evidence against the person arrested. Id.

4. A condition in a bill of lading, that the shipper shall insure the goods for the carrier's benefit, cannot protect the carrier against the consequences of its own negligence. Willock v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 228

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Carriers; assumption of risk by person wrongfully on train. 549

Effect of contract to insure goods. 238

Responsibility of carriers by highway carriage. 260

CASE. See BOYCOTT.

CASHIER. See BANKS, 2.

CATTLE-GUARDS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8, 9.

CHARITIES.

1. A residuary bequest to certain churches according to the number of members, to buy coal for the poor of the churches, is a direct gift to the churches, and does not create a trust for unascertained or indefinite beneficiaries. Bird v. Merkle (N. Y.) 423

2. A corporation which voluntarily provides a physician for injured or sick employes, whose services they are free to reject or accept, is liable only, if at all, for negligence in the selection of the physician, and not for his negligent or tortious acts in the treatment of those who accept his services. Pittsburgh, O. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Sullivan (Ind.) 840

3. A railroad company is not liable to employes for negligence of physicians and surgeons in a hospital which it voluntarily maintains for the gratuitous accommodation of injured employes to whom the company owes no statutory or contractual obligation in the matter. Highmy v. Union P. R. Co. (Iowa) 296

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Charities; validity of bequest to churches. 428

CHECKS. See also BAILMENT, 1, 2; BANKS, 1-7; BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS; SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

1. The payee of a check who fails to make presentment within a reasonable time assumes the risk of loss occasioned by the insolvency of the drawee occurring in the mean time. Anderson v. Rodgers (Kan.) 248

2. It is negligence in the holder of a check to send it directly to the drawee, residing in a distant place, for payment; and the holder is responsible for any loss occasioned by adopting such course. Id.

3. Sending a check by an indirect route will not constitute negligence in presenting it, if it reaches its destination as soon as if sent direct, taking the full time allowed by law for mailing it. First Nat. Bank v. Buckhannon Bank (Md.) 839

4. Taking a substituted check from the drawee of a worthless check who cannot cash it, and then failing to use due diligence in presenting the new check, on which no amount of diligence could have obtained payment, will not create any liability to the drawer of the original check. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Duty of depositor as to forgery of, see BANKS.

Checks; duty of drawee to know signature upon. 635

Duty as to presenting. 832

Sending directly to drawee bank. 248

Power of agents to indorse. 401

CHURCH. See CHARITIES, 1.

CLERK. See also BANKS, 5, 6.

The clerk of a court may refuse to furnish to a newspaper a copy of the proceedings in a divorce case for publication, in the absence of any statutory provision on the subject. Re Caswell (R. I.) 82

COLLATERAL SECURITY. See BILLS AND NOTES, 5; INSOLVENCY.

COLLECTION. See BANKS, 1.

COMMERCE. See also TAXES, 2.

1. The operation of towboats on navigable waters between different states under a federal license cannot be subjected to a state license tax. Frere v. Von Schoeler (La.) 414

2. The peddling of the separate articles after the package in which they were shipped from 27 L. R. A.

other states has been broken may lawfully be regulated under the police power of a state. Com. v. Harmel (Pa.) 883

3. Sales of intoxicating liquors shipped to another state in the original packages before the passage of the Wilson Bill are not subject to the laws of that state respecting the recovery of money paid on such sales. Wind v. Iler (Iowa) 219

4. The drawing of a bung in a barrel in which intoxicating liquors were shipped from another state, in order to obtain a small quantity for testing the article to determine an option to reject the purchase, does not destroy the nature of the original package. Id.

5. A telegraph company which has a continuous line between points in the same state over which it might transmit a message received for that purpose, but which passes through another state on the route, cannot claim that the message is interstate commerce and therefore exempt from state authority limiting the charge for transmission, although the company does not in fact transmit the message the whole distance, but delivers it at an intermediate point in another state to another company because its own line for the remainder of the distance is fully occupied by other business. Leavell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (N. C.) 848

COMMON LAW.

1. The common law of England, though adopted and accepted as the law of the state, and though unchanged by statute, is not under all circumstances and conditions to be applied as the local common law. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Smith (Miss.) 769

2. The practice of rendering judgment by default on defendant's failure to appear, which apparently originated in usage, has been sanctioned by frequent statutory recognition, and has been extended in its operation from time to time by judicial application, must be recognized as part of the common law of Pennsylvania. Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Pa.) 281

3. The common law of one of the United States includes the long-recognized judicial practice of that state, whether it was ever known in England or not. Id.

COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.

A composition with creditors is not made entirely void so as to defeat a recovery on notes given in furtherance thereof, merely because of a secret agreement giving to that creditor a preference by way of security for other notes given him under the composition. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Blakes (N. Y.) 83

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Composition with creditors; effect of giving one creditor a secret advantage in a composition:—(I.) effect on the composition; (II.) action on original claims; (III.) contracts to induce assent to a composition; (IV.) action for balance; (V.) reservation of part of the original claim from the composition; (VI.) liability of creditor on obtaining a fraudulent preference; (VII.) composition not general. 83

CONDITION. See DEED.*CONFLICT OF LAWS. See also CORPORATIONS, 12.

1. The fact that in using a blank form a note is on its face dated at a certain place and made payable there does not prevent it from being considered a contract of another state in which it was delivered, when such was the intention. First Nat. Bank of Johnson City v. Mann (Tenn.) 565

2. An antenuptial contract made in a foreign country, by which the children of a former marriage of the wife are adopted by the husband and the property settled upon them and the children of the marriage, approved by the courts, is not applicable to real property acquired by the husband in Illinois after his emigration to this country, so as to prevent his disposition thereof by deed or will. Long v. Hoss (Ill.) 791

3. An antenuptial contract made in a foreign country, by which children of a former marriage of the wife were adopted as heirs of the husband, will not prevent disposition of real property subsequently acquired in Illinois after his emigration thereto, although such children are infants at the time of such emigration incapable of consenting to a change of domicile, or of waiving any rights, as, if they acquire the status of heirs, their inheritance must be in accordance with the laws of Illinois, by which the husband has an absolute right to dispose of his property by will to the exclusion of natural or adopted children. Id.

4. The liability of stockholders in foreign corporations must be determined by the law of the state under which such corporations were created. Mandel v. Swan Land & C. Co. (Ill.) 818

5. The liability of a stockholder to the corporation for calls made, though dependent upon the phraseology of the statute creating it, is contractual, and will ordinarily be enforced by the courts of another jurisdiction, unless a wrong or injury will be done to the citizens of such jurisdiction, or the policy of its laws will be contravened or impaired. Id.

6. The right of a corporation to recover in another jurisdiction the amount of calls made upon its stock does not depend upon any principle of comity, but upon the right to enforce a contract validly entered into. Id.

7. The Illinois statute providing that foreign corporations doing business in the state shall be subject to the liabilities, restrictions, and duties imposed upon domestic corporations, and have no other or greater powers, does not relieve a citizen becoming a stockholder in a foreign corporation from a liability for calls made upon stock forfeited for nonpayment of such calls, imposed by the statute under which such corporation was organized, as the term "doing business" has no relation to the by-laws of the company, or its relations to its own members, or its resort to the Illinois courts to enforce such liability. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Conflict of laws; effect of foreign antenuptial contract. 794

27 L. R. A.

CONSPIRACY.

An incorporated milk exchange which constitutes a combination of milk-dealers and creamery men to fix and control the price of milk to be paid by them, thus putting them in position to control the market, is illegal and may be dissolved at the suit of the attorney general. People v. Milk Exchange (N. Y.) 487

CONSTABLE. See OFFICERS, 2.CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. See also CRIMINAL LAW, 7; INDICTMENT, 1; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 2; TRIAL, 1.

1. Prior laws and decisions not directly or by mere necessary implication denied in a new constitution, survive with full force and effect. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 284

2. The vested right to a defense under the statute of limitations after bar of a cause of action is complete is protected against subsequent changes in the law by the constitutional provision that all "rights" shall continue valid. Lawrence v. Louisville (Ky.) 560

3. The law of the land, within the meaning of a constitutional restriction upon interference with private rights, means the common law and the previously existing statute law. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 284

4. A statute authorizing execution to issue against individual members of a limited partnership to the extent of the unpaid portions of their subscriptions, if execution against the association has been returned unsatisfied, does not violate the constitutional provision requiring due process of law, where it allows a judicial investigation as to the amount remaining unpaid on such subscriptions. Rouse, H. & Co. v. Donovan (Mich.) 577

5. Compelling expense to improve property by the exercise of police power does not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law, if the exaction is not unreasonable either with reference to the nature or cost. Health Department v. Trinity Church (N. Y.) 710

6. Due process of law does not require notice to the owner of premises before the board of health under statutory authority can order him to furnish water in tenement-houses, where he is entitled to a trial in any attempt to enforce a penalty or punishment for non-compliance. Id.

7. A statute requiring water to be furnished on each floor of every tenement-house is a valid exercise of the police power with respect to health, and also with respect to public safety regarding fires and their extinguishment. Id.

8. A statute cannot impose an absolute liability on railroad companies for damages caused by its trains in killing stock, irrespective of the railroad company's negligence or fulfillment of the requirements of the statutes, but may impose a liability for negligence or failure to construct cattle guards required by statute. Birmingham Mineral R. Co. v. Parsons (Ala.) 263

9. A statute requiring railroads to build cattle-guards whenever demand for them is made by the owners of land through which the road runs is not unconstitutional on the ground that the land owner is made the sole judge of the necessity for them, since the statute might require the company to construct them in every case. Id.

10. The power of the legislature over a subject is not limited by the constitutional provision against local or special laws granting special or exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise, but this is rather a limitation in respect to the manner of the exercise of the power. Smiley v. MacDonald (Neb.) 540

11. The exclusive privilege of removing garbage, given by a municipal contract, is not an exclusive franchise within Neb. Const. art. 8, § 15, prohibiting local or special laws granting "any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise," but is a mere sanitary arrangement within the police power. Id.

12. An ordinance making it unlawful to engage in the business of a scavenger without having a license, and giving to licensed scavengers, two or more of whom shall be appointed by the mayor, the exclusive privilege of cleaning privy vaults and cesspools and removing garbage from private premises as well as from streets, is unconstitutional as an attempt to create a monopoly of a lawful calling,—especially where the constitution provides that special privileges or immunities shall not be granted by any tribunal or agency except the legislature. Re Lowe (Kan.) 545

13. An ordinance making it unlawful to beat a drum upon any traveled street without special permit from the president of the board of trustees, which he may grant whenever in his judgment it shall not conflict with the purposes of the ordinance, is not an unconstitutional denial of individual rights. Re Flaherty (Cal.) 529

14. A statute making it unlawful to do business as an employing or master plumber without a certificate of competency obtained from an examining board, and registration with the board of health, and requiring compliance with the regulations of both boards, but having no application to plumbers who do not employ others,—is a constitutional exercise of the police power to protect health. People, Nechameus, v. Warden of City Prison (N. Y.) 718

15. Unfair or oppressive action of the board of examiners authorized to grant the required certificates of competency to master plumbers will not render unconstitutional a statute which, as framed, provides for an impartial board. Id.

16. A statute prohibiting the taking of fish, with certain specified exceptions, in any other manner than angling for them with hook and line, is a valid exercise of the police power. State v. Mrocinaki (Minn.) 76

17. A citizen of Indian blood is not deprived of any constitutional privileges and immunities by a statute prohibiting the sale or giving of intoxicating liquors to any Indian. People v. Bray (Cal.) 158

27 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CRIMINAL LAW.

Constitutional law; as to regulation of business. 719

Extent of police power to require improvement of building. 711

Equal privileges of Indians. 158

CONTEMPT.

1. Interference with the property of a corporation of which a receiver has been appointed, by attaching it, is a civil contempt. Holbrook v. Ford (Ill.) 824

2. Previous knowledge on the part of one attaching property in another state in violation of the rights of a receiver, of the appointment of the receiver or of the insolvency of the debtor, is necessary to cause the court to enjoin the suit or commit the plaintiff for contempt. Id.

3. The contempt of a resident creditor of a foreign corporation, in attaching in another state debts due such corporation after the appointment of a receiver, and in refusing to dismiss such attachment suits, is waived by the voluntary interference of such receiver in the attachment suits. Id.

4. A court of equity asked to proceed as for a contempt against a creditor who seeks to reach by attachment or garnishment debts due to an insolvent debtor by persons residing out of the state may inquire which of the parties has a paramount right or statutory equity to those debts. Id.

CONTINUANCE.

1. A continuance because of absence of witnesses should be denied when not made in good faith, as shown by the fact that the applicant made efforts to prevent the attendance on behalf of the state of one of the absent witnesses, and used no diligence to procure the testimony of the others. State v. Belvel (Iowa) 846

2. Affidavits in opposition to a motion for continuance may be received for purposes other than to contradict statements as to what the testimony of absent witnesses will be. Id.

CONTRACTS. See also CORPORATIONS, 7, 8; EVIDENCE, 11; HACKS, 8; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 10, 11.

1. The construction put upon the contract by the parties may be looked to in determining its legal effect, if the language employed leaves the true meaning in doubt. Webster v. Clark (Fla.) 126

2. A corporation and its members in their control over it may constitute a trust or combination to fix the price of merchandise or limit the amount sold, within the meaning of a statute prohibiting such trust or combination and relieving third persons from liability to pay for goods purchased from such combination. Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Assn. (Ill.) 298

3. A statute relieving purchasers from a trust or combination to raise the price of food products, from liability to pay for their purchases, will apply to purchases made after its passage under a continuing contract previously executed, which guarantees payment on the 15th of each month for goods furnished during the prior month. Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Assn. (Ill.) 298

4. A statutory right to recover money paid on an unlawful purchase of intoxicating liquors cannot apply to a purchase made in another state where it was valid, although the seller's intent to aid the purchaser to violate the laws of his state would defeat his right to recover for the purchase price, on grounds of public policy. Wind v. Her (Iowa) 219

5. A contract by a grandfather to pay a certain sum to his son's wife, living apart from her husband, and a further sum to his grandson on his coming of age, if she will allow him to take the boy into his family until he is of age, and educate him, giving her the privilege of visiting the child and having him at her home whenever convenient,—is not against public policy as an attempt to shift the burden of parental obligation by mere sale of the child. Enders v. Enders (Pa.) 56

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Validity of contract for transfer of parental responsibility or authority:—parent cannot relieve himself of his obligations; exceptions; right to revoke; contract not enforced; children restored; right under statute; rights of third person; estoppel of parent; child's welfare will be regarded; effect of child's choice; child may enforce contract; agreement as to residence of child. 56

Monopoly in contract for removal of garbage. 540

Conclusiveness of writings. 322

Rescission of, in equity. 335

CONVICTS. See CRIMINAL LAW, 5-7.
NOTES AND BRIEFS.

CORPORATIONS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 2; CONFLICT OF LAWS, 4, 6, 7; CONSPIRACY; CONTRACTS, 2; COSTS AND FEES, 2; CRIMINAL LAW, 2; INSURANCE, 1, 3; RECEIVERS; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE; STATUTES, 6; TAXES, 2; TRADENAME, 1.

1. A corporation is not responsible for unauthorized and unlawful acts of its officers, though done colore officii. Central R. Co. v. Brewer (Md.) 63

Preferred stock.

2. The holder of preferred stock, even if it was issued in compromise of a debt of the corporation to him, is a stockholder, and not a creditor, under a statute giving the holders of such stock all the privileges of other members of the corporation, including the right to vote upon the stock. Field v. Lamson & G. Mfg. Co. (Mass.) 186

3. A guaranty by a corporation of dividends upon preferred stock, in accordance with a statute permitting a guaranty of such dividends payable cumulatively out of net profits, does not make the dividend payable at all events, 27 L. R. A.

but only devotes the profits to the payment of dividends upon such stock in preference to common stock. Id.

4. The declaration of a dividend out of net profits contrary to the judgment of the directors is not required by a guaranty by the corporation of dividends upon preferred stock in accordance with a statute simply permitting a guaranty of such dividends payable cumulatively out of net profits. Id.

5. The right to dividends on preferred stock, which are payable out of net profits, cannot be enforced in an action at law, even if there are net profits out of which they might be paid, if no dividend has been declared. Id.

6. A court of equity cannot compel the declaration of a dividend on preferred stock out of net profits from which the directors have a right to make the dividend payable cumulatively, where for half the time for which the dividends are claimed there were no net profits, and the condition of the corporation is such that the court cannot say that the payment of dividends might not injure the concern, or that the withholding of them might not be judicious. Id.

Restrictions on transfer of stock.

7. An agreement between a subscriber and a corporation, to the effect that the board of directors shall appraise the value of his shares and have the option to take them at that value in case of any transfer thereof, is not against public policy. New England Trust Co. v. Abbott (Mass.) 271

8. Even if a by-law of a corporation giving the board of directors the option to take the shares of any stockholder who desires to sell them at a value appraised by themselves may be invalid, the subscriber is bound by his agreement which adopts the by-law. Id.

9. An offer of stock for appraisal is not necessary to permit the exercise of an option of the corporation to take the stock under an agreement making it the duty of an executor or other transferee to offer the shares for appraisal to be taken at the election of the corporation. Id.

Forfeiture of stock.

See also FORFEITURE.

10. A positive statutory provision that a corporation may not only forfeit stock for nonpayment of calls, but collect all calls made prior to the forfeiture, will control any principle adopted as a mere equitable rule. Mandel v. Swan Land & O. Co. (Ill.) 313

11. The general rule in the United States is that, while a corporation having the right under the statute creating it to declare a forfeiture of shares for nonpayment of calls may exercise an option to forfeit the stock or sue for the amount of the calls, it cannot forfeit the stock and afterwards sue at law for such amount. Id.

12. A right of recovery by a foreign corporation, of calls made upon stock which has been forfeited for nonpayment of such calls, being in conflict with the current of legislation in this country cannot depend on a by-law merely, but must exist in the Act under which the company is incorporated. Id.

18. A statute authorizing recovery after forfeiture of corporate stock, of all calls owing upon it at the time of forfeiture, does not authorize recovery of interest and expenses thereafter accruing. Id.

Stockholders' liability.

14. A corporation whose articles of association provide that the holders of shares for the time being, whatever the number issued or subscribed for, shall form the company, may make calls upon its stock, although the entire amount of stock has not been subscribed for or the shares allotted. Id.

15. The liability of stockholders for failure to publish an annual notice of the corporate debts is in the nature of a penalty as a punishment for their default. Globe Pub. Co. v. State Bank (Neb.) 854

16. A creditor's cause of action against a stockholder does not accrue until judgment against the corporation and the exhausting of the remedy by execution, under the Nebraska constitution providing for liability of the stockholder in certain cases, for corporate debts which have been first ascertained and after the corporate property has been exhausted. Id.

Dissolution.

17. After the dissolution of a corporation the power to proceed judicially against it is wholly devested except as specially authorized by statute. Combes v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co. (Wis.) 869

18. A corporation organized by purchasers of a railroad on foreclosure, which is afterwards devested of all its property and its franchise for the operation of the railroad by the subsequent foreclosure of prior liens thereon created by the original owner, does not thereafter continue to exist so that it can be sued after a new corporation under legislative authority has acquired the property under the latter foreclosure and operated the road for many years. Id.

19. The fact that suit by the attorney general to annul the existence of a corporation as an illegal combination to keep down the price of a commodity was instituted upon petition of another association which was formed to enhance such prices cannot affect the decision of the case. People v. Milk Exchange (N. Y.) 487

20. A combination between a corporation and its members to control the price of food products may be made illegal by subsequent legislation. Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Assn. (Ill.) 298

Insolvency.

21. The mere insolvency of a corporation known to a creditor will not prevent him from obtaining a valid lien by attachment of its property. Ballin v. Merchants' Exch. Bank (Wis.) 857

Foreign corporations.

See also CREDITORS' BILL; GARNISHMENT; INSURANCE.

22. The taking of a single mortgage by a foreign corporation for past-due indebtedness for goods sold at its domicile is not doing business in the state within the meaning of restrictions on business of foreign corporations. Florsheim Bros. Dry-Goods Co. v. Lester (Ark.) 505
27 L. R. A.

23. Partnership associations organized under Pa. Act June 2, 1874, which have the powers in substance of corporations, are regarded in New Jersey, when doing business there, as corporations subject to corporation taxes. State, Tidewater Pipe Co. v. State Bd. of Assessors (N. J. Sup.) 684

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Corporation; as an illegal monopoly.

302, 438

Domicil in other state.

836

Power of agents to indorse negotiable paper.

401

Foreign, doing business.

505

Restrictions by by-laws or articles of association on the right to sell shares of stock:— (I.) by by-law: (a) in general; (b) of national banks; (II.) by articles of association; (III.) exercise of power to approve or disapprove.

271

Preferred, guaranteed, and interest-bearing stock:— (I.) power to issue: (a) in the first instance; (b) given by change of charter or articles; (II.) estoppel to deny validity; (III.) nature of interest created by; (IV.) rights and preferences as to assets; (V.) rights and preferences in dividends: (a) in general; (b) payment out of capital; (c) payment when capital is impaired or debts unpaid; (d) guaranteed dividends; (e) preference over common stock; (f) accumulations and arrears; (VI.) remedy to obtain or protect dividends; (VII.) guaranty of dividends by outside party; (VIII.) interest-bearing stock; (IX.) special stock; (X.) reduction of shares; (XI.) miscellaneous matters.

136

Forfeiture of corporate stock: (I.) power to forfeit; (II.) validity of exercise of power: (a) in general; (b) necessity of notice; (c) sufficiency of notice; (III.) redemption or other remedy of stockholder; (IV.) effect of forfeiture on personal liability of stockholder: (a) as to unpaid assessments; (b) as to creditors; (V.) miscellaneous.

305

Statutory liability of stockholders.

855

Dissolution or expiration of.

871

Expiration of franchise of water company.

833

Forfeiture of charter.

498

Preference among creditors by judicial proceedings.

359

Proceedings on indictment against.

231

COSTS AND FEES.

1. Attorneys' fees are taxable as in equitable actions, in a proceeding under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 3129, for the trial of issues on application by a creditor in a partition action, whether the trial is by court or by jury. Van Osdell v. Champion (Wis.) 778

2. Minority stockholders may compel the corporation to pay actual and necessary expenses, including reasonable attorneys' fees, of a successful suit by them to recover corporate property which had been wrongfully conveyed by the corporate officers according to the wishes of the majority stockholders. Grant v. Lookout Mountain Co. (Tenn.) 98

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Compelling labor in payment of, see CRIMINAL LAW.

Costs; allowance of attorneys' fees out of fund. 98

COTENANTS. See ACTION OR SUIT, 2.

COUNTIES.

A statute may so far validate void county warrants theretofore issued that the plea of ultra vires cannot thereafter be interposed as a defense thereto; but the purpose to validate them must be clearly expressed by the legislature, or be deducible from the statute by necessary implication. Erskine v. Nelson County (N. D.) 696

COURTS. See also OFFICERS, 8.

1. The "district" within which an accused person must be tried under the constitutional provision for trial by jury "of the county or district" in which the offense was committed is the "vicinity," and is not necessarily confined to the judicial district; and such provision does not prevent trial, on motion of the accused, in an adjacent county which is in another district. State, Funck, v. McCarty (Ohio) 584

2. The location of a sidewalk upon a street is, under the Illinois statute, within the discretion of the city authorities, and cannot be interfered with by the courts. Mt. Carmel v. Shaw (Ill.) 580

3. A statute providing for commissioners appointed by a court to make a report as to a proposed annexation of municipal corporations, which annexation becomes complete on the approval of the report by the court, is not unconstitutional as vesting a court with powers not judicial so as to defeat the operation of the statute,—at least where the courts and judges make no objection. State, Richards, v. Cincinnati (Ohio) 787

4. The provision of Dak. Comp. Laws, § 7812, that a judge "may" call in another judge to try the case when one indicted for felony presents to him an affidavit stating that he cannot have an impartial trial by reason of the bias or prejudice of such judge, makes it the absolute duty of the judge to call in another judge to try the case, and the word "may" is to be construed "must." State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Courts; personal liability for excess of jurisdiction. 92

Change of judges. 687

CREDITORS' BILL.

No lien is acquired upon debts due a foreign corporation from residents of a state other than 27 L. R. A.

that in which a creditors' bill is brought against such corporation, where there is no service of process upon it. Holbrook v. Ford (Ill.) 824

CRIM. CON. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 4.

CRIMINAL LAW. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 2, 8; ASSAULT; DISTRICT AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS; INDICTMENT, 1; PARDON.

1. The right to object to the panel of the grand jury because the required number of jurors were not drawn for it is waived by filing a plea of guilty to the indictment. State v. Beloit (Iowa) 846

2. A judgment by default against a corporation indicted for misdemeanor may be rendered on its failure to appear, by virtue of the common law in Pennsylvania, which has established this practice in civil cases, notwithstanding the lack of any precedents in criminal cases, since personal appearance of the defendant is no more necessary in case of misdemeanor than in a civil action. Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Pa.) 281

3. The suspension of a sentence already pronounced, until further order of the court, in case defendant pays the costs that day, is beyond the authority of the court,—at least when it is done merely as a matter of leniency to the prisoner. Re Webb (Wia.) 856

4. An order committing a defendant to serve out a sentence previously pronounced but suspended, made after the time of imprisonment named in the sentence has expired, is void for want of jurisdiction. 12

5. An escaped convict who under another name is convicted and sentenced to the same penitentiary for another crime may, at the expiration of the latter sentence, be held to serve out the remainder of his first sentence. Henderson v. James (Ohio) 290

6. A transfer of a convict from one place of imprisonment to another is not such a judicial act that it cannot be performed by the governor under authority of statute. Bick v. Chamberlain (Mich.) 573

7. Constitutional provisions against slavery and involuntary servitude are not violated by an ordinance permitting prisoners committed to a city prison for violation of a by-law or ordinance, in default of payment of a fine, to be employed by the city marshal at labor either on the streets or public works, or in a public or private place, being credited $1 a day on a judgment for fine for each day's work performed. Topeka v. Boutwell (Kan.) 598

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Criminal law; right to compel prisoners to labor:—(I.) the power generally; (II.) constitutional restrictions; (III.) necessity of express authority; (IV.) exception when labor is a part of the prison discipline; (V.) construction of statutes conferring the power generally; (a) upon what courts conferred; (b) for what crimes imposed; (c) place of performance; (d) the term of duration; (VI.) imposition for non-payment of costs; (VII.) necessity of strict compliance; (VIII.) delegation of the power; (IX.) hiring out convicts: (a) power to hire out; (b) the contract; (c) hiring by surety; (d) leasing prisons; (e) assignability of contract; (f) custody and management of convicts; (g) termination of contract; (h) recovery of agreed compensation; (i) disposition of proceeds; (X.) effect of delay in execution of sentence; (XI.) discharge because of inability to pay; (XII.) remedy for improper imposition. 593

Suspension of sentence. 856

Term of imprisonment of escaped criminal. 291

CROSS-ERRORS. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 8.

CURTESY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of tenant by the curtesy in partnership real estate. 840

CUSTOM.

Usage cannot excuse a failure of the warning of a school-district meeting to specify the business or question to be considered, as required by Vt. R. L. 1880, § 521. Scott v. Williamstown School Dist. No. 9 (Vt.) 588

DAMAGES. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 16, 17.

1. The measure of damages for the wrongful discharge of a servant is the deficiency, not due to his fault, between the wages earned by him and those which he would have earned under the contract. McMullan v. Dickinson Co. (Minn.) 409

2. The amount of damages which a bank is entitled to claim against a depositor because of his failure to promptly notify it of forged checks returned in his vouchers is, in case the forger is arrested and a part of the money recovered, the difference between the amount paid on the checks and the amount so recovered. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Damages; for obstructing highway; remoteness. 680

DEATH. See JUDGMENT, 8.

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR. See also COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

A condition in a devise, that the premises shall in no wise ever be subject to any debt, liability, execution, or attachment against the devisee, existing at that time or at any future time, is void. Van Osdel v. Champion (Wis.) 778

DEED.

A condition is not created by an habendum clause "to have and to hold . . . as and for a street, to be kept as a public highway," following a granting clause conveying absolutely a portion of a larger tract of land which a city was acquiring in accordance with a resolution directing its acquisition "for public use," where 37 L. R. A.

the entire property was immediately devoted to the uses of a public square, which could not have been done if the strip was devoted to street purposes, and the opening of the street would have been profitless both to the grantor and the public. Kilpatrick v. Baltimore (Md.) 648

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Deed; for special purpose; condition in. 648

DE FACTO. See HABEAS CORPUS, 2.

DEFINITIONS.

1. The word "ascertained" in the Nebraska constitution, making stockholders liable for debts of the corporation which have been ascertained, means judicially ascertained. Globe Pub. Co. v. State Bank (Neb.) 854

2. The proximate cause of an injury is that cause which in natural and continuous sequences unbroken by any efficient intervening cause produces the injury, and without which the result would not have occurred. Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 588

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.

See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 8; PARTNERSHIP, 8.

1. A wife's distributive share of the personal estate of her husband at his death cannot be defeated by a transfer or change of title as a mere device for that purpose, while he keeps absolute dominion and enjoyment of the property during his own life. Walker v. Walker (N. H.) 799

2. A fraud on the wife of the purchaser is not made by taking a deed of their homestead in his name as trustee for his sons by a former wife, where the amount invested therein is but a small part of his estate and a reasonable provision for the sons. Id. See also DOWER.

3. A donor causa mortis remains seised or possessed of the property until death, within the meaning of a statute giving dower in personal property of which he dies seised. Hatcher v. Buford (Ark.) 507

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Descent and distribution; rights of heirs in partnership real estate. 840

DISTRICT AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

1. Counsel employed by private persons may be allowed to assist the prosecuting attorney at his request on the trial of an indictment, although the statute prohibits the latter from receiving any fee or reward from individuals. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

2. The fact that an attorney is a nonresident of the state, and not a member of the bar of that state, does not make it improper to permit him to assist a prosecuting attorney at the latter's request. Id.

DIVIDENDS. See CORPORATIONS, 8-6, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DIVORCE. See CLERK; JUDGMENT, 5.

DOMICIL. See VOTERS AND ELECTORS, 1.

DONATION. See TRUSTS, 2.

DOWER. See also DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 2, 3; PARTNERSHIP, 3.

1. The law at the time of the husband's death governs the wife's right of dower, as her inchoate right is not a vested one. Hatcher v. Buford (Ark.) 507

2. The equitable interest of a purchaser in land which by his direction is conveyed to a third person under an invalid naked trust, which by provision of statute "is deemed a direct conveyance" to himself, is subject to the right of dower. Stroup v. Stroup (Ind.) 523
See also DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.

3. The inchoate right of the wife of a partner in the real estate of her husband only attaches to such of the real estate as remains in specie, unconverted, after the partnership is terminated by judgment or agreement, and its affairs completely wound up and ended. Woodward-Holmes Co. v. Nudd (Minn.) 840

4. The sale under order of the court, of partnership real estate, in an action to dissolve the partnership and wind up its affairs, is made free from any inchoate interest of the wives of the partners, even if the property sells for more than is necessary to pay the firm debts, or if it was not necessary to sell the whole of the property for that purpose. Id.

5. The sale of the real estate of the husband under execution on a judgment against him alone, followed by judicial confirmation and conveyance, does not extinguish the wife's inchoate right of dower. Butler v. Fitzgerald (Neb.) 252

6. Land sold under execution against a husband is "aliened by the husband" within the meaning of Neb. Comp. Stat. 1898, chap. 28, § 7, providing that the widow's dower in such land shall be estimated according to its value when so aliened. Id.

7. The estimate of the value of real estate for the purpose of assigning a widow's right of dower therein, under Neb. Comp. Stat. 1898, chap. 28, § 7, providing that the value of land aliened by the husband, and afterwards enhanced in value, shall be estimated according to the value when aliened, is to be made by deducting the value of improvements made after alienation, but otherwise according to the value at the time of assigning the dower, thus giving the widow the benefit of the increase from other causes than improvements made upon the property. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Dower; right of, in partnership real estate. 840

Fraud on wife's dower right. 507, 523

Effect of judgment and execution against husband. 252

DUE PROCESS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4-6.

27 L. R. A.

ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLICATIONS. See also TRIAL, 4.

1. The unnecessary conflict of poles and wires of a trolley-railway company with those of a prior existing telephone plant to the damage of the latter makes the railway company liable for the cost of necessary changes made by the telephone company. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. United Electric R. Co. (Tenn.) 226

2. A telephone company cannot recover for loss sustained from induction on account of parallel wires of an electric-railway company, where a provision of the statute authorizing the construction of the telephone line prohibits its obstructing the ordinary use of the street. Id.

3. The destruction of the use of a telephone plant with a ground circuit, which made no injurious disturbance of natural electric conditions anywhere, caused by conduction resulting from the operation of a single-trolley street car line which charged the earth for half a mile on each side with powerful currents of electricity, makes the street railway company liable for the cost of return wires for the telephone line as a substitute for the ground circuit. Id.

4. The lack of guard wires between trolley wires and telephone wires will render a trolley company liable for injury to a person in a street by contact with a broken telephone wire lying across the trolley wire, if the omission of the guard wires was negligent and was also the proximate cause of the injury. Block v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. (Wis.) 365

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Conflicting rights of telephone and street railway. 236

Liability for shock from electric wire. 366

ELECTRIC RAILWAYS. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, 4; INJUNCTION, 2.

Electric railways over country roads, connecting widely separated cities and towns, cannot be built without consent of the owners of the fee of such roads, notwithstanding consent of the town authorities has been given, under the general Street-Railway Act of Pennsylvania of 1889, authorizing corporations for the construction of street railways "on any street or highway" on which no track is already laid or authorized to be laid, but giving no right of eminent domain, and providing that every railway must have a continuous route forming a complete circuit with its own track. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Montgomery County Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 768

EMINENT DOMAIN.

1. An ordinance vesting in a committee the power to condemn property within a square selected as the site for a court-house, if unable to agree with the owners, and a mere delay in acquiring title after request and warning by a land owner and after the city had acquired title to a considerable part of the square, give no claim for damages because of the uncertainty of tenure and injury to business to the owner of a long lease of property on such square, which is in use for a hotel, since the ordinance is not the beginning of condemnation proceedings. Shanfelter v. Baltimore (Md.) 648

2. Damage to an abutting owner by an elevated approach to a bridge across railroad tracks, which leaves a space of about 7½ feet between the structure and the side of the street for access to his premises, is damnum absque injuria. Horne Bldg. & C. Co. v. Roanoke (Va.) 551

3. Building in a city an approach to a bridge over railroad tracks, leaving access to abutting owners, is not an additional servitude. Id.

4. An electric railway imposes an additional servitude on the land over which public roads run outside of municipal boundaries. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Montgomery County Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 766

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Eminent domain; damages to abutting owners by elevated structure in street. 551

EQUITY.

1. There is no adequate remedy at law for a defrauded vendor of goods, who did not learn of the fraud until the purchaser had sold a large part of them to bona fide purchasers, and then had made an assignment for creditors, which will defeat the jurisdiction of equity to aid him to reach the proceeds in the hands of the assignee. American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fan-cher (N. Y.) 757

2. Equity will not decree the rescission of an executed sale of land merely because of a breach of covenant as to title, in the absence of fraud or other ground of equitable jurisdiction except mutual mistake as to the title,—especially where the extent of the failure of title is not shown. Decker v. Schultes (Wash.) 835

ESTOPPEL. See also INSURANCE, 12, 18.

1. A depositor who fails to notify a bank of forged checks returned in his vouchers is estopped from holding the bank liable for subsequently paying similar forgeries. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

2. No estoppel against claiming that real estate of an insolvent firm is individual, and not partnership property, will arise by signing a request that the court authorize a sale of the assets at a price offered, which contains a statement that a certain dividend will be thereby obtained, although such statement can only be true in case all the proceeds go to firm creditors, if no creditor is misled or injured by the statement. National Union Bank v. National Mechanics' Bank (Vt.) 476

3. A city is estopped from denying its duty as to a dangerous pit where it has passed an ordinance declaring such pits to be a nuisance. Pekin v. McMahon (Ill.) 206

4. A city which has for many years recognized and accepted a waterworks system as fully complying with a contract cannot afterwards repudiate such recognition and claim damages for failure to comply with the contract. National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.) 827

27 L. R. A.

EVIDENCE.

Judicial notice.

1. A court cannot take judicial notice of the contents of a city ordinance. Shanfelter v. Baltimore (Md.) 648

2. Judicial knowledge is taken of the fact that leaks occur in gas pipes, requiring immediate repair. Indianapolis v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co. (Ind.) 514

3. It is a matter of common knowledge that different species of fish, good and bad, those that take the hook readily and those that do not, inhabit the same waters; that the usual methods of taking fish are by hook and line and by nets and seines, and that the latter method usually results in the rapid and undue depletion of most kinds of valuable food fishes. State v. Mrocinaki (Minn.) 76

Presumptions; burden of proof.

4. The presumption is that gifts made during the donor's last illness and when all hope of recovery was gone are causa mortis. Hatcher v. Buford (Ark.) 507

5. The carrier has the burden of proving freedom from negligence, on proof of injury to a passenger in a public carriage, resulting from the running and kicking of the horses, which the driver could not control. Budd v. United Carriage Co. (Or.) 279

6. Presumption of negligence arising out of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur applies to the falling of cross-ties from a railroad car injuring a person walking over a footpath running beside the roadbed, but upon the right of way. Howser v. Cumberland & P. R. Co. (Md.) 154

Secondary.

7. Secondary evidence of the books and papers of a corporation is inadmissible in its behalf, where the originals are under its control. Mandel v. Swan Land & C. Co. (Ill.) 818

8. Entries of mailing letters and notices of calls upon corporate stock are mere memoranda to which the person making them may refer to refresh his recollection, and not a record which can be proved only by the originals or by certified copies. Id.

9. The complaint, answer, and decree in a suit by the People to wind up an insolvent bank, are admissible in evidence against the plaintiff in an attachment against such bank, to show that its property has been placed beyond the reach of attachment. Crane v. Pacific Bank (Cal.) 562

10. Written instructions to an accomplice from the instigator of the crime, as to the explanation he should give, which were written down by the accomplice, may be put in evidence under the latter's oath that they were written by direction of the accused and as he gave them. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

Parol, as to writings.

11. An agreement by one employing another to procure a loan, to give notes and mortgage "in your usual form," does not make a provision of the latter's customary form for payment in gold a part of the contract, so as to exclude evidence that the employer had previously on like application procured loans upon notes and mortgages without such provision, as the expression as to form does not bind him to make payment upon unusual terms and conditions printed in such forms. Peabody v. Dewey (Ill.) 323

Opinions.

12. The opinion of a physician that a wound on the interior of the womb of a woman could not have been self-inflicted is admissible as expert testimony. State v. Lee (Conn.) 493

13. A physician may testify that the condition of an injured person could have been produced by contact with a heavily charged electric wire. Block v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. (Wis.) 365

14. A doctor's opinion of the reasonable probability of the ultimate recovery of a person from injuries is not inadmissible. Id.

15. Proof of papers, entries, and records of a private corporation in its possession, cannot be made by the opinion or conclusion of a witness as to what is shown. Mandel v. Swan Land & O. Co. (Ill.) 818

Miscellaneous.

16. The depositor may be required to separate the true from the false signatures upon the witness stand, in an action by him against the bank for the amount of forged checks charged against him; and his inability to do so is a circumstance for the jury in weighing the evidence. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

17. A Bohemian accomplice may be allowed to translate to the jury instructions written by him in the Bohemian dialect as they were given him by the accused, where he testifies to his ability to make the translation correctly. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

18. A physician's testimony of a patient's statements, made for the purpose of receiving advice and treatment, is not inadmissible as hearsay. Block v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. (Wis.) 365

19. The testimony of a witness that he received an electric shock at the same time that an injury was received by another person may be competent as bearing on the question whether such injury was caused by an electric shock. Id.

20. Evidence to corroborate an accomplice under Dak. Comp. Laws, § 7812, must tend to connect the accused with the commission of the crime, and not merely show the commission of the crime or guilt of the accomplice. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Evidence; presumption of negligence from accident. 154

Presumption as to law of other jurisdiction. 798

Burden of proof as to negligence of passenger carrier. 287

To explain contract. 320

Of conspiracy. 683

EXECUTION. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4; DOWER, 6, 6; JUDICIAL SALE; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 2.

Execution cannot be ordered to issue against a city, in an action for damages. Petia v. McMahon (Ill.) 206

27 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also LEVY AND SEIZURE.

Execution; against members of limited partnership. 578

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. See JUDGMENT, 1, 2.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Foreign judgments against. 101

Rights of, as to partnership real estate. 340

EXEMPTION. See HOMESTEAD; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 1, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

EXPERTS. See EVIDENCE, 12-14; WITNESSES, 1, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT. See also CARRIERS, 2.

A person acting upon appearances in making a criminal charge is justified if the apparent facts are such as to lead a discreet and prudent person to believe that a crime has been committed by the party charged, although it turns out that he was innocent. Central R. Co. v. Brewer (Md.) 63

FERRY. See also PROXIMATE CAUSE, 1.

The owner of a ferry-boat should provide a bar to the driveway strong enough to withstand the crowding of a horse when frightened by the usual whistle of a vessel in the locality. Sturgis v. Kounts (Pa.) 390

FINE. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 13.

FIRE. See BAILMENT, 8; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

FIREMEN. See NEGLIGENCE, 3.

FISHERIES. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 16; EVIDENCE, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fisheries; state regulation of. 76

FOOD. See CONTRACTS, 8; CORPORATIONS, 20.

FORFEITURE. See also CORPORATIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS, for forfeiture of shares of corporate stock.

See also TIMBER.

A declaration of forfeiture of shares in an unincorporated joint stock company or partnership is absolutely void, where the articles of association provide for publication of notice in newspapers of Philadelphia and Detroit thirty days before declaring a forfeiture, and such notice has been published in Philadelphia, but not in Detroit. Morris v. Metallic Land Co. (Pa.) 303

FORGERY. See also BANKS, 3-7; DAMAGES, 2; SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

Forgery may be committed by changing the second initial of a name which is composed of two initials and a surname. State v. Higgins (Minn.) 74

FRAUD. See also DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 1, 2; EQUITY, 1; PLEADING, 2.

1. Claims for the purchase price of goods sold to bona fide purchasers by an insolvent who had procured them under fraudulent representations of solvency can be recovered, in lieu of the goods themselves, from his voluntary assignees for creditors by the defrauded vendor on his timely election to rescind the original sale for fraud. American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher (N. Y.) 757

2. A wife is within the class of "creditors and others," in a statute against fraudulent conveyances, in respect to her distributive share in her husband's property at his death. Walker v. Walker (N. H.) 799

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fraud; remedy of defrauded vendor. 757

FREEHOLDERS. See BOARDS, 2.

GARBAGE. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11, 12.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Garbage; monopoly in contract for removal of. 540

GARNISHMENT. See also CONTEMPT, 4.

1. A debt may be garnished at any place where suit thereon may be brought by the creditor, if the laws of the place authorize it. Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Lang (Mo.) 651

2. Service by publication only upon a non-resident may be sufficient to sustain garnishment of his debtor, although the indebtedness is by its terms payable at the residence of the non-resident. Id.

3. A foreign corporation having its principal office and place of business and various lines of railroad in another state, although it operates a road extending into the state where garnishment proceedings are attempted, is not subject to garnishment there under a statute providing that no person shall be summoned as trustee unless he resides in the state. Craig v. Gunn (Vt.) 511

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Garnishment; of foreign corporation. 511
Of nonresident. 651

GAS. See EVIDENCE, 2; HIGHWAYS, 2-4.

GIFT. See also DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 3; EVIDENCE, 4; TRUSTS, 2.

1. A complete gift inter vivos of stocks to the donor's sons is not made by taking the shares in their names and leaving them with a third person subject to the donor's control. Walker v. Walker (N. H.) 799

27 L. R. A.

2. Bank stock given a few nights before the donor's death from consumption and while on his deathbed is a gift causa mortis. Hatcher v. Buford (Ark.) 507

3. A gift of notes by the payee to his sister, the mother of the maker, made as an indirect way of giving the maker of the notes an interest in a mercantile business for which the notes were given, at a time when the donor was able to be at the store, although nearing death from consumption, should be regarded as a gift inter vivos, and not causa mortis. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Gift; donation from trust funds. 654
Causa mortis. 507

GOVERNOR. See CRIMINAL LAW, 6; PARDON.

GRAND JURY. See also CRIMINAL LAW, 1; HABEAS CORPUS.

An indictment is not void because presented by a jury of five persons in a county where the statute requires seven,—especially where all concur, and under the statute five of the seven could present a valid indictment, and failure to make timely objection will waive the irregularity. State v. Beisel (Iowa) 846

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Number of grand jurors necessary or proper to act:—general rule; power of legislature to change number required at common law; rule in various states. 846

Organization of grand jury:—(I.) pleading and practice generally: (a) mode; (b) party; (c) time; (II.) writ; summons; officer: (a) precept; venire; (b) form; (c) seal; (d) officer; (e) oath; (f) summons, service, return; (g) name; (h) time; (III.) excusing and completing panel: (a) discharging and excusing from panel; (b) power to complete panel; (c) class; (IV.) drawing: (a) irregularities; (b) certificate; (c) manner: (1) mode; (2) machinery; (d) notice; (e) number; (f) name; (g) officers; (h) oath to officer; (i) officer's presence; (j) fraud; (k) power to draw; (V.) time and term: (a) adjournment; (b) first day, first week, first term; (c) legal term; (d) time limited; (e) prior to term; (f) time designated; (VI.) reconvening; (VII.) court; (VIII.) special term; (IX.) special grand jury; (X.) oath: (a) affirmation; (b) form; (c) objection that grand jury was not sworn; (d) time and person administering; (e) "then and there." 776

GUARANTEED STOCK. See CORPORATIONS, 3, 4, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

HABEAS CORPUS. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 4, 5.

1. An objection to indictments, that they were found by a grand jury impaneled for a term prior to that at which they were found, cannot be made the basis of a habeas corpus proceeding for the release of the persons so indicted. State, Dunn, v. Noyes (Wis.) 776

2. The legality of a de facto grand jury cannot be inquired into upon habeas corpus proceedings for discharge from commitments based upon indictments found by such body, under the rule that the acts of persons acting as de facto officers cannot be questioned collaterally. State, Dunn, v. Noyes (Wis.) 776

HABITUAL DRUNKARD. See PUBLIC MONEY.

HACKS. See also EVIDENCE, 5.

1. A passenger is not guilty of contributory negligence in jumping from a public carriage while the team is running and kicking, if persons of ordinary prudence would take that course. Budd v. United Carriage Co. (Or.) 279

2. General directions of a passenger in a public carriage, to drive down a certain street, does not relieve the driver from responsibility in driving over an unsafe place on such route, as the driver is expected to know whether the road is suitable and reasonably safe. Id.

3. An ordinance requiring hackmen to keep outside a railroad depot while trains are there, and leave a clear passageway at the entrance, cannot be limited in operation by a prior contract by which the railroad company has, "so far as it is lawful," granted to a hackman the exclusive right to enter the depot and trains for soliciting passengers. Lindsey v. Anneton (Ala.) 486

HEALTH. See BUILDINGS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

HIGHWAYS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 18; COURTS, 2; DEED; ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES, 2; ELECTRIC RAILWAYS; EMINENT DOMAIN, 2, 4; INJUNCTION, 6; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 7; PROXIMATE CAUSE, 2; PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS; STREET RAILWAYS, 4.

1. Shade trees in the public streets of a city in Illinois are the property of the municipality, and it has complete control over them. Mt. Carmel v. Shaw (Ill.) 580

2. An ordinance prohibiting streets to be cut without consent of the aldermen and common council is inoperative as to a gas company which, by acceptance of a prior ordinance, has acquired the right to take up and repair its pipes in the streets from time to time as necessary. Indianapolis v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co. (Ind.) 514

3. A reservation in an ordinance authorizing a gas company to lay pipes in streets, of the right to bind the company by future ordinances,—such as one to prohibit the streets to be cut without the consent of aldermen and common council,—is not made by a clause declaring the duty of the city attorney to compel compliance with existing and future ordinances. Id.

4. The fact that a pavement was laid on a street after the acceptance by a gas company of an ordinance authorizing it to lay pipes in the street, and to take them up and repair them from time to time, does not restrict its rights. Id.

5. A man of full age playing with a dog on a sidewalk, and not going anywhere, is not so using the walk as to entitle him to recover for injuries caused by defects therein. Jackson v. Greenville (Miss.) 537
27 L. R. A.

6. The mere imposition of a public duty to keep highways in repair, upon a municipal corporation, does not create a private right of action for injuries sustained by an individual. Roberts v. Detroit (Mich.) 572

7. Recovery for the loss of services of a wife and expenses incurred by her personal injury on a defective sidewalk cannot be had against the city, under 8 How. (Mich.) Stat. §§ 1446a-1446k, which authorizes a recovery only by a person "sustaining bodily injury," or the owner of a "horse, . . . or vehicle, or other property" injured by defective highways or sidewalks. Id.

8. A city may do anything with its streets not incompatible with the end for which streets are established, under the powers given by the Illinois general incorporation Act to lay out, establish, open, alter, widen, extend, grade, pave, or otherwise improve its streets and sidewalks, and vacate the same. Mt. Carmel v. Shaw (Ill.) 580

9. Under the power given by the Illinois statutes to a city to vacate streets, it may vacate a strip upon each side of the street so as to narrow it, where the purpose of narrowing is not for the benefit of private owners, but because it is deemed that so great a width of street is not required for public use and convenience. Id.

10. An ordinance vacating a strip upon each side of a street for the purpose of narrowing it is not invalidated by a provision that such strip is donated and given to the abutting lot owners, where the strip was laid out upon the original plat of the city by dedication from the land owners, as upon the vacation of such strip the title of the abutting owners to such strips becomes absolute by operation of law, and such provision is mere surplusage. Id.

11. A street line fixed by a valid ordinance vacating a strip along both sides of the street as originally laid out applies to and is coincident with the outside line of such street as mentioned in a subsequent ordinance providing for and locating a sidewalk with reference to such line. Id.

12. A city council in Illinois has authority to order a sidewalk 6 feet wide to be built along the line of a street 95 feet wide, adjoining the lots of abutting owners. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also EMINENT DOMAIN.

Highways; right of gas company to take up and repair pipes. 515

Obstruction of, as nuisance; damages for. 680

Defect in, causing injury to person playing thereon. 527

Liability of a municipality for permitting animals in. 726

HOMESTEAD.

A homestead is not exempt from a note given in renewal of notes outstanding when the homestead was acquired, the parties to the notes being the same. Robinson v. Leach (Vt.) 808

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Homestead; exemption of. 804

HOSPITAL. See CHARITIES, 2.

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 2, 8; DESOENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 1; FRAUD, 2; HIGHWAYS, 7.

1. A wife in giving an order to a domestic employed by her husband, to climb a ladder to a loft for pigeons, is, when considered as the implied agent of her husband, not liable for an injury resulting to the servant from the falling of the ladder because it was not of the right length. Steinhauser v. Spraul (Mo.) 441

2. A provision of an antenuptial contract that, as regards the worldly success and substance of the parties, the bride agrees to receive the groom to live at her house, does not make the contract applicable to the future acquisitions of the parties,—especially those after emigrating from their then residence and making their permanent domicile in a foreign country. Long v. Hess (Ill.) 791

3. A wife may maintain an action for damages sustained from desertion by her husband, against any person or persons who have brought about such abandonment. Hodgkinson v. Hodgkinson (Neb.) 120

4. A married woman cannot maintain an action simply in the nature of crim. con. against another woman. Kroessin v. Keller (Minn.) 685

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Husband and wife; fraud on prospective wife in respect to property. 799

Action for alienating husband's affections. 685

Action by wife for enticing away husband. 120

IMPROVEMENTS. See DOWER, 7.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 13, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

INDIANS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 17; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 1.

INDICTMENT. See also GRAND JURY; HABEAS CORPUS.

1. A statute authorizing the instigator of a murder committed by another to be charged in an indictment as principal by making an averment that he himself did the act is not unconstitutional,—especially where the constitution does not expressly provide that the accused shall be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation. State v. Kent (N. D.) 636

2. An indictment charging a libel on two or more persons, although not associated together in business, which is contained in a 27 L. R. A.

single writing and published by a single act, is not bad on the ground that it charges more than one offense. State v. Hoskins (Minn.) 413

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also GRAND JURY.

Indictment; duplicity of. 413

INFANTS. See CONFLICT OF LAWS, 8; CONTRACTS, 5; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, 2; NEGLIGENCE, 4-7; PARENT AND CHILD, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

INITIALS. See NAME.

INJUNCTION.

1. An injunction will not be granted against the manufacture of cannon in a navy yard of the United States for use on war vessels, on the ground of infringement of a patent, even if the United States is not made a party to the action. Dashiell v. Grovesnor (C. C. App. 4th C.) 67

2. An injunction against the construction of an electric railway over public country roads can be had by the owner of the fee until his damages are paid or secured to his satisfaction. Pennsylvania R. Co., v. Montgomery County, Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 766

3. The courts may enjoin collection of municipal taxes on property which an unconstitutional statute has attempted to annex to a city. Denver v. Conlehan (Colo.) 751

4. A citizen, taxpayer, and property owner in a city, may invoke equity jurisdiction to restrain the execution of an illegal contract for public works involving an expenditure of public money. Frame v. Felix (Pa.) 803

5. A court of equity has no jurisdiction to interfere by injunction with the action of municipal authorities within their well-recognized powers, or in the exercise of a discretionary power, unless the power or discretion is manifestly being abused to the oppression of the citizen. Mt. Carmel v. Shaw (Ill.) 580

6. Municipal authorities will not be enjoined from cutting down shade trees 2 feet in thickness standing within the line of a sidewalk ordered to be constructed, where they would constitute permanent obstructions if left standing. Id.

INSOLVENCY. See also ATTACHMENT; COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; RECEIVERS, 2.

A creditor of an insolvent estate, holding collateral security for his claim, must credit its value upon his demand before he can share in the distribution of the estate, whether the collateral has been turned into money or not. National Union Bank v. National Mechanics' Bank (Md.) 476

INSTRUCTIONS. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 12; TRIAL, 7, 8.

INSURANCE. See also CARRIERS, 4; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 1.

1. The office of the insurer is the place of contract, where it, in response to the request of a broker not its agent, mails a policy, blank application, and premium note to the property owner in another state, for him to fill the blanks and return the application and note for the approval of the insurer. Seamans v. Knapp & Co. Company (Wis.) 863

2. A broker is not the agent of the insurer in procuring insurance where, having no authority from or blanks of the insurer, he requests it to write a certain policy, which it does, and for his services allows him a commission on the cash premium received. Id.

3. A valid contract of insurance may be made in one state upon property located in another, although the insurer is not entitled to do business in the state where the property is located. Id.

4. A contract made by mail for the insurance of property within the state by a foreign company which is prohibited from transacting insurance business within the state, directly or indirectly, will not sustain an action by a receiver of the company against the policy holder to recover an assessment. Rose v. Kimberly & C. Co. (Wis.) 556

5. A mortgage clause declaring that the mortgagee's interest shall not be invalidated by any act or neglect of the mortgagor, or by any change in title or possession without the mortgagee's notice, makes a new contract between the insurer and mortgagee which is unaffected by the false statements of the mortgagor as to his title or ownership of the property of which the mortgagee is ignorant, whereby the insurance never became valid as to the mortgagor. Syndicate Ins. Co. v. Bohn (C. C. App. 8th C.) 614

6. A provision on a slip of paper pasted on the face of an insurance policy and having no connection with the warranties expressed therein that a watchman shall be employed by the insured to be constantly on the premises while the mill is not in operation does not release the company from liability for a loss which is not due to a failure to keep the watchman. Hart v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (Wash.) 86

7. A person was attended by a physician within the meaning of the question in an application for life insurance, if he went to the office of the physician, telling him he had coughed and spit blood, submitted to a physical examination, obtained a prescription, and paid a fee therefor, and afterwards consulted the physician again and paid a fee. White v. Providence Sav. L. Assur. Soc. (Mass.) 896

8. Technical warranties as well as representations made in an application for insurance, although referred to in the policy as part of the contract, are included in the provision of Mass. Stat. 1887, chap. 214, § 21, that misrepresentations in the negotiation of a contract shall not be deemed material unless made with actual intent to deceive, or unless the matter misrepresented increases the risk. Id.

9. A pistol-shot wound causing tetanus, with great bodily pain and delirium or fever, may be found to be the proximate cause of death, where a person insured against accidents, excluding suicide, sane or insane, and intentional injuries, cuts his throat in a period of delirium or state of frenzy which is uncontrollable. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Melick (C. C. App. 8th C.) 629

10. Sole owners of the capital stock of a corporation have not the sole and unconditional ownership of the corporate property within the meaning of an insurance policy which is void unless they have such ownership. Syndicate Ins. Co. v. Bohn (C. C. App. 8th C.) 614

11. Neither inquiry nor statement before the issue of policies is necessary to the validity of a provision making sole and unconditional ownership essential. Id.

12. One who makes sworn proofs of loss stating that he owned the property in fee simple cannot claim that the insurer is estopped from denying it by continuing to act for a short time on the assumption that the oath was true, after hearing a rumor to the contrary. Id.

13. An insurance company is estopped to deny that one sent out by it to solicit business for it is not its agent, although the policy provides that no person, "unless authorized in writing," shall be deemed its agent. Hart v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (Wash.) 86

14. The time of death by accident, and not the time when the cause of action accrues on a policy of life insurance, is the time from which is to be computed the period of "one year from the date of the happening of the alleged injury" within which suit must be brought by the terms of the policy, although the right of action on the policy did not accrue until the expiration of ninety days after proof of the injury. McFarland v. Railway Officials & E. Acc't. Assn. (Wyo.) 49

15. A provision that proof of loss must be made within a specified time is not dispensed with as to a mortgagee by a clause to the effect that no act or neglect of the mortgagor shall defeat the insurance as to the mortgagee's interest. Southern Home Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Home Ins. Co. (Ga.) 844

16. Statements made as to the cause of death in proofs of loss are not conclusive, although they have the probative force of solemn admissions under oath against interest. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Melick (C. C. App. 8th C.) 629

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also LEVY AND SEIZURE.

Insurance; by foreign corporation, place of.	863
Made by mail by unauthorized foreign company.	556
Stipulated limitation of time for action.	49
Effect of condition in policy.	86
Condition as to proofs of loss.	845
Effect of warranties.	896
Waiver of defenses to.	614
Proximate cause of death.	639

INTERPRETER. See EVIDENCE, 12.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS. See also COMMERCE, 8, 4; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 17; CONTRACTS, 4.

1. The sale or giving of liquors to an Indian of full blood, whether he has adopted the habits of civilization and separated from tribal relations, or not, is prohibited by Cal. Pen. Code, § 897, prohibiting the sale or furnishing of such liquors "to any Indian." People v. Bray (Cal.) 158

2. Selling intoxicating liquors to a minor who says that he is buying it as agent for two sick teachers not named, at a college where there are more than two teachers, is a violation of a statute against selling to minors. State v. Neelly (Ark.) 508

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Intoxicating liquors; inspection of liquor records, 82

Sale of, to minors. 504

INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE. See CRIMINAL LAW, 7.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANY. See FORTFEITURE.

JUDGES. See COURTS, 4, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

JUDGMENT. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 1; COMMON LAW, 2; CRIMINAL LAW, 2; PLEADING, 8.

1. A judgment against an administrator in one state has no binding force or effect against another administrator of the same estate in another state. Braithwaite v. Harrey (Mont.) 101

2. An administrator will not become bound by the judgment by assisting in the defense of a suit against another administrator of the same estate in another state. Id.

3. A decision against a city by a court of competent jurisdiction, as to the validity of consent to the use of streets by a street-railway company in the exercise of its franchises, is a bar to proceedings against the company by quo warranto in the name of the attorney general, based on a denial of the right upheld in the former action. Detroit v. Ellis (Mich.) 211

4. Full faith and credit are given to a decree or judgment affecting lands, rendered in a personal action in another state, if the courts of the situs of the land accord to the decision a force merely personal upon the parties and enforceable by the process of the courts of the state in which it was rendered. Bullock v. Bullock (N. J. Err. & App.) 218

5. An order in a divorce suit, for the execution of a mortgage upon lands in another state to secure the payment of alimony, will not constitute the basis of a suit in equity in the state where the lands lie to enforce the giving of the mortgage. Id.

6. Courts of the situs of land cannot be compelled to issue their decrees to enforce the process of courts of another state, or the performance of acts required by the decree of such 27 L. R. A.

courts ancillary to the relief thereby granted, affecting such lands. Id.

7. A judgment duly rendered by the police court of a city cannot be held void because of a defense of which the prisoner did not avail himself. Topeka v. Boutwell (Kan.) 598

8. A decree based on a summons against a dead man who is named as the owner of property, the sale of which is sought for an assessment for an improvement, is of no validity whatever, no matter how the summons was posted or published, although such notice in case of unknown owners might be sufficient. Greenstreet v. Thornton (Ark.) 785

9. Jurisdiction can be collaterally attacked in an action for wrongful acts in executing a judgment. Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) 92

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Judgment; of court of other state, effect of. 218, 651

Of another state or country rendered against an executor or administrator:—(I.) general rule; (II.) in proceedings commenced in decedent's lifetime; (III.) reasons for the rule; (IV.) the effect of the United States Constitution and Act of Congress; (V.) how affected by state statute; (VI.) as evidence of indebtedness; (VII.) exceptions to the general rule; (VIII.) English decisions. 101
Collateral attack on. 785

JUDICIAL SALE. See also DOWER, 5-7; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 2.

The rule of caveat emptor applies to a purchaser of real estate at a judicial sale thereof on execution; and the conveyance thereof has the effect simply of a quitclaim deed from the execution debtor. Builer v. Fitzgerald (Neb.) 252

JURISDICTION. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 1; COURTS, 1; CRIMINAL LAW, 4; JUDGMENT, 9; JUSTICE OF THE PEACE; OFFICERS, 8.

JURY. See GRAND JURY, NOTES AND BRIEFS; TRIAL, 1.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE. See also OFFICERS, 8; TRIAL, 1.

Jurisdiction of a justice of the peace in Iowa over a nonresident is not obtained without any service in the township where the suit was brought. Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) 92

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Justice of the peace; personal liability for exceeding jurisdiction. 92

KEELEY CURE. See PUBLIC MONEY.

LABOR.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of convicts, see CRIMINAL LAW.

LANDLORD AND TENANT. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 1; NUISANCES, 2.

LAW OF PLACE. See CONFLICT OF LAWS.

LAW OF THE LAND. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8.

LEASE. See SALE, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of prisons, see CRIMINAL LAW.

LEGALIZATION. See COUNTIES.

LEGISLATURE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Power as to municipalities, see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

LEVY AND SEIZURE. See also EXECUTION.

1. The exemption of certain property from execution attaches to the proceeds of insurance thereon, which the owner intends to invest in similar exempt property. Puget Sound Dressed Beef & P. Co. v. Jeffe (Wash.) 808

2. An execution creditor who consents to the postponement of the sale from time to time, for the mere purpose of giving the debtor an opportunity to negotiate with his creditors, so as to secure from them some compromise or other advantage, loses his priority of lien as against a junior execution coming into the hands of the sheriff during the pendency of such postponement, although his motive is that of kindness or leniency to the debtor, with no actual intention to hinder or defraud creditors, and the postponements do not in fact hinder, delay, or defraud other creditors. Sweetser v. Matson (Ill.) 374

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Levy; loss of priority of execution by consent of creditor to delay or postponement of sale:—execution cannot be used as a cover; leaving property in debtor's hands; delaying sale; temporary postponement; indefinite postponement; contract to suspend; property which requires delay; land; effect as to debtors; effect on alias execution. 374

Exemption of proceeds of insurance on exempt property. 808

LIBEL. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 18; INDICTMENT, 2.

LICENSE. See COMMERCE, 1.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

License; local license tax on vessels licensed by the United States. 414

LIENS. See ATTORNEYS; CREDITORS' BILL.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 2.

1. A statement in a letter, that "whatever is due is ready whenever I can safely pay you or" a third person named, is not a sufficient new promise to take the claim out of the statute of limitations. Braithwaite v. Harvey (Mont.) 101

2. A payment on a mortgage, made by heirs of a deceased mortgagor to protect their title to part of the mortgaged premises descended to them, will not arrest the running of the statute as against the lien of the mortgage on another part of the mortgaged premises conveyed by the mortgagor for full value in his lifetime to a third person who is under no obligation to pay any portion of the mortgage debt. Murdock v. Waterman (N. Y.) 418

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Limitation of actions; effect of payment by other party to arrest statute. 418

LOSS. See BAILMENT, 2.

MALICE. See BOYCOTT; TORTS.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

The mayor of a city is not liable for malicious prosecution in attempting to enforce an unconstitutional ordinance which has not yet been judicially declared invalid, although opinion as to its validity is divided, if he acts in good faith, in the discharge of his duty as he understands it, and in the absence of any malice, oppression, or wanton disregard of the rights of the person prosecuted. Guild v. Goodwin (Tenn.) 600

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Malicious prosecution; cause of action for. 63

MANDAMUS.

1. Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel payment of a decree against a city. Baltimore v. Keeley Institute (Md.) 646

2. The duty of the secretary of state to countersign and affix the great seal of the state to commissions, official acts, and other instruments issued or done by the governor, under a statute saying "he shall affix" the seal in such cases, is merely ministerial, and may be compelled by mandamus. State, Miller, v. Barber (Wyo.) 45

3. The right of an officer to a commission which has been issued to him by the governor cannot be considered on an application for mandamus to compel the secretary of state to perform his ministerial duty to affix the great seal to such commission, notwithstanding the general rule that a clear legal right to the writ must be shown. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mandamus; to secretary of state. 45

MARK. See WILLS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

MARSHAL. See ASSAULT.

MASTER AND SERVANT. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 1; BOYCOTT; CHARITIES, 2, 8; CORPORATIONS, 1; DAMAGES, 1.

1. The liability of a master to a servant wrongfully discharged is not an absolute liability for wages for constructive services during the balance of the term, but a contingent liability of indemnity for loss of wages. Mullan v. Dickinson Co. (Minn.) 409

2. Ordinary care is all that is required of the master in furnishing a ladder of the proper length for use by domestics several times a year in reaching a pigeon loft. Steinhauer v. Spraul (Mo.) 441

3. A riveter and carpenters under the same superintendent engaged in shipbuilding are fellow servants, so as to preclude recovery by the riveter for injuries caused by negligence of the carpenters in constructing a scaffold on which he works. Beesley v. F. W. Wheeler & Co. (Mich.) 266

4. The duty of a master to provide a safe place for workmen does not make a ship-builder liable for negligence of carpenters in preparing a scaffold for other workmen engaged in constructing a ship. Id.

5. A domestic, knowing the length of a ladder which she had used previously to reach a pigeon loft, assumes the risk of using it for that purpose when it is too long. Steinhauer v. Spraul (Mo.) 441

Liability of master to third persons.

6. Willful and unauthorized acts by an agent of a corporation will render the employer liable, when performed while he is engaged in the discharge of duties within the general scope of his agency. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Sullivan (Ind.) 840

7. The question is in most cases one of fact, whether or not the act of a servant for which it is sought to hold the master responsible was done in the execution of the master's business, within the scope of the servant's employment. Ritchie v. Waller (Conn.) 161

8. If a servant's deviation from the strict course of his employment or duty is slight and not unusual the court may determine as matter of law that he is still executing the master's business; and if the deviation is very marked and unusual, it may likewise determine that he is not executing the master's business, within the rule that the master is liable for his negligence. Id.

9. That a servant sent by the master, with the latter's team and wagon, to a certain place to procure a load, deviates from the most direct course home for the purpose of seeing about the repair of his own shoes, is not of itself sufficient to show that he had so far departed from the execution of the master's business as to relieve the master from liability for his negligent management of the team. Id.

10. The scope of employment of a servant leading a colt from a water tub to its stall does not extend to an invitation to ride, given by him to a boy who is injured in attempting to accept it. Bowler v. O'Connell (Mass.) 178

11. A railroad company is not liable for an injury to a child riding on a hand car contrary to the rules and not in accordance with any custom acquiesced in by the officers of the company. Houston, C. A. & N. R. Co. v. Bolling (Ark.) 190

12. The engineer and fireman in charge of a railroad locomotive are acting within the scope of their employment in blowing the whistle wantonly and maliciously to frighten a horse which a person is driving near the track, so as to render the company liable for injuries to the driver. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Scoville (C. C. App. 5th C.) 179

13. Persons having a franchise to lay water-pipes in streets cannot relieve themselves from responsibility for negligence in failing to cover the pipes properly, by letting the work to independent contractors and requiring the latter by express stipulation to perform the duty. Colgrove v. Smith (Cal.) 590

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Master and servant; when relation exists. 296

Right to discharge servant arbitrarily. 416

Remedy of discharged servant. 409

Liability for negligence of surgeon attending servant. 840

Liability for unsafe scaffold. 266

Master's civil responsibility for the wrongful or negligent act of his servant or agent towards one who has no claim upon the master by reason of a contract, incipient or perfected:—(I.) liability for acts expressly directed to be done; (II.) grounds of liability in case the servant is not obeying orders; (III.) the servant must have been acting in the capacity for which he was employed; (IV.) master liable for acts within scope of servant's employment; (a) liability the general rule; (b) liability for negligent acts; (c) liability for fraudulent and tortious acts; (d) limitation of scope of employment; (e) disobedience of orders; (f) performance of unlawful acts; (g) acts of master of vessel; (h) willful and malicious acts; (V.) when the result of abuse of authority will be serious or the temptation to abuse is strong; (VI.) neglect or disobedience of statutory requirements; (VII.) question for jury; (VIII.) contribution to injury. 161

Liability for negligence of independent contractor. 591

MAXIMS.

1. Accessorium non ducit, sequitur principale. Nashville Trust Co. v. Smythe (Tenn.) 668

2. Damnum absque injuria. Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. (La.) 416; Lindsey v. Anniston (Ala.) 436; Home Bldg. & C. Co. v. Roanoke (Va.) 551; Shanfetter v. Baltimore (Md.) 648; Health Department v. Trinity Church (N. Y.) 710

3. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Hart v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (Wash.) 86; Re Contested Election of School Directors (Pa.) 234

4. He who sticks in the letter sticks in the bark. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. United Electric R. Co. (Tenn.) 236

5. Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. Culbertson v. Nelson (Iowa) 223

6. Mobilia inhaerent ossibus domini. Holbrook v. Ford (Ill.) 824

7. Mobilia non habent situm. Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Lang (Mo.) 651

8. Mobilia sequuntur personam. Holbrook v. Ford (Ill.) 824

9. Neminem laedit qui jure suo utitur. Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. (La.) 416

10. Nemo debet his vexari eadem causa. State v. Lee (Conn.) 498

11. Respondent superior. Steinhouser v. Spraul (Mo.) 441
 12. Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. Pekin v. McMahon (Ill.) 206; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. United Electric R. Co. (Tenn.) 236

MAYOR. See MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

MILK. See CONSPIRACY; STOCK AND PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

MONOPOLY. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. 11, 12.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Monopoly; in contract for removal of garbage. 540

MORTGAGE. See also BANKS, 8; INSURANCE, 5, 15; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 2; TAXES, 1.

1. The grantee of land "subject to incumbrances" is not bound to pay a mortgage thereon which did not constitute a part of the consideration of his purchase, and which was not made in good faith for a real indebtedness. Robinson Bank v. Miller (Ill.) 449

2. The whole or any part of the mortgage or vendor's lien which secures negotiable notes may be assigned to secure any part of the notes which may be assigned, whether they be the first or last maturing, or the intermediate notes of the series. Nashville Trust Co. v. Smythe (Tenn.) 663

3. Assignees of several notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien share pro rata, if there is nothing in the contract of assignment or in the contention of the parties to vary the rule. Id.

4. An agreement for preference in the security given to an assignee of a part of a series of negotiable notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien is valid as against subsequent assignees of other notes in the series. Id.

5. Bona fide holders of promissory notes secured by mortgage or vendor's lien may hold the security as well as the notes, unaffected by equities between prior holders and the mortgagor. Id.

Of chattels.

6. The interest of a vendee of goods by conditional sale will pass under a mortgage of all his stock, so that the mortgagee may maintain replevin for them against an insolvency receiver claiming them for the benefit of all creditors. Chafey v. Mathews (Mich.) 558

7. The security of a mortgage is not affected by statements made in good faith by the mortgagee to creditors of the mortgagor, that the latter is doing a good business and will be able to meet his obligations, although the statements prove to be untrue. Id.

8. Affidavits for renewal of a perpetual mortgage need not state the amount of matured indebtedness if the obligations, matured and unmatured, exceed the amount of the mortgage. Id.

27 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mortgages; priority of notes secured by. 664
 On chattels; failure to renew, effect of. 558

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See also BOARDS, 8; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11-13; COUNTIES; COURTS, 8; ESTOPPEL, 8, 4; EXECUTION; HACKS, 8; HIGHWAYS, 6, 7; INJUNCTION, 8-6; MANDAMUS, 1.

1. Non-contiguous land separated from a municipality by intervening territory cannot be added by the legislature to a specially chartered town or city. Denver v. Coulehan (Colo.) 751

2. A statute authorizing the annexation of another municipal corporation to a city without consent of its constituted authorities or of its inhabitants is not unconstitutional, although the taxable property therein will become subject to previously incurred indebtedness of the city. State, Richards, v. Cincinnati (Ohio) 737

3. The aggregate vote cast in favor of annexation, where it is sought to annex more than one municipality at the same time to a city of the first grade, is sufficient under Ohio Act April 13, 1898; and it is not necessary to the annexation of any municipality that the majority of the votes cast by its electors should be in favor of it. Id.

4. The mere lack of the mayor's signature to an ordinance is not fatal, where it is expressly provided that if he neglects or refuses to sign or return it with objections it shall become a law without his signature. Saleno v. Neosho (Mo.) 769

5. Approval of an ordinance by the acting president of the board of aldermen in the absence of the mayor is sufficient, where the statute provides that in the absence of the mayor he shall perform the duties, with all the rights, power, and jurisdiction of the mayor. Id.

6. The city council of the city of Topeka has the power by ordinance to require the keepers of boarding houses, restaurants, and hotels to furnish the street commissioner the names of persons liable to poll tax boarding or lodging in their houses, and to impose a fine for refusal to do so. Topeka v. Boutwell (Kan.) 593

7. Giving an officer power to grant permission to beat a drum in a street when in his judgment it will not violate the purpose of an ordinance prohibiting such acts does not make the ordinance void. Re Flaherty (Cal.) 529

Municipal contracts.

8. The validity of a contract with a city in no way depends upon the execution of duplicate copies as required by a provision that, in every case of contract entered into, duplicate copies shall be executed, one of which shall be filed and not taken from the office except for the purpose of evidence. Saleno v. Neosho (Mo.) 769

9. A provision that all contracts for public improvements or buildings shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder does not prevent a city from constructing such works under the direction of its own engineers and officers. Home Bldg. & C. Co. v. Roanoke (Va.) 551

10. A city cannot evade a requirement that contracts must be let to the lowest responsible bidder by acting indirectly through the agency of the water board, which is only a department of the city government. Frame v. Felix (Pa.) 80

11. Proposals for bids for public work cannot fix the price to be paid for labor, where the statute requires all contracts for public work to be let to the lowest responsible bidder. Id.

Indebtedness.

12. A contract by a city to pay a fixed price annually for a supply of water for a term of twenty years does not constitute a debt for the aggregate amount which may ultimately become payable, within the meaning of a constitutional provision restricting the amount of city indebtedness. Saleno v. Neosho (Mo.) 769

Purchase of waterworks.

13. A provision in a statute authorizing a waterworks franchise, that "at the expiration of the twenty years if the grant be not renewed the city shall purchase," is not an incidental, directory, or subordinate provision, but mandatory, vital, and controlling. National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City (C. C. App. 8th C.) 837

14. The title and right of possession to a waterworks plant does not pass absolutely to a city on the expiration of the franchise, without payment or tender of payment therefor, under a statutory provision that the city shall purchase if the grant be not renewed. Id.

15. The disability of a city under its charter and Acts of the legislature to take the title to waterworks cannot be set up by the waterworks company, if it has paid for the property, to defeat a purchase by the city under a statutory provision that the city shall purchase if the grant be not renewed when the franchise expires. Id.

16. "The fair and equitable value" which by statute and ordinance a city is to pay for waterworks on the expiration of a franchise is not the amount on which the income or earnings would pay interest; neither is it merely the original cost of construction or the cost of reproduction, but it includes, in addition to the cost of reproduction, the additional value created by the fact of connection with buildings and of the actual operation of the plant and actual earnings. Id.

17. The value of connections with buildings, which is to be added to the cost of reproduction in determining the present value of a system of waterworks, which a city must pay therefor, is not merely the cost of making such connections, since they are not compulsory, but depend upon the will of property owners and are secured only by effort and inducements. Id.

Liabilities.

18. A municipal corporation owning vacant lots is chargeable with the same duties and obligations which devolve upon individuals in respect to their condition. Bekin v. McMahon (Ill.) 206

19. The express grant of power in the charters of certain cities to prevent cattle from running at large cannot be taken as an intention by the legislature to prohibit the exercise of such power by other cities. Cochrane v. Frostburg (Md.) 728

20. Ordinances to prevent stock from running at large in a city are within the grant of power to pass ordinances not contrary to law, which may be deemed beneficial, and to remove nuisances and obstructions upon streets, lanes, and alleys. Id.

21. A city may be liable for injuries to a person on a street by a cow running at large, which it could have prevented by ordinary care and diligence, where it has permitted the running at large of such cattle without any attempt to stop it, while it has become a common nuisance and source of danger. Id.

22. A city is not liable for injuries committed by a cow running at large without any fault of the owner. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Municipal corporations; power of legislature as to annexation. 759

Power of legislature to annex territory to municipalities;—power as against municipality; power as against the inhabitants of the town; as against owner of annexed territory; power of court to control legislature; rights of land owner; taking property without compensation or due process of law; annexation by special law; interference with election districts; other constitutional requirements; held valid on facts; limitation on legislative power; making special taxing district. 737

Exercise of police power by. 436

Requisites of contract by. 769

Statutes legalizing invalid municipal contracts;—general rules; bonds; general power to validate; validating elections; authorizing bonds for past debt; form of statute; constitutional provisions; the Illinois doctrine; subscriptions to internal improvements; contract to pay bounties; land grants; other contracts; excessive indebtedness; construction of statutes. 696

Rights of bidders for contracts of. 807

Monopoly in contract for removal of garbage. 540

Acquisition of waterworks on expiration of franchise. 833

Liability for permitting animals in streets. 728

NAME. See also FORGERY; TRADENAME.

1. The rule that the middle name or initial is not a material part of a person's name does not apply when his first name is not given, but only its initial. State v. Higgins (Minn.) 74

2. The second initial, "F." is a material part of the name "M. F. Higgins." Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Name of person summoned as grand juror. 780, 783

Middle initial as part of. 74

NEGLIGENCE. See also EVIDENCE, 5, 6; HACKS, 1; PROXIMATE CAUSE; TRIAL, 8-6.

1. Crude petroleum is not so dangerous that a shipper is bound to so protect and guard it that harm therefrom shall come to no one, but his duty is performed by providing a suitable vehicle able to encounter the usual risks of transportation. Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 588

2. Active vigilance is not required to see that a mere licensee on one's premises is not injured. Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co. (N. Y.) 724

3. The owner of a building is not liable to members of a fire department for failure to guard an elevator well, or for so packing merchandise as to conduct them to such well when entering under a license conferred by law to extinguish a fire. Beahler v. Daniels (R. I.) 513

4. A turntable on railroad lands, properly made and used, is not, even as to children of tender years, such a dangerous and enticing machine that the railroad company will be liable for injury to a child playing with it merely because it is in an unfenced lot near footpaths which the public are permitted to use. Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co. (N. Y.) 724

5. Unguarded premises supplied with dangerous attractions are regarded as holding out implied invitation to children, which makes the owners responsible for injuries to them. Pekin v. McMahon (Ill.) 206

6. A pond or pit in a populous city, in which the water is from 5 to 14 feet deep, with logs and timber floating therein on which children are in the habit of playing, near a driveway across vacant lots but partially enclosed from the streets on the sides thereof, renders the city which owns them liable for the drowning of a child playing there, if the premises are found by the jury sufficiently attractive to entice children into danger and to suggest the probability of such an accident. Id.

7. A child of eight years of age is bound to use such care as children of his age, capacity, and intelligence are capable of exercising. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also MASTER AND SERVANT.

Negligence; as to dangerous premises. 208

As to safety of premises for licensees. 513

As to dangerous turntable. 724

In shipment of oil. 584

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS. See BILLS AND NOTES.

NEWSPAPER. See CLERK.

NONRESIDENTS. See GARNISHMENT, 2.

NOTICE. See also BANKS, 5.

Notice of a partnership interest in land is not created by knowledge of the fact that the holder of the legal title is a member of a firm which is using the property for partnership purposes. Robinson Bank v. Miller (Ill.) 449

NUISANCES. See also ESTOPPEL, 8.

1. Notice of damages caused by a nuisance, and a request to remove it, must precede an action against a party who did not originally create it. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Smith (C. C. App. 3d C.) 181
§7 L. R. A.

2. Repairing and preserving a railroad embankment does not make a lessee of the road liable for continuing it as a nuisance, in the absence of any notice or request from the person injured. Id.

3. The doctrine of contributory negligence does not apply to prevent a person's recovering for injury caused by a nuisance, because he has sustained other and additional damages of the same character through separate acts or omissions of his own. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Nuisance; what constitutes. 729

Liability for perpetuating. 131

OATH.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

To grand jury. 768

To officer in charge of grand jury. 779, 784

OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS.

A purpose to exhibit, loan, and circulate an obscene picture, is not shown by proving the mere sitting for a negative of it. People v. Ketchum (Mich.) 448

OFFICERS. See also CRIMINAL LAW, 6; MALICIOUS PROSECUTION; MANDAMUS, 2, 8.

1. Disqualification of freeholders elected to prepare a city charter, based on their lack of five years' residence in the city, does not prevent them from being de facto officers. People, Hoffman, v. Hecht (Cal.) 203

2. A constable is not liable for executing a justice's judgment merely because it was in excess of jurisdiction, if the justice was not liable. Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) 92

3. A justice of the peace, like judges of the superior courts, is protected from personal liability for judicial acts in excess of his jurisdiction, if he acted in good faith believing he had jurisdiction. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Officers; de facto. 203

Right to inspect books of. 82

Judicial, personal liability of. 92, 93

OIL. See NEGLIGENCE, 1; PROXIMATE CAUSE, 8.

OPTION. See SALE, 2.

ORDINANCE. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11-13; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 4-7; PLEADING, 5.

ORIGINAL PACKAGE. See COMMERCE, 8, 4.

PARDON.

The constitutional power of the governor to grant a pardon or commutation of sentence is not infringed by a statute providing a board of pardons to investigate the facts on petition for a pardon, and to report the results of their investigation, with such recommendations as to them shall seem expedient, where such recommendations have no binding force upon the governor. Rich v. Chamberlain (Mich.) 573

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Pardon; validity of board of. 573

PARENT AND CHILD. See CONSTITUTION, 5.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Parent and child; contract to transfer parental responsibility or authority. 56

PARLIAMENTARY LAW. See BOARDS, 2; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 4, 5; SCHOOLS, 1.

PARTIES. See ACTION OR SUIT, 3.

PARTNERSHIP. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4; CORPORATIONS, 23; DOWER, 3, 4; ESTOPPEL, 2; FORFEITURE; NOTICE; REAL PROPERTY.

1. A person cannot be held liable as a partner merely because he was held out as such, in respect to a creditor who did not know of the holding out or act on the supposition that he was a partner in giving credit to the firm. Webster v. Clark (Fla.) 126

2. A partnership with community of interest in the capital stock and in the profits is created by a written instrument purporting to lease a billiard and bar-room with all furniture therein excepting bar fixtures, billiard tables, and their equipment, "which are to be paid for and owned equally," in consideration of a monthly payment to the owner of the building, with one half of the net profits of the business after the other party has received an equal monthly sum "as compensation for his service, and for the use of money advanced" by him to pay for the articles jointly owned, and to carry on the business. Id.

3. Partnership capital invested in land for the benefit of the company will be treated as personality, and not subject to dower or inheritance, until it has performed all its functions to the partnership and thereby ceased to be partnership capital. Woodward-Holmes Co. v. Nudd (Minn.) 840

4. The purchase by each of two persons of an undivided interest in real property used for mill purposes, and their subsequent formation of a partnership to operate the mill with a third person who individually buys the other undivided interest in the real property, does not make the real estate partnership property, where no partnership funds were paid for the purchase money, and the repairs subsequently made were paid for by their individual contribution in equal shares. Robinson Bank v. Miller (Ill.) 449

5. Entering in the partnership books and treating inter se as partnership property real estate devised and deeded to the partners individually, standing on the public records in their individual names, and not representing partnership funds, will not make it partnership property as against individual creditors, unless the entries were sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds, and the individual creditors were charged with notice, by the use made of the property or otherwise, that it had been made partnership property. National Union Bank v. National Mechanics' Bank (Vt.) 476

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Partnership; what constitutes. 126

Limited; execution against members. 573

The position of tenants in dower and by the curtesy, and of the heirs and personal representatives of a deceased partner, in partnership real estate:— (I.) the widow's right to dower: (a) general doctrine; (b) must yield to partnership claims, liens, and accounts; (c) when dower attaches; (d) in lands purchased for the purpose of resale; (e) effect of an agreement converting real estate into personality; (f) right to dower in improvements; (g) when widow entitled to an equivalent; (h) widow's right to retain possession; (i) how affected by husband's private debts; (j) homestead rights; (k) right of widow to join in deed, action, or suit affecting such estate; (II.) the rights of the heirs: (a) the legal estate passes to the heirs of deceased partner; (b) nature of the title vested in the heirs; (c) the heirs bound to convey the legal title; (d) when a necessary party to suit relating to such lands; (e) when heirs not entitled; (f) as between the surviving partner and the heirs; (g) power of the heirs as against the surviving partner; (h) as between the heir and personal representatives of such deceased partner; (i) powers vested in executors and administrators of a deceased partner; (j) ultimate position of the heirs; (III.) English decisions: (a) relating to dower; (b) position of the heir. 840

When real estate will be considered partnership property:— (I.) general doctrine; (II.) the question of intention: (a) in general; (b) Pennsylvania doctrine; (III.) in whom the legal title vests: (a) the common-law doctrine; (b) Pennsylvania doctrine; (c) how vested at law; (IV.) immaterial to whom legal title is conveyed; (V.) parol evidence: (a) when held admissible; (b) when not admissible; (VI.) implied and resulting trusts: (a) when created in partnership lands; (b) when no such trust created; (VII.) equitable conversion; (VIII.) out and out conversion; (IX.) reconversion; (X.) statute of frauds: (a) in general; (b) within the statute; (c) not within the statute; (XI.) form of conveyance; (XII.) when not considered personality; (XIII.) the question of notice; (XIV.) when partnership formed for the purchase and sale of real estate; (XV.) real estate acquired in payment of debts; (XVI.) real estate held under lease: (a) in general; (b) the question of renewal; (XVII.) the effect of improvements; (XVIII.) lands owned by partner prior to partnership; (XIX.) position of incoming partner; (XX.) facts and circumstances held sufficient to constitute real estate partnership property; (XXI.) facts and circumstances held not sufficient to create a partnership in real estate; (XXII.) Louisiana doctrine. 449

PATENTS. See INJUNCTION, 1.
NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Patents; infringement by United States. 69
Inspection of patent records. 82

PEDDLERS. See COMMERCE, 2.
NOTES AND BRIEFS.

License tax on. 388

PENALTIES. See CORPORATIONS, 15;
STATUTES, 6.PETROLEUM. See NEGLIGENCE, 1.PHYSICIANS. See CHARITIES, 3; MAS-TER AND SERVANT, NOTES AND BRIEFS.PICTURE. See OBSCENE PUBLICATIONS.PLEADING. See also APPEAL AND ER-ROR, 9-11.

1. A bill in equity charging actual fraud as the ground of relief will not justify a decree on another ground, if the fraud is not proved. Dashiell v. Grosvenor (C. C. App. 4th C.) 67

2. A charge of fraud and collusion by attaching creditors of a corporation, made by plaintiff in a judgment creditors' action against the corporation and other creditors, having been abandoned by him, a third class of creditors who are among the defendants, and who have not attempted to form any issue with their codefendants, cannot litigate that question. Ballin v. Merchants' Exch. Bank (Wis.) 357

3. A judgment against an administrator in one state need not be pleaded in a suit on the same account against another administrator in another state, in order to show that the demand sued on had been given credit for the amount realized under the foreign judgment. Draithwaite v. Harvey (Mont.) 101

4. An allegation of unavoidable accident, or of default or neglect of duty by an officer is necessary under Vt. R. L. 1880, § 973, to avoid a plea of the statute of limitations by reason of the failure of a prior writ, whether that is regarded as an abatement or otherwise. Scott v. Williamstown School Dist. No. 9 (Vt.) 588

5. Mere reference to ordinances by numbers and dates is not sufficient to comply with the established rules of pleading. Shanfelter v. Baltimore (Md.) 648

PLEDGE. See BILLS AND NOTES, 5; IN-SOLVENCY.PLUMBERS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW,
14, 15.POLICE. See ASSAULT.POLL TAX. See MUNICIPAL CORPORA-TIONS, 6.PONDS. See NEGLIGENCE, 5, 6.POOR. See CHARITIES, 1.
27 L. R. A.PREFERRED STOCK. See CORPORA-TIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

It is no defense to a surety on an appeal bond, that the obligee has refused on demand to resort to security which he holds and which is amply sufficient to pay the claim, there being no proof of prejudice to the surety by the refusal. Bingham v. Mears (N. D.) 257

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Principal and surety; right of surety to have collateral security first applied. 257

PROMISSORY NOTES. See BILLS AND NOTES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.PROXIMATE CAUSE. See also DEFINI-TIONS, 2; INSURANCE, 9; TRIAL, 2, 3.

1. The proximate cause of the drowning of a horse which breaks a defective guard rail on a ferry-boat when frightened by the whistle of a tug-boat is a defect in the rail, and not the whistle. Sturgis v. Kountz (Pa.) 390

2. The obstruction of a highway by an excursion train on a side track is not the proximate cause of injury to travelers on the highway from insulting and terrifying misconduct of the passengers on such train, or of another injury received in jumping from their buggy in fear of being turned over when passing over a rough road in the dark, which was made necessary by the delay. Shields v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 680

3. Negligence in omitting to have a proper valve in the outlet of a tank car is not the proximate cause which will render the shipper liable for the destruction of a mill a few feet from the railroad track at the point of destination, which results from the act of the consignee's agents in opening the outlet of the tank, upon which they were unable to prevent the oil from flowing down into the furnace room of the mill and catching fire. Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 533

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Proximate cause; of injury. 390

PUBLIC CARRIAGE. See HACKS, 2.PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS. See also JUDGMENT, 8.

1. The assessment on abutting owners of the whole or part of the cost of grading, paving, or otherwise improving public streets, on the basis of supposed benefits to their property, is not according to the law of the land, and is unconstitutional unless directly authorized by the constitution. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 284

2. Charging upon abutting owners the cost of improving sidewalks and sewers in front of their property, having been recognized as valid prior to the adoption of a state constitution, must be regarded as embraced in the law of the land to which the constitution refers. Id.

3. Lots and lands fronting on the opposite side of a street widened by adding a strip on one side only may be regarded as abutting on the improvement for the purpose of assessment, although the street intervenes between them and the strip appropriated. Cincinnati v. Batsche (Ohio) 586

4. Lots abutting on other parts of a street cannot be assessed for frontage tax to pay for an improvement of only a portion of the street, under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 2264, which requires an assessment by foot front to be "of the property bounding and abutting upon the improvement." Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Public improvements; validity of assessments for. 285

Liability to repay money received on invalid sale. 121

PUBLIC LANDS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Statutes legalizing invalid grants. 696

PUBLIC MONEY. See also BONDS; INFUNCTION, 4.

A statute authorizing any habitual drunkard to be sent for treatment and cure to an institution within the state maintained for such persons, at the expense of the county or city of his residence, if neither he nor his petitioning kin is financially able to incur the expense, does not make an unconstitutional use of money raised by taxation. Baltimore v. Keeley Institute (Md.) 646

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Public money; use of, for what allowed. 72, 646

QUO WARRANTO. See JUDGMENT, 8.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Quo warranto; nature of. 211

RAILROADS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8, 9; MASTER AND SERVANT, 11, 12; NEGLIGENCE, 4; NUISANCES, 2.

1. The stock-gaps required by the Alabama statute where a railroad company runs through the premises of an individual are not designed to be closed; and there can be no negligence charged because of leaving them open. Birmingham Mineral R. Co. v. Parsons (Ala.) 263

2. The mere fact that water on land overflowed in an extraordinary flood was somewhat deeper, remained longer, and flowed with stronger current than it would have done except for a railroad embankment, does not show any injury by reason of the embankment, where the crops must have been covered with water long before any water was diverted thereto by the embankment. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Smith (Miss.) 762

3. The right to erect great railroad embankments may be necessarily implied in the duty to provide suitable and safe roadways, so that when done with due regard to the rights of owners of adjacent and proximate lands any necessary and consequent injury to such lands must be borne by the owners. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Railroads; statutes legalizing invalid subscriptions to. 696

Liability for embankment. 762

Statutory duty as to cattle-guards. 263

RATIFICATION. See CARRIERS, 8.

REAL PROPERTY. See also DEED.

A bona fide purchaser of land from one who holds the record title, without notice that it is partnership property, obtains a good title. Robinson Bank v. Miller (Ill.) 449

RECEIVERS. See also CONTEMPT, 1-8.

1. A receiver of a corporation may be appointed on the application of minority stockholders pending the investigation of charges of outrageous fraud on the part of the majority stockholders and managers, in a suit for an injunction against the negotiation or enforcement of fraudulent obligations created by them, and for other relief, although that does not extend to the winding up of the corporation. State, Independent Dist. Teleg. Co. v. Silver Bow County Second Judicial Dist. Ct. (Mont.) 893

2. The rule that a foreign receiver will not be allowed to maintain an action against the assets of an insolvent debtor as against a resident creditor does not apply to a receiver appointed by the courts of the state and under its laws, in a suit instituted by a nonresident creditor. Holbrook v. Ford (Ill.) 824

3. A receiver of the property of a foreign corporation takes no title to debts due it from debtors in another State, although in the ordinary course of business of the corporation the debts would have been payable in the state of his appointment, as the locus of the debt follows the domicile of the owner, and the domicile of a corporation is in the State of its creation. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Receiver; of foreign corporation, rights of. 826

Appointment on behalf of minority stockholders. 894

Right to impeach fraudulent conveyance. 558

RECORDS. See CLERK.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Records; right to inspect public records:—(I.) abstracters; (II.) suits; (III.) record making or copying; (IV.) account books of public officers: (a) in general; (b) toll books; (c) as to boundaries and titles; (V.) as to title to office; (VI.) liquor records; (VII.) patent records. 83

REPLEVIN. See MORTGAGE, 6.

RESUME.

For resumé of contents of book, see 865

SALE. See also EQUITY, 1.

1. The reservation of the right to inspect goods does not of itself indicate that title shall not pass until the goods are tested. Wind v. Her (Iowa) 219

2. The title does not pass on an option to purchase if satisfactory, until the option is determined; but it is otherwise in case of a purchase with an option to return if not satisfactory. Id.

3. A contract by which an article is left with a person for a certain time, for the payment of certain amounts per week, the aggregate of which for the time equals the price of the article, and which provides that the article may be purchased at any time by paying the price, upon which all rents paid shall be credited,—is a sale, and not a lease. Com. v. Harmel (Pa.) 888

4. A contract for paying stone according to certain specifications does not imply any warranty. Talbot Paving Co. v. Gorman (Mich.) 96

5. Receiving and using goods after opportunity to ascertain whether they conform to the description in the contract, or not, constitutes an acceptance which cuts off all right to recover for defects in them, unless there was a warranty. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Sale; acceptance of goods. 96

SCAVENGERS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11, 12.SCHOOLS. See also CUSTOM.

1. The provision for roll-call and entry of ayes and noes on the vote by members of a board of education to employ a teacher, made by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 8982, is mandatory; and a unanimous vote without such roll-call and entry upon the record does not make a valid election. New Concord School Dist. Bd. of Edu. v. Best (Ohio) 77

2. The person who is the prudential committee of a school district, empowered to hire and remove teachers, has no right himself to act as teacher. Scott v. Williamstown School Dist. No. 9 (Vt.) 588

3. A school district is liable to pay for services of a teacher who, though duly licensed to teach, had no valid contract, where he taught without objection and properly kept and returned the school register, by reason of which the district drew public money according to the attendance at his school. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Schools; employing self as teacher. 588

SEAL.*NOTES AND BRIEFS.

On writ of venire for grand jury. 779

SECRETARY OF STATE. See MAN-DAMUS, 2, 8.

27 L. R. A.

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

If upon discovering the forgery of checks the bank, without knowing that it has previously paid similar checks, makes good the amount to the depositor, who has failed to notify the bank of previous forgeries, it may use the amount so paid as a counterclaim when sued for the amounts represented by the prior forgeries. First Nat. Bank v. Allen (Ala.) 426

SHIPPING. See COMMERCE, 1.NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Shipping; local license tax on vessels licensed by the United States. 414

SIGNATURE. See WILLS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.SLAVERY. See CRIMINAL LAW, 7SPECIAL STOCK. See CORPORATIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Specific performance of an agreement to permit a corporation to take the stock of a deceased subscriber at the value appraised by the directors, if they so elect, will not be denied on the ground that the corporation has a remedy at law,—especially where its shares are all subject to its option to purchase, and are not bought and sold in the market like most stocks, and it might be difficult to lay down a clear rule of damages. New England Trust Co. v. Abbott (Mass.) 271

SPENDTHRIFT. See DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.STATUTES. See also CONTRACTS, 3.

1. A statute attempting to annex noncontiguous territory to a city is not germane to the subject of amendment to the charter or its provisions expressed in the title as "An Act to Revise and Amend the Charter." Denver v. Coulehan (Colo.) 751

2. The title "An Act to Provide for the Treatment and Cure of Habitual Drunkards" does not describe more than one subject, or vary from the body of the act, which mentions treatment only, and not cure. Baltimore v. Keeley Institute (Md.) 646

3. The word "may" should be construed "must," in a statute providing that a judge on affidavit of his bias or prejudice "may" call in another judge. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

4. An unconstitutional statute may be amended into a constitutional one, so far as its future operation is concerned, by removing its objectionable provisions, or supplying others, to conform it to the requirements of the constitution. State, Richards, v. Cincinnati (Ohio) 787

5. A suit pending to enforce a right or remedy conferred solely by statute is abated by the unconditional repeal of the statute. Globe Pub. Co. v. State Bank (Neb.) 854

6. The statutory liability of stockholders for debts of the corporation in case of failure to publish an annual notice of its existing debts, being penal, and not contractual, a suit to enforce it falls by repeal of the statute before judgment. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Statutes; when mandatory. 79

STAY. See APPEAL AND ERROR, 4.

STOCK AND PRODUCE EXCHANGE. See also CONSPIRACY.

An incorporated milk exchange is not engaged in buying and selling milk, where it merely looks up a dealer in each case to purchase the milk directly from the producer, at a price fixed by the exchange. People v. Milk Exchange (N. Y.) 437

STOCK-GAPS. See RAILROADS, 1.

STOCKHOLDERS. See CORPORATIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

STREET RAILROADS. See also BOARDS, 1; CARRIERS, 2, 3; ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES; ELECTRIC RAILWAYS; JUDGMENT, 3.

1. A street-railway company has no right to build any part of its line until it has the right to complete it, where it has no power of eminent domain. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Montgomery County Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 766

2. An actual corporate existence clothed with a legal right to build a railroad, being a fundamental condition of permission to occupy a highway for that purpose, permission nominally granted to a company not yet legally in existence cannot become effective on its incorporation,—at least as against a company previously chartered, which with reasonable promptness obtains a later grant of permission to use the same road. Homestead Street R. Co. v. Pittsburgh & H. Electric Street R. Co. (Pa.) 383

3. Not more than one street-railway franchise upon the same highway can be given under a statute authorizing the incorporation of street-railway companies only for the construction and operation of a street railway on a street or highway "upon which no track is laid, or authorized to be laid or to be extended under any existing charter." Id.

4. The ordinary use of streets which a telephone company is forbidden to obstruct by a proviso in the statute giving permission to use the streets includes the use of the streets by an electric street-car line. Cumberland Teleph. & Tel. Co. v. United Electric R. Co. (Tenn.) 236

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Street railways; right to build in highway. 883

Right to construct on country roads. 766

SUPERVISORS. See BOARDS, 1.

27 L. R. A.

TAXES. See also BONDS; INJUNCTION, 3; PUBLIC MONEY.

1. A real-estate mortgage owned and controlled by a nonresident of the state is no subject to taxation as "property in the state." Holland v. Silver Bow County (Mont.) 797

2. A tax on a foreign pipe-line company imposed by way of license, which consists of a percentage of the gross amount of its receipts from transportation of oil within the state, which is taken to be such proportion of its gross receipts for transportation as the length of the line in the state bears to the whole line,—is not an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce. State, Tidewater Pipe Co. v. State Bd. of Assessors (N. J. Sup.) 684

3. In the absence of an express statutory mandate, a city of the metropolitan class cannot be compelled, either at law or in equity, to refund money received by it from a purchaser of real estate at a sale made thereof by the county treasurer for the purpose of collecting a special assessment levied against such real estate by said city, and for which special assessment said real estate was not liable. The rule caveat emptor applies with full force to such a purchaser. Pennock v. Douglas County (Neb.) 121

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Taxes; for what purposes may be levied. 72

On mortgages of nonresident. 797

Liability to refund money on invalid sale. 121

TELEGRAPHS. See also COMMERCE, 5.

1. A statutory prohibition of discrimination by telegraph companies merely declares a principle of the common law. Western U. Tel. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. (Neb.) 622

2. A substantial difference in conditions affecting the difficulty or expense of performing the service justifies a difference in rates charged by a telegraph company. Id.

3. Dissimilar conditions of telegraph service justifying different rates exist in reference to duplicate copies of the same news report furnished at the same time to two newspapers of the same city, where one is an evening paper and requires the report about 8 P. M., so that it must come during the day and take preference over commercial business, while the other is a morning paper which does not need the report until evening, and to which it could be sent at any time in the day during lulls in other business. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Telegraphs; discrimination in rates. 622

TELEPHONES. See ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES, 1-3; STREET RAILWAYS, 4.

TENEMENT HOUSE. See BUILDINGS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

TIMBER.

Failure to cut and remove timber within a reasonable time, under an absolute grant thereof of which specified no time for the removal, does not forfeit the title of the grantee in favor of a subsequent purchaser of the land whose conveyance recites the prior sale of the timber. Magnetic Ore Co. v. Marbury Lumber Co. (Ala.) 434

TOLLS.*NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Inspection of public toll books. 83

TORTS. See also BOYCOTT.

An intentional causing of loss by one man to another without justifiable cause, and with malicious purpose to inflict it, is of itself an actionable wrong. Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. (La.) 416

TOWBOATS. See COMMERCE, 1.*TOWNS. See BOARDS, 1.*TRADENAME.

1. The right of a person to use his own name in business notwithstanding the prior use of the name by others in a similar business does not extend to a corporation of which he is a promoter and member. Chas. S. Higgins Co. v. Higgins Soap Co. (N. Y.) 43

2. The use of the name "Higgins Soap Co." to some extent as that of the "Chas. S. Higgins Co." which is engaged in manufacturing various kinds of soap called by the general name of "Higgins Soap," will prevent the right of a company subsequently incorporated in another state under that name to use it in a rival business in the same city. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Tradename; conflicting rights in. 49

TREES. See HIGHWAYS, 1; INJUNCTION, 6.*TRESPASS. See ACTION OR SUIT, 8; ANIMALS, 2.*TRIAL. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 12; DISTRICT AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

1. The right to a jury trial on appeal from a justice of the peace or a police justice, with an absolutely free and untrammelled right to such appeal, satisfies a constitutional provision that "a man hath a right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury" in a criminal case, at least when the accused has the right to elect whether he will be tried in the first instance before the justice or in the higher court. Brown v. Epps (Va.) 676

2. The cause of death is a question for the jury where one witness testifies that it was a cutting, another that it was tetanus, and the third that it was both. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Melick (C. C. App. 8th C.) 629

3. Whether the negligent failure of a trolley-railway company to place guard wires between the trolley wires and the wires of a telephone company was or was not the proximate cause of a shock to a traveler, from contact with a broken telephone wire which had fallen across the trolley wire,—is a question for the jury. Block v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. (Wis.) 345

27 L. R. A.

4. Negligence in omitting to place guard wires between trolley wires and telephone wires is a question for the jury. Id.

5. Whether a passenger in jumping from a public carriage when directed to do so by the driver, while the horses were running and kicking, was guilty of contributory negligence or not, is a question of fact for the jury. Budd v. United Carriage Co. (Or.) 279

6. The attractiveness of dangerous premises for children, which will render the owner liable for accidents to them, is a question for the jury. Pekin v. McMahon (Ill.) 206

7. Pertinent questions of fact stated in writing and handed to the court at the close of the testimony must be submitted to the jury, although the attention of the other counsel was not called to them until after his opening argument. Topeka v. Boutwell (Kan.) 598

8. An instruction that there must be a "reasonable probability" of the permanency of a personal injury, to justify a recovery therefor, with a refusal to instruct that there must be a "reasonable certainty" thereof, is erroneous. Block v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. (Wis.) 365

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Trial; permitting nonresident attorney to aid state's attorney. 688

TRUSTS. See also CONTRACTS, 2; CORPORATIONS, 19, 20; DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 2; DOWRY, 2.

1. A conveyance in trust made to another, subject to the life use of the purchaser of premises and his right to direct a sale of the property for his own benefit at any time, creates only a naked or nominal title in the trustee, which is invalid under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1894, § 8408. Stroup v. Stroup (Ind.) 523

2. A donation from trust funds to aid in building a hotel when this is necessary to secure its location near real property belonging to the trust estate, the value of which will be largely enhanced thereby, is not beyond the power of trustees under a will which creates a trust to continue until the death of all of certain annuitants and of testator's children and of his grandchildren living at his death, after which the estate is to be divided among his descendants then living, and which provides, after paying certain annuities, for a division of three fourths of the net income between testator's children, and for a reserve fund to be made of the remaining one fourth as security against losses by shrinkage; where the trustees can pay the subscription from the reserve fund without disabling the performance of other provisions with respect to that fund, and the will expressly empowers them to invest and reinvest this fund, as well as to do all that the testator could lawfully do, if living, with respect to a part of the real estate and the management thereof and the investing and reinvesting of the proceeds thereof. Drake v. Crane (Mo.) 653

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Trusts; donation from trust funds. 654

In institum, doctrine of. 758

Merely naked or nominal. 823

TURNTABLE. See NEGLIGENCE, 4.UNITED STATES. See INJUNCTION, 1.USAGE. See CUSTOM.USURY.

1. One of three joint makers of a note for the purchase price of real estate is not limited in setting up the defense of usury to the portion corresponding with his interest in the land; and the fact that he has purchased the interests of his comakers is immaterial. People's Bank v. Jackson (S. O.) 569

2. A statute limiting the rate of interest upon any contract "for hiring, lending, or use of money or other commodity," applies to a promissory note for the purchase price of real estate. Id.

3. The difference between the cash and the credit price on a sale of property may be put into the form of interest on a note given for the purchase price, without violating the usury law, although the per cent agreed upon is greater than the lawful rate of interest. First Nat. Bank v. Mann (Tenn.) 565

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Usury; in deferred payments of purchase money;—making interest a part of the purchase price; cash and credit prices; agreement as to interest made after original contract completed; other contracts. 565

VALIDATION. See COUNTIES.VENDOR AND PURCHASER. See also EQUIT, 2; MORTGAGE, 1-5.

The assignment of notes secured by vendor's lien is governed by the same rule as the assignment of notes secured by mortgage. Nashville Trust Co. v. Smythe (Tenn.) 663

VENUE. See ACTION OR SUIT, 4, NOTES AND BRIEFS.VOTERS AND ELECTIONS. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 3.

1. A voter need not have any particular spot which he calls "home," provided he makes his home, in the sense of having no other home, anywhere or in however many places, for the required times, within the limits of the state and the voting district. Langhammer v. Munter (Md.) 880

2. A voter cannot paste a slip, ticket, or sticker procured from outside parties over the printed matter as well as the blank spaces in the right hand column of an official ballot, where the only prescribed mode of voting for persons who were not already named thereon is by inserting their names in blank spaces prepared therefor in such column. Re Consolidated Election of School Directors (Pa.) 234

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Voters and elections; effect of statute as to marking ballots. 234

Domicil of voter. 880

WAGES. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 1.WARRANTS. See COUNTIES.

97 L. R. A.

WARRANTY. See SALE, 4.WATERS. See also BUILDINGS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7; ESTOPPEL, 4; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 12-17.

1. Flood waters of a large stream which in time of ordinary floods include within their course farms innumerable, and railroads, villages, towns, and cities, cannot be regarded as within the strict rules of law on the subject of obstructing streams. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Smith (Miss.) 762
See also RAILROADS, 2, 3.

2. Water brought in large quantities to a brewery for the purpose of cooling beer and cleaning utensils cannot be discharged upon the surface of the ground in such manner as to injure neighboring proprietors. Baltimore Breweries Co. v. Ranstead (Md.) 294

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Waters; disposal of waters brought in unnatural quantities upon property. 294

WILLS. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 3; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

The signature of a witness who does not make any mark on the instrument, or touch the pen which makes the signature, although written for him at his request and in his presence, cannot be sufficient as that of a subscribing witness to a will of real property. Bush v. McFarland (Tenn.) 662

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Signature by mark. 662
Condition to protect against creditors of donee. 774

WITNESSES.

1. Compensation for expert testimony on behalf of the state in a criminal case includes only the usual witness fees, unless further provision is made by statute. Klinn v. Prairie County (Ark.) 669

2. An accomplice may be asked on cross-examination in a murder case if he expects to be hung. State v. Kent (N. D.) 686

3. To affect the credibility of an accomplice it may be shown that no proceedings have been instituted against him, although some time has elapsed since the crime. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Witnesses; compensation of expert witnesses;—(I.) as to matters of fact; (II.) as to requiring examination or preparation; (III.) cases denying the right to additional compensation; (IV.) cases affirming the right to additional compensation; (V.) reasons given for the different rulings; (VI.) statutory provisions; (VII.) by whom paid; (VIII.) the English rule: (a) in common-law courts; (b) in courts of chancery; (c) the modern rule. 669

WRIT AND PROCESS. See GARNISHMENT, 2.NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Writ; for summoning grand jury, see GRAND JURY.

L. R. A. CASES AS AUTHORITIES.

---

CASES IN 27 L. R. A.

---

27 L. R. A. 33, HANOVER NAT. BANK v. BLAKE, 142 N. Y. 404, 59 N. Y. S. R. 794, 40 Am. St. Rep. 607, 37 N. E. 519.

Effect of secret preference in relation to composition agreement.

Cited in Re Chaplin, 115 Fed. 166, holding amount of fraudulent preference in compositions, if paid, recoverable by trustee in bankruptcy; Continental Nat. Bank v. McGeoch, 92 Wis. 308, 66 N. W. 606, holding composition agreement not invalidated by payment of attorney's fees incurred in suits up to time of agreement.

Distinguished in Powers Dry-Goods Co. v. Harlin, 68 Minn. 200, 64 Am. St. Rep. 460, 71 N. W. 16, holding payment of notes given in composition not enforceable against sureties, because of secret agreement of holder for additional payment; Glens Falls Nat. Bank v. Van Nostrand, 41 Misc. 528, 85 N. Y. Supp. 50, holding guaranty by third person of note as secret preference to secure signature of creditor to composition agreement, void as against public policy.

27 L. R. A. 42, CHAS. S. HIGGINS CO. v. HIGGINS SOAP CO. 144 N. Y. 462, 63 N. Y. S. R. 724, 43 Am. St. Rep. 769, 39 N. E. 490.

Unauthorized use or infringement of trade-names and labels.

Cited in De Long v. De Long Hook & Eye Co. 89 Hun, 404, 35 N. Y. Supp. 509, restraining use of name "De Long Hook & Eye Co." in imitation of trademark "The De Long Hook and Eye," although name of an incorporator was De Long; Tuerk Hydraulic Power Co. v. Tuerk, 92 Hun, 69, 36 N. Y. Supp. 384, restraining use of name "The Tuerk Water Meter Company" in imitation of name "The Tuerk Water Motor Company;" Church v. Kresner, 26 App. Div. 351, 49 N. Y. Supp. 742, restraining use of trade-name "Cameron" by person not of that name, although original user was also not of that name; Dr. David Kennedy Corp. v. Kennedy, 36 App. Div. 604, 55 N. Y. Supp. 917, restraining person selling right to use his own name as trade-name, from receiving mail directed to him at address of purchasing corporation; Cutter v. Gudebrod Bros. Co. 44 App. Div. 610, 61 N. Y. Supp. 225, Modifying 36 App. Div. 373, 55 N. Y. Supp. 298, holding that purchaser of assets of corporation using name of individual cannot be restrained from using corporation name thereafter; Society of the War 1812 v. Society of the War 1812, 46 App. Div. 572, 62 N. Y. Supp. 355, restraining use of corporate name "The Society of the War of 1812," as part of corporate name of subsequently organized corporation; Ft. Stanwix Canning

Co. v. William McKinley Canning Co. 49 App. Div. 574, 63 N. Y. Supp. 704, holding words on labels "Our Flag" and "Pride of the Home" infringement on "F. S. Flag" and "Pride of Rome;" Re Adams, 24 Misc. 295, 53 N. Y. Supp. 666, upholding right of plaintiff to restrain sale of his own name as trademark, by assignee; Schmid v. De Grauw, 27 Misc. 695, 59 N. Y. Supp. 569, restraining use of name "De Grauw, Aymar, & Co." against prior right to use, although partners were named De Grauw and Aymar; Roy Watch Case Co. v. Camm-Roy Watch Case Co. 28 Misc. 48, 58 N. Y. Supp. 979, holding use of name "Camm-Roy Watch Case Co." restrainable by prior corporation named "Roy Watch Case Co.;" Arnheim v. Arnheim, 28 Misc. 399, 59 N. Y. Supp. 948, restraining use of name "Arnheim the Tailor" by person of name of Arnheim; Crawford v. Laus, 29 Misc. 249, 60 N. Y. Supp. 387, holding words "The Little Antique Shop" infringement on words "The Little Shop;" Falk v. American West Indies Trading Co. 71 App. Div. 322, 75 N. Y. Supp. 964, Affirming 36 Misc. 378, 73 N. Y. Supp. 547, holding words "El Falco" infringement on words "El Falcon," not justified because director of infringing corporation was named Gregorio Lopez of Falco; Rubel v. Allegretti Chocolate Cream Co. 76 Ill. App. 590, restraining use of firm name of "Algretti & Co." as infringement of trade-name of "Algretti," used in connection with sale of chocolate creams; Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. v. Graham, 96 Iowa, 607, 31 L. R. A. 138, 65 N. W. 837, restraining use of name "Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Iowa" by seceding body, although alone incorporated; Red Polled Cattle Club v. Red Polled Cattle Club, 108 Iowa, 111, 78 N. W. 803, enjoining use by one corporation of name of another incorporated in different state; Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Improved Order, K. of P. 113 Mich. 136, 38 L. R. A. 661, 71 N. W. 470, refusing injunction against use of name "Improved Order Knights of Pythias" by withdrawing members of Knights of Pythias; Lamb Knit-Goods Co. v. Lamb Glove & Mitten Co. 120 Mich. 164, 44 L. R. A. 844, footnote p. 841, 78 N. W. 1072, denying right to use one's own name so as to deceive public as to business rightfully engaged in by another; Lafean v. Weeks, 177 Pa. 431, 34 L. R. A. 174, 35 Atl. 693, holding use of initials "W. H. W." as infringement on trademark "P. C. W." improperly enjoined; American Clay Mfg. Co. v. American Clay Mfg. Co. 198 Pa. 194, 47 Atl. 936, enjoining use by foreign corporation of name of older domestic corporation; Armington v. Palmer, 21 R. I. 113, 43 L. R. A. 99, footnote p. 95, 79 Am. St. Rep. 786, 42 Atl. 308, sustaining private suit in equity to prevent wrongful assumption by corporation of name belonging to plaintiff; Robinson v. Storm, 103 Tenn. 48, 52 S. W. 880, restraining unauthorized use of frame-name "Storm's Liver Regulator;" Clark Thread Co. v. Armitage, 67 Fed. 902, restraining use of small label in all respects like plaintiff's, except that letters "O. N. T." were replaced by letters "N-E-W;" Godillot v. American Grocery Co. 71 Fed. 875, restraining use of letters "A. S." the trademark of another, where combined in monogram, infringers using letters in similar monogram; Lever Bros. Limited Boston Works v. Smith, 112 Fed. 999, upholding right of defendant to use name "Welcome A. Smith" on soap labels, although soap on market known as "Welcome" soap; Peck Bros. & Co. v. Peck Bros. Co. 62 L. R. A. 89, footnote p. 81, 51 C. C. A. 262, 113 Fed. 302, enjoining use of corporate name "Peck Bros. Co." as infringement upon name "The Peck Bros. & Co.;" Bissell Chilled Plow Works v. T. M. Bissell Plow Co. 121 Fed. 367, holding name "The Bissell Chilled Plow Works" infringed by name "The T. M. Bissell Plow Company;" Wyckoff v. Howe Scale Co. 58 C. C. A. 514, 122 Fed. 352, enjoining use of word "Remington" in name of corporation manufacturing typewriters, but refusing to enjoin use of "Rem-Sho" for name of typewriter, as infringement on original name "Remington typewriter;" Pettes v. American Watchman's Clock Co. 89 App. Div. 347, 85 N. Y. Supp. 900, enjoining use by corporation of copartnership name of another company; American Novelty & Mfg. Co. v. Manufacturing Electrical Novelty Co. 36 Misc. 455, 73 N. Y. Supp. 755, enjoining, on motion of American novelty and manufacturing company, use of name "Manufacturing Electrical Novelty Company," adopted by another company for purpose of deception; Van Houten v. Hooton Cocoa & Chocolate Co. 130 Fed. 603, enjoining sale of cocoa under name of "Hooton's" by new company, where well-known brand known as "Van Houton's Cocoa" was on the market.

Cited in footnotes to Nolan Bros. Shoe Co. v. Nolan, 53 L. R. A. 384, which sustains right of one using family name as trade-name to prevent deceptive use of name by other member of same family; International Committee, Y. W. C. A. v. Young Women's Christian Asso. 56 L. R. A. 888, which sustains right of local Y. W. C. A. to enjoin deceptive use of similar name by organization subsequently incorporated; Bagby & R. Co. v. Rivers, 40 L. R. A. 632, which denies assignability of continuing partner's right to use retiring partner's name; Slater v. Slater, 61 L. R. A. 796, Affirming 78 App. Div. 454, 80 N. Y. Supp. 363, which holds firm name an asset of partnership which executor of deceased partner has right to have sold.

Examination of corporation officer before trial.

Cited in Rosenbaum v. Rice, 36 Misc. 413, 73 N. Y. Supp. 714, upholding right of examination before trial of president and director of corporation at suit of minority stockholder on allegations on information and belief.

27 L. R. A. 45, STATE ex rel. MILLER v. BARBER, 4 Wyo. 409, 34 Pac. 1028.

Jurisdiction of courts of last resort as to mandamus.

Cited in note (58 L. R. A. 867) on original jurisdiction of courts of last resort in mandamus case.

27 L. R. A. 48, McFARLAND v. RAILWAY OFFICIALS & E. ACCI. ASSO.
5 Wyo. 126, 63 Am. St. Rep. 29, 38 Pac. 347.

Limitation of time to sue on insurance policy.

Cited in Egan v. Oakland Ins. Co. 29 Or. 410, 54 Am. St. Rep. 798, 42 Pac. 990, and Rottier v. German Ins. Co. 84 Minn. 118, 86 N. W. 888, holding that limitation of time for suit begins to run from date of fire, although loss not payable until sixty days after proof thereof.

Cited in note (47 L. R. A. 705) as to when stipulation limiting time for suit on insurance policy begins to run.

27 L. R. A. 56, ENDERS v. ENDERS, 164 Pa. 266, 44 Am. St. Rep. 598, 30 Atl. 129.

Agreements concerning custody and support of children.

Cited in Anderson v. Young, 54 S. C. 394, 44 L. R. A. 279, footnote p. 277, 32 S. E. 448, sustaining court's power to uphold, in interest of child, custody held under void agreement with parent.

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. III.—60.

Cited in footnotes to Fletcher v. Hickman, 55 L. R. A. 806, which holds father bound by agreement intrusting custody of infant child to another; Van Epps v. Redfield, 34 L. R. A. 360, which sustains agreement by father of bastard to convey property to mother for release from liability as to maintenance of child.

27 L. R. A. 63, CENTRAL R. CO. v. BREWER, 78 Md. 394, 28 Atl. 615.

Liability of principal for torts of agent.

Cited in Barabasz v. Kabat, 86 Md. 36, 37 Atl. 720, holding pastor not liable for act of his door keeper in causing arrest of woman attempting to enter church without ticket; Baltimore & Y. Turnp. Road v. Green, 86 Md. 167, 37 Atl. 642, holding turnpike company not liable for arrest and prosecution of person by gate keeper for nonpayment of toll; Grand Fountain U. O. of T. R. v. Murray, 88 Md. 426, 41 Atl. 896, holding supreme lodge of benefit society not liable for unauthorized order of office directing subordinate lodge to expel member; Carter v. Worcester County, 94 Md. 625, 51 Atl. 830, holding county commissioners not liable for unauthorized act of road supervisor in causing arrest of person for refusal to work on roads; Little Rock Traction & Electric Co. v. Walker, 65 Ark. 148, 40 L. R. A. 474, footnote p. 473, 45 S. W. 57, denying carrier's liability for arrest of street-car passenger by policeman called by conductor, who was only authorized to put delinquent passengers off car.

Cited in footnotes to Eichengreen v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 L. R. A. 702, which holds carrier liable for false imprisonment procured by railroad detective; Palmer v. Maine C. R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 673, which holds passenger's unreasonable refusal to tell whether name on mileage ticket is own, no justification for procuring his arrest; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henry, 29 L. R. A. 465, which holds carrier liable for illegal arrest of passenger without warrant, caused by conductor; Brunswick & W. R. Co. v. Ponder, 60 L. R. A. 714, which denies carrier's liability for failure to prevent illegal arrest by officers, or for stopping train to permit removal; Markley v. Snow, 64 L. R. A. 685, which denies liability of employer for act of employee in causing arrest, long after commission of crime, of one suspected of having set fire to building of employer.

Reasonable cause for arrest.

Cited in Edger v. Burke, 96 Md. 724, 54 Atl. 986, holding officer justified in arresting, without warrant, one accused of rape on description of woman believed to be truthful.

27 L. R. A. 67, DASHIELL v. GROSVENOR, 13 C. C. A. 593, 25 U. S. App. 227, 66 Fed. 334.

Affirmed in 162 U. S. 425, 40 L. ed. 1025, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805.

Government use of machinery infringing patents.

Cited in International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 114 Fed. 515, dismissing bill to enjoin postmaster from leasing infringing canceling machine.

27 L. R. A. 72, BALTIMORE & E. S. R. CO. v. SPRING, 80 Md. 510, 31 Atl. 208.
Unauthorized bond issues.

Cited in footnote to Wilkes County v. Call, 44 L. R. A. 252, which holds void, county bonds issued under authority of unconstitutional statute.

Public purposes authorizing taxation or appropriations.

Cited in footnotes to Bush v. Orange County, 45 L. R. A. 566, which holds void, statute authorizing counties to raise by taxation, money to pay drafted men or their heirs; Pritchard v. Magoun, 46 L. R. A. 381, which authorizes taxes to aid in building for highway and railway purposes, toll bridge owned by private corporation; Allen v. State Auditors, 47 L. R. A. 117, which denies right to appropriate public money to pay pardoned convict for alleged wrongful imprisonment; Dodge v. Mission Twp. 54 L. R. A. 242, which holds promotion of construction and operation of sugar mills a private purpose not authorizing taxation.

27 L. R. A. 74, STATE v. HIGGINS, 60 Minn. 1, 51 Am. St. Rep. 490, 61 N. W. 816.

Middle initials as material part of name.

Cited in Houghton v. Tibbets, 126 Cal. 59, 58 Pac. 318, holding record of service upon "W. F. Curtis," where defendant's name was William T. Curtis, not to justify judgment by default.

Cited in footnote to Beattie v. National Bank, 43 L. R. A. 654, which holds middle initial letter not part of Christian name.

27 L. R. A. 76, STATE v. MROZINSKI, 59 Minn. 465, 61 N. W. 560.

Police power.

Cited in State v. Sherod, 80 Minn. 450, 50 L. R. A. 663, 81 Am. St. Rep. 268, 83 N. W. 417, upholding act requiring baking powder manufacturers to affix labels on product, containing names of ingredients.

— As to game and fish.

Cited in State ex rel. Keith v. Chapel, 63 Minn. 536, 65 N. W. 940, upholding act prohibiting possession of illegally captured game or fish; State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 624, 43 L. R. A. 293, 67 Am. St. Rep. 695, 41 Atl. 1030, upholding act for protection of fish in ponds or streams stocked by fish and game commissioners.

Cited in footnotes to Peters v. State, 33 L. R. A. 114, which holds valid, as to private lake, act regulating mode of taking fish; State v. Snowman, 50 L. R. A. 544, which sustains statute requiring license for business of guiding in inland fishing and forest hunting; Smith v. State, 51 L. R. A. 404, which sustains statute prohibiting possession of quail during close season.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 586) on governmental control over right of fishery.

27 L. R. A. 77, BOARD OF EDUCATION v. BEST, 52 Ohio St. 138, 39 N. E. 694.

Employment of teacher.

Cited in Pierce v. Board of Education, 1 Ohio N. P. 290, holding appointment of teacher without public roll call of members of board of education illegal.

27 L. R. A. 82, Re CASWELL, 18 R. I. 835, 49 Am. St. Rep. 814, 29 Atl. 259.

Right to inspect public records.

Cited in Stuart v. Press Pub. Co. 83 App. Div. 478, 82 N. Y. Supp. 401, holding that at common law, pleadings and papers in action were not open to public inspection.

Cited in footnote to Tryon v. Pingree, 37 L. R. A. 222, which denies mayor's right to aid private individual in obtaining examination of city officer's books for private purposes.

Distinguished in Sloan Filter Co. v. El Paso Reduction Co. 117 Fed. 507, upholding right of users of patented article claimed to infringe patent, to inspect record of action between other parties.

27 L. R. A. 86, HART v. NIAGARA F. INS. CO. 9 Wash. 620, 38 Pac. 213.

Acts of agent binding on principal.

Cited in Hall v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 23 Wash. 613, 51 L. R. A. 291, 83 Am. St. Rep. 844, 63 Pac. 505, holding that principal cannot escape responsibility for acts of person held out to public as agent, under secret agreement that he be agent of another; Coles v. Jefferson Ins. Co. 41 W. Va. 267, 23 S. E. 732, holding insurance company bound by mistake of agent acting within scope of apparent authority; Nixon v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 25 Wash. 260, 65 Pac. 195 (concurring opinion), holding that innocent parties, acting on advice of insurance agents, should not suffer therefor; German Ins. Co. v. Shader (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 920, 93 N. W. 972, holding company bound by act of agent receiving premium after loss, with knowledge of facts.

Construction of insurance policies.

Cited in Cole v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 22 Wash. 31, 47 L. R. A. 205, 60 Pac. 68, holding insured not bound by unknown condition in policy never delivered to him.

Cited in footnote to McGannon v. Michigan Millers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. 54 L. R. A. 739, which holds policy not avoided by temporary absence of competent watchman from mill.

Instructions as to preponderance of evidence.

Cited in Carstens v. Charles, 26 Wash. 694, 67 Pac. 404, holding use of words "fair preponderance" in instruction in civil action, as to necessary preponderance of evidence, not reversible error.

27 L. R. A. 92, THOMPSON v. JACKSON, 93 Iowa, 376, 61 N. W. 1004.

Collateral attack on judgments.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 459) on decision against constitutional right, as nullity subject to collateral attack.

Residence of parties as affecting jurisdiction.

Cited in Little v. Devendorf, 109 Iowa, 49, 79 N. W. 476, holding residence of parties, in absence of record of same, presumed to have been such as to confer jurisdiction of subject-matter on justice of peace.

Individual liability for erroneous judicial and executive acts.

Cited in Robertson v. Parker, 99 Wis. 658, 67 Am. St. Rep. 889, 75 N. W. 423, holding wilful assumption of criminal jurisdiction by municipal court judge, knowing he had none, actionable; Calhoun v. Little, 106 Ga. 340, 43 L. R. A. 632, footnote p. 630, 71 Am. St. Rep. 254, 32 S. E. 86, denying personal liability of inferior judicial officer for unofficial sentence imposed under illegal ordinance which judge held valid; Wright v. Jones, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 430, 38 S. W. 249, holding members of county commissioners court not individually liable by reason of judicial act done through misconstruction of law.

Cited in footnotes to Guild v. Goodwin, 27 L. R. A. 660, which holds mayor not liable for malicious prosecution in attempting to enforce void ordinance; Scott v. Fishplate, 30 L. R. A. 696, which denies liability of mayor to civil action for imprisonment for contempt; Coleman v. Roberts, 36 L. R. A. 84, which holds failure to enter sentence of imprisonment for contempt does not render justice liable on bond for imprisonment; Glazer v. Hubbard, 39 L. R. A. 210, which holds police judge guilty of false imprisonment in committing person without other warrant than telegram from chief of police for his arrest; Tillman v. Beard, 46 L. R. A. 215, which denies liability of village president for procuring arrest for violating void ordinance; Webb v. Fisher, 60 L. R. A. 791, which holds judge not subject to private action for corruptly entering decree disbaring attorney.

Liability of officers executing process of court.

Cited in Heath v. Halfhill, 106 Iowa, 133, 76 N. W. 522, holding constable not liable for levy under execution regular on its face, on judgment void for want of jurisdiction of defendant.

Cited in footnote to Kelley v. Schuyler, 44 L. R. A. 435, which holds officer a trespasser in breaking and entering dwelling house to serve replevin writ.

27 L. R. A. 96, TALBOT PAVING CO. v. GORMAN, 103 Mich. 403, 61 N. W. 655.

Acceptance by vendee of goods not conforming to contract.

Cited in Williams v. Robb, 104 Mich. 247, 62 N. W. 352, holding vendee of potatoes estopped by acceptance, after opportunity for inspection, from claiming damages for defects; W. K. Henderson Lumber Co. v. Stilwell & Co. 130 Mich. 127, 89 N. W. 718, holding vendee, inspecting and keeping goods knowing they did not comply with contract, not entitled, in action for purchase price, to recoup damages for loss of profits.

Cited in footnote to Ontario Deciduous Fruit Growers' Assn. v. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. 53 L. R. A. 681, which requires buyer to pay for fruit received under contract, knowing full amount cannot be delivered.

Distinguished in Gorman v. Kennedy, 126 Mich. 184, 85 N. W. 458, upholding right of vendee to deduct from contract price expense of making stone conform to specifications under verbal warranty.

27 L. R. A. 98, GRANT v. LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN CO. 93 Tenn. 691, 28 S. W. 90.

Lien for attorney's fees.

Cited in Bristol-Goodson Electric Light & P. Co. v. Bristol Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. 99 Tenn. 389, 42 S. W. 19, upholding right of attorneys to reasonable compensation from fund obtained by general creditors bill, for benefit of creditors.

Cited in footnote to Loofbourow v. Hicks, 55 L. R. A. 874, which holds lien for attorneys' fees allowed by judgment of foreclosure enforceable against land bid in by mortgagee or assignee.

Distinguished in Alexander v. Atlanta & W. P. R. Co. 113 Ga. 205, 54 L. R. A. 312, footnote p. 305, 38 S. E. 772, denying right of minority stockholders to attorneys' fees in successful suit to enjoin corporation from doing ultra vires acts, where no property recovered.

27 L. R. A. 101, BRAITHWAITE v. HARVEY, 14 Mont. 208, 43 Am. St. Rep. 625, 36 Pac. 38.

Judgments of foreign state against executor or administrator.

Cited in Jefferson v. Beall, 117 Ala. 440, 67 Am. St. Rep. 177, 23 So. 44, holding judgment rendered in foreign state against executor of estate void; Johnston v. McKinnon, 129 Ala. 225, 29 So. 696, holding foreign judgment against administrator no ground of action in intestate's state; Price v. Ward, 25 Nev. 213, 46 L. R. A. 463, 58 Pac. 849, holding administrator without power to redeem intestate's land in another state from mortgage, by setting off waste committed by mortgagee, after intestate's death; Burton v. Williams, 63 Neb. 435, 88 N. W. 765, holding action not maintainable on foreign judgment against administrator.

Cited in footnote to Smith v. Smith, 43 L. R. A. 403, which holds judgment by court of state of decedent's domicil, making family allowance to widow, not binding on lands in other state.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in Slaughter's Succession, 108 La. 494, 58 L. R. A. 409, footnote p. 408, 32 So. 379, holding bar of limitation not removed by expression of ability to pay debt, followed by part payment.

27 L. R. A. 120, HODGKINSON v. HODGKINSON, 43 Neb. 269, 47 Am. St. Rep. 759, 61 N. W. 577.

Actions by married women for tort.

Cited in Case v. Case, 45 Neb. 497, 63 N. W. 867, holding alienation of husband's affections, resulting from accusing wife of adultery, proper element of damages in action by wife for slander; Wolf v. Frank, 92 Md. 143, 52 L. R. A. 105, footnote p. 102, 48 Atl. 132, sustaining wife's right of action for alienating husband's affections; Love v. Love, 98 Mo. App. 569, 73 S. W. 255, upholding right of action by wife against husband's parents for causing husband to abandon her.

Cited in footnotes to Kroessin v. Keller, 27 L. R. A. 685, which denies married woman's right to maintain crim. con. against other woman; Tucker v. Tucker, 32 L. R. A. 623, which holds parent not liable for advising son to separate from wife; Brown v. Brown, 38 L. R. A. 242, which sustains right of action in own name by abandoned wife against person causing abandonment; Houghton v. Rice, 47 L. R. A. 310, which denies right of action against other woman for alienating husband's affections, unaccompanied by adultery; Dietzman v. Mullin, 50 L. R. A. 808, and Betser v. Betser, 52 L. R. A. 630, which sustain wife's right of action for alienating husband's affections.

27 L. R. A. 121, PENNOCK v. DOUGLAS COUNTY, 39 Neb. 293, 42 Am. St. Rep. 579, 58 N. W. 117.

Rule of caveat emptor as applied to tax sale.

Followed in McCague v. Omaha, 58 Neb. 39, 78 N. W. 463, and Merrill v. Omaha, 39 Neb. 305, 58 N. W. 121, holding money paid by purchaser at illegal tax sale of land not recoverable.

Cited in Martin v. Kearney County, 62 Neb. 541, 87 N. W. 351, holding that cities of second class cannot be required to refund money to purchaser at sale of real estate for illegal municipal taxes; Norris v. Burt County, 56 Neb. 296, 76 N. W. 551, and Adams v. Osgood, 42 Neb. 460, 60 N. W. 869, holding, in absence of statute, rule of caveat emptor applies to purchaser at tax sale.

27 L. R. A. 126, WEBSTER v. CLARK, 34 Fla. 637, 43 Am. St. Rep. 217, 16 So. 601.

Partnerships and partnership liabilities.

Cited in Marx v. Culpepper, 40 Fla. 324, 24 So. 59, holding persons holding themselves out as partners may be jointly liable for partnership debt, although no partnership in fact exists; Rider v. Hammell, 63 Kan. 736, 66 Pac. 1026, holding question whether agreement created partnership as between the parties, one of law; Sheldon v. Bigelow, 118 Iowa, 590, 92 N. W. 701, holding person holding himself out to public as partner not liable as partner to one acting without knowledge of such fact.

Cited in footnotes to Shrum v. Simpson, 49 L. R. A. 792, which holds no partnership created by contract for working farm and dividing proceeds; Carter v. McClure, 36 L. R. A. 282, which holds partnership created by subscription to stock of co-operative store, with provision for distribution of profits; Brandon v. Connor, 63 L. R. A. 260, which holds partnership as to third persons constituted by agreement by contractor for grading railroad, to give half of net profits to one furnishing mules and harness.

Construction of contracts.

Cited in New York L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 139 Ala. 309, 35 So. 1004, holding that position taken by insurer in written notice to insured may be looked to in construing ambiguous clause in contract.

27 L. R. A. 131, PHILADELPHIA & R. R. CO. v. SMITH, 12 C. C. A. 384, 28 U. S. App. 134, 64 Fed. 679.

Notice to original wrongdoer.

Cited in Lion v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 90 Md. 275, 47 L. R. A. 130, footnote p. 127, 44 Atl. 1045, holding notice to original wrongdoer unnecessary to create liability for injury to subsequent owner of property.

Liability for continuing nuisance created by third persons.

Cited in footnote to Rockport v. Rockport Granite Co. 51 L. R. A. 779, which holds landowner liable for permitting guy rope to derrick to remain stretched across highway.

Liability for damming back water of stream.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 859, 860, 904) on liability for damming back water of stream.

27 L. R. A. 136, FIELD v. LAMSON & G. Mfg. CO. 162 Mass. 388, 38 N. E. 1126. Preferred, guaranteed, and interest-bearing stock.

Cited in Daley v. People's Bldg. Loan & Sav. Asso. 172 Mass. 535, 52 N. E. 1090, holding covenant of building and loan association to pay certificate holder par value of shares at certain date not absolute; Savannah Real Estate, Loan & Bldg. Co. v. Silverberg, 108 Ga. 289, 33 S. E. 908, holding certificate stating holder to be entitled to one share of preferred building and loan association stock, mere evidence of indebtedness; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Baltimore & O. R.

Co. 82 Fed. 370, holding city holding railroad corporation stock, interest and dividends being payable from "profits," not a creditor of such corporation.

Cited in footnotes to Hamlin v. Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. 36 L. R. A. 826, which holds holders of nonvoting preferred stock not entitled to any capital until all creditors provided for; Sumrall v. Columbia Finance & Trust Co. 44 L. R. A. 659, which holds void, issuance of preferred stock by loan association; Heller v. National Marine Bank, 45 L. R. A. 438, as to extent of lien of preferred stock.

27 L. R. A. 154, HOWSER v. CUMBERLAND & P. R. CO. 80 Md. 146, 45 Am. St. Rep. 332, 30 Atl. 906.

Presumption of negligence from happening of event.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 82 Md. 311, 31 L. R. A. 576, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 763, holding killing of boy by broken electric wire, one end having fallen from pole to street, prima facie evidence of negligence; Benedick v. Potts, 88 Md. 57, 41 L. R. A. 480, 40 Atl. 1067, holding defendant not liable for injury to plaintiff, falling in unexplained manner from car on switch-back railway; Winkelmann & B. Drug Co. v. Colladay, 88 Md. 91, 40 Atl. 1078, affirming judgment for plaintiff hurt by falling of dumb waiter, caused by breaking of rope for unexplained reason; Hearn v. Quillen, 94 Md. 45, 50 Atl. 402, holding falling of roof on building in course of construction, prima facie evidence of negligence; Judson v. Giant Powder Co. 107 Cal. 557, 29 L. R. A. 724, 48 Am. St. Rep. 156, 40 Pac. 1020, holding that presumption of negligence arises from fact of explosion of nitro glycerine factory; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Berry, 152 Ind. 619, 46 L. R. A. 57, 53 N. E. 415, holding fact that plaintiff was struck by iron pin thrown from passing train not sufficient evidence of negligence; Graham v. Badger, 164 Mass. 47, 41 N. E. 61, applying doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to breaking of derrick rope at place where it had been spliced; McCray v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 89 Tex. 171, 34 S. W. 95, holding killing of brakeman by falling of steel rail from car in front of one on which he was sitting, sufficient evidence of negligence to go to jury; Snyder v. Wheeling Electrical Co. 43 W. Va. 669, 39 L. R. A. 502, 64 Am. St. Rep. 922, 28 S. E. 733, holding falling into streets of wire charged with deadly current of electricity, prima facie evidence of negligence; Vorbrich v. Geuder & P. Mfg. Co. 96 Wis. 281, 71 N. W. 434, raising, but not deciding, question whether negligence is to be presumed from starting of machine in unknown manner; Pederson v. John D. Sprecklers & Bros. Co. 81 Fed. 208, holding that no presumption of negligence arises as to owners of tug towing schooner, by breaking of schooner breast chock through which tow line was passed; The Joseph B. Thomas, 46 L. R. A. 67, 30 C. C. A. 337, 56 U. S. App. 619, 86 Fed. 663, Affirming 81 Fed. 587, holding fact that water keg was left where it might easily roll into hold of vessel sufficient evidence of negligence; Womble v. Merchants Grocery Co. 135 N. C. 484, 47 S. E. 493, holding falling of elevator without apparent cause, evidence of negligence as to its construction; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hayden, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 283, 68 S. W. 530, holding evidence that starting of machinery causing injury could only have been due to defects therein, sufficient proof of negligence.

Cited in footnotes to Shafer v. Lacock, 29 L. R. A. 254, which holds negligence presumed from burning of house through fire set from sparks of fire-pot placed on roof by workmen; Wolf v. Downey, 51 L. R. A. 242, which denies liability of contractor for either carpenter or mason work, for injury from fall of brick from unknown cause.

Burden of proof as to negligence.

Cited in footnote to Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shieder, 28 L. R. A. 538, which holds burden of proving contributory negligence on defendant.

27 L. R. A. 158, PEOPLE v. BRAY, 105 Cal. 344, 38 Pac. 731.

Sale of liquor to Indians.

Cited in State v. Wise, 70 Minn. 101, 72 N. W. 843, upholding act forbidding sale of liquor to Indians, whether citizens or not.

27 L. R. A. 161, RITCHIE v. WALLER, 63 Conn. 155, 38 Am. St. Rep. 361, 28 Atl. 29.

Liability of master for torts of servant or agent.

Cited in Fiske v. Enders, 73 Conn. 340, 47 Atl. 681, holding master not liable for negligence of servant driving horses for his own pleasure, without authority; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Brantley, 107 Ala. 688, 18 So. 321, holding telegraph company liable for wrongful cutting of trees by servant, within scope of authority, but in disobedience of orders; Carl Corper Brewing & Malting Co. v. Hugins, 96 Ill. App. 148, holding evidence that servant, taking day off, had purchased revenue stamps at request of and for master not sufficient to establish master's liability for servant's negligence in driving home; Baltimore Consol. R. Co. v. Pierce, 89 Md. 503, 45 L. R. A. 530, footnote p. 527, 43 Atl. 940, holding master not relieved because injury by servant is wilful and malicious; McCarthy v. Timmins, 178 Mass. 381, 86 Am. St. Rep. 490, 59 N. E. 1038, holding master not liable for negligence of driver of public carriage, while going out of his way to visit saloon; Canton Cotton Warehouse Co. v. Pool, 78 Miss. 156, 84 Am. St. Rep. 620, 28 So. 823, holding master not liable for injury to stranger, due to practical joke by servants, although they employ his machinery therefor; Murray v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 66 Conn. 525, 32 L. R. A. 542, 34 Atl. 506 (dissenting opinion), majority holding carrier liable to passenger for negligence of servants of another company over whose line its cars are running, subject to signals of latter company; Loomis v. Hollister, 75 Conn. 724, 55 Atl. 561, holding question whether master liable for negligence of servant in leaving horses unhitched while he went to postoffice for his paper, properly submitted to jury.

Cited in footnotes to Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Francis, 31 L. R. A. 193, which holds employer not liable in trespass for employee's unnecessary cutting of trees on sidewalk while removing telephone wires; Brown v. Jarvis Engineering Co. 32 L. R. A. 605, which denies liability for negligence of employee causing injury to third person, assisting him at foreman's directions; Pierce v. North Carolina R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 316, which holds company liable for brakeman knocking or frightening boy from tender of engine; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Zantzinger, 44 L. R. A. 553, which sustains right to recover from company for engineer's throwing steam and water on trespasser negligently on footboard between engine and flat car; Nelson Business College Co. v. Lloyd, 46 L. R. A. 314, which holds employer liable for servant's wilful or malicious acts in course of employment; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Zantzinger, 47 L. R. A. 282, which sustains liability for engineer's ejection of trespasser from footboard.

of engine; Dorsey v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 92, which holds carrier liable for death of trespasser falling under wheels in escaping from rocks thrown by brakeman; Enright v. Pittsburgh Junction R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 330, which denies right to eject or frighten ten-year-old boy from rapidly moving train; Lamb v. Littman, 53 L. R. A. 852, which holds employer liable for assault by cruel overseer on minor employee; Paulton v. Keith, 54 L. R. A. 670, which denies theater owner's liability for manager obstructing service of process on actor; Lynch v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 54 L. R. A. 810, which denies company's liability for assault by station agent as result of personal quarrel; Guille v. Campbell, 55 L. R. A. 111, which denies master's liability for injury to bystander by slipping of hook from servant's hand while pretending to throw at boys playing on cotton bales; Alsever v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 748, which sustains liability for injuries by engineer operating blow-off cock to frighten children; Palmisano v. New Orleans City R. Co. 58 L. R. A. 405, which denies master's liability for injury to boy running blindly against moving car after release by employee who had caught and lectured him; Southern R. Co. v. James, 63 L. R. A. 257, which holds master liable for injury by night watchman shooting trespasser while running away after being arrested by him.

Cited in notes (28 L. R. A. 437) on liability of agent or servant to third persons for own negligence or nonfeasance; (29 L. R. A. 94) on liability of bailee for wrongful appropriation by his servant of thing bailed.

Defendant's right to plead to amended complaint.

Cited in La Barre v. Waterbury, 69 Conn. 557, 37 Atl. 1068, holding judgment not erroneously rendered against defendant not pleading to amended complaint after notice.

27 L. R. A. 173, BOWLER v. O'CONNELL, 162 Mass. 319, 44 Am. St. Rep. 359, 38 N. E. 498.

Liability of master for independent torts of servant.

Cited in Driscoll v. Scanlon, 165 Mass. 348, 52 Am. St. Rep. 523, 43 N. E. 100, holding master not liable for injury to infant invited by driver of cart to ride with him for pleasure; Brown v. Jarvis Engineering Co. 166 Mass. 77, 32 L. R. A. 606, 55 Am. St. Rep. 382, 43 N. E. 1118, holding master not liable to servants at work on building, injured while assisting in unloading rolls of paper under order of foremen; Gray v. Boston & M. R. Co. 168 Mass. 25, 46 N. E. 397, holding carrier liable to passenger entering station, injured by act of servant in ejecting drunken man; Gibson v. International Trust Co. 177 Mass. 103, 52 L. R. A. 929, 58 N. E. 278, holding master not liable for injury to passenger in elevator through negligence of janitor riding as passenger; Perlstein v. American Exp. Co. 177 Mass. 532, 52 L. R. A. 960, 59 N. E. 194, holding evidence to show that driver had no authority from master to go on street where collision occurred competent; Brown v. Boston Ice Co. 178 Mass. 110, 86 Am. St. Rep. 469, 59 N. E. 644, holding master not liable for act of servant in striking boy with ax handle for breaking employer's ax; McCarthy v. Timmins, 178 Mass. 381, 86 Am. St. Rep. 490, 59 N. E. 1038, holding master not liable for negligence of driver while out of his way visiting saloon; Davies v. Eastern S. B. Co. 94 Me. 385, 53 L. R. A. 241, 47 Atl. 896, holding carrier by water not liable for non-delivery of telegram received by captain for passenger; Canton Cotton Warehouse Co. v. Pool, 78 Miss. 156, 84 Am. St. Rep. 620, 28 So. 823, holding master not liable for result of practical joke by servants using his machinery therefor; Rowell v. Boston & M. R. Co. 68 N. H. 359, 44 Atl. 488, holding master's liability question for jury where evidence showed that freight train conductor ejected person from car, using more force than necessary.

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 164) on master's civil responsibility for wrongful or negligent act of his servant towards one who has no claim on master by reason of contract, incipient or perfected.

27 L. R. A. 179, TEXAS & P. R. CO. v. SCOVILLE, 10 C. C. A. 479, 23 U. S. App. 506, 62 Fed. 730.

Liability of master for independent tort of servant.

Cited in Canton Cotton Warehouse Co. v. Pool, 78 Miss. 156, 84 Am. St. Rep. 620, 28 So. 823, denying liability of master for injury due to practical joke by servant using master's machinery.

Cited in footnotes to Nelson Business College Co. v. Lloyd, 46 L. R. A. 314, which holds employer liable for servant's wilful or malicious acts in course of employment; Lamb v. Littman, 53 L. R. A. 852, which holds employer liable for assault by cruel overseer on minor employee; Lynch v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 54 L. R. A. 810, which denies company's liability for assault by station agent as result of personal quarrel; Alsever v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 748, which sustains liability for injuries by engineer operating blow-off cock to frighten children; Euting v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 158, which holds company liable for engineer's running engine for own amusement over torpedoes on track near bystanders.

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 164) on master's civil responsibility for wrongful or negligent act of his servant towards one who has no claim on master by reason of contract, incipient or perfected.

— Wrongful frightening of horses.

Cited in footnote to McCann v. Consolidated Traction Co. 38 L. R. A. 236, which holds running tank car on street railway track, with black coats waving from it, frightening horse, negligence.

27 L. R. A. 190, HOUSTON, C. A. & N. R. CO. v. BOLLING, 59 Ark. 395, 43 Am. St. Rep. 38, 27 S. W. 492.

Liability of master for independent torts of servant.

Cited in Willis v. Atlantic & D. R. Co. 120 N. C. 513, 26 S. E. 784, holding evidence of rules of railroad as to employees permitting strangers to ride on hand cars improperly excluded; Randall v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 113 Mich. 121, 38 L. R. A. 669, 71 N. W. 450, holding brakeman without implied authority to eject trespasser from freight train; Spence v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 117 Iowa, 7, 90 N. W. 346, holding carrier liable for injury to person received without authority by conductor as passenger on construction train.

Cited in footnote to Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Redding, 34 L. R. A. 767, which holds wanton negligence of duty not shown by failure to stop freight train on sharp grade to remove boy catching on.

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 166) on master's civil responsibility for wrongful or negligent act of his servant towards one who has no claim on master by reason of contract, incipient or perfected.

27 L. R. A. 203, PEOPLE ex rel. HOFFMAN v. HECHT, 105 Cal. 621, 45 Am. St. Rep. 96, 38 Pac. 941.

Validity of majority action.

Cited in People v. Simmons, 119 Cal. 3, 50 Pac. 844, holding validity of indictment not affected by disqualification or absence of grand juror.

Eligibility to hold public office.

Distinguished in Ward v. Crowell, 142 Cal. 590, 76 Pac. 491, holding election of county surveyor not invalidated by reason of disqualification as to license which was removed before term of office began.

27 L. R. A. 206, PEKIN v. McMAHON, 154 Ill. 141, 45 Am. St. Rep. 114, 39 N. E. 484.

Injury to children through maintenance of dangerous premises.

Cited in Jensen v. Wethersell, 79 Ill. App. 35, sustaining declaration charging defendant with liability for injuring child by maintenance of dangerous premises as common playground for children; Cowley v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 87 Ill. App. 127, holding railroad company not required to guard tracks against possible trespass by fifteen-months-old child; American Advertising & Bill Posting Co. v. Flannigan, 100 Ill. App. 453, denying liability of lessee for injury to nine-year-old boy burned by falling on hot embers in unguarded premises; Norman v. Bartholomew, 104 Ill. App. 673, denying liability for injury to eight-year-old boy, invited on defendant's premises by his mother; Edgington v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 116 Iowa, 421, 57 L. R. A. 566, 90 N. W. 95, holding railroad company liable for injury to child seven years old, inflicted by turntable maintained in unfenced lot; Ryan v. Towar, 128 Mich. 84, 55 L. R. A. 318, 92 Am. St. Rep. 481, 87 N. W. 644 (dissenting opinion), majority denying liability of landowner for injury to child by unused water wheel; Donk Bros. Coal & Coke Co. v. Leavitt, 109 Ill. App. 388, holding that child under three years of age cannot be either trespasser, visitor, or licensee; Com. Electric Co. v. Melville, 110 Ill. App. 249, holding request to instruct that child of seven years may be guilty of contributory negligence rightly refused when properly covered by another instruction; True & T. Co. v. Woda, 201 Ill. 319, 66 N. E. 369, holding one piling lumber in street in such way as to attract children liable for killing of child upon whom it fell.

Cited in footnotes to Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Edwards, 32 L. R. A. 825, which denies liability of railroad company for injuries to child playing on bridge ties in fenced railroad yard; Biggs v. Consolidated Barb-Wire Co. 44 L. R. A. 655, which holds owner liable for maintaining dangerous machinery on private grounds, unprotected from visits of trespassing children; Kramer v. Southern R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 359, which denies railroad company's liability for death of child by fall of pile of cross-ties in unused portion of street; Kopplekom v. Colorado Cement Pipe Co. 54 L. R. A. 284, which holds owner of uninclosed city lot liable for injury to young child by toppling over of large cement pipe used by children as plaything; Gleason v. Smith, 55 L. R. A. 622, which denies liability for injury by collision with team, to twelve-year-old boy using street as playground; Rachmel v. Clark, 62 L. R. A. 959, which holds manufacturer storing stone slabs on sidewalk in front of building liable for injuries to person lawfully using sidewalk.

Distinguished in O'Leary v. Brooks Elevator Co. 7 N. D. 562, 41 L. R. A. 680, 75

N. W. 919, denying liability for injury to child while removing cane, at direction of another, from under shaft; Putney v. Keith, 98 Ill. App. 291, denying liability of housekeeper for placing on kitchen floor, vessel of hot water, into which child of two years fell and was scalded to death; Union Stock Yard & Transit Co. v. Butler, 92 Ill. App. 170, holding railroad company not liable for injury to four-year-old child invited on premises by trespassing older brother; Northwestern Elev. R. Co. v. O'Malley, 107 Ill. App. 605, holding company not liable for injury to eight-year-old boy picking up chips under elevated railroad structure in process of construction.

— Drowning.

Cited in Stendal v. Boyd, 73 Minn. 57, 42 L. R. A. 289, footnote p. 288, 72 Am. St. Rep. 597, 75 N. W. 735, holding that attractiveness of pond on premises does not render owner liable for failure to fence them; Cooper v. Overton, 102 Tenn. 220, 45 L. R. A. 595, footnote p. 591, 73 Am. St. Rep. 864, 52 S. W. 183, denying owner's liability for drowning of trespassing child in pond formed in unfenced city lot by city damming surface water; Dobbins v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 91 Tex. 64, 38 L. R. A. 575, footnote p. 573, 66 Am. St. Rep. 856, 41 S. W. 62, denying railroad company's liability for drowning of child, while playing, in excavation near path to station platform; Price v. Atchison Water Co. 58 Kan. 556, 62 Am. St. Rep. 625, 50 Pac. 450, holding water company liable for drowning of eleven-year-old boy in reservoir; Le Grand v. Wilkes-Barre & W. Valley Traction Co. 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 16 (dissenting opinion), majority denying liability of proprietor for drowning of boy in pond located on picnic ground.

Cited in footnotes to Moran v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 33 L. R. A. 755, which denies liability of owner for drowning of boy in pond on vacant land near highway; Omaha v. Bowman, 40 L. R. A. 531, which denies city's liability for drowning of child on private premises, in pond caused by city's obstruction of water; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Beavers, 54 L. R. A. 314, which denies duty of one making excavation on own land to guard trespassing children from injury; Rome v. Cheney, 55 L. R. A. 221, which denies city's liability for drowning of child in necessary sewer, 4 feet wide and 2 feet deep.

Distinguished in Peters v. Bowman, 115 Cal. 355, 56 Am. St. Rep. 106, 47 Pac. 113, denying liability of lot owner for drowning of child in pond while trespassing on premises.

Disapproved in Arnold v. St. Louis, 152 Mo. 183, 48 L. R. A. 294, footnote p. 291, 75 Am. St. Rep. 447, 53 S. W. 900, denying liability of city or private owner for drowning of children while skating on pond without invitation.

When question of trespass for jury.

Cited in Siddall v. Jansen, 168 Ill. 48, 39 L. R. A. 114, 48 N. E. 191, holding it question for jury whether child five years old, playing near elevator in store, was trespasser.

Degree of care required of children.

Cited in Glickson v. Shannon, 88 Ill. App. 244, holding error, instruction against recovery if boy of twelve, run over by wagon, could, by exercise of ordinary care, have avoided accident; Chicago City R. Co. v. Tuohy, 95 Ill. App. 319, raising, but not deciding, question whether child nearly six years old can be guilty of contributory negligence; Heimann v. Kinnare, 190 Ill. 164, 52 L. R. A. 655, footnote p. 652, 83 Am. St. Rep. 123, 60 N. E. 215, Reversing 73 Ill.

App. 188, holding thirteen-year-old boy negligent per se in jumping over strip of water onto rotten ice on pond and sliding to point where water over his head; Quincy Gas & Electric Co. v. Bauman, 104 Ill. App. 609, upholding instruction that eleven-year-old child need only use care exercised by children of same age and intelligence under like circumstances; Krenzer v. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 151 Ind. 599, 68 Am. St. Rep. 252, 52 N. E. 220 (dissenting opinion), majority holding seven-year-old child, sleeping upon railroad track, guilty of contributory negligence.

Contributory negligence of parent.

Cited in Lewin v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 52 App. Div. 77, 65 N. Y. Supp. 49, upholding recovery by father for death of child killed at railway crossing, partly through father's negligence; O'Shea v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 79 App. Div. 258, 79 N. Y. Supp. 890, denying right of father, guilty of contributory negligence, to recover for death of eight-year-old son; Bias v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 46 W. Va. 362, 33 S. E. 240 (dissenting opinion, by Brannon, J.), who holds that contributory negligence of parent should bar his recovery for death of child.

Liability of municipal corporation for negligence.

Cited in Chicago v. Hannon, 94 Ill. App. 147, denying liability of city for injury occurring on private way to dumping ground, used by city teamsters; Omaha v. Richards, 49 Neb. 249, 68 N. W. 528, holding city liable for death of boy drowned in pond by falling from section of sidewalk used as raft, where pond was formed through negligence of city.

Issue of erroneous execution.

Cited in Canton v. Dewey, 71 Ill. App. 348, refusing to deprive plaintiff of benefit of judgment because of award of execution against city; School Directors of Dist. No. 2 v. Orr, 88 Ill. App. 651, holding judgment not reversible because of erroneous award of execution.

Facts reviewable on appeal.

Cited in Siddall v. Jansen, 168 Ill. 46, 39 L. R. A. 114, 48 N. E. 191, holding that appellate court may review facts on appeal from ruling on request to instruct jury to find for defendant.

27 L. R. A. 211, DETROIT v. ELLIS, 103 Mich. 612, 61 N. W. 886.

Res judicata.

Cited in Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 395, 46 L. ed. 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410, holding city barred by former action from denying validity of ordinance extending franchises of railroad company.

27 L. R. A. 213, BULLOCK v. BULLOCK, 52 N. J. Eq. 561, 46 Am. St. Rep. 528, 30 Atl. 676.

Judgments of foreign courts.

Cited in Wilmer v. Lewis, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 616, holding transfer of judgment from one state to another upon exemplified record unauthorized.

— Decrees for divorce or alimony.

Cited in Bullock v. Bullock, 57 N. J. L. 509, 31 Atl. 1024, holding action at law maintainable upon decree for alimony made in another state; Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 187, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555, holding no Federal question presented by judgment of state court refusing to give effect to decree of sister state, as to payment of alimony in future; Bennett v. Bennett, 63 N. J. Eq. 308, 49 Atl. 501, refusing specific performance of foreign decree of divorce as to alimony on ground that adequate remedy at law existed.

Cited in footnotes to Felt v. Felt, 47 L. R. A. 546, which holds divorce on substituted service in other state where complainant domiciled entitled to recognition by interstate comity; Arrington v. Arrington, 52 L. R. A. 201, which holds foreign decree for alimony after defendant's appearance entitled to full faith and credit; Trowbridge v. Spinning, 54 L. R. A. 204, which holds judgment for alimony, though subject to alteration, final for enforcement in other state.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 179) on conflict of laws on subject of divorce.

Void agreements as to alimony.

Distinguished in Lynde v. Lynde, 64 N. J. Eq. 750, 58 L. R. A. 476, 97 Am. St. Rep. 692, 52 Atl. 694, holding agreement of wife securing divorce from husband, to give her attorney a share of alimony recovered, void.

27 L. R. A. 219, WIND v. ILER, 93 Iowa, 316, 61 N. W. 1001.

Passing of title on sale of personal property.

Cited in Sachs v. Garner, 111 Iowa, 425, 82 N. W. 1007, holding sale of liquor by verbal order to agent, subject to approval of foreign vendor, takes place in vendor's state upon acceptance of order.

Cited in footnote to H. M. Tyler Lumber Co. v. Charlton, 55 L. R. A. 301, which holds that title does not pass by acceptance of offer to sell lumber piled at mill, to be inspected by common employee.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 420, 431, 433) on conflict of laws as to sale of intoxicating liquors.

Distinguished in Brown v. Wieland, 116 Iowa, 714, 61 L. R. A. 423, 89 N. W. 17, holding it an Ohio sale, where liquor was delivered there upon specified payment to bank holding bill of lading sent in shipper's name.

What constitutes original package.

Cited in McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 474, 39 L. R. A. 487, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1041, holding pine box containing smaller packages of cigarettes for shipment to be original package.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 664) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause as to original packages.

27 L. R. A. 222, CULBERTSON v. NELSON, 93 Iowa, 187, 57 Am. St. Rep. 266, 61 N. W. 854.

Effect of stipulations and alterations as to payment of notes.

Cited in Sawyer v. Campbell, 107 Iowa, 402, 78 N. W. 56, holding sureties not released by alteration of note, by which payee agrees to extend time of payment upon written request of makers.

— On negotiability.

Followed on similar state of facts arising out of same transaction in Sharp v. Nelson, 93 Iowa, 469, 61 N. W. 946.

Cited in Tolman v. Janson, 106 Iowa, 457, 76 N. W. 732, holding negotiability of notes not affected by void provision authorizing attorney to appear at any time and take judgment thereon; Nicely v. Commercial Bank of Union City, 15 Ind. App. 566, 57 Am. St. Rep. 245, 44 N. E. 572, and Nicely v. Winnebago Nat. Bank, 18 Ind. App. 35, 47 N. E. 476, holding negotiability of promissory note destroyed by stipulation for exchange.

Cited in footnote to Clark v. Skeen, 49 L. R. A. 190, which holds negotiability not destroyed by stipulation for payment of certain amount with current exchange.

Disapproved in effect in Haslack v. Wolf, 66 Neb. 601, 60 L. R. A. 435, footnote p. 434, 92 N. W. 374, which holds negotiability not destroyed by agreement to pay certain amount "with exchange."

27 L. R. A. 228, WILLOCK v. PENNSYLVANIA R. CO. 166 Pa. 184, 45 Am. St. Rep. 674, 30 Atl. 948.

Limitation of carrier's liability.

Cited in Ruppel v. Allegheny Valley R. Co. 167 Pa. 180, 36 W. N. C. 210, 46 Am. St. Rep. 666, 31 Atl. 478, holding stipulation of bill of lading requiring determination of amount of loss through carrier's negligence, as to place and time of shipment, invalid; Hughes v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 202 Pa. 226, 63 L. R. A. 515, 97 Am. St. Rep. 713, 51 Atl. 990, holding stipulation limiting carrier's liability for negligence, good in New York where made, not enforceable in Pennsylvania where negligence occurs; Davenport v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 51, upholding right of carrier to limit liability for transporting perishable fruit to negligence of carrier's servants; Roos v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 199 Pa. 382, 49 Atl. 344, Affirming 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 569, Which Affirmed 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 183, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 406, upholding right of carrier to deduct from total loss of goods, amount of insurance received by owner; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heath, 22 Ind. App. 54, 53 N. E. 198, holding delay caused by freezing of water pipes not within contract exempting carrier from liability due to "stress of weather."

Cited in note (36 L. R. A. 649) on limitation of common carrier's duty and liability in case of dangerous articles.

Distinguished in Allam v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 183 Pa. 177, 39 L. R. A. 536, 41 W. N. C. 209, 38 Atl. 709, Reversing 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 345, upholding contract providing that at certain small stations goods are at "risk" of owner, until loaded in cars, or when unloaded therefrom; Needy v. Western Maryland R. Co. 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 494, holding burden upon shipper to show negligence of carrier in caring for hogs lost in shipment at special rate under agreement that shipper care for the hogs while in transit.

27 L. R. A. 231, COM. v. LEHIGH VALLEY R. CO. 165 Pa. 162, 30 Atl. 836.

Prosecution of corporations.

Cited in Com. v. Easton, 8 Northampton Co. Rep. 322, holding that where city fails to appear and answer indictment for neglect of public duty, judgment by default may be entered and sentence pronounced; United States v. Correspondence Institute of America, 125 Fed. 95, holding first step in prosecution of corporation to be finding of indictment.

27 L. R. A. 234, Re CONTESTED ELECTION, 165 Pa. 233, 30 Atl. 955.

Irregularities in ballots.

Cited in Re Contested Election, 173 Pa. 63, 37 W. N. C. 394, 33 Atl. 703, holding ballot vitiated by writing name of candidate printed on ballot in blank space for names of candidates not on ballot; Re Contested Election, 181 Pa. 459, 41 W. N. C. 34, 37 Atl. 523, Reversing 5 Pa. Dist. R. 170, 2 Lack. Legal News, 5, holding perpendicular mark in square on ballot, instead of oblique cross required by statute, illegal; Re Elizabethville Election, 2 Dauphin Co. Rep. 383, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 568, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 229, holding ballots not containing as many blank spaces as there were persons to be voted for, defective; Re Pike Twp. Contested Election, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 280, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 521, holding straight mark in or outside circle or square not sufficient compliance with statutory requirement of oblique cross; Re Fairchance Contested Election, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 455, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 598, holding that markings of ballots must comply strictly with statute; Re Leh's Contested Election, 6 Pa. Dist. R. 154, holding that election should be declared invalid for irregular certification to official ballot; Re Contested Election, 30 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 319, holding use of blanket sticker on vacant column for names not printed on ballot illegal; Lawlor's Contested Election, 180 Pa. 570, 37 Atl. 92, holding use of pasters attached to official ballot illegal; Re Upperman, 33 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 380, holding ballot containing cross in circle at head of one of party columns and large X across other columns not void.

Cited in footnotes to Todd v. Election Comrs. 29 L. R. A. 330, which upholds requirement against candidate having name on official ballot more than once; Page v. Kuykendall, 32 L. R. A. 656, which holds words "long term," after one of two names on ballot in election of school directors, sufficient designation of office; Fletcher v. Wall, 40 L. R. A. 617, which holds use of paster ballots unlawful.

Record in certiorari.

Distinguished in Re Diamond Street, 196 Pa. 263, 46 Atl. 428, declining to review evidence on the merits on certiorari.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

Cited in Westfield School District v. Dillman, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 569, 5 Lack. Legal News, 288, holding that remedy provided by statute must be pursued, in absence of contract, to collect tuition for nonresident pupils.

27 L. R. A. 236, CUMBERLAND TELEPH. & TELEG. CO. v. UNITED ELECTRIC R. CO. 93 Tenn. 492, 29 S. W. 104.

Use of streets for electricity.

Cited in Snyder v. Ft. Madison Street R. Co. 105 Iowa, 288, 41 L. R. A. 347, 75 N. W. 179, holding that injunction should be granted to compel removal of electric light pole unnecessarily erected in front of plaintiff's property; Howe v. West End Street R. Co. 167 Mass. 51, 44 N. E. 386, denying right of compensation to abutting owner for maintenance of trolley electric railway in public way; La Crosse City R. Co. v. Higbee, 107 Wis. 402, 51 L. R. A. 929, 83 N. W. 701, holding additional burden not imposed on fee by maintenance of electric trolley railway.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 802) on police regulation of electric companies.

Rights of domestic and foreign corporations.

Cited in Markwood v. Southern R. Co. 65 Fed. 822, holding foreign corporation not made corporation of Tennessee by statute, by compliance with which they are "deemed to be such," so as to prevent removal of cause to Federal court;

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. III.—61.

Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 739, holding franchise of railway company, granted by legislature upon consent of municipality, not revocable by municipality after giving its consent.

27 L. R. A. 248, ANDERSON v. RODGERS, 53 Kan. 542, 36 Pac. 1067.

Collection and payment of checks.

Cited in Minneapolis Sash & Door Co. v. Metropolitan Bank, 76 Minn. 143, 44 L. R. A. 507, footnote p. 504, 77 Am. St. Rep. 609, 78 N. W. 980, holding bank not authorized to send check for collection directly to drawee, notwithstanding custom; First Nat. Bank v. City Nat. Bank, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 320, 34 S. W. 458; American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 71 Mo. App. 457; Western Wheeled Scraper Co. v. Sadilek, 50 Neb. 109, 61 Am. St. Rep. 550, 69 N. W. 765; Givan v. Bank of Alexandria (Tenn. Ch. App.) 47 L. R. A. 272, footnote p. 270, 52 S. W. 923,—holding sending check directly to drawee bank for collection, negligence; Watt v. Gans, 114 Ala. 272, 62 Am. St. Rep. 99, 21 So. 1011, holding proof of laches on part of creditor in presenting check for payment permissible under plea of payment in action for original debt for which check was given; O'Leary Bros. v. Abeles, 68 Ark. 262, 82 Am. St. Rep. 291, 57 S. W. 791, holding delivery of check to bank for collection, forwarding of same to drawee, which marked check paid and surrendered same to drawer, payment as between drawer and drawee; Bailie v. Augusta Sav. Bank, 95 Ga. 286, 51 Am. St. Rep. 74, 21 S. E. 717, holding bank receiving check for collection liable for its own or its agent's negligence in collecting same; Edminsten v. Herpolsheimer (Neb.) 59 L. R. A. 935, footnote p. 934, 92 N. W. 138, requiring check to be presented not later than day after receipt, to hold drawer.

Cited in footnotes to Commercial Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 32 L. R. A. 712, which upholds stipulation against payment of check if presented through specified agency; First Nat. Bank v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 48 L. R. A. 583, which holds collecting bank impliedly instructed to send certificate of deposit directly to bank making it, which is only bank in place; Second Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 55 L. R. A. 273, which holds bank negligent in sending note for collection to bank whose cashier is treasurer of corporation maker, without hearing from similar note previously sent.

Cited in note (53 L. R. A. 432) on effect on drawer's liability of delay in presenting check, where drawee remains solvent.

Distinguished in Kershaw v. Ladd, 34 Or. 387, 44 L. R. A. 241, footnote p. 236, 56 Pac. 402, holding custom of banks to send checks directly to drawee bank for collection, reasonable.

27 L. R. A. 252, BUTLER v. FITZGERALD, 43 Neb. 192, 47 Am. St. Rep. 741, 61 N. W. 640.

Followed on similar facts in Breed v. McCoy, 43 Neb. 208, 61 N. W. 644.

Right of dower or curtesy.

Cited in David Adler & Sons Clothing Co. v. Hellman, 55 Neb. 290, 75 N. W. 877, holding release of dower right a good consideration for transfer of absolute title to part of real estate of husband to wife; Pinkham v. Pinkham, 55 Neb. 732, 76 N. W. 411, holding widow entitled to dower in land deeded to husband before marriage, to take effect on his death; Wylie v. Charlton, 43 Neb. 852, 62 N. W. 220, holding prospective inchoate right of dower sufficient interest to prevent wife from testifying to conversation with deceased person to establish husband's right to land; Sorensen v. Sorensen, 56 Neb. 735, 77 N. W. 68, holding right of dower sufficient interest to prevent alleged widow from testifying as to conversation constituting verbal contract of marriage; Martin v. Abbott, 1 Herdman (Neb.) 61, 95 N. W. 356, holding dower not extinguished by execution sale of husband's real estate.

Cited in footnote to Haggerty v. Wagner, 39 L. R. A. 384, which holds wife's inchoate interest in husband's interest as cotenant of land subject to defeat by partition.

Distinguished in Turner v. Heinberg, 30 Ind. App. 618, 65 N. E. 294, denying right of surviving husband to redeem lands of wife, sold during her lifetime at judicial sale.

Application of rule caveat emptor.

Cited in Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 382, 68 Am. St. Rep. 608, 73 N. W. 738, holding purchaser at administrator's sale disclosing that deceased left a widow charged with notice of her right of dower; Peterborough Sav. Bank v. Pierce, 54 Neb. 719, 75 N. W. 20, holding one purchasing land from mortgagee charged with notice of unmatured note which unassigned mortgage secured; Pinckney v. Pinckney, 114 Iowa, 443, 87 N. W. 406, holding recording acts not applicable to unrecorded receipt for advancement.

Cited in footnote to Johnson v. Equitable Securities Co. 56 L. R. A. 933, which holds bona fide purchaser paying purchase money protected from unknown equities.

27 L. R. A. 257, BINGHAM v. MEARS, 4 N. D. 437, 61 N. W. 808.

27 L. R. A. 263, BIRMINGHAM MINERAL R. CO. v. PARSONS, 100 Ala. 662, 46 Am. St. Rep. 92, 13 So. 602.

Liabilities imposed on railroads by statute.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Murphree, 129 Ala. 434, 29 So. 592, denying right of tenant to maintain action against railroad company for failure to repair cattle guards.

Cited in footnotes to Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zerneck, 55 L. R. A. 610, which sustains statute making carrier liable for injury to passengers, not due to their criminal negligence or violation of express rule; Johnson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 744, which holds railroad company liable for horses killed on unfenced track.

27 L. R. A. 266, BEESLEY v. WHEELER, 103 Mich. 196, 61 N. W. 658.

Master's duty to furnish safe places and appliances.

Cited in Anderson v. Michigan C. R. Co. 107 Mich. 595, 65 N. W. 585, holding railroad company liable for injury to brakeman, due to depression in track; McDonald v. Michigan C. R. Co. 108 Mich. 12, 62 N. W. 597, holding railroad company liable for injury to brakeman, due to defect in push bar, discovered by engineer before accident; Petaja v. Aurora Iron Min. Co. 106 Mich. 468, 32 L. R. A. 438, 58 Am. St. Rep. 505, 64 N. W. 335, denying liability of master for injury to servant by falling of roof of mine chamber; Turner v. St. Clair Tunnel Co. 111 Mich. 582, 36 L. R. A. 137, 66 Am. St. Rep. 397, 70 N. W. 146, holding liability of master for injury to servant in Canadian portion of tunnel dependent upon law of Canada as to duty to furnish safe place to work; Thomas v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 114 Mich. 62, 72 N. W. 40, holding master liable for injury to servant, due to selection of unsuitable guy rope by foreman; Allen v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 346, 37 S. W. 171, denying liability of master for injury to servant, due to stepping on loose plank while repairing bridge; Kerr-Murray Mfg. Co. v. Hess, 38 C. C. A. 651, 98 Fed. 56, holding master liable for injury due to defective lumber furnished for scaffolding.

Injuries due to negligence of fellow servants.

Cited in Andre v. Winslow Bros. Elevator Co. 117 Mich. 563, 76 N. W. 86, denying liability of master for injury to servant while handing tools to foreman at work on elevator shaft; Frazer v. Stott, 120 Mich. 628, 79 N. W. 896, denying liability of master for injury to servant, due to misplacing of guide board in mill by another employee; Lepan v. Hall, 128 Mich. 526, 87 N. W. 619, denying liability of master for injury to servant, due to negligence of foreman directing work in sawmill; Callan v. Bull, 113 Cal. 605, 45 Pac. 1017, denying liability of master furnishing safe materials, for injury due to defectively constructed appliance used in building jetty.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in Schroeder v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 103 Mich. 216, 29 L. R. A. 323, 50 Am. St. Rep. 354, 61 N. W. 663, holding foreman of gang of men unloading and leveling dirt, fellow servant of members of the gang; Balhoff v. Michigan C. R. Co. 106 Mich. 613, 65 N. W. 592, holding brakeman not fellow servant of section men whose duty was to keep tracks safe; Findlay v. Russel Wheel & Foundry Co. 108 Mich. 290, 66 N. W. 50, holding foreman of department in car shops, assisting men in placing car on trucks, their fellow servant; Wellihan v. National Wheel Co. 128 Mich. 9, 87 N. W. 75, holding foreman starting spoke lathe to see if it worked right, fellow servant of lathe operator; Mikolajczak v. North American Chemical Co. 29 Mich. 85, 88 N. W. 75, holding workman assisting in breaking down salt, and department foreman in charge of the work, fellow servants.

Cited in note (50 L. R. A. 437, 439) on what servants are deemed to be in same common employment, apart from statutes, where no questions as to vice principalship arise.

Who are vice principals.

Cited in note (54 L. R. A. 111, 144, 149, 152) on vice principalship as determined with reference to character of act which caused injury.

27 L. R. A. 271, NEW ENGLAND TRUST CO. v. ABBOTT, 162 Mass. 148, 38 N. E. 432.

Corporation by-laws.

Cited in Audette v. L'Union St. Joseph, 178 Mass. 115, 59 N. E. 668, dismissing action for sick benefits because of failure to procure physician's sworn certificate, as required by by-laws; Barrett v. King, 181 Mass. 479, 63 N. E. 934, upholding by-law of corporation permitting directors to purchase stockholder's stock at same price offered by another prospective purchaser; Bronson Electric Co. v. Rheubottom, 122 Mich. 611, 81 N. W. 563, upholding validity of lien created by by-law on stock for debts of stockholder; Blue Mountain Forest Asso. v. Borrowe, 71 N. H. 74, 51 Atl. 670, holding stockholders bound by by-laws referred to in certificates of stock and made condition of issuance of same; Howe Grain & Mercantile Co. v. Jones, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 201, 51 S. W. 24, sustaining action to compel corporation to purchase its own stock, in accordance with provision of by-laws; Lane v. Albertson, 78 App. Div. 619, 79 N. Y. Supp. 947, construing clause in articles of joint stock association as not requiring executor to sell stock owned by deceased member of association.

Cited in footnotes to Ireland v. Globe Mill. & Reduction Co. 29 L. R. A. 429, which holds invalid, by-law giving corporation first right to purchase stock; Victor G. Bloede Co. v. Bloede, 33 L. R. A. 107, which holds unreasonable, by-law restricting transfer of stock without giving option to corporation and stockholders; Craig v. Hesperia Land & Water Co. 35 L. R. A. 306, which holds refusal to transfer stock on books not justified by existence of unpaid assessment; Wells v. Black, 37 L. R. A. 619, which holds by-law of savings bank declaring waiver of stockholders' liability void; Ireland v. Globe Mill. & Reduction Co. 38 L. R. A. 299, which holds contract by proposed stockholder to offer stock to corporation before offering to other purchaser not binding; Carter v. Producers' Oil Co. 39 L. R. A. 100, which holds right of member of limited partnership to purchase additional shares limited by rule requiring re-election to membership as to such shares; Spurgeon v. Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Co. 39 L. R. A. 701, which holds purchaser at sale of delinquent stock for assessments not affected by by-law restricting transfers.

Cited in notes (47 L. R. A. 261) on effect of transfer of shares of stock on liability for unpaid subscription; (50 L. R. A. 504, 508) on specific performance of contract for sale of stock in corporation; (61 L. R. A. 623, 633) on right of corporation to purchase its own shares of stock.

Public policy as affecting corporations and stockholders.

Cited in Smith v. San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. 115 Cal. 605, 35 L. R. A. 316, 56 Am. St. Rep. 119, 47 Pac. 582, upholding agreement between three prospective stockholders to vote stock at a unit for five years.

Distinguished in Chrisman-Sawyer Bkg. Co. v. Independence Mfg. Co. 168 Mo. 642, 68 S. W. 1026, holding unpaid stock subscriptions assets of corporation, of which creditor cannot be deprived by act of corporation or stockholder.

Specific performance of contract to transfer stock.

Cited in Jones v. Brown, 171 Mass. 324, 50 N. E. 648, holding equity action is proper remedy to compel specific performance of contract to transfer stock.

27 L. R. A. 279, BUDD v. UNITED CARRIAGE CO. 25 Or. 314, 35 Pac. 660.

Presumption of negligence from happening of event.

Cited in footnotes to Shafer v. Lacock, 29 L. R. A. 254, which holds negligence presumed from burning of house through fire set by sparks from fire-pot placed on roof by workmen; Whalen v. Consolidated Traction Co. 41 L. R. A. 836, which authorizes presumption of carrier's negligence, where passenger injured through defect in appliances, or preventable act or omission of servant; Springer v. Ford, 52 L. R. A. 930, which sustains presumption of negligence from injury to passenger by unexplained breaking of elevator appliance.

27 L. R. A. 284, MAULDIN v. GREENVILLE, 42 S. C. 293, 46 Am. St. Rep. 723. 20 S. E. 842.

Municipal licenses.

Cited in Hill v. Abbeville, 59 S. C. 403, 38 S. E. 11, upholding validity of occupation license ordinance.

Powers of municipality.

Cited in Crawfordsville v. Braden, 130 Ind. 159, 30 Am. St. Rep. 214, 28 N. E. 849, upholding power of municipality to furnish electric light to citizens in their private houses; Stehmeyer v. Charleston, 53 S. C. 283, 31 S. E. 322, holding city without power to contract for waterworks plant, to be paid for by assessments of lot owners on streets in which pipes are laid.

Municipal assessments.

Cited in footnotes to Cincinnati v. Batsche, 27 L. R. A. 536, which holds assessment on foot front plan valid and binding only as to such lots and lands as abut on the improvement; Reelfoot Lake Levee District v. Dawson, 34 L. R. A. 725, which holds tax on land alone, in levee district, void.

Cited in notes (28 L. R. A. 498) on charging expense of grading for sidewalk on abutting owner; (58 L. R. A. 355) on who is liable for expense of drainage.

Overruled in Maudlin v. Greenville, 53 S. C. 287, 43 L. R. A. 102, footnote p. 101, 69 Am. St. Rep. 855, 31 S. E. 252, denying validity of assessment of abutting owners for sidewalks and drains.

27 L. R. A. 290, HENDERSON v. JAMES, 52 Ohio St. 242, 39 N. E. 805.

Nature of habeas corpus proceeding.

Cited in State ex rel. Roberts v. Superior Court, 32 Wash. 146, 72 Pac. 1040, holding that appeal from judgment in habeas corpus proceeding must be governed by law relating to civil proceedings.

27 L. R. A. 294, BALTIMORE BREWERIES CO. v. RANSTEAD, 78 Md. 501, 28 Atl. 273.

Use of one's own property to injury of another.

Cited in footnotes to Defiance Water Co. v. Olinger, 32 L. R. A. 736, which holds proprietor liable for injury to guest of tenant from fall of standpipe; Skaggs v. Martinsville, 33 L. R. A. 781, which holds valid, ordinance prohibiting flow of water from well or spring on street; North Point Consol. Irrigation Co. v. Utah & S. L. Canal Co. 40 L. R. A. 851, which holds right to irrigate land subject to duty to take care not to injure others with seepage or waste water unfit for irrigation.

27 L. R. A. 296, EIGHMY v. UNION P. R. CO. 93 Iowa, 538, 61 N. W. 1056.

Liability of master or charitable hospital for negligence of physicians or servants.

Cited in York v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 98 Iowa, 553, 67 N. W. 574, denying liability of railroad company to employee for negligence of free physician; Maine v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 100 Iowa, 268, 70 N. W. 630, denying liability of railroad company for malpractice of its physician, selected with due care; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 141 Ind. 91, 27 L. R. A. 843, footnote p. 840, 50 Am. St. Rep. 313, 40 N. E. 138, holding corporation gratuitously furnishing medical services to employees liable only for care in selecting physician; Powers v. Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital, 47 C. C. A. 126, 109 Fed. 298, denying liability of charitable hospital to pay patient for negligence of nurse; Haggerty v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 100 Mo. App. 450, 74 S. W. 456, holding railroad company not liable for malpractice of physician in its relief department, if physicians selected with due care.

Cited in footnotes to Hearn v. Waterbury Hospital, 31 L. R. A. 224, which denies liability of charitable hospital for wrongful neglect of servants; Hannon v. Siegel-Cooper Co. 52 L. R. A. 429, which holds department store estopped to deny responsibility for malpractice of dentist employed therein.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 549) on duty of master to furnish medical aid to servant.

27 L. R. A. 298, FORD v. CHICAGO MILK SHIPPERS' ASSO. 155 Ill. 166, 39 N. E. 651.

Legal and illegal combinations and agreements.

Cited in National Lead Co. v. S. E. Grote Paint Store Co. 80 Mo. App. 270, holding that illegal combination cannot be operated under cloak of corporation purchasing its assets; State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 253, 62 L. R. A. 742, 85 N. W. 1046, holding combination of three publishers of newspapers to compel a fourth to reduce rates of advertising, criminal conspiracy; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 135, 29 C. C. A. 159, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 289, holding combination to restrict competition and control price of iron pipe in certain territory illegal.

Cited in footnotes to People v. Milk Exchange, 27 L. R. A. 437, which holds incorporated milk exchange, constituting combination to fix price of milk, illegal; National Harrow Co. v. Hench, 39 L. R. A. 299, which holds agreement by owner of patent with corporation organized by rival manufacturers, to sell no harrow for less than schedule price, invalid; People ex rel. Mellhany v. Chicago Live-Stock Exchange, 39 L. R. A. 373, which holds by-law of live-stock exchange, limiting number of solicitors member can employ, ground for forfeiting franchise; Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 52 L. R. A. 262, which holds void, agreement by persons controlling 90 per cent of sale of blue stone, to sell through common agent and maintain agreed prices; Com. v. Grinstead, 56 L. R. A. 709, which holds agreement not to resell goods at less than specified price not within statute for suppression of conspiracies; Brown v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. 57 L. R. A. 548, which sustains right to injunction against combination of merchants to prevent sales to other dealer unless he sells at fixed prices; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 62 L. R. A. 632, which sustains plan by which manufacturers of proprietary medicines shall sell at fixed prices, with rebate only to concerns which can be relied on to maintain selling price decided upon.

Cited in note (64 L. R. A. 695, 720, 721) on illegal trusts and modern anti-trust laws.

Collateral attack on illegal combination.

Cited in Lafayette Bridge Co. v. Streator, 105 Fed. 731, holding defense that plaintiff is illegal trust not available in action to recover contract price for building bridge.

Constitutionality of anti-trust law.

Cited in Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 621, 64 L. R. A. 766, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577, reaffirming constitutionality of Illinois anti-trust act of 1891; People ex rel. Akin v. Butler Street Foundry & Iron Co. 201 Ill. 280, 66 N. E. 349, holding amendment to Illinois anti-trust act, requiring yearly affidavit of officers of corporation stating whether such corporations are connected in any way with illegal trusts, constitutional.

Impairment of contract.

Cited in Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co. 187 U. S. 616, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206, holding contract not impaired by statute imposing condition upon transaction of business by foreign corporation in state where statute enacted before, although taking effect after, contract was made.

27 L. R. A. 303, ROBINSON v. LEACH, 67 Vt. 128, 48 Am. St. Rep. 807, 31 Atl. 32.

27 L. R. A. 305, MORRIS v. METALLINE LAND CO. 164 Pa. 326, 44 Am. St. Rep. 614, 30 Atl. 240.

Forfeiture of stock.

Followed without discussion in Morris v. Land Co. 166 Pa. 352, 31 Atl. 114. Cited in Schwab v. Frisco Min. & Mill. Co. 21 Utah, 266, 60 Pac. 940, holding stock not forfeited by failure to pay assessment levied by de facto directors.

Cited in footnote to Aldine Mfg. Co. v. Phillips, 42 L. R. A. 531, which denies right to foreclose in equity, corporate lien on stock for stockholder's debt.

Cited in note (47 L. R. A. 263) on effect of transfer of stock on liability for unpaid subscription.

Necessity of notice of call on stock subscription.

Cited in footnote to Germania Iron Min. Co. v. King, 36 L. R. A. 51, which holds by-law prescribing notice of call for instalment of stock subscription, condition precedent to call.

Partnership associations.

Cited in footnote to Edwards v. Warren Linoline & Gasoline Works, 38 L. R. A. 791, which holds partnership association organized under laws of Pennsylvania regarded in Massachusetts as partnership instead of corporation.

27 L. R. A. 313, MANDEL v. SWAN LAND & CATTLE CO. 154 Ill. 177, 45 Am. St. Rep. 124, 40 N. E. 462.

Followed on substantially same facts in Snydacher v. Swan Land & Cattle Co. 154 Ill. 221, 40 N. E. 466.

Conflict of laws as to foreign corporations.

Cited in Nashua Sav. Bank v. Anglo-American Land-Mortg. & Agency Co. 48 C. C. A. 18, 108 Fed. 767, holding assumpsit proper form of action in United States to enforce liability of stockholder for call on stock of corporation formed under English companies act; Ware Cattle Co. v. Anderson, 107 Iowa, 234, 77 N. W. 1026, upholding right of foreign corporation, without permit to do business in state, to maintain action against nonresident on contract made outside state; Crofoot v. Thatcher, 19 Utah, 222, 75 Am. St. Rep. 725, 57 Pac. 171, holding demand note for unpaid stock subscription, made in Nebraska, to be interpreted according to laws of that state.

Cited in note (34 L. R. A. 738) on right to enforce stockholder's liability outside of state of incorporation.

Proof of records.

Cited in Chicago v. English, 80 Ill. App. 166, holding certificate of comptroller not competent evidence of indebtedness of city; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bender, 69 Ill. App. 265, holding uncertified copies of ordinances admissible, where witness testifies he has compared them with originals and that they are correct; Cantwell v. Stockmen's Bldg. L. & Sav. Union, 88 Ill. App. 249, holding copy of resolution of corporation directors admissible where proved by credible witness.

What constitutes "doing business" in state.

Cited in Earle v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 127 Fed. 241, holding through shipment by foreign carrier and maintenance of agency in state for solicitation of through freight not transaction of business within state so as to authorize service of process.

27 L. R. A. 322, PEABODY v. DEWEY, 153 Ill. 657, 39 N. E. 977.

Contracts for payment in coin.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 520) on special contracts and obligations to make payment in gold and silver.

27 L. R. A. 324, HOLBROOK v. FORD, 153 Ill. 633, 46 Am. St. Rep. 917, 39 N. E. 1091.

Foreign receivers and receiverships.

Cited in Corn Exch. Bank v. Rockwell, 58 Ill. App. 511, and Frowert v. Blank, 205 Pa. 303, 54 Atl. 1600, holding claims of domestic creditors are to be preferred over claims of foreign receivers of insolvent corporations.

Cited in footnotes to Castleman v. Templeman, 41 L. R. A. 367, which denies receiver's power to consent to decree in other state for payment of assessments by stockholders to creditors; Ward v. Connecticut Pipe Mfg. Co. 42 L. R. A. 706, which requires attachment creditor to account for fair value of goods at time of attachment before sharing in benefit of receivership in other state; Linnville v. Hadden, 43 L. R. A. 222, which holds nonresident creditor of foreign corporation in hands of receiver entitled to same protection as resident creditors against receiver's claim to property.

Situs of debt or property.

Cited in Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 596, 36 L. R. A. 642, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631, holding situs of debt to be at domicile of owner of the credit; Upson v. Davis, 110 Ill. App. 378, holding bonds belonging to nonresident not property situated in Illinois, within statute relating to probate of wills.

27 L. R. A. 330, LANGHAMMER v. MUNTER, 80 Md. 518, 31 Atl. 300.

Voting residence.

Cited in Turner v. Crosby, 85 Md. 181, 36 Atl. 760, holding voting residence in one county not lost by absence therefrom for business for considerable periods of time; Black v. Pate, 136 Ala. 607, 34 So. 844, holding negroes, not shown to have resided outside of state, legal voters of district in which they had resided more than thirty days before election.

Cited in footnote to Jones v. Skinner, 40 L. R. A. 752, which denies purser's power by living on boat, to change voting residence to other district of same city.

27 L. R. A. 332, FIRST NAT. BANK v. BUCKHANNON BANK, 80 Md. 475, 31 Atl. 302.

Negligence in collection of checks and drafts.

Cited in Gregg v. Beane, 69 Vt. 29, 37 Atl. 248, holding drawer of check released by negligence of payee in forwarding it through various collecting banks; Herider v. Phoenix Loan Asso. 82 Mo. App. 434, holding bank negligent in sending check for collection in indirect course to bank.

Cited in footnote to Bank of Gilby v. Farnsworth, 38 L. R. A. 843, which holds drawer of draft lost in mails during transportation from payee for collection discharged by delay in discovering loss.

27 L. R. A. 335, DECKER v. SCHULZE, 11 Wash. 47, 48 Am. St. Rep. 858, 39 Pa. 261.

Rescission of executed sale of land.

Cited in footnote to McGhee v. Bell, 59 L. R. A. 761, which sustains equity jurisdiction to cancel trust deed by one induced by fraud to take deed for tract containing only three fourths of quantity represented.

27 L. R. A. 340, WOODWARD-HOLMES CO. v. NUDD, 58 Minn. 236, 49 Am. St. Rep. 503, 59 N. W. 1010.

Partnership real estate.

Cited in Sternberg v. Larkin, 58 Kan. 206, 37 L. R. A. 197, 48 Pac. 861, holding real estate used for partnership purposes, to be treated as personal property upon dissolution of partnership by death; Coolidge v. Burke, 69 Ark. 243, 62 S. W. 583, holding deceased partner's interest in lands taken by surviving partner for debts goes as realty to heirs.

Cited in footnote to Darrow v. Calkins, 48 L. R. A. 299, which holds intent to change grantor's interest from land to surplus shown by partner's conveyance of undivided half interest in lands to copartner for partnership uses.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 449) as to when real estate will be considered partnership property; (28 L. R. A. 86) on rights of partners inter se in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 129) on position of surviving partners in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 173) on rights and position of creditors, purchasers, and other third parties in partnership real estate.

27 L. R. A. 356, Re WEBB, 89 Wis. 354, 46 Am. St. Rep. 846, 62 N. W. 177.

Criminal sentences; suspension.

Cited in Miller v. Evans, 115 Iowa, 103, 56 L. R. A. 102, footnote p. 101, 91 Am. St. Rep. 143, 88 N. W. 198, denying defendant's right to relief for failure to execute mittimus until lapse of time of imprisonment, under judgment sentencing to imprisonment on failure to pay fine; Neal v. State, 104 Ga. 512, 42 L. R. A. 192, footnote p. 190, 69 Am. St. Rep. 175, 30 S. E. 858, holding void, attempt to suspend execution of sentence after pronouncing it.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Crook, 29 L. R. A. 260, which holds power of court after suspension of sentence not lost by committing for refusal to pay costs as ordered; Weber v. State, 41 L. R. A. 472, which sustains power of court to suspend sentence and set aside suspension at any time during term; People ex rel. Boenert v. Barrett, 63 L. R. A. 82, which denies court's power indefinitely to suspend sentence after conviction; Miller v. State, 40 L. R. A. 109, which upholds statute for indeterminate sentence of criminals.

27 L. R. A. 357, BALLIN v. MERCHANTS' EXCH. BANK, 89 Wis. 278, 46 Am. St. Rep. 834, 61 N. W. 1118.

Appeal from order settling receiver's accounts in Speiser v. Merchants' Exch. Bank, 110 Wis. 510, 86 N. W. 243.

Insolvency and "trust fund" doctrine.

Cited in Ford v. Hill, 92 Wis. 193, 53 Am. St. Rep. 902, 66 N. W. 115, holding corporate property not converted into trust fund by mere fact of insolvency; Gilman v. Gross, 97 Wis. 228, 72 N. W. 885, upholding power of going corporation to secure debt by delivery of its stock as collateral security; Barth v. Koetting, 99 Wis. 247, 75 N. W. 395, holding assets of insolvent going bank not trust fund for creditors; Slack v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 103 Wis. 63, 74 Am. St. Rep. 841, 79 N. W. 51, upholding right of creditors to proceed against insolvent corporation by ordinary process of law; Goetz v. Knie, 103 Wis. 369, 79 N. W. 401, upholding power of corporation to make voluntary assignment for benefit of creditors; Cass v. Sutherland, 98 Wis. 553, 74 N. W. 337, upholding judgment of court directing sale on execution of land in hands of receiver; Boyd v. Mutual Fire Asso. 116 Wis. 173, 61 L. R. A. 926, 96 Am. St. Rep. 948, 90 N. W. 1086, holding on rehearing that corporation officers and directors not trustees of express trust so as to prevent them from taking benefit of statute of limitations, where liable for misfeasance or malfeasance in office.

— Preferences to officers or directors.

Cited in Hinz v. Van Dusen, 95 Wis. 508, 70 N. W. 657, holding knowledge of insolvency and impending suspension necessary to be shown to impeach preference of directors; South Bend Chilled Plow Co. v. George C. Cribb Co. 97 Wis. 236, 72 N. W. 749, upholding power of going corporation to prefer directors as creditors; Rowe v. Leuthold, 101 Wis. 246, 77 N. W. 153, denying power of insolvent corporation to prefer officers and directors over general creditors; Corey v. Wadsworth, 118 Ala. 534, 44 L. R. A. 782, 25 So. 503 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding power of corporation to prefer directors over other creditors.

Cited in footnotes to Illinois Steel Co. v. O'Donnell, 31 L. R. A. 265, which holds valid, securities given to directors by insolvent going concern for money loaned at the time; Adams & Westlake Co. v. Deyette, 31 L. R. A. 497, which denies right to prefer debt for money borrowed by corporation to purchase its own stock.

Pleading.

Cited in Kollock v. Scribner, 98 Wis. 118, 73 N. W. 770, holding facts entitling defendant to relief against codefendant should be set up in answer.

27 L. R. A. 362, SEAMANS v. KNAPP, S. & CO. CO. 89 Wis. 171, 61 N. W. 757.

Contracts of insurance.

Cited in Commonwealth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. William Knabe & Co. Mfg. Co. 171 Mass. 270, 50 N. E. 516, holding policy issued on property in Maryland through insurance brokers, applying at request of insured to Massachusetts insurer, Massachusetts contract; St. Clara Female Academy v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. 101 Wis. 466, 77 N. W. 893, holding ordinary insurance contract to be mere contract of indemnity.

Cited in footnotes to Seamans v. Temple Co. 28 L. R. A. 430, which holds that insurance contract through mails by corporation not authorized to do business does not support action against insured for assessment; Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 36 L. R. A. 271, which holds that express provision in insurance contract that it shall be construed to have been made in certain state makes it subject to laws of that state.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 835, 852) on conflict of laws as to contracts of insurance.

Distinguished in Rose v. Kimberby & C. Co. 89 Wis. 549, 27 L. R. A. 557, 46 Am. St. Rep. 855, 62 N. W. 526, holding contract for insurance made outside on property within state, violation of statute forbidding company to take risks directly or indirectly in state.

Residence of corporation.

Cited in Combes v. Keyes, 89 Wis. 308, 27 L. R. A. 373, 46 Am. St. Rep. 839, 62 N. W. 89, holding that corporation must dwell in state of its creation.

Broker as agent of insurer.

Cited in footnote to United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 47 L. R. A. 450, which holds insurance broker authorized to procure certain amount of insurance in companies to be chosen by him not insurer's agent.

27 L. R. A. 365, BLOCK v. MILWAUKEE STREET R. CO. 89 Wis. 371, 46 Am. St. Rep. 849, 61 N. W. 1101.

Expert testimony.

Cited in Viellesse v. Green Bay, 110 Wis. 163, 85 N. W. 665, holding admission of expert testimony as to probability of plaintiff's injuries being caused by stepping into hole not reversible error; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Banks, 132 Ala. 488, 31 So. 573, holding answer to hypothetical question based upon relevant facts established by evidence, properly admitted.

— As to probable duration or consequences of injury.

Cited in Viellesse v. Green Bay, 110 Wis. 163, 85 N. W. 665, upholding admission of expert testimony as to probability of permanency of plaintiff's injury; Nichols v. Brabazon, 94 Wis. 551, 69 N. W. 342, upholding admission of physician's testimony as to probability of plaintiff's recovery from injury; Collins v. Janesville, 99 Wis. 465, 75 N. W. 88, holding testimony that plaintiff was "quite likely" to be bothered by injury for several years, and "might be" always, improper; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Church (Neb.) 57 L. R. A. 908, 90 N. W. 878, holding physician's testimony as to probable duration of confinement had he reached mother at certain time, admissible; Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Moore, 110 Ill. App. 310, holding evidence as to probability of injury producing epilepsy incompetent upon question of damages.

Proximate cause of injury.

Cited in Davis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 93 Wis. 483, 33 L. R. A. 658, 57 Am. St. Rep. 935, 67 N. W. 16, holding special verdict that ties were not in good condition insufficient to show such condition to be proximate cause of injury caused by derailment of train; Schiffier v. Chicago & N. R. Co. 96 Wis. 147, 65 Am. St. Rep. 35, 71 N. W. 97, holding failure to stop train not proximate cause of injuries received by jumping therefrom; Andrews v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 96 Wis. 356, 71 N. W. 372, holding negligence not proximate cause of injury, unless such injury could have been reasonably expected to result from the negligence; Deisenrieter v. Kraus-Merkel Malting Co. 97 Wis. 286, 72 N. W. 735, holding instruction that proximate cause is the direct and efficient cause producing the result, erroneous; O'Connor v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 92 Wis. 615, 66 N. W. 795, holding complaint not amendable to include injury from fire a mile distant from that specified in original complaint, unless defendant's negligence proximate cause of resulting injury; Huber v. La Crosse City R. Co. 92 Wis. 646, 31 L. R. A. 587, 53 Am. St. Rep. 940, 66 N. W. 708, holding negligent charging of span wire attached to iron pole not proximate cause of injury to lineman climbing wooden pole near by and coming in contact with wire and iron pole; New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. McEwen, 49 La. Ann. 1197, 38 L. R. A. 140, 22 So. 675, holding floating logs driven in storm against revetment not proximate cause of injury thereto; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 65 Kan. 399, 58 L. R. A. 403, footnote p. 399, 69 Pac. 338, holding placing on platform, of heavy doors which were blown on track by severe gale not proximate cause of resulting derailment of engine; Saxton v. Missouri P. R. Co. 98 Mo. App. 501, 72 S. W. 717, holding failure to hold train at station not proximate cause of injury resulting from passenger's attempt to step off while it was in motion.

Damages for permanent injury.

Cited in McBride v. St. Paul City R. Co. 72 Minn. 293, 75 N. W. 231; Boelter v. Ross Lumber Co. 103 Wis. 330, 79 N. W. 243; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. DeClow, 61 C. C. A. 35, 124 Fed. 143,—holding that continued or permanent disability must be reasonably certain to result from injury to authorize assessment of damages therefor; Raymond v. Keseberg, 91 Wis. 195, 64 N. W. 861, holding erroneous, instruction that plaintiff entitled to recover for suffering he "may have to endure;" Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Exchange, 91 Wis. 368, 30 L. R. A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 912, 64 N. W. 1041, holding erroneous, instruction that plaintiff is entitled to recover for suffering she may be "likely to," or there is "reasonable probability" she will, endure; Groundwater v. Washington, 92 Wis. 61, 65 N. W. 871, holding instruction that for permanent injuries plaintiff could recover what it was reasonably to be expected he could earn, erroneous; Bailey v. Centerville, 108 Iowa, 27, 78 N. W. 831, holding instruction that jury ascertain whether injury would "probably" continue not erroneous when charge otherwise covered ground as to reasonable certainty of permanent injury; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Davidson, 22 C. C. A. 313, 46 U. S. App. 300, 76 Fed. 524, holding use of words "may" or "likely to," in regard to future suffering, when jury not misled as to reasonable certainty of permanent injury, not reversible error.

Care required in use of electricity.

Cited in Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 377, 31 L. R. A. 570, 41 Pac. 499, holding instruction that electric company was bound to use highest care and diligence to prevent accidents not prejudicial error; City Electric Street R. Co. v. Conery, 61 Ark. 386, 54 Am. St. Rep. 262, 33 S. W. 426, holding street railway company bound to use reasonable care to prevent injury by escape of electricity from its wires.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 584) on liability for injuries by electric wires in highways.

27 L. R. A. 369, COMBES v. MILWAUKEE & M. R. Co. 89 Wis. 297, 46 Am. St. Rep. 839, 62 N. W. 89.

Dissolution or liquidation of corporations.

Cited in Atty. Gen. v. Superior & Ct. C. R. Co. 93 Wis. 610, 67 N. W. 1138, holding that suspension of its lawful and ordinary business for one year does not itself dissolve corporation; Stolze v. Manitowoc Terminal Co. 100 Wis. 212, 75 N. W. 987, holding that insolvency and receivership do not of themselves operate as dissolution of corporation; Fitts v. National Life Assn. 130 Ala. 415, 30 So. 374, holding that corporation legally dissolved cannot be sued; Frankfort v. Deposit Bank, 120 Fed. 167, holding bill of review to set aside decree in favor of corporation not maintainable after dissolution of corporation.

Cited in footnotes to Marion Phosphate Co. v. Perry, 33 L. R. A. 252, which holds judgment against corporation after dissolution invalid; Schayne v. Evening Post Pub. Co. 55 L. R. A. 777, which holds libel suit against dissolved corporation properly revived against trustees.

Distinguished in Pritchard v. Barnes, 101 Wis. 90, 76 N. W. 1106, holding national bank, after voluntary liquidation, still capable of suing and being sued.

Transfer or surrender of corporate rights or franchises.

Cited in State ex rel. Rose v. Superior Court, 105 Wis. 672, 48 L. R. A. 827, 81 N. W. 1046, holding that corporate rights and franchises can only be sold, assigned, and transferred when and as authorized by statute.

Distinguished in Wright v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. 95 Wis. 38, 36 L. R. A. 50, 60 Am. St. Rep. 74, 69 N. W. 791, holding street railway franchise not presumed surrendered by nonuser on two blocks for four years and eight months.

27 L. R. A. 374, SWEETSER v. MATSON, 153 Ill. 568, 46 Am. St. Rep. 911, 30 N. E. 1086.

Loss of lien of execution.

Cited in Western Union Cold Storage Co. v. Rose, 60 Ill. App. 456, holding lien of execution lost as to junior liens, where creditor relieves officer of duty of making levy; McHale v. Westover, 101 Ill. App. 278, holding preference given to lien of subsequent chattel mortgage by creditor's consent to postponement of execution sale.

Judgment on stipulated facts.

Cited in People use of Sterling v. Huffman, 182 Ill. 410, 55 N. E. 981, holding finding and judgment of appellate court on stipulated facts not binding on supreme court.

27 L. R. A. 383, HOMESTEAD STREET R. CO. v. PITTSBURG & H. ELECTRIC STREET R. CO. 166 Pa. 162, 30 Atl. 950, 955.

Railway franchises and rights thereunder.

Followed without special discussion in Long v. Homestead Street R. Co. 166 Pa. 176, 30 Atl. 955.

Cited in Philadelphia & M. R. Co.'s Petition, 187 Pa. 129, 42 W. N. C. 422, 40 Atl. 967, holding new company without right to construct railway on road-bed covered by franchise of turnpike company; Coatesville & D. Street R. Co. v. Uwchlan Street R. Co. 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 525, holding railway, in failing to get consent of municipality to use of streets, powerless to enjoin another railway, chartered later, from building in same streets; West Chester R. Co. v. Rock Glen Street R. Co. 4 Dauphin Co. Rep. 207, 25 Pa. Co. Ct. 560, refusing charter to proposed corporation desiring to lay track in streets included in filed extensions of routes of existing corporation; Babcock v. Scranton Traction Co. 1 Lack. Legal News, 228, holding that under act of 1889 but one railway franchise can be granted for any street; Com. ex rel. Elkin v. Sycamore Street R. Co. 30 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 337. 3 Dauphin Co. Rep. 104, denying right of traction company under act of 1889 to exclusive use of bridge over river; Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 733, denying right of municipality to revoke franchise of railway company after giving consent to use of streets; Com. ex rel. Elkin v. Uwchlan Street R. Co. 203 Pa. 613, 53 Atl. 513, Affirming 8 Northampton Co. Rep. 223, denying right of company to franchise for streets included in resolution of extension previously filed by another company; Coatesville & D. Street R. Co. v. West Chester R. Co. 206 Pa. 45, 55 Atl. 844, denying right of old company to extend lines over streets included in charter of new company during two-year period allowed for construction; VanVoorhis v. Pittsburg & C. Street R. Co. 34 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 153, holding that municipality cannot grant franchise to railroad company to lay tracks in streets not included in company's charter; Butler Railway Cos. 28 Pa. Co. Ct. 136, holding that extension of route of railroad company pending decision of governor upon previous charter application for franchise covering same route will defeat right to charter; Allen v. Clausen, 114 Wis. 253, 90 N. W. 181, holding authorization of municipality to grant railway franchises only to corporations excludes power to confer one on individuals.

Cited in footnote to Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 35 L. R. A. 859, which holds power to grant exclusive privilege for street railways not conferred on city by statute.

Distinguished in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Greensburg & N. Electric Street R. Co. 176 Pa. 576, 36 L. R. A. 846, upholding right of passenger railway, under statute, to build through streets of boroughs and townships and over private property.

Who may question ultra vires acts.

Cited in Seattle Gas & Electric Co. v. Citizens' Light & P. Co. 123 Fed. 596, upholding right of private individual to invoke want of charter power against acts of corporation which would do him irreparable injury.

Estoppel to deny constitutionality of act.

Cited in Philadelphia, M. & S. Street R. Co.'s Petition, 203 Pa. 368, 53 Atl. 191, holding that street railroad company may assail constitutionality of section of act under which it was incorporated.

27 L. R. A. 388, COM. v. HARMEL, 166 Pa. 89, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 89, 30 Atl. 1036.

Police power with reference to commerce.

Cited in footnote to Burrows v. Delta Transp. Co. 29 L. R. A. 468, which sustains validity of state statute requiring fire screens on vessels burning wood.

— Regulation of hawking, peddling, and other occupations.

Cited in Com. v. Percival, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 613, and Com. v. Dunham, 191 Pa. 75, 44 W. N. C. 102, 43 Atl. 84, Affirming 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 76, upholding constitutionality of acts requiring license for hawking and peddling; Com. v. Swift & Co. 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 574, 6 Pa. Dist. R. 665, holding foreign corporation with place of business in sister state liable to pay mercantile tax required for sale of meal and lard; Burnell v. Clark, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 102, holding act of 1859, imposing penalties for selling goods at auction, unconstitutional; Com. v. De-inno, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 372, upholding constitutionality of act forbidding hawking and peddling, except by persons selling goods of their own manufacture; South Bethlehem v. Hackett, C. & Co. 12 Lanc. L. Rev. 200, holding ordinance prohibiting transient unlicensed mercantile business unconstitutional; Brownback v. North Wales (Pa.) 49 L. R. A. 446, 45 Atl. 660, Affirming 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 229, 44 W. N. C. 259, Which Reversed 7 Pa. Dist. R. 326, 14 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 81, 16 Lanc. L. Rev. 151, holding valid as to residents, ordinance requiring license for sale of goods on street, or by soliciting orders from house to house.

Cited in footnotes to South Bend v. Martin, 29 L. R. A. 531, which holds ordinance imposing license on peddlers not interference with commerce as to peddling of chairs imported before employment begun; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 35 L. R. A. 497, which sustains state statute requiring every company selling sewing machines in state to pay license tax; State v. Coop, 41 L. R. A. 501, which holds purchase of frame for portrait in accordance with option included in order for making portrait in other state not within statute against peddling; Re Wilson, 48 L. R. A. 417, which holds void as applied to sale of original packages, territorial statute requiring license for sale of coal oil.

Sales of personal property.

Cited in Goss Printing Press Co. v. Jordan, 171 Pa. 478, 44 W. N. C. 177, 32 Atl. 1031, holding that executory contract of sale may be changed into bailment, so as to prevent seizure of property under execution by vendee's creditors.

27 L. R. A. 390, STURGIS v. KOUNTZ, 165 Pa. 358, 30 Atl. 976.

Proximate cause of injury.

Cited in Webster v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. 201 Pa. 284, 50 Atl. 964, holding broken timber, knocking servant under car wheels, proximate cause of resulting injury; Hoehle v. Allegheny Heating Co. 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 29, 28 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 68, 40 W. N. C. 557, holding question whether shutting off of natural gas proximate cause of death from pneumonia, one for jury; Willis v. Providence Telegram Pub. Co. 20 R. I. 287, 38 Atl. 947, holding collision frightening plaintiff's horse, proximate cause of injury caused by throwing plaintiff against shafts of wagon while trying to hold horse; Maryland Clay Co. v. Goodnow, 95 Md. 353, 51 Atl. 292 (dissenting opinion by Pearce, J.), who holds lack of proper bumper, allowing standing cars to be pushed over trestle by collision with runaway cars, proximate cause of resulting injury to servant.

Cited in footnote to Wood v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 199, which holds failure to give warning of approach of train not proximate cause of injury to one struck by body of another person hit by train.

27 L. R. A. 392, STATE ex rel. INDEPENDENT DIST. TELEG. CO. v. SECOND JUDICIAL DIST. COURT, 15 Mont. 324, 48 Am. St. Rep. 682, 39 Pac. 316.

Right to appointment of receiver.

Cited in State ex rel. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Second Judicial Dist. Court, 22 Mont. 239, 56 Pac. 219, and State ex rel. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Second Judicial Dist. Court, 22 Mont. 382, 56 Pac. 687, upholding right of shareholder of corporation to appointment of receiver pending charges of fraud against trustees; Vila v. Grand Island E. L. I. & C. S. Co. (Neb.) 63 L. R. A. 802, 97 N. W. 613, holding equity courts without jurisdiction, in absence of statute, to appoint receiver of corporation on application of private parties.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. St. Louis, K. & S. R. Co. v. Wear, 33 L. R. A. 341, which denies right to have temporary receiver appointed, without affording hearing to party affected; Sternberg v. Wolff, 39 L. R. A. 762, which authorizes appointment of receiver of trading corporation in case of deadlock from dissensions of stockholders.

27 L. R. A. 398, WHITE v. PROVIDENCE SAV. LIFE ASSUR. SOC. 163 Mass. 108, 39 N. E. 771.

Warranties or representations by insured.

Cited in Levie v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 163 Mass. 118, 39 N. E. 792, holding questions of truth or falsity of statement in application, and of intent to deceive, for jury; Hogan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 164 Mass. 449, 41 N. E. 663, holding evidence admissible to show statement in application was true, although proof of death signed by plaintiff tended to show it was untrue; Stocker v. Boston Mut. Life Asso. 170 Mass. 225, 49 N. E. 116, holding provisions of Mass. Stat. 1887, chap. 214, § 21, applicable to assessment insurance companies; Dolan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 173 Mass. 198, 53 N. E. 398, holding term "misrepresentation" includes representations made in such form as to constitute warranties; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. McDaniel, 25 Ind. App. 621, 57 N. E. 645, holding untrue statement in application that applicant had not been attended or treated by a physician, material; Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 94 Va. 153, 36 L. R. A. 273, 64 Am. St. Rep. 715, 26 S. E. 421, holding statutory rule for regulation of contracts of insurance, part of contract; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Miller, 34 C. C. A. 219, 63 U. S. App. 717, 92 Fed. 71, holding insurer and insured cannot contract as to what statements are material to defeat statute; Nugent v. Greenfield Life Asso. 172 Mass. 280, 52 N. E. 440, holding defense of false statements in application properly refused, where copy of application annexed to policy was inaccurate; Dwyer v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 72 N. H. 574, 58 Atl. 502, holding life policy avoided by falsity of statement warranted to be true, and which parties agreed should constitute material part of contract; Continental Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitaker (Tenn.) 64 L. R. A. 454, 79 S. W. 119, holding statute providing that policies shall not be avoided for falsity of representations or warranties not made with intent to deceive, justifiable exercise of police power.

Cited in footnotes to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Simpson, 28 L. R. A. 765, which L. R. A. AU.—VOL. III.—62.

holds frequent sick headaches for several months, though temporary and without effect on general health, sufficient to constitute a breach of warranty against severe, protracted, or frequent headache; Barnes v. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. 45 L. R. A. 264, which holds person in bed with cold may be "in good health" within meaning of policy, though pneumonia, terminating fatally, sets in soon after; Globe Mut. L. Ins. Asso. v. Wagner, 52 L. R. A. 649, which holds policy not avoided by false statement that none of applicant's brothers dead, unless known to be false; Black v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 61 L. R. A. 500, which holds injury not bodily infirmity, as matter of law, unless physical health of insured affected.

27 L. R. A. 401, GATE CITY BLDG. & L. ASSO. v. NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, 126 Mo. 82, 47 Am. St. Rep. 633, 28 S. W. 633.

Who are purchasers for value.

Cited in Dymock v. Midland Nat. Bank, 67 Mo. App. 103, holding bank receiving draft attached to bill of lading for collection, proceeds to be applied to depositor's indebtedness, purchaser for value; American Valley Co. v. Wyman, 92 Mo. App. 299, holding note broker receiving notes for sale not bona fide purchaser of same for value, so as to defeat equities of third parties.

Who may indorse commercial paper.

Cited in footnotes to Auten v. Manistee Nat. Bank, 47 L. R. A. 329, which holds bank cashier authorized to indorse paper for bank; Fay v. Slaughter, 56 L. R. A. 564, which denies authority of agent empowered to indorse principal's checks for deposit, to ratify deposit of checks received for securities on which agent has forged transfers; Jackson Paper Mfg. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 59 L. R. A. 657, which denies implied authority of superintendent and manager of mill to indorse paper given in payment of mill accounts.

Power of building association to issue negotiable paper.

Cited in note (43 L. R. A. 420) on power of building association to issue negotiable paper.

Check as assignment.

Cited in Young v. Bank of Princeton, 97 Mo. App. 584, 71 S. W. 713, holding that depositor's check on hand, credited to payee by bank, operated as assignment.

27 L. R. A. 409, McMULLAN v. DICKINSON CO. 60 Minn. 156, 51 Am. St. Rep. 511, 62 N. W. 120.

Report of second appeal in 63 Minn. 406, 65 N. W. 661.

Damages for breach of contract of employment.

Cited in Smith v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 60 Minn. 335, 62 N. W. 302, holding damages not recoverable beyond date of trial in action for wrongful discharge of servant; Menges v. Milton Piano Co. 96 Mo. App. 617, 70 S. W. 728, upholding right of plaintiff to successive actions for separate breaches of contract by sales of pianos in his territory.

Cited in footnote to Hildebrand v. American Fine Art Co. 53 L. R. A. 826, which sustains right to recover pro rata on entire contract of employment terminated by employer for cause.

Disapproved in Lee v. Dow, 71 N. H. 328, 51 Atl. 1072; Hamilton v. Love, 152 Ind. 647, 71 Am. St. Rep. 384, 53 N. E. 181, upholding right of wrongfully discharged servant immediately to recover damages to end of term.

27 L. R. A. 412, STATE v. HOSKINS, 60 Minn. 168, 62 N. W. 270.

27 L. R. A. 414, FRERE v. VON SCHOELER, 47 La. Ann. 324, 16 So. 808.

Regulations affecting interstate commerce.

Cited in footnotes to San Bernardino v. Southern P. Co. 29 L. R. A. 327, which denies power to impose license tax on right to operate branch forming part of interstate railroad line; Burrows v. Delta Transp. Co. 29 L. R. A. 468, which sustains state statute requiring fire screens on vessels burning wood in state; St. Louis v. Consolidated Coal Co. 51 L. R. A. 850, which holds void, city ordinance requiring license fee for privilege of towing in to harbor, boats having coasting license under United States authority.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 693) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause.

27 L. R. A. 416, GRAHAM v. ST. CHARLES STREET R. CO. 47 La. Ann. 214, 49 Am. St. Rep. 366, 16 So. 806.

Report of second appeal, affirming judgment against foreman and reversing judgment against railroad, in Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1656, 49 Am. St. Rep. 436, 18 So. 707.

Injury by unlawful combinations.

Cited in Ertz v. Produce Exchange, 79 Minn. 145, 48 L. R. A. 92, footnote p. 90, 79 Am. St. Rep. 433, 81 N. W. 737, holding malicious, conspiracy to injure dealer by inducing other people not to deal with him; Chiatovich v. Hanchett, 96 Fed. 684, holding malicious attempt by employers to influence employees not to trade with third person, actionable; Martell v. White, 185 Mass. 262, 64 L. R. A. 260, 69 N. E. 1085, holding action maintainable by quarry owner against members of voluntary associations enforcing by-law forbidding them to deal with him.

Cited in footnotes to Beck v. Railway Teamsters' Protective Union, 42 L. R. A. 407, which holds boycott by use of pickets and boycotting circulars unlawful; Downs v. Bennett, 55 L. R. A. 560, which denies right of one only remotely affected, to injunction against fining or expelling member for violation of by-law with nonmembers or those dealing with them; Brown v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. 57 L. R. A. 548, which sustains right to injunction against combination of merchants to prevent sales to other dealer unless he sells at fixed prices.

Cited in note (62 L. R. A. 677, 708) on effect of bad motive to make actionable what would otherwise not be.

27 L. R. A. 418, MURDOCK v. WATERMAN, 145 N. Y. 55, 64 N. Y. S. R. 520, 39 N. E. 829.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in Bouton v. Hill, 4 App. Div. 255, 38 N. Y. Supp. 498, holding indorsement on note as paid, of amount of reduction agreed to be allowed maker, where amount was in dispute, sufficiently to take note out of statute of limitations though indorsed as of date of note; Knapp v. Crane, 14 App. Div. 124, 43 N. Y. Supp. 513, holding that payment on mortgage must be made by party liable, or his agent, to extend time for suing thereon; Grovenor v. Signor, 10 N. D. 510, 88 N. W. 278; Martin v. Hyde, 19 App. Div. 491, 46 N. Y. Supp. 613, holding that payment on joint note by one of the makers on his own account does not extend statute as to the other; Burdick v. Hicks, 29 App. Div. 207, 51 N. Y. Supp. 789, holding outlawed account not revived by part payment, where it is not shown that debtor knew there was a balance due at time of payment; Simonson v. Nafis, 36 App. Div. 475, 55 N. Y. Supp. 449, holding that after alienation of mortgaged property by mortgagor to alienee, payment or new promise by one of the parties does not prevent running of statute against other; Mack v. Anderson, 165 N. Y. 532, 59 N. E. 289, and Boughton v. Harder, 46 App. Div. 354, 61 N. Y. Supp. 574, holding running of statute not stopped as to mortgagor and as to other parts of mortgaged premises by payments by grantee of part of premises, who assumed payment of mortgage; Matteson v. Palser, 56 App. Div. 97, 67 N. Y. Supp. 612, holding burden is upon one seeking payment to show acts extending statute; Connecticut Trust & S. D. Co. v. Wead, 33 Misc. 376, 67 N. Y. Supp. 466, holding acknowledgment by one debtor does not stop running of statute as to another; McLane v. Allison, 7 Kan. App. 267, 53 Pac. 781, holding mortgage to secure note barred when statute has run against note; Regan v. Williams, 88 Mo. App. 586, holding running of statute not arrested by credits made without consent of debtor.

Cited in footnote to Cook v. Bramel, 45 L. R. A. 212, which holds vendor's lien not extended by payments on purchase money made after debtor has deeded or mortgaged his land.

27 L. R. A. 423, BIRD v. MERKLEE, 144 N. Y. 544, 64 N. Y. S. R. 243, 39 N. E. 645.

Devises and bequests for charitable uses.

Cited in Allen v. Stevens, 161 N. Y. 152, 55 N. E. 568 (dissenting opinion), Reversing 33 App. Div. 490, 54 N. Y. Supp. 8, Which Reversed 22 Misc. 167, 49 N. Y. Supp. 431, majority upholding devise to trustees to found, erect, and maintain home for aged; Re Griffin, 167 N. Y. 84, 60 N. E. 284, Reversing 45 App. Div. 106, 61 N. Y. Supp. 639, construing bequest to religious corporation for support and maintenance of institute named, which was separate corporation, absolute gift to former corporation; Preston v. Howk, 3 App. Div. 47, 37 N. Y. Supp. 1079, holding bequest to trustees of church for preaching of gospel therein. gift to corporate body; Re Crane, 12 App. Div. 275, 42 N. Y. Supp. 904, holding bequest to city, with request that it be used to maintain drinking fountain, absolute gift; Congregational Unitarian Soc. v. Hale, 29 App. Div. 401, 51 N. Y. Supp. 704, holding bequest to church society with directions as to use of income not a trust, although word "trust" used in will; First Presby. Church v. McKallor, 35 App. Div. 101, 54 N. Y. Supp. 740, holding bequest in legal effect to church not invalidated by direction to use portion of income for maintenance of one church social annually, and for other objects; Hull v. Pearson, 36 App. Div. 237, 55 N. Y. Supp. 324 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding bequest to orphanage to be founded by specified association, although no orphanage had been so founded at testator's death; Re Bogart, 43 App. Div. 587, 60 N. Y. Supp. 496, holding absolute character of bequest to church not limited by directions as to its use; Tabernacle Baptist Church v. Fifth Ave. Baptist Church, 60 App. Div. 336, 70 N. Y. Supp. 181, holding absolute title passes to one religious corporation receiving securities under agreement with donor to pay income to another society; Pierce v. Phelps, 75 Conn. 86, 52 Atl. 612, holding bequest to church publication society, for use in counteracting "pernicious doctrine of immortality of the soul," absolute gift; Lane v. Eaton, 69 Minn. 146, 38 L. R. A. 672, 65 Am. St. Rep. 559, 71 N. W. 1031, holding bequest to incorporated church, to be used in aiding home and foreign missions, absolute gift; Re Graves, 171 N. Y. 44, 63 N. E. 787, holding bequest to trustees to found home, although estate actually in hands of trustees, and home not founded, not subject to transfer tax; Butler v. Parochial Fund, 92 Hun, 101, 36 N. Y. Supp. 562, holding bequest in trust to support clergyman to hold services in private chapel, void for indefiniteness; Re Leo-Wolf, 25 Misc. 470, 55 N. Y. Supp. 650, upholding bequest to foreign legatee, competent to take under laws of state where located; Re Daniels, 41 Misc. 305, 84 N. Y. Supp. 684, holding bequest to religious society "in trust, to keep invested," income to be applied to repairing church and parsonage, absolute gift; Danforth v. Oshkosh, 119 Wis. 296, 97 N. W. 258 (dissenting opinion), majority holding statutes against perpetuities applicable to grants and devises for charitable purposes.

Cited in footnote to Thompson v. Brown, 62 L. R. A. 398, which upholds devise of fund for distribution by executor "to the poor, in his discretion."

27 L. R. A. 426, FIRST NAT. BANK v. ALLEN, 100 Ala. 476, 46 Am. St. Rep. 80, 14 So. 335.

Payment of forged paper.

Cited in McKeen v. Boatmen's Bank, 74 Mo. App. 292, holding action at law proper to recover amount paid on forged check.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 635) on drawee's duty to know signature of drawer; (36 L. R. A. 539) on liability of person whose signature is forged on commercial paper.

Payment to wrong person.

Cited in note (50 L. R. A. 84) as to who must bear loss where check or bill issued or indorsed to impostor.

Negligence of depositor in failing to object to account.

Cited in Neal v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Ind. App. 511, 60 N. E. 164, holding failure of depositor to object to account stated, bar to right of action against bank for payment of checks forged by his wife; Critten v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 171 N. Y. 227, 57 L. R. A. 533, footnote p. 530, 63 N. E. 969, holding depositor responsible for loss from negligent failure to detect forgeries among vouchers returned by bank; Hennessy Bros. & Evans Co. v. Memphis Nat. Bank, 129 Fed. 560 holding corporation liable on demand notes issued without authority by officer for overdrawn account where it failed to object to such notes of which it had notice in balanced pass book.

Liability of principal for acts of dishonest agent.

Cited in Kelley v. Chenango Valley Sav. Bank, 21 Misc. 244, 45 N. Y. Supp. 651, holding savings bank liable for acts of its treasurer in fraudulently diverting deposits to national bank.

Cited in footnote to Shepard & M. Lumber Co. v. Eldridge, 41 L. R. A. 617, which holds payee of indorsed check not deprived of remedy against drawer by intrusting it to dishonest clerk, who forged indorsement of the same.

Disapproved in effect in Kenneth Invest. Co. v. National Bank, 96 Mo. App.

142, 70 S. W. 173, holding knowledge of depositor's clerk, himself the forger of forged checks paid by bank, not imputable to depositor.

27 L. R. A. 434, MAGNETIC ORE CO. v. MARBURY LUMBER CO. 104 Ala. 465, 53 Am. St. Rep. 73, 16 So. 632.

Report of second appeal in 113 Ala. 309, 21 So. 36.

Removal of timber after sale.

Cited in McRae v. Stillwell, 111 Ga. 70, 55 L. R. A. 523, 36 S. E. 604, holding that instrument conveying all pine timber on certain lots for sawmill purposes requires cutting and removal of timber within reasonable time; Carson v. Three States Lumber Co. 108 Tenn. 687, 69 S. W. 320, holding, under facts in case, ten years to be reasonable time for cutting growing timber under conveyance of same.

Cited in footnote to Macomber v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 102, which holds title to logs not forfeited by failure to remove within time fixed by contract.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 533) on conveyance of title to standing timber without conveying title to land.

Interest of vendee of standing trees, in the land itself.

Cited in Rothschild v. Bay City Lumber Co. 139 Ala. 576, 36 So. 785, holding that deed to standing trees conveys interest in land, entitling grantee to redeem from mortgage.

27 L. R. A. 436, LINDSEY v. ANNISTON, 104 Ala. 257, 53 Am. St. Rep. 44, 16 So. 545.

Rights of hackmen and similar persons at railroad stations.

Cited in Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 61 L. R. A. 143, footnote p. 140, 57 C. A. 363, 120 Fed. 216, sustaining carrier's power to give exclusive right to one hackman to solicit patrons within station.

Cited in footnotes to New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Scovill, 42 L. R. A. 157, which sustains railroad company's right to give exclusive privilege of soliciting passengers or baggage on station grounds; State v. Reed, 43 L. R. A. 134, which denies railroad company's right to give one hackman exclusive privilege to enter station grounds; Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. 46 L. R. A. 431, which sustains contract giving cab company exclusive privilege of soliciting patronage on trains and in depot; Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 47 L. R. A. 532, which authorizes discrimination by carrier between hackmen within, but not outside of, depot; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Old Dominion Baggage Transfer Co. 50 L. R. A. 732, which sustains special privilege to baggage transfer company to enter depot to solicit business; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Brown, 52 L. R. A. 418, which holds driver of public carriage entering railroad grounds to get passenger ordering carriage a trespasser on soliciting other passengers; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 53 L. R. A. 223, which denies carrier's power to prevent others than lessee occupying hack stands in street; Cosgrove v. Augusta, 42 L. R. A. 711, which holds ordinance prohibiting hackmen, etc., from entering depot to solicit custom not authorized by general welfare clause in city charter; Hedding v. Gallagher, 64 L. R. A. 811, which sustains right of railroad company to give to one teamster exclusive right to enter railroad property to solicit privilege of carrying baggage and passengers.

27 L. R. A. 437, PEOPLE v. MILK EXCHANGE, 145 N. Y. 267, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062.

Combinations and agreements in restraint of trade.

Cited in Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 164 N. Y. 405, 52 L. R. A. 263, footnote p. 262, 79 Am. St. Rep. 655, 58 N. E. 525, Affirming 15 App. Div. 605, 44 N. Y. Supp. 787, holding void agreement by persons controlling 90 per cent of sale of blue stone, to sell through common agent and maintain agreed prices; Re Davies, 168 N. Y. 101, 56 L. R. A. 860, 61 N. E. 118, holding anti-monopoly act of 1899 applicable to combination formed before its enactment; National Harrow Co. v. E. Bement & Sons, 21 App. Div. 295, 47 N. Y. Supp. 462, holding contract limiting manufacture and fixing price of harrows, illegal; Cohen v. Berlin & J. Envelope Co. 38 App. Div. 500, 56 N. Y. Supp. 588, upholding validity of contract designed merely to stop ruinous competition in sale of envelopes; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 36, 62 L. R. A. 647, footnote p. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 598, 67 N. E. 136, Affirming 54 App. Div. 231, 66 N. Y. Supp. 615, note containing special term opinion 30 Misc. 679, 64 N. Y. Supp. 276, sustaining plan by which manufacturers of proprietary medicines shall sell at fixed prices, with rebate only to concerns which can be relied on to maintain selling price decided upon; Re Atty. Gen. 21 Misc. 106, 47 N. Y. Supp. 20, raising, but not deciding, question as to constitutionality of anti-monopoly act of 1897; Excelsior Quilting Co. v. Creter, 36 Misc. 701, 74 N. Y. Supp. 361, upholding agreement to manufacture no more quilting machines of kind on which patents had expired; Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 585, 83 N. W. 842, holding agreement not to use specified building for hotel for two years, valid; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 50 W. Va. 620, 56 L. R. A. 809, 88 Am. St. Rep. 895, 40 S. E. 591, upholding right of corporation to refuse to buy oil unless shipped in specified way, to injury of rival; State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 253, 62 L. R. A. 742, 85 N. W. 1046, holding agreement by three publishers to compel fourth to reduce rates of advertising, illegal; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 136, 29 C. C. A. 160, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 291, holding agreement to prevent competition and control prices of iron pipe in specified localities, void; Gibbs v. McNeeley, 60 L. R. A. 155, 55 C. C. A. 73, 118 Fed. 123, holding combination of manufacturers of red cedar shingles, to limit production and raise price, illegal.

Cited in footnotes to Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Asso. 27 L. R. A. 298, which holds corporation and its members may constitute unlawful combination to fix price of merchandise; Hartnett v. Plumber's Supply Asso. 38 L. R. A. 194, which holds plumbers' supply association subject to quo warranto for assuming to prevent giving credit by members to delinquent dealer; Hawarden v. Youghiogheny & L. Coal Co. 55 L. R. A. 828, which sustains retail coal dealer's right of action against wholesalers and favored retailers combining to drive other retailers out of business; Com. v. Grinstead, 56 L. R. A. 709, which holds agreement not to resell goods at less than specified price not within statute for suppression of conspiracies; Brown v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. 57 L. R. A. 548, which sustains right to injunction against combination of merchants to prevent sales to other dealer unless he sells at fixed prices; State ex rel. Crow v. Armour Packing Co. 61 L. R. A. 464, which holds that unlawful combination to fix prices may be shown by acts of competing dealers.

Distinguished in Booth v. Seibold, 37 Misc. 103, 74 N. Y. Supp. 776, upholding contract not to sell fish, limited as to time and territory.

Quo warranto.

Distinguished in Stockton v. American Tobacco Co. 55 N. J. Eq. 376, 36 Atl. 971, holding quo warranto, and not injunction, proper proceeding to question right of corporation to act under its franchises.

27 L. R. A. 441, STEINHAUSER v. SPRAUL, 127 Mo. 541, 28 S. W. 620, 30 S. W. 102.

Master's duty to furnish safe places and appliances.

Cited in Beard v. American Car Co. 63 Mo. App. 387, holding master furnishing plank for unloading cask from wagon liable for injury to servant unacquainted with, and not strong enough for proper use thereof; Minnier v. Sedalia, W. & S. W. R. Co. 167 Mo. 113, 66 S. W. 1072, holding that evidence failed to disclose negligence in use of broad gauge car on narrow gauge trucks; Beckman v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. 98 Mo. App. 560, 72 S. W. 710, holding master not liable for injury to servant, resulting from accident to skid, secured and used in usual manner; Holmes v. Brandenbaugh, 172 Mo. 65, 72 S. W. 550, holding master not liable for injury to servant, due to unsafe method used by latter in shifting belt.

Risks of employment.

Cited in Marshall v. Kansas City Hay Press Co. 69 Mo. App. 263, holding risk of obviously defectively constructed privy assumed by servant; McKee v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 96 Mo. App. 678, 70 S. W. 922, holding that servant assumes risk in attempting to pass between cars of standing train; Epperson v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 155 Mo. 381, 50 S. W. 795, holding risk assumed by lineman handling wire knowing it was "alive;" Harff v. Green, 168 Mo. 314, 67 S. W. 576, holding risk of being struck by falling of wheelbarrow of bricks assumed by carpenters working on building; Roberts v. Missouri & K. Teleph. Co. 166 Mo. 378, 66 S. W. 155, holding risk of resting on cross arm while tightening wire assumed by experienced lineman; St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller, 63 L. R. A. 559, 61 C. C. A. 481, 126 Fed. 499, holding that servant assumes risk of unguarded cog wheels, notwithstanding statute requiring them to be guarded.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in St. Louis Cordage Co. v. Miller, 126 Fed. 499, 63 L. R. A. 555, 61 C. C. A. 481, holding assumption of risk and contributory negligence, distinct defenses.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 46) on contributory negligence in entering or remaining in employment.

Liability of servant to third person for negligence.

Cited in Kelly v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 122 Fed. 290, holding servant of carrier not liable to passenger for injury resulting from failure to inspect boiler.

27 L. R. A. 448, PEOPLE v. KETCHUM, 103 Mich. 443, 50 Am. St. Rep. 383, 61 N. W. 776.

27 L. R. A. 449, ROBINSON BANK v. MILLER, 153 Ill. 244, 46 Am. St. Rep. 883, 38 N. E. 1078.

Second appeal in 47 Ill. App. 310.

Partnership real estate.

Cited in footnotes to Darrow v. Calkins, 48 L. R. A. 299, which holds intent to change grantor's interest from land to surplus shown by partner's conveyance of undivided half interest in lands to copartner for partnership uses; Adams v. Church, 59 L. R. A. 782, which holds timber culture claims exempt from debts of owner or firm of which he is member, notwithstanding decree requiring him to convey to firm according to agreement.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 340) on position of tenants in dower and by curtesy and of heirs and personal representatives of deceased partner in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 86, 106) on rights of partners inter se in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 129) on position of surviving partners in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 161) on rights and position of creditors, purchasers, and other third parties in partnership real estate.

Agreements by grantee of encumbered land.

Cited in Siegel v. Borland, 93 Ill. App. 326, holding that mortgage debt must be assumed to charge grantee with its payment.

Cited in footnotes to Knapp v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 40 L. R. A. 861, which upholds mortgagee's right to compel grantee to keep engagement assuming mortgage by suit in equity; McKay v. Ward, 46 L. R. A. 623, which sustains personal liability of purchaser agreeing to pay mortgage debt, though mortgagor not liable.

Proof of good faith in transfer of property.

Cited in Martin v. Duncan, 156 Ill. 280, 41 N. E. 43, holding clearer and more convincing proof of good faith needed in transfer of property by insolvent to relative than in case of conveyance to stranger.

27 L. R. A. 476, NATIONAL UNION BANK v. NATIONAL MECHANICS' BANK, 80 Md. 371, 45 Am. St. Rep. 350, 30 Atl. 913.

Rights of secured creditors to dividends from insolvent's estate.

Cited in Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 654, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360, holding secured creditor of bankrupt bank entitled to receive face value of claim as it stood at declaration of insolvency.

Cited in footnotes to Levy Bros. v. Chicago Nat. Bank, 30 L. R. A. 380, which requires deduction of amount realized on collateral to time of making proofs before participating in dividends; Sacramento Bank v. Pacific Bank, 45 L. R. A. 863, which holds creditor of insolvent bank receiving part of claim from dividends, and also by enforcing stockholder's liability, entitled to have subsequent dividends computed on original claim.

Distinguished in Rogers v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 93 Md. 617, 49 Atl. 843, not requiring holders of collateral security given by stockholders of insolvent corporation to deduct value of same from claim against corporation.

Partnership real estate.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 340) on position of tenants in dower and by curtesy and of heirs and personal representatives of deceased partner in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 86) on rights of partners inter se in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 129) on position of surviving partners in partnership real estate; (28 L. R. A. 161) on rights and position of creditors, purchasers, and other third parties in partnership real estate.

27 L. R. A. 498, STATE v. LEE, 65 Conn. 265, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110.

Former jeopardy.

Cited in State v. Ellsworth, 131 N. C. 776, 92 Am. St. Rep. 790, 42 S. E. 699, upholding right of court on trial of plea of former conviction, to set aside verdict.

State's right of appeal.

Cited in State v. Cole, 132 N. C. 1090, 44 S. E. 391 (dissenting opinion), as to right of state to appeal from verdict in criminal case.

Cited in footnote to State v. Meyer, 52 L. R. A. 346, which sustains state's right to writ of error to review judgment reversing conviction.

27 L. R. A. 502, TOMBLER v. KOELLING, 60 Ark. 62, 46 Am. St. Rep. 146, 28 S. W. 795.

27 L. R. A. 503, STATE v. NEELLY, 60 Ark. 66, 46 Am. St. Rep. 148, 28 S. W. 800.

27 L. R. A. 505, FLORSHEIM BROS. DRY GOODS CO. v. LESTER, 60 Ark. 120, 46 Am. St. Rep. 162, 29 S. W. 34.

Transaction of business within meaning of statutes.

Cited in Sunny South Lumber Co. v. Neimeyer Lumber Co. 63 Ark. 278, 38 S. W. 902, holding securing of debt by mortgage not "doing business" within meaning of statute relating to business by foreign corporations; Commercial Bank v. Sherman, 28 Or. 577, 52 Am. St. Rep. 811, 43 Pac. 658, holding foreign banking corporation purchasing note in state not "transacting business" within meaning of Code; State v. Bradford Sav. Bank & T. Co. 71 Vt. 239, 44 Atl. 349, holding corporation in hands of receiver winding up its business not transacting business within meaning of tax law; Oakland Sugar Mill Co. v. Fred W. Wolf Co. 55 C. C. A. 99, 118 Fed. 239, holding question whether foreign corporation was transacting business within state, for jury; Frawley v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co. 124 Fed. 264, holding writing by foreign insurance company of four policies negotiated by correspondence on risks within state, not "transacting business" within statute relating to service of process.

27 L. R. A. 507, HATCHEE v. BUFORD, 60 Ark. 169, 29 S. W. 641.

Gifts causa mortis.

Cited in Leyson v. Davis, 17 Mont. 273, 31 L. R. A. 446, 42 Pac. 775, holding gift made at beginning of journey and in contemplation of death, causa mortis, although donor returned and lived some time after.

Gift inter vivos.

Cited in Wilson v. Jourdan, 79 Miss. 141, 28 So. 823, holding gift made during last illness, but intended to take effect at once, gift inter vivos; Leonard v. Leonard, 181 Mass. 461, 92 Am. St. Rep. 426, 63 N. E. 1068, holding deed by husband reserving life estate passed title to grantee in grantor's lifetime.

Gift to defeat wife's dower.

Cited in Brownell v. Briggs, 173 Mass. 532, 54 N. E. 251, holding deed without consideration by husband to niece, not recorded until former's death, void as against wife; Huber's Estate, 25 Pa. Co. Ct. 373, denying right of donor to defeat widow's right of dower by gift causa mortis.

27 L. R. A. 511, CRAIG v. GUNN, 67 Vt. 92, 30 Atl. 860.

Liability of trustee on debt due nonresident.

Cited in Hawley v. Hurd, 72 Vt. 123, 52 L. R. A. 197, 82 Am. St. Rep. 922, 47 Atl. 401, holding resident trustee chargeable upon debt payable to nonresident in state of latter's domicile.

27 L. R. A. 512, BEEHLER v. DANIELS, 18 R. I. 563, 49 Am. St. Rep. 790, 29 Atl. 6.

Liability for injury to strangers or licensees on premises.

Cited in Berlin Mills Co. v. Croteau, 32 C. C. A. 128, 50 U. S. App. 419, 88 Fed. 860, denying liability of owner for injury to stranger on premises, hurt by collision of cars; Paolino v. McKendall, 24 R. I. 436, 60 L. R. A. 135, 96 Am. St. Rep. 736, 53 Atl. 268, holding occupier of land, burning rubbish thereon, not liable for injury to trespassing children approaching too near fire; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Martin, 31 Ind. App. 318, 65 N. E. 591, holding carrier not liable for death of licensee, due to negligence in failing to block wheels of car.

Accidents at elevator shafts.

Cited in footnotes to Malloy v. New York Real Estate Asso. 41 L. R. A. 487, which denies owner's liability for injury to one falling into elevator shaft, insufficient railing for which has been left out of place by third person; Gibson v. International Trust Co. 52 L. R. A. 928, which denies liability for injury to passenger from involuntary starting of elevator by conductor's grasping mechanism to prevent falling.

Right of servant to recover damages from third persons for injuries.

Cited in note (46 L. R. A. 60, 81) on right of servant to recover damages from persons other than his master for injuries received in performance of duties.

27 L. R. A. 514, INDIANAPOLIS v. CONSUMERS' GAS TRUST CO. 140 Ind. 107, 49 Am. St. Rep. 183, 39 N. E. 433.

Powers of municipalities.

Cited in Gosport v. Pritchard, 156 Ind. 406, 59 N. E. 1058, holding formal ordinance or resolution not required for contract of municipality for lighting streets; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 93, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748, upholding power of municipality to change overhead railroad crossing to grade crossing after rebuilding of bridge by railroad company under ordinance.

Conditions in ordinances.

Cited in Noblesville v. Noblesville Gas & Improv. Co. 157 Ind. 169, 60 N. E. 1032, holding gas company bound by accepted ordinance, fixing rates; Westfield Gas & Mill. Co. v. Mendenhall, 142 Ind. 543, 41 N. E. 1033, and Muncie Natural Gas Co. v. Muncie, 160 Ind. 101, 60 L. R. A. 827, 66 N. E. 436, holding that gas company using streets under ordinance limiting price may be enjoined from charging higher rates; Cambria Iron Co. v. Union Trust Co. 154 Ind. 297, 48 L. R. A. 45, 55 N. E. 745, holding railway company bound by condition in franchise ordinance requiring it to pave streets between its tracks.

Questions as to jurisdiction.

Cited in Hiatt v. Darlington, 152 Ind. 578, 53 N. E. 825, and Jones v. Cullen, 142 Ind. 344, 40 N. E. 124, holding determination of tribunal having jurisdiction of a general subject, that jurisdictional facts exist, conclusive against collateral attack; Greensburg v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 23 Ind. App. 144, 55 N. E. 46 (dissenting opinion), majority denying jurisdiction of appellate court in action to recover penalty for violation of ordinance, amount in controversy not exceeding $50.

Reserved powers of legislature in respect to franchises.

Cited in New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 111 La. 843, 35 So. 929, holding grant of right to lay gas mains in streets subject to reserved power of legislature to require location to be changed to permit construction of sewers.

27 L. R. A. 519, NASHVILLE LUMBER CO. v. FOURTH NAT. BANK, 94 Tenn. 374, 45 Am. St. Rep. 727, 29 S. W. 368.

Liability for loss due to transfer of note to bona fide purchaser.

Cited in Mader v. Cool, 14 Ind. App. 303, 56 Am. St. Rep. 304, 42 N. E. 945, holding payee of note without consideration liable to maker for loss due to transfer to bona fide purchaser; Jones v. Crawford, 107 Ga. 323, 45 L. R. A. 107, footnote p. 105, 33 S. E. 51, holding it actionable fraud to sell to innocent purchaser, note person was induced to sign as coprincipal under promise that no liability should be enforced.

27 L. R. A. 523, STROUP v. STROUP, 140 Ind. 179, 39 N. E. 864.

Conveyances affecting widow's rights in husband's estate.

Cited in Frain v. Burgett, 152 Ind. 60, 50 N. E. 873, holding that deed vesting legal title related back to date of equitable ownership, carrying right of dower with it; Murray v. Cazier, 23 Ind. App. 603, 53 N. E. 476, holding provision in lease by husband, that rents accruing after death be paid his widow, invalid.

Cited in footnotes to Walker v. Walker, 27 L. R. A. 799, which holds fraudulent, transfer of corporate stock to defeat wife's distributive share; Smith v. Smith, 34 L. R. A. 49, which holds delivery by husband just before death, of deed of all realty, made years before, fraudulent as to wife; Arnegard v. Arnegard, 41 L. R. A. 258, which holds secret unrecorded deed to son on eve of grantor's marriage, fraudulent as to wife; Ward v. Ward, 51 L. R. A. 858, which holds second wife's right to dower not defeated by fraudulent antenuptial conveyance to sons by former marriage.

Testamentary dispositions by deed.

Cited in Mortgage Trust Co. v. Moore, 150 Ind. 469, 50 N. E. 72, holding deed directed in will to be delivered to son should be construed with the will.

Pleading fraud.

Cited in Cotterell v. Koon, 151 Ind. 186, 51 N. E. 235, and Guy v. Blue, 146 Ind. 632, 45 N. E. 1052, holding use of epithets in pleading insufficient to show fraud.

27 L. R. A. 527, JACKSON v. GREENVILLE, 72 Miss. 220, 48 Am. St. Rep. 553, 16 So. 382.

27 L. R. A. 529, Re FLAHERTY, 105 Cal. 558, 38 Pac. 981.

Delegation of power.

Cited in Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 36, 43 L. ed. 605, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317, upholding constitutionality of ordinance forbidding the moving, without permission of mayor, of any building into public street; Los Angeles County v. Spencer, 126 Cal. 673, 77 Am. St. Rep. 217, 59 Pac. 202, upholding act empowering horticultural commissioners to determine certain class of nuisances and to abate same; State v. Williams, 160 Mo. 346, 54 L. R. A. 953, 83 Am. St. Rep. 468, 60 S. W. 1077, upholding act giving power to state auditor to license book-making on horse races.

Distinguished in Knight v. Eureka, 123 Cal. 195, 55 Pac. 768, denying power of common council to delegate authority to city attorney to employ assistant.

Nuisances.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 673) on municipal power over nuisances affecting highways and waters.

27 L. R. A. 534, STATE ex rel. FUNCK v. McCARTY, 52 Ohio St. 363, 39 N. E. 1041.

Mandamus to compel lower court to exercise jurisdiction.

Cited in State ex rel. Smith v. Smith, 69 Ohio St. 201, 68 N. E. 1044, holding that mandamus will lie to compel justice of peace to exercise jurisdiction.

27 L. R. A. 536, CINCINNATI v. BATSCHE, 52 Ohio St. 324, 40 N. E. 21.

Assessments for local improvements.

Cited in Cincinnati v. Anderson, 52 Ohio St. 600, 43 N. E. 1040, enjoining assessment for local improvement on property not abutting on same; Cincinnati, L. & N. R. Co. v. Cincinnati, 62 Ohio St. 482, 49 L. R. A. 571, 57 N. E. 229, denying right to assess compensation for lands taken for public improvement upon owner's remaining land.

27 L. R. A. 540, SMILEY v. MacDONALD, 42 Neb. 5, 47 Am. St. Rep. 384, 60 N. W. 355.

Police powers and creation of monopolies.

Cited in Littlefield v. State, 42 Neb. 226, 28 L. R. A. 590, 47 Am. St. Rep. 697, 60 N. W. 724, upholding ordinance requiring milkmen to pay license fee of $10; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 565, 41 L. R. A. 484, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624, upholding charter act permitting city to compel railroad companies to erect and keep in repair viaducts over streets; West Point Water Power & L. Improv. Co. v. State, 49 Neb. 223, 68 N. W. 507, upholding act requiring milldam owners to construct and maintain fishways; Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 721, 57 L. R. A. 898, footnote p. 895, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869, denying city's right under police powers to grant monopoly by contract for removal of ashes, etc.; Schoen v. Atlanta, 97 Ga. 702, 33 L. R. A. 806, 25 S. E. 380, holding city without power to compel removal of dead animals to specified contractor's place outside city limits; Coombs v. MacDonald, 43 Neb. 633, 62

N. W. 41, holding choice between sanitary measures a function of legislative department of government; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 61 C. C. A. 98, 126 Fed. 36, holding grant of exclusive privilege for fifty years to destroy garbage of city, within police powers, and referring particularly to annotation in 27 L. R. A. 540.

Cited in footnotes to Re Lowc, 27 L. R. A. 545, which holds unconstitutional requirement of license to remove garbage; Walker v. Jameson, 28 L. R. A. 679, which holds valid as sanitary measure, exclusive contract for collection of garbage; Schoen Bros. v. Atlanta, 33 L. R. A. 804, which denies right to give city monopoly in business of removing dead animals; State v. Orr, 34 L. R. A. 279, which sustains ordinance prohibiting transportation of garbage without license; State v. Hill, 50 L. R. A. 473, which holds void, ordinance requiring license for scavenger work and empowering health board to decide who are competent bidders.

Cited in notes (36 L. R. A. 598, 609) on power of municipal corporations to define, prevent, and abate nuisances; (38 L. R. A. 316, 332) on municipal power over nuisances affecting safety, health, and personal comfort; (39 L. R. A. 653) on municipal power over nuisances affecting highways and waters; (53 L. R. A. 764) on constitutionality of statute attempting to grant monopoly.

27 L. R. A. 545, Re LOWE, 54 Kan. 757, 39 Pac. 710.

Police powers and creation of monopolies.

Cited in Schoen v. Atlanta, 97 Ga. 702, 33 L. R. A. 806, 25 S. E. 380, holding city without power to compel removal of dead animals to specified contractor's place outside city limits; Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 725, 57 L. R. A. 901, 97 Am. St. Rep. 676, 90 N. W. 869, denying city's right to grant monopoly by contract for removal of ashes, etc.; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 61 C. C. A. 101, 126 Fed. 39, holding grant of exclusive privilege for fifty years to destroy garbage of city, within police powers.

Cited in footnote to State v. Hill, 50 L. R. A. 473, which holds void, ordinance requiring license for scavenger work and empowering health board to decide who are competent bidders.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 540) on monopoly in contract for removal of garbage; (36 L. R. A. 598) on power of municipal corporation to define, prevent, and abate nuisances; (39 L. R. A. 653) on municipal power over nuisances affecting highways and waters.

27 L. R. A. 549, LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. v. HAILEY, 94 Tenn. 383, 29 S. W. 367.

Injuries to persons riding in forbidden places.

Cited in Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Bogle, 101 Tenn. 44, 46 S. W. 760, denying right of recovery where passenger mounted engine to prevent being left behind, and was hurt; Sands v. Southern R. Co. 108 Tenn. 11, 64 S. W. 478, denying liability for injury to boy collusively allowed to ride by brakeman upon payment of 25 cents; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Cox, 66 Ohio St. 289, 90 Am. St. Rep. 583, 64 N. E. 119, denying liability for negligent killing of former employee, invited, without authority, on freight train; Spence v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 117 Iowa, 9, 90 N. W. 346, holding person accepted as passenger on construction train by conductor although contrary to orders, entitled to recover for injuries due to carrier's negligence.

Who are passengers.

Cited in Chattanooga Rapid Transit Co. v. Venable, 105 Tenn. 465, 51 L. R. A. 888, footnote p. 886, 58 S. W. 861, holding night watchman at depot, getting on train to announce readiness to resume duty, a passenger.

Cited in footnotes to Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Weaver, 50 L. R. A. 381, which holds station agent riding on train without paying fare, several hours after work ended, a passenger; Mendenhall v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 61 L. R. A. 120, which holds one riding on platform of baggage car at direction of brakeman, to whom money paid, not a passenger.

27 L. R. A. 551, HOME BLDG. & CONVEYANCE CO. v. ROANOKE, 91 Va. 52, 20 S. E. 895.

Damage to abutting owners.

Cited in Harrisonburg v. Roller, 97 Va. 584, 34 S. E. 523, holding municipal corporation not liable for consequential injury to abutting owner from change in grade of streets and sidewalks; Reid Bros. v. Norfolk City R. Co. 94 Va. 125, 36 L. R. A. 277, 64 Am. St. Rep. 708, 26 S. E. 428, holding substitution of double-track electric line for single-track horse car line not additional servitude; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 95, 43 L. ed. 379, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106, denying right of abutting owner to recover damages for authorized partial obstruction of street by railroad; Powell v. Wytheville, 95 Va. 75, 27 S. E. 805, holding municipality liable for damage due to negligent performance of work of improving street.

Cited in footnote to Boston & A. R. Co. v. Worcester, 55 L. R. A. 623, which holds use of part of railroad location outside of tracks for approach of highway bridge over tracks to abolish grade crossing not new easement on right of way.

Award of contracts to lowest bidder.

Cited in footnotes to Mulnix v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 33 L. R. A. 827, which denies legislative right to authorize secretary of state to purchase in open market, instead of from lowest bidder; Colorado Paving Co. v. Murphy, 37 L. R. A. 630, which denies absolute right of lowest responsible bidder, to city contract.

27 L. R. A. 556, ROSE v. KIMBERLY & C. CO. 89 Wis. 545, 46 Am. St. Rep. 855, 62 N. W. 526.

Contracts with foreign corporations.

Cited in Commonwealth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hayden Bros. 60 Neb. 638, 83 Am. St. Rep. 545, 83 N. W. 922; Buell v. Breese Mill & Grain Co. 65 Ill. App. 276; Cowan v. London Assur. Corp. 73 Miss. 328, 55 Am. St. Rep. 535, 19 So. 298, — denying right of foreign insurance company not complying with statutes to recover premiums or assessments; Maine Guarantee Co. v. Cox, 146 Ind. 109, 42 N. E. 915, upholding right of foreign building and loan association not complying with statutes, to loan money and take mortgage security therefor; Swing v. Munson, 191 Pa. 588, 58 L. R. A. 226, 71 Am. St. Rep. 772, 43 Atl. 342, refusing to enforce contract with foreign insurance company, valid where made, but invalid at domicile of insured.

Cited in footnotes to Seamans v. Temple Co. 28 L. R. A. 430, which holds insurance contract made through mails by corporation not authorized to do business will not support action against insured for assessment; Bankers' L. Ins. Co. v. Howland, 57 L. R. A. 374, which denies insurance commissioners' power to question foreign company's mode of computing reserve set forth in statement for license; Pope v. Hanke, 28 L. R. A. 568, which holds comity does not require execution of law against public policy; Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 36 L. R. A. 271, as to law governing effect of answers in application for policy and their use in evidence.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 837, 851, 855) on conflict of laws as to contracts of insurance.

Inferences from contract of insurance.

Cited in State v. Phelan, 66 Mo. App. 555, inferring from contract of insurance that corporation for which it was made was engaged in insurance business.

27 L. R. A. 558, CHAFEY v. MATHEWS, 104 Mich. 103, 62 N. W. 141.

Participation of creditors in debtor's fraudulent intent.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 640) on participation by creditor in fraudulent intent of debtor which will make transfer to pay or secure debt invalid as to other creditors.

27 L. R. A. 560, LAWRENCE v. LOUISVILLE, 96 Ky. 595, 49 Am. St. Rep. 309, 29 S. W. 450.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in note (45 L. R. A. 611) on vested right in defense of statute of limitations.

Power of legislature over municipalities.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 489) on power of legislature to impose burdens upon municipalities and to control their local administration and property.

27 L. R. A. 562, CRANE v. PACIFIC BANK, 106, Cal. 64, 39 Pac. 215.

Insolvent corporations.

Cited in Dyer v. Sebrell, 135 Cal. 598, 67 Pac. 1036, denying right of debtor to set off claims against insolvent bank, purchased after insolvency; Argues v. Union Sav. Bank, 133 Cal. 144, 65 Pac. 307, denying right of action by creditor to collect debt against insolvent bank in process of liquidation.

Distinguished in Lanz v. Fresno Loan & Sav. Bank, 125 Cal. 459, 58 Pac. 63, holding liquidation under advice of bank commissioners no defense to depositor's action to recover amount of deposit; Dodson v. Wightman, 6 Kan. App. 841, 49 Pac. 790, holding attachment of property of insolvent private bank, before bank commissioners had taken actual possession, valid; Bories v. Union Bldg. & L. Asso. 141 Cal. 77, 74 Pac. 552, holding possession of receiver of building and loan association subject to valid liens existing at time of his appointment.

27 L. R. A. 565, FIRST NAT. BANK v. MANN, 94 Tenn. 17, 27 S. W. 1015.

Usurious contracts.

Cited in Stewart v. Lathrop Mfg. Co. 95 Tenn. 501, 32 S. W. 464, upholding right of lender of money to abandon usurious note and recover on original consideration.

Cited in note (62 L. R. A. 55) on conflict of laws as to interest and usury.

Distinguished in Bang v. Phelps & B. Windmill Co. 96 Tenn. 364, 34 S. W.

516, holding note for windmill, providing for 10 per cent interest after maturity, usurious.

27 L. R. A. 569, PEOPLE'S BANK v. JACKSON, 43 S. C. 86, 49 Am. St. Rep. 823, 20 S. E. 786.

27 L. R. A. 572, ROBERTS v. DETROIT, 102 Mich. 64, 60 N. W. 450.

Injuries due to defective sidewalks and highways.

Cited in McDevitt v. St. Paul, 66 Minn. 15, 33 L. R. A. 602, footnote p. 601, 68 N. W. 178, sustaining husband's right to maintain action against city for personal injury to wife on sidewalk.

Cited in footnotes to Bartram v. Sharon, 46 L. R. A. 144, which denies right to recover for injury by defective highway, to which negligence of third person contributes; Teagar v. Flemingsburg, 53 L. R. A. 792, which holds mere building of step in sidewalk not negligence rendering city liable for injury to pedestrians.

Construction of statutes.

Cited in Re Yell, 107 Mich. 230, 65 N. W. 97, supplying word "like" in construction of statute, holding it to have been omitted by mistake.

27 L. R. A. 573, RICH v. CHAMBERLAIN, 104 Mich. 436, 62 N. W. 584.

Statutes relating to punishment for crime.

Cited in Rich v. Chamberlain, 107 Mich. 383, 65 N. W. 235, upholding power of governor, under statute, to commute sentence of life imprisonment in state prison to imprisonment in house of correction; Re Linden, 112 Wis. 527, 88 N. W. 645, upholding statute permitting transfer of prisoners from reformatory to state prison on recommendation of board of control and approval of governor.

Cited in footnote to Re Conditional Discharge of Convicts, 56 L. R. A. 658, which sustains statute empowering board to grant paroles after expiration of minimum sentence provided for.

Statutes relating to pardons.

Cited in footnote to Territory v. Richardson, 49 L. R. A. 440, which holds invalid, statutory limitations on pardoning power of governor.

Cited in note (34 L. R. A. 255) on legislative power to grant pardon or amnesty.

Mandamus.

Cited in note (58 L. R. A. 841) on original jurisdiction of court of last resort in mandamus case.

27 L. R. A. 577, ROUSE, H. & CO. v. DONOVAN, 104 Mich. 234, 53 Am. St. Rep. 457, 62 N. W. 359.

Due process of law.

Cited in Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 709, 84 Am. St. Rep. 589, 85 N. W. 96, holding action of common council in reviewing assessment not invalidated by failure to notify relator when to attend.

Distinguished in Fisher v. Wineman, 125 Mich. 645, 52 L. R. A. 194, 84 N. W. 1111, holding act making debt for labor preferred claim, without providing for bringing in lienors, void.

Execution against stockholders.

Cited in Rouse v. Detroit Cycle Co. 111 Mich. 253, 38 L. R. A. 795, footnote p. 794, 69 N. W. 511, denying right to maintain statutory proceeding for execution for unpaid subscriptions, after appointment of receiver.

Right to jury trial.

Cited in Rider-Wallis Co. v. Fogo, 102 Wis. 540, 78 N. W. 767, upholding constitutionality of act authorizing appointment of receiver on determination of necessary facts by court without jury.

27 L. R. A. 580, MT. CARMEL v. SHAW, 155 Ill. 37, 46 Am. St. Rep. 311, 39 N. E. 584.

Followed on substantially same issues in Mt. Carmel v. Bell, 155 Ill. 44, 39 N. E. 586.

Municipal powers.

Cited in House of Reform v. Lexington, 112 Ky. 181, 65 S. W. 350, holding that city authorized to maintain house of correction can make appropriation to secure location near city of state house of reform, to which it may send its prisoners, instead.

— Over streets and highways.

Cited in notes (26 L. R. A. 833) on discontinuance or vacation of highway by acts of public authorities; (39 L. R. A. 670) on municipal power over nuisance affecting highways and waters.

— As to cutting, trimming, and removal of trees.

Cited in footnotes to Bradley v. Southern New England Teleph. Co. 32 L. R. A. 280, which denies power of selectmen to cut and trim trees overhanging highway, without owner's consent; Vanderhurst v. Tholcke, 35 L. R. A. 267, which holds determination of city counsel that trees on sidewalk are obstruction, conclusive; Wyant v. Central Teleph. Co. 47 L. R. A. 497, which sustains telephone company's right to do necessary trimming of trees in highway without giving owner opportunity to do so; Stretch v. Cassopolis, 51 L. R. A. 345, which denies right to remove shade trees from street without notice to abutter; Miller v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. R. Co. 51 L. R. A. 955, which sustains street railway company's right to remove obstructing shade trees without compensation to abutter.

When injunction will not be granted.

Cited in Canal Comrs. v. East Peoria, 179 Ill. 234, 53 N. E. 633, refusing to enjoin municipality from deepening and straightening channel of creek for better drainage; Chicago Teleph. Co. v. Northwestern Teleph. Co. 199 Ill. 365, 65 N. E. 329, refusing to enjoin building of parallel telephone system in streets of city; Hildrup v. Windfall City, 29 Ind. App. 595, 64 N. E. 942, holding injunction to restrain town from removing shade tree which is an obstruction to travel in street, properly denied.

27 L. R. A. 583, GOODLANDER MILL CO. v. STANDARD OIL CO. 11 C. C. A. 253, 24 U. S. App. 7, 63 Fed. 400.

Proximate or contributory cause of damage.

Cited in Thomas v. Lancaster Mills, 19 C. C. A. 92, 34 U. S. App. 404, 71 Fed. 484, holding delay in transportation not proximate cause of destruction of cotton by fire from spark of passing steamer; Stone v. Boston & A. R. Co. 171 Mass. 540, 41 L. R. A. 798, 51 N. E. 1, holding negligent and unlawful storage of oil on station platform not proximate cause of damage by fire caused by dropping of match by stranger; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 65 Kan. 400, 53 L. R. A. 404, 69 Pac. 338, holding heavy gale blowing grain doors across track proximate cause of death due to derailment of engine thereby; Southern P. Co. v. Yeargin, 48 C. C. A. 506, 109 Fed. 436 (dissenting opinion), majority holding it question for jury whether failure to equip locomotive with headlight was contributory cause of collision at night; Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L. R. A. 422, footnote p. 416, 59 C. C. A. 601, 124 Fed. 121, holding act of strange boy in opening door in dark hall, proximate cause of injury to one walking through into elevator well.

Cited in footnotes to Wood v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 199, which holds failure to give warning of approach of train not proximate cause of injury to one struck by body of another person hit by train; Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 59 L. R. A. 109, which holds negligent jolting of train, hurling passenger through door on track insensible, cause of death by train of other company; Daniels v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 62 L. R. A. 751, which holds death by suicide of one rendered insane by negligent act, not proximate result of the negligent act.

Dangerous agencies.

Cited in Burke v. Anderson, 16 C. C. A. 445, 34 U. S. App. 132, 69 Fed. 818, holding master liable for injury to unwarned servant, caused by striking exploded dynamite cartridge with pick; Standard Oil Co. v. Murray, 57 C. C. A. 3, 119 Fed. 573, denying liability of vendor to servant of vendee for injury due to burning of oil with explosive effect.

Cited in footnote to Langenbaugh v. Anderson, 62 L. R. A. 948, which denies liability of lessor of lot for production of oil or gas therefrom, for injury to adjoining owner's property through escape of oil by lessee's negligence.

Injury to strangers.

Cited in Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ballentine, 28 C. C. A. 754, 56 U. S. App. 266, 84 Fed. 937, holding carrier not liable for injury to boy going on premises to see burning of train of tank cars; Bragdon v. Perkins-Campbell Co. 30 C. C. A. 571, 58 U. S. App. 91, 87 Fed. 113, denying liability of vendor to stranger for injury due to defective saddle; Fowles v. Briggs, 116 Mich. 428, 40 L. R. A. 530, footnote p. 528, 72 Am. St. Rep. 537, 74 N. W. 1046, denying shipper's liability for injury to brakeman by shunting of lumber negligently loaded.

Cited in note (46 L. R. A. 119), on right of servant to recover damages from persons other than his master for injuries received in performance of duties.

Distinguished in Glynn v. Central R. Co. 175 Mass. 512, 78 Am. St. Rep. 507, 56 N. E. 698, denying liability of carrier passing car to another road for accident to employee of latter road, occurring after point of passing on such road for inspecting foreign cars; Huset v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. 61 L. R. A. 306, 57 C. C. A. 240, 120 Fed. 868, holding manufacturer of imminently dangerous threshing machine liable to third person for injuries sustained in operation thereof.

27 L. R. A. 588, SCOTT v. SCHOOL DIST. NO. 9, 67 Vt. 150, 31 Atl. 145.

Interest of public officers in official contracts.

Cited in McFarland v. Gordon, 70 Vt. 458, 41 Atl. 507, denying right of alderman to recover for services rendered under authority of ordinance of common council providing compensation therefor.

Cited in footnote to Sylvester v. Webb, 52 L. R. A. 518, which sustains contract to erect school building by member of building committee and selectmen of town.

Usage and custom as affecting contracts.

Distinguished in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Naive (Tenn.) 64 L. R. A. 448, 79 S. W. 124, holding contract to transport perishable goods to destination with all reasonable despatch not violated by custom to suspend business on holiday.

27 L. R. A. 590, COLGROVE v. SMITH, 102 Cal. 220, 36 Pac. 411.

Negligence of independent contractor.

Cited in Hoff v. Shockley, 122 Iowa, 728, 64 L. R. A. 542, footnote p. 538, 101 Am. St. Rep. 289, 98 N. W. 573, holding property owner not liable for injuries to traveler by obstructions placed in street without danger signals by independent contractor for construction of building.

Cited in footnotes to Sanford v. Pawtucket Street R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 564, which denies liability of street railway company for negligence of contractor building road; Leavitt v. Bangor & A. R. Co. 36 L. R. A. 382, which denies liability of railroad company for contractor's negligence in communicating fire from cooking car while cutting wood for railroad company; Wertheimer v. Saunders, 37 L. R. A. 146, which holds landlord liable for independent contractor's negligence in putting new roof on building; Thompson v. Lowell, L. & H. Street R. Co. 40 L. R. A. 345, which holds street railway company liable for injury to spectator at free exhibition of marksmanship given by independent contractor on company's grounds; Bonaparte v. Wiseman, 44 L. R. A. 482, which requires one employing independent contractor to excavate near neighbor's house, to notify neighbor or see that contractor exercises due care; Boomer v. Wilbur, 53 L. R. A. 172, which denies owner's liability for injury by fall of bricks through negligence of independent contractor repairing chimney; Peerless Mfg. Co. v. Bagley, 53 L. R. A. 285, which holds landlord liable for independent contractor's negligence in putting in automatic fire extinguisher; Pittsfield Cottonwear Mfg. Co. v. Pittsfield Shoe Co. 60 L. R. A. 116, which holds landlord liable to tenants of lower floor for injury from freezing of automatic fire extinguisher in portion retained by former, though building heated by independent contractor.

Distinguished in Frassi v. McDonald, 122 Cal. 403, 55 Pac. 139, holding owner with power to alter building contract not liable for negligence of independent contractor working thereunder; Louthan v. Hewes, 138 Cal. 119, 70 Pac. 1665, denying liability of owner for negligence of independent contractor in construction of stairway.

27 L. R. A. 593, TOPEKA v. BOUTWELL, 53 Kan. 20, 35 Pac. 819.

Punishment of criminals.

Cited in St. Louis v. Karr, 85 Mo. App. 613, sustaining judgment for false imprisonment against superintendent of workhouse, detaining plaintiff under invalid city ordinance.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Yandle, 34 L. R. A. 392, which sustains right of employment of convict on public roads; Simmons v. Georgia Iron & Coal Co. 61

L. R. A. 730, which denies right to work convicts in private chain gangs controlled by private individuals.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 566, 578) on cruel and unusual punishments.

Poll taxes.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 412) on poll taxes.

27 L. R. A. 614, SYNDICATE INS. CO. v. BOHN, 12 C. C. A. 531, 27 U. S. App. 564, 65 Fed. 165.

Corporation as a distinct entity.

Cited in Watson v. Bonfils, 53 C. C. A. 545, 116 Fed. 167, holding bank owning stock and notes of corporation it had created, without power to transfer, title to real estate held by such corporation.

Conditions in policies as to ownership of insured property.

Cited in Mechanics & T. Ins. Co. v. Mutual Real Estate & Bldg. Asso. 98 Ga. 265, 25 S. E. 457, holding conditions in policy as to ownership of insured property binding on insured, unless waived by insurer; Orient Ins. Co. v. Williamson, 98 Ga. 466, 25 S. E. 560, holding plea that insured was not owner of property insured when policy was issued improperly rejected; Rosenstock v. Mississippi Home Ins. Co. 82 Miss. 687, 35 So. 309, holding vendor admitting vendee into possession of real estate upon part payment of purchase price not sole owner within terms of policy.

Cited in footnotes to South'rn Ins. Co. v. Estes, 52 L. R. A. 915, which holds policy not avoided by existence of vendor's lien, nor institution of foreclosure proceedings; Steinmeyer v. Steinmeyer, 59 L. R. A. 319, which holds entry of judgment setting aside voluntary deed does not change grantee's ownership.

Disapproved in effect in Manchester Fire Assur. Co. v. Abrams, 32 C. C. A. 431, 61 U. S. App. 276, 89 Fed. 936, holding insured not required to show more than insurable interest, where he does not misrepresent or conceal his interest.

Estoppel.

Distinguished in Baldwin v. German Ins. Co. 113 Iowa, 317, 86 Am. St. Rep. 375, 85 N. W. 26, holding insurer not estopped from setting up invalidity of policies, because of mortgage clause attached, without consideration and without knowledge of vacancy of premises.

Mortgage clauses in policies.

Cited in North British & M. Ins. Co. v. Bohn, 49 Neb. 573, 68 N. W. 942, and Hare v. Headley, 54 N. J. Eq. 556, 35 Atl. 445, upholding validity of clause in policies continuing insurance as to mortgagee, where policy may be avoided as to owner or mortgagor; Boyd v. Thuringia Ins. Co. 25 Wash. 450, 55 L. R. A. 166, 65 Pac. 785, holding policy not invalidated by subsequent acts of mortgagor, where mortgagee is party intended to be insured; Delaware Ins. Co. v. Greer, 61 L. R. A. 189, footnote p. 137, 57 C. C. A. 191, 120 Fed. 919, holding mortgage clause providing for payment of loss to mortgagee "as his interest may appear" subjects mortgagee to risks of acts or omissions of mortgagor affecting validity of policy.

Cited in footnote to Oakland Home Ins. Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 36 L. R. A. 673, which holds policy not avoided as to mortgagee's interest by insured's violation of provision against transfer of property without consent.

27 L. R. A. 622, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. CALL PUB. CO. 44 Neb. 326, 48 Am. St. Rep. 729, 62 N. W. 506.

Telegraph companies as public carriers.

Cited in Perry v. German-American Bank, 53 Neb. 92, 68 Am. St. Rep. 593, 73 N. W. 538, and Hughes v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 79 Mo. App. 136, holding telegraph companies public carriers of intelligence.

Discrimination in rates.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 92, 45 L. ed. 766, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561, Affirming 58 Neb. 104, 78 N. W. 519, upholding right of recovery where dissimilarity in rates was disproportionate to dissimilarity of service; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 635, 45 L. R. A. 117, 76 N. W. 171, holding telephone company required to furnish telephone service for reasonable compensation, without discrimination.

Cited in footnote to Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 48 L. R. A. 563, which denies right of news collecting corporation operating telegraph lines to discriminate between publishers in sale of news.

Regulation of electric companies.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 804) on police regulation of electric companies

27 L. R. A. 629, TRAVELERS' INS. CO. v. MELICK, 12 C. C. A. 544, 27 U. S. App. 547, 65 Fed. 178.

Proximate cause of injury or death.

Cited in Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Price, 38 C. C. A. 244, 97 Fed. 429, holding it question for jury whether roughness of road was proximate cause of death resulting from explosion of oil flowing from tank broken by collision; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Byrne, 40 C. C. A. 407, 100 Fed. 363, holding question of what was proximate cause of injury ordinarily one for jury; Southern P. Co. v. Yeargin, 48 C. C. A. 506, 109 Fed. 445, holding it question for jury whether collision in nighttime was caused by failure to read orders correctly, or by failure to equip locomotive with headlight; Modern Woodman Acci. Asso. v. Shryock, 54 Neb. 257, 39 L. R. A. 830, 74 N. W. 607, holding question whether death was caused by disease or accident properly submitted to jury, where deceased fell and died from heart disease shortly after; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Barry, 43 L. R. A. 371, 28 C. C. A. 650, 56 U. S. App. 37, 84 Fed. 950, holding failure of freight train to send back flagman proximate cause of rear-end collision with extra passenger train; Koch v. Fox, 71 App. Div. 298, 75 N. Y. Supp. 913, stating, but not deciding, that wrongdoer would be liable for death caused by injury producing insanity leading deceased to jump into river and contract pneumonia, from which he died; Maryland Casualty Co. v. Glass, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 161, 67 S. W. 1062, holding administration of chloroform not proximate cause of death of one dying while undergoing surgical operation for appendicitis; Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L. R. A. 423, 59 C. C. A. 601, 124 Fed. 121, holding act of strange boy opening door in dark hall, proximate cause of injury to one walking through into elevator well.

Presumption as to suicide.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 263) on insanity as affecting condition as to suicide in life insurance policy.

Death or injury due to accident.

Cited in National Masonic Acci. Asso. v. Shryock, 20 C. C. A. 5, 36 U. S. App. 658, 73 Fed. 776, holding under accident policy that insurer not liable for accidental injury hastening death from disease; Commercial Travelers' Mut. Acci. Asso. v. Fulton, 24 C. C. A. 657, 45 U. S. App. 578, 79 Fed. 426, holding insurer against accident not liable for death from accident, where death would not have resulted but for disease of insured; Western Commercial Travelers' Asso. v. Smith, 40 L. R. A. 657, 29 C. C. A. 226, 56 U. S. App. 393, 85 Fed. 404, holding death from blood poisoning from abrasion of skin accidental within meaning of policy; Thornton v. Travelers Ins. Co. 116 Ga. 127, 94 Am. St. Rep. 99, 42 S. E. 287, holding insurance company liable for injury aggravating a hernia, under policy relieving it from liability for injury resulting "wholly or partly," directly or indirectly, from hernia."

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 211) on what constitutes an accident within meaning of accident insurance policy.

Conclusiveness of proofs of death or loss.

Cited in Dischner v. Piqua Mut. Aid & Acci. Asso. 14 S. D. 438, 85 N. W. 998, upholding right of beneficiary to show that proofs of death were erroneous.

Cited in note (44 L. R. A. 843, 853) on conclusiveness of proof of loss as against insured or his beneficiaries.

Reversal on the evidence.

Cited in Fidelity & C. Co. v. Egbert, 28 C. C. A. 283, 55 U. S. App. 200, 84 Fed. 413, refusing to reverse judgment on verdict of accidental death, because evidence pointed strongly to suicide.

27 L. R. A. 635, GERMANIA BANK v. BOUTELL, 60 Minn. 189, 51 Am. St. Rep. 519, 62 N. W. 327.

Payment of forged commercial paper.

Cited in First Nat. Bank v. Marshalltown State Bank, 107 Iowa, 329, 44 L. R. A. 132, footnote p. 131, 77 N. W. 1045, holding drawee bank paying forged check liable for loss, though first indorsement also forged; First Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 58 Ohio St. 215, 41 L. R. A. 586, footnote p. 584, 65 Am. St. Rep. 748, 50 N. E. 723, sustaining, except so far as modified by local custom, general rule that drawee of check knows drawer's signature; Neal v. Coburn, 92 Me. 148, 69 Am. St. Rep. 495, 42 Atl. 348, holding that bank cannot recover amount paid on forged check to innocent holder for value; Woods v. Colony Bank, 114 Ga. 685, 56 L. R. A. 931, footnote p. 929, 40 S. E. 720, holding presumption of drawee knowing drawer's signature not available to negligent holder; Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Bingham, 30 Wash. 492, 60 L. R. A. 958, footnote p. 955, 71 Pac. 43, sustaining drawee's right to recover amount of forged check payable to fictitious person, from one cashing same on indorsement purporting to be that of payees, without requiring identification.

Cited in footnote to Robb v. Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on L. & G. Annuities, 41 L. R. A. 695, which denies depositor's liability in absence of negligence for loss from payment of his deposit on checks forged by use of rubber stamp.

Cited in notes (36 L. R. A. 539) on liability of person whose signature is forged on commercial paper; (49 L. R. A. 315) on guaranty, by one signing obligation as surety, of genuineness of other signatures.

27 L. R. A. 643, KILPATRICK v. BALTIMORE, 81 Md. 179, 48 Am. St. Rep. 509, 31 Atl. 805.

Conditions and covenants in deeds.

Cited in Faith v. Bowles, 86 Md. 17, 37 Atl. 711, holding condition subsequent not created by deed of land to county "for a public schoolhouse," etc., "and for no other purpose in fee;" Baltimore v. Day, 89 Md. 555, 43 Atl. 798, holding that deed to city granting full control of certain water for "use of inhabitants" of city authorized disposition of water outside; Ellicott v. Ellicott, 90 Md. 325, 48 L. R. A. 60, 45 Atl. 183, holding property subject to condition subsequent broken by death of devisee, decends to his heirs; Ecroyd v. Coggeshall, 21 R. I. 5, 79 Am. St. Rep. 741, 41 Atl. 260, holding condition subsequent not created by deed to city of land restricted to use for city hall; Avery v. United States, 44 C. C. A. 167, 104 Fed. 716, holding condition subsequent not created by deed to city of land "as and for a public street," etc.

Cited in footnotes to Upington v. Corrigan, 37 L. R. A. 794, which holds grantor's right of re-entry for condition broken not devisable; Rowzee v. Pierce, 40 L. R. A. 402, which sustains right to injunction against erecting schoolhouse on land dedicated for ornamental public park; Los Angeles University v. Swarth, 54 L. R. A. 262, which holds covenant, not condition, created by deed conditioned that land shall be used exclusively for college campus.

27 L. R. A. 646, BALTIMORE v. KEELEY INSTITUTE, 81 Md. 106, 31 Atl. 437.

Objects of taxation and expenditure of public funds.

Cited in Wisconsin Keeley Institute Co. v. Milwaukee County, 95 Wis. 161, 36 L. R. A. 59, footnote p. 55, 60 Am. St. Rep. 105, 79 N. W. 68, holding invalid statute for treatment of habitual drunkards at private institution at county expense.

Cited in footnotes to Re House, 33 L. R. A. 832, which sustains right to use county funds to pay for cure of indigent inebriates in private establishment; Murray v. Board of Comrs. 51 L. R. A. 828, which holds classification of counties by population for treatment of inebriates unconstitutional; State ex rel. Garrett v. Froehlich, 61 L. R. A. 345, which denies right of legislature to appropriate funds to redeem warrants issued under invalid law for treatment of inebriates at public expense; Lund v. Chippewa County, 34 L. R. A. 131, which sustains donation by county to secure site for state institution for feeble minded; Pritchard v. Magoun, 46 L. R. A. 381, which authorizes tax to aid in building for highway and railway purposes toll bridge owned by private corporation; Allen v. State Auditors, 47 L. R. A. 117, which denies right to appropriate public money to pay pardoned convict for alleged wrongful imprisonment; Dodge v. Mission Twp. 54 L. R. A. 242, which holds promotion of construction and operation of sugar mills a private purpose not authorizing taxation.

Constitutional provision as to titles of acts.

Cited in Mealey v. Hagerstown, 92 Md. 744, 48 Atl. 746, holding title to act "to provide for establishment of an electric light plant in" town sufficient to warrant provision for establishment of same "by" town.

27 L. R. A. 648, SHANFELTER v. BALTIMORE, 80 Md. 483, 31 Atl. 439.

Rule as to judicial notice of municipal ordinances.

Cited in McIntosh v. Pueblo, 9 Colo. App. 462, 48 Pac. 969, refusing to take judicial notice of municipal ordinance; Royce v. Salt Lake City, 15 Utah, 405, 49 Pac. 290, holding that city ordinances not pleaded or put in evidence cannot be considered.

Discontinuance of condemnation proceeding.

Cited in Onondaga County v. White, 38 Misc. 592, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1074, holding county entitled to discontinuance of condemnation proceedings upon payment of costs and compensation of guardian ad litem.

27 L. R. A. 651, WYETH HARDWARE & MFG. CO. v. H. F. LANG & CO. 127 Mo. 242, 48 Am. St. Rep. 626, 29 S. W. 1010.

Service by publication.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 486, 41 L. R. A. 333, footnote p. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, holding garnishment of debt due nonresident not personally served in state, invalid.

Garnishment proceedings.

Cited in Howland v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 134 Mo. 478, 36 S. W. 29, holding debts attachable in any state of which debtor is not a resident; Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 599, 36 L. R. A. 642, footnote p. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631, authorizing garnishment of foreign corporation for debt due nonresident; Nordyke v. Charlton, 108 Iowa, 419, 79 N. W. 136, holding attachment of promissory notes superior to later garnishment in another state; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 717, 43 L. ed. 1146, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, reversing judgment for failure to grant continuance on ground of pending appeal in garnishment proceeding in another state; Cross v. Brown, 19 R. I. 228, 33 Atl. 147, holding situs of debt for garnishment to be at domicile of garnished debtor; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 124, footnote p. 120, 46 C. C. A. 136, 107 Fed. 45, holding right to garnish debtor not limited to situs of chose in action; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 460, 62 L. R. A. 184, footnote p. 178, 44 S. E. 300, holding nonresident summoned as garnishee while temporarily within state not subject to further proceedings unless he has property within state; Dinkins v. Crunden-Martin Woodenware Co. 99 Mo. App. 317, 73 S. W. 246, upholding garnishment of debt due from resident to nonresident of state; Swedish-American Nat. Bank v. Bleecker, 72 Minn. 392, 42 L. R. A. 283, 75 N. W. 740, denying right of Minnesota creditor to garnish English insurance company, liable for loss on debtor's property in Dakota.

Cited in footnotes to Reimers v. Seatco Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 364, which denies right to garnish foreign corporation in case where all parties nonresidents; Ward v. Boyce, 36 L. R. A. 549, which holds trustee process in other state to reach note held by nonresident not personally served ineffectual; Strause Bros. v. Aetna Ins. Co. 48 L. R. A. 452, which holds debt of insurance company for loss in other state without situs where company has agent, for garnishment purposes, in third state; Bullard v. Chaffee, 51 L. R. A. 715, which holds person garnishable only in state where debt payable, if creditor resides there; Hawley v. Hurd, 52 L. R. A. 195, which sustains discrimination between banks in and out of state as to attachment of negotiable paper.

Distinguished in Tourville v. Wabash R. Co. 148 Mo. 621, 71 Am. St. Rep. 650, 50 S. W. 300, upholding trial court's refusal to admit evidence of foreign garnishment proceedings, where cause had been remanded with directions to enter judgment.

27 L. R. A. 653, DRAKE v. CRANE, 127 Mo. 85, 29 S. W. 990.

Construction of wills.

Cited in McMillan v. Farrow, 141 Mo. 62, 41 S. W. 890, holding circumstances surrounding testator at time of execution of will are to be taken into consideration in determining his intention; Turney v. Sparks, 88 Mo. App. 369, and Cross v. Hoch, 149 Mo. 338, 50 S. W. 786, holding that will should be construed so as to give effect to intention of testator as gathered from whole instrument; Underwood v. Cave, 176 Mo. 12, 75 S. W. 451, holding devise of life estate not enlarged by use of words "shall be hers absolutely during her natural life."

Powers of trustees under wills and of married women.

Cited in Garesche v. Levering Invest. Co. 146 Mo. 446, 46 L. R. A. 235, footnote p. 232, 48 S. W. 653, denying power of trustees, under will, to incorporate trust estate.

Cited in footnote to Detroit Chamber of Commerce v. Goodman, 35 L. R. A. 96, which denies married woman's right to subscribe for fund for procuring improvement on property near hers.

27 L. R. A. 660, GUILD v. GOODWIN, 94 Tenn. 486, 45 Am. St. Rep. 743, 29 S. W. 721.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in Morgan v. Duffy, 94 Tenn. 690, 30 S. W. 735, holding that statute of limitations does not run against action for malicious prosecution until prosecution ends.

27 L. R. A. 662, BUSH v. McFARLAND, 94 Tenn. 538, 45 Am. St. Rep. 760, 29 S. W. 899.

Signature of witness to will.

Cited in Re Crawford (S. C.) 32 L. R. A. 78, 24 S. E. 69, holding signature to will not insufficient because written by another witness in presence, and at request, of former.

27 L. R. A. 663, NASHVILLE TRUST CO. v. SMYTHE, 94 Tenn. 513, 45 Am. St. Rep. 748, 29 S. W. 903.

Rights of holders of notes secured by vendor's liens or mortgages.

Cited in Hamilton v. Fowler, 40 C. C. A. 52, 99 Fed. 24, holding that mortgage securing note passes to indorsee without specific assignment; Douglass v. Blount, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 496, 55 S. W. 520, holding assignee of one of a series of notes secured by vendor's lien or mortgage entitled to priority as against other notes in hands of vendor; First Nat. Bank v. Edgar, 65 Neb. 344, 91 N. W. 404, holding lien of vendor of land assigned pro tanto upon assignment by vendor of part of purchase price notes.

Cited in footnotes to Kernohan v. Manss, 29 L. R. A. 317, which holds bona fide purchasers before maturity of genuine notes secured by mortgage entitled to priority over previous assignee of genuine mortgage and forged copies of notes; Owings v. McKenzie, 40 L. R. A. 154, which holds second note secured by deed of trust not made due by mere nonpayment of first note.

27 L. R. A. 669, FLINN v. PRAIRIE COUNTY, 60 Ark. 204, 46 Am. St. Rep. 168, 29 S. W. 459.

Compensation of witnesses.

Cited in Clark County v. Kerstan, 60 Ark. 509, 30 S. W. 1046, holding physician making post mortem examination not entitled to additional compensation for testifying as to its results; Dixon v. People, 168 Ill. 196, 39 L. R. A. 125, 48 N. E. 108, holding physician punishable for contempt on refusal to testify as an expert without being paid; Barrus v. Phaneuf, 166 Mass. 125, 32 L. R. A. 620, footnotes p. 619, 44 N. E. 141, sustaining contract to pay extra compensation to expert witness.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 120, 121) on right of state to require service of witnesses without compensation.

27 L. R. A. 676, BROWN v. EPPS, 91 Va. 726, 21 S. E. 119.

Rights of prisoners as to trial.

Cited in Re Kinsel, 64 Kan. 5, 56 L. R. A. 477, 67 Pac. 634, upholding conviction for violation of city ordinance against keeping bawdy house, without trial by jury; Benton v. Com. 91 Va. 786, 21 S. E. 495, holding speedy trial not denied where new trial was granted defendant for erroneous continuance.

Cited in footnote to State v. Gerry, 38 L. R. A. 228, which holds right to jury trial not satisfied by jury trial on appeal.

Bill of exceptions signed in vacation.

Cited in Virginia Development Co. v. Rich Patch Iron Co. 98 Va. 708, 37 S. E. 280, holding bill of exceptions signed by judge in vacation, upon consent of parties, invalid.

27 L. R. A. 680, SHIELDS v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. 97 Ky. 103, 29 S. W. 978.

Injuries received in alighting from moving trains.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Webb, 99 Ky. 343, 35 S. W. 1117, denying liability of railroad company for injury to boy in jumping from car, which he had boarded without knowledge of conductor; Berry v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 100 Ky. 736, 60 S. W. 699, denying liability of carrier for injury received by one not a passenger, in alighting from moving train.

27 L. R. A. 684, STATE, TIDE WATER PIPE CO., PROSECUTOR, v. STATE ASSESSORS, 57 N. J. L. 516, 31 Atl. 220.

Affirmed without opinion in 59 N. J. L. 269, 39 Atl. 1114.

Taxation of corporations.

Cited in Hancock v. Singer Mfg. Co. 62 N. J. L. 351, 42 L. R. A. 863, 41 Atl. 846, declaring franchise tax void under special charter of defendant corporation.

Cited in notes (60 L. R. A. 685) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause; (57 L. R. A. 60, 92) on taxation of corporate franchises in United States.

Joint stock and unincorporated companies.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Railroad & W. Commission v. Adams Exp. Co. 38 L. R. A. 225, which holds service on nonresident joint stock association properly made on local agent; State ex rel. Railroad & W. Commission v. United States Exp. Co. 50 L. R. A. 667, which sustains state's right to require information as to business within state of unincorporated express company of other state; Re Jones, 60 L. R. A. 476, which holds shares in joint stock company owning real estate only, personalty in applying transfer tax law.

Pipe lines.

Cited in footnote to Clements v. Philadelphia Co. 39 L. R. A. 532, which sustains gas company's right to enter premises to remove gas pipes on abandoning useless line.

27 L. R. A. 685, KROESSIN v. KELLER, 60 Minn. 372, 51 Am. St. Rep. 533, 62 N. W. 438.

Actions for torts by or against married women.

Cited in Pett-Morgan v. Kennedy, 62 Minn. 355, 30 L. R. A. 531, 54 Am. St. Rep. 647, 64 N. W. 912, holding common-law rule as to liability of husband for slander by wife not abrogated by statutes relating to married women; Lockwood v. Lockwood, 67 Minn. 493, 70 N. W. 784, holding action maintainable by wife for alienation of husband's affections.

Cited in footnotes to Tucker v. Tucker, 32 L. R. A. 623, which holds parent not liable for advising son to separate from wife; Brown v. Brown, 38 L. R. A. 242, which sustains right of action in own name by abandoned wife against person causing abandonment; Houghton v. Rice, 47 L. R. A. 311, which denies right of action against other woman for alienating husband's affections, when unaccompanied by adultery; Dietzman v. Mullin, 50 L. R. A. 808; Wolf v. Frank, 52 L. R. A. 102; Betsar v. Betsar, 52 L. R. A. 630, — which sustains wife's right of action for alienating her husband's affections.

27 L. R. A. 686, STATE v. KENT, 4 N. D. 577, 62 N. W. 631.

Report of second appeal in 5 N. D. 529, 35 L. R. A. 523, 67 N. W. 1052.

Bias of trial judge.

Cited in Lincoln v. Territory, 8 Okla. 552, 58 Pac. 730, holding defendant entitled to change of judge, upon affidavit positively stating that he cannot have fair trial.

Distinguished in Cox v. United States, 5 Okla. 715, 50 Pac. 175, upholding right of court to refuse application for change of trial judges, unless bias or prejudice of judge reasonably appears.

Right of state attorney to outside assistance.

Cited in Thalheim v. State, 38 Fla. 184, 20 So. 938, upholding right of state attorney in criminal case to be assisted by attorneys in employ of private corporation; United States v. Rosenthal, 121 Fed. 872, holding indictments invalidated by presence of special assistant to district attorney, before grand jury.

Rules as to principals in felonies.

Cited in State v. Geddes, 22 Mont. 87, 55 Pac. 919, holding indictment charging defendant as principal, with murder, sustained by proof that he advised and encouraged it.

Inducements for testifying.

Cited in Territory v. Chavez, 8 N. M. 537, 45 Pac. 1107, holding exclusion of testimony as to liberty and favor granted witnesses convicted of crime, erroneous.

27 L. R. A. 696, ERSKINE v. NELSON COUNTY, 4 N. D. 66, 58 N. W. 348.

Curative statutes.

Cited in Steele County v. Erskine, 39 C. C. A. 173, 98 Fed. 220, Affirming 87 Fed. 636, upholding right of legislature by curative statute to validate municipal contract declared void by courts.

27 L. R. A. 710, HEALTH DEPARTMENT v. TRINITY CHURCH, 145 N. Y. 32, 64 N. Y. S. R. 507, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833.

Due exercise of police power.

Cited in People v. Haynor, 149 N. Y. 201, 31 L. R. A. 691, 52 Am. St. Rep. 707 43 N. E. 541, upholding constitutionality of act forbidding barbering on Sunday, excepting in city of New York and village of Saratoga; Department of Buildings v. Field, 12 App. Div. 260, 42 N. Y. Supp. 691, upholding order requiring boarding-house owner to comply with statute relating to fire escapes; Cartwright v. Cohoes, 39 App. Div. 72, 56 N. Y. Supp. 731, upholding ordinance forbidding maintenance of privy vault within 25 feet of door or window of residence; Brooklyn v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 44 App. Div. 466, 61 N. Y. Supp. 33, upholding validity of act forbidding use of soft coal within specified district in city; People v. Lochner, 177 N. Y. 154, 101 Am. St. Rep. 773, 69 N. E. 373, Affirming 73 App. Div. 125, 76 N. Y. Supp. 396, upholding act regulating hours of labor in bakery and confectionery establishments; State v. Hogreiver, 152 Ind. 660, 45 L. R. A. 509, 53 N. E. 921, upholding validity of act prohibiting baseball on Sunday, where any fee is charged; People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 532, 32 L. R. A. 856, 62 Am. St. Rep. 715, 66 N. W. 382, upholding validity of act requiring emery wheels to be provided with blowers; State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 627, 43 L. R. A. 294, 67 Am. St. Rep. 695, 41 Atl. 1030, upholding validity of act regulating fishing in streams stocked by fish and game commissioners; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 76, 42 L. ed. 954, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, Affirming 47 Neb. 572, 41 L. R. A. 486, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624, upholding validity of act authorizing city to require railroad companies to construct and repair viaducts over its streets; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 197, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302, holding act providing for summary seizure and forfeiture of boat owned or used by person interfering with oysters or shell fish of another not authorized under police power; Flushing v. Carraher, 87 Hun, 64, 33 N. Y. Supp. 951, declaring ordinance forbidding keeping of cows within 200 feet of any dwelling, without special permit, invalid; New York Sanitary Utilization Co. v. Health Department, 61 App. Div. 113, 70 N. Y. Supp. 510, Affirming 32 Misc. 582, 67 N. Y. Supp. 324, denying constitutionality of act directing removal by health board of garbage plants from city; Bell v. Gaynor, 14 Misc. 338, 36 N. Y. Supp. 122, questioning constitutionality of act forbidding use of milk cans without consent of owner; Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 19, holding quarantine of district of twelve blocks, containing more than 10,000 persons, where only nine persons were supposed to have died from bubonic plague, unreasonable; Eckhardt v. Buffalo, 19 App. Div. 17, 46 N. Y. Supp. 204 (concurring opinion), holding health commissioners of city, after abating privy vault, without power to build new closet and drain at expense of $300 in different place; Haag v. Mt. Vernon, 41 App. Div. 369, 58 N. Y. Supp. 581, denying power of board of health to construct swamp drain at cost of $10,000 and to levy assessment by foot frontage upon real estate to pay for same; New York v. Herdje, 68 App. Div. 374, 74 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding owner not relieved from operation of amended building law, enacted in exercise of police power, because of permit to build and letting of contract under original act; Regan v. Fosdick, 19 Misc. 493, 43 N. Y. Supp. 1102, denying that renewal of lease is implied by holding over of tenant, due to compulsory quarantine by health board under police power; Tenement House Department v. Moeschon, 89 App. Div. 534, 85 N. Y. Supp. 704, holding act requiring school sinks in tenement houses to be replaced by individual water closets, reasonable exercise of police powers.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Speyer, 29 L. R. A. 573, which holds unreasonable, resolution against maintaining pig pen within 100 feet of street or inhabited house; Bostock v. Sams, 59 L. R. A. 282, which holds unauthorized, ordinance permitting refusal of permits for erecting buildings not conforming in size, appearance, etc., to existing buildings; State v. Hyman, 64 L. R. A. 637, which holds prohibition against use of room in tenement or dwelling house for manufacture of clothing, except by immediate member of family, within police power.

Cited in notes (36 L. R. A. 613) on power of municipal corporations to define, prevent, and abate nuisances; (38 L. R. A. 168) on municipal power over buildings and other structures as nuisances; (61 L. R. A. 118) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

— Restrictions upon lawful occupations.

Cited in Grossman v. Caminez, 79 App. Div. 21, 79 N. Y. Supp. 900, holding act forbidding sale of real property by agent, without written consent of owner, unconstitutional; Whiteley v. Terry, 83 App. Div. 200, 82 N. Y. Supp. 89, holding same act constitutional; People ex rel. Tyroler v. City Prison, 157 N. Y. 149, 43 L. R. A. 276, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act forbidding business of brokerage in passage tickets unconstitutional.

— Delegation of power.

Distinguished in Schaezlein v. Cabaniss, 135 Cal. 471, 56 L. R. A. 735, 87 Am. St. Rep. 122, 67 Pac. 755, holding that power to provide for proper sanitation of factories cannot be delegated to commissioner of bureau of labor statistics.

Right to compel supply of gas at flat rates.

Cited in footnote to Indiana Natural & I. Gas Co. v. State, 57 L. R. A. 761, which holds that consumer cannot compel gas company, authorized to charge meter or flat rates, to supply him at flat rate, unless meter rate be shown to be unjust discrimination.

Due process of law.

Cited in Fire Department v. Gilmour, 149 N. Y. 459, 52 Am. St. Rep. 747, 44 N. E. 177, denying necessity of notice of investigation before issuance of order for removal of combustibles; People ex rel. Renshaw v. Gillespie, 25 App. Div. 93, 48 N. Y. Supp. 882, upholding, under statute, order of justice of peace, made without notice, directing owner to kill vicious dog; Cartwright v. Cohoes, 39 App. Div. 73, 56 N. Y. Supp. 731, holding health board not obliged to hear anybody with reference to abatement of privy nuisance; Westchester Electric R. Co. v. Angevine, 52 App. Div. 241, 65 N. Y. Supp. 376, and Golden v. Health Department, 21 App. Div. 424, 47 N. Y. Supp. 623, holding orders of board of health as to abatement of alleged nuisance reviewable in court; Re Boston & A. R. Co. 64 App. Div. 261, 72 N. Y. Supp. 32, refusing to set aside determination of commissioners directing abolition of grade crossing; Egan v. Health Department, 20 Misc. 40, 45 N. Y. Supp. 325, denying right of owner to notice before making of order by health board relating to sanitary condition of tenement house; Fox v. Mohawk & H. R. Humane Soc. 20 Misc. 467, 46 N. Y. Supp. 232, upholding act authorizing killing of unlicensed dogs without compensation to owners; State v. Main, 69 Conn. 138, 36 L. R. A. 628, 61 Am. St. Rep. 30, 37 Atl. 80, upholding validity of act permitting summary destruction of peach trees affected with "yellows;" Sprigg v. Garrett Park, 89 Md. 412, 43 Atl. 813, denying right of owner of premises to notice of ordinance and order authorizing abatement of cesspool; Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 245, 38 L. R. A. 320, 38 Atl. 1, upholding act authorizing aldermen to order, without notice, owner to connect land with sewer and to fill up other drainage receptacles; State v. Sponaugle, 45 W. Va. 430, 43 L. R. A. 734, 32 S. E. 283, holding provision in Federal Constitution as to due process of law not violated by state Constitution permitting forfeiture of land for violation of tax statutes.

27 L. R. A. 718, PEOPLE ex rel. NECHAMCUS v. CITY PRISON, 144 N. Y. 529, 64 N. Y. S. R. 51, 39 N. E. 686.

Police powers.

Cited in People v. Havnor, 149 N. Y. 201, 31 L. R. A. 691, 52 Am. St. Rep. 707, 43 N. E. 541, upholding act prohibiting Sunday barbering, except in city of New York and village of Saratoga; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 197, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302, holding act providing for summary seizure of boats used by persons interfering with oysters or shell fish belonging to another unconstitutional; People v. Lochner, 177 N. Y. 153, 101 Am. St. Rep. 773, 69 N. E. 373, Affirming 73 App. Div. 125, 76 N. Y. Supp. 396, upholding act regulating hours of labor in bakery and confectionery establishments; Bell v. Gaynor, 14 Misc. 338, 36 N. Y. Supp. 122, questioning constitutionality of act prohibiting use of milk cans bearing name or initials of owner, without consent of such owner or agent; Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 798, 42 L. R. A. 179, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850; Com. v. Pear, 183 Mass. 245, 66 N. E. 719, upholding act authorizing compulsory vaccination; People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 531, 32 L. R. A. 856, 62 Am. St. Rep. 715, 66 N. W. 382, upholding act requiring emery wheels to be provided with blowers; Lore v. American Mfg. Co. 160 Mo. 622, 61 S. W. 678, upholding act requiring cogwheel guards to spinning machines in jute manufactory; State v. Holden, 14 Utah, 91, 37 L. R. A. 106, 46 Pac. 756, upholding act prohibiting persons from laboring in mines more than eight hours a day; New York v. Chelsea Jute Mills, 43 Misc. 269, 88 N. Y. Supp. 1085, upholding act forbidding employment in any service of child under fourteen years of age, during school term.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Speyer, 29 L. R. A. 573, which holds unreasonable resolution against maintaining pig pen within 100 feet of street or inhabited house; State v. Hyman, 64 L. R. A. 637, which holds prohibition against use of room in tenement or dwelling house for manufacture of clothing, except by immediate member of family, within police power.

Distinguished in Bronk v. Barkley, 13 App. Div. 76, 43 N. Y. Supp. 400, holding contract for prison labor not abrogated by subsequent constitutional and legislative provisions enacted in pursuance of police powers, prohibiting such contracts.

— Restrictions upon lawful occupations.

Cited in State v. Zeno, 79 Minn. 84, 48 L. R. A. 90, 79 Am. St. Rep. 422, 88 N. W. 748, upholding act requiring registration of barbers; Ex parte Lucas, 160 Mo. 233, 61 S. W. 218, upholding act requiring licensing of barbers; People v. O'Connell, 1 App. Div. 111, 36 N. Y. Supp. 1092, reaffirming constitutionality of act providing for licenses by examining boards of plumbers; State ex rel. Winkler v. Benzenberg, 101 Wis. 177, 76 N. W. 345, and State v. Gardner, 58 Ohio St. 609, 41 L. R. A. 691, footnote p. 689, 65 Am. St. Rep. 785, 51 N. E. 136, upholding right of legislature to require plumbers to undergo examination before being licensed to work; Schnaier v. Navarre Hotel & Importation Co. 82 App. Div. 29, 81 N. Y. Supp. 633, holding act requiring master plumbers to hold certificate of competency from examining board constitutional; State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 618, 41 L. R. A. 217, 50 N. E. 750, upholding act requiring licensing of physicians; People ex rel. Tyroler v. City Prison, 157 N. Y. 149, 43 L. R. A. 276, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006 (dissenting opinion), majority denying constitutionality of act prohibiting sale of passage tickets by brokers.

Powers conferred upon local authorities.

Cited in Grannan v. Westchester Racing Asso. 153 N. Y. 461, 47 N. E. 896, upholding right of jockey club, under statutes, to rule person off turf for disobedience of reasonable rules; Rathbone v. Wirth, 150 N. Y. 518, 34 L. R. A. 429, 45 N. E. 15 (dissenting opinion), majority holding clause in act providing membership in political parties having largest vote, test of eligibility to office of police commissioner, unconstitutional.

Due process of law.

Cited in Re Jensen, 28 Misc. 382, 59 N. Y. Supp. 653, declaring act providing for payment by city, without notice, of counsel fees and expenses of officials, acquitted of criminal charge, unconstitutional.

Contracts by unlicensed plumbers.

Cited in Johnston v. Dahlgren, 31 App. Div. 206, 52 N. Y. Supp. 555, denying enforceability of plumbing contract by unregistered plumbers.

Presumption as to validity of acts of health boards.

Cited in People ex rel. Lieberman v. Vandecarr, 81 App. Div. 129, 80 N. Y. Supp. 1108, holding board of health presumed to have been warranted in revoking permit for sale of milk, in absence of evidence to contrary.

27 L. R. A. 724, WALSH v. FITCHBURG R. CO. 145 N. Y. 301, 64 N. Y. S. R. 711, 45 Am. St. Rep. 615, 39 N. E. 1068.

Injuries to child trespassers and licensees.

Cited in Kelly v. Smith, 29 App. Div. 350, 51 N. Y. Supp. 413, denying liability of owner of building for death of boy by use of fire escape ladder, taken from its place without former's knowledge; DeBoer v. Brooklyn Wharf & Warehouse Co. 51 App. Div. 291, 64 N. Y. Supp. 925, holding warehouse company liable for negligent killing of child licensee on its premises; Fitzgerald v. Rodgers, 58 App. Div. 301, 68 N. Y. Supp. 946, denying liability of contractor for injury to ten-year-old boy caused in playing with winch left in uncompleted highway; Travell v. Bannerman, 71 App. Div. 441, 75 N. Y. Supp. 866, majority denying liability of proprietor of gun factory for injury to fourteen-year-old boy by explosion of refuse taken by boys from defendant's lot; Wilson v. American Bridge Co. 74 App. Div. 601, 77 N. Y. Supp. 820, holding bridge company liable for scalding boy on railroad embankment by steam from exhaust pipe; Albert v. New York, 75 App. Div. 557, 78 N. Y. Supp. 355, denying liability of city for death of boy killed by falling from unfinished sea wall; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Beavers, 113 Ga. 411, 54 L. R. A. 320, 39 S. E. 82, denying liability of railroad company for drowning of boy in water in excavation on its premises; Ryan v. Towar, 128 Mich. 476, 55 L. R. A. 315, 92 Am. St. Rep. 481, 87 N. W. 644, denying liability of owner for injury to child trespassers playing with unused water wheel; O'Leary v. Brooks Elevator Co. 7 N. D. 563, 41 L. R. A. 680, 75 N. W. 910, denying liability for injury to boy trespasser caught in shafting while endeavoring to get cane at direction of partially blind uncle; Dull v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 21 Ind. App. 594, 52 N. E. 1013, denying liability of railroad company for mere negligent injury to seven-year-old trespasser on tracks; Edgington v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 116 Iowa, 434, 57 L. R. A. 570, footnote p. 561, 90 N. W. 95, holding railroad company liable for injuries to young children by unfastened turntable in unfenced lot near public way; Coleman v. Robert Graves Co. 39 Misc. 85, 78 N. Y. Supp. 893, denying liability of defendant for injury to nine-year-old child whose dress was set on fire while she was poking hot ashes with stick; Turess v. New York, S. & W. R. Co. 61 N. J. L. 320, 40 Atl. 614, denying liability of railroad company for injury to child playing with turntable without invitation; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Reich. 61 N. J. L. 638, 41 L. R. A. 833, footnote p. 831, 68 Am. St. Rep. 727, 40 Atl. 682, denying liability for injury to child playing on turntable on owner's private property; Ritz v. Wheeling, 45 W. Va. 270, 43 L. R. A. 153, 31 S. E. 993, denying liability of city for death of four-year-old child drowned in reservoir; Paolino v. McKendall, 24 R. I. 436, 60 L. R. A. 136, 96 Am. St. Rep. 736, 53 Atl. 268, holding occupier of land, burning rubbish thereon, not liable for injury to children approaching too near the fire; Haack v. Brooklyn Labor Lyceum Asso. 93 App. Div. 495, 87 N. Y. Supp. 814, holding owner of premises bound to use reasonable care to protect licensee under twelve years of age, from injury from falling wall.

Cited in footnotes to Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl, 59 L. R. A. 920, which holds railroad company liable for injury to child on turntable not guarded or properly fastened; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Edwards, 32 L. R. A. 825, which denies liability of railroad company for injuries to child playing on bridge ties in fenced railroad yard; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Waller, 34 L. R. A. 459, which denies liability of railroad company for injury to seven-year-old boy running under freight car to get ball, at request of employee; Biggs v. Consolidated Barb-Wire Co. 44 L. R. A. 655, which holds owner liable for maintaining dangerous machinery on private grounds unprotected from visits of trespassing children; George v. Los Angeles R. Co. 46 L. R. A. 829, which denies company's liability to boys hurt while playing with trolley car left in street, after loosening brake; Kopplekom v. Colorado Cement Pipe Co. 54 L. R. A. 284, which holds owner of uninclosed city lot liable for injury to young child by toppling over of large cement pipe used by children as plaything.

Distinguished in Lenz v. Aldrich, 6 App. Div. 183, 39 N. Y. Supp. 1022 (dissenting opinion), majority denying liability of house owner for injury to child, due to rotten clothes-line pole in yard where child was playing; Wittleder v. Citizens' Electric Illuminating Co. 47 App. Div. 412, 62 N. Y. Supp. 297 holding electric light company liable for injury to boy trespasser on elevated road property, due to shock from negligently placed wire.

Rule as to adult trespassers and licensees.

Cited in Connelly v. Erie R. Co. 68 App. Div. 543, 74 N. Y. Supp. 277, denying liability of carrier to licensee for burning of railroad ties in fire kindled by locomotive sparks; Knight v. Lanier, 69 App. Div. 457, 74 N. Y. Supp. 999, holding automobile owner liable for careless and heedless injury to plaintiff, caused by frightening latter's horse in private lane; Wells v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 34 Misc. 46, 68 N. Y. Supp. 305, holding elevated railroad corporation owes mere licensee duty of reasonable vigilance and care to prevent injury; Leavitt v. Mudge Shoe Co. 69 N. H. 598, 45 Atl. 558, denying duty of defendant to keep elevator locked against trespassers.

Injury to trespassing animals.

Cited in Oefflein v. Zautcke, 92 Wis. 179, 66 N. W. 108, holding active vigilance not required of landowner to prevent horse from trespassing on premises, so as to prevent its being killed by straying thence upon railroad tracks.

Res ipsa loquitur.

Cited in Groarke v. Laemmle, 56 App. Div. 63, 67 N. Y. Supp. 409, holding proof that milk wagon standing in sloping yard ran down and struck boy insufficient to establish defendant's negligence.

27 L. R. A. 728, COCHRANE v. FROSTBURG, 81 Md. 54, 48 Am. St. Rep. 479, 31 Atl. 703.

Ordinances relating to animals running at large.

Cited in Hagerstown v. Witmer, 86 Md. 300, 39 L. R. A. 659, 37 Atl. 965, upholding validity of ordinance providing for killing of dogs running at large.

Cited in footnote to Elliott v. Kitchens, 33 L. R. A. 364, which holds three-months-old colt not running at large within meaning of ordinance, when following dam in street.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 675, 677) on municipal power over nuisance affecting highways and waters.

Municipal duties and liabilities.

Cited in Hagerstown v. Klotz, 93 Md. 440, 54 L. R. A. 941, 86 Am. St. Rep. 437, 49 Atl. 836, holding duty of municipality to protect persons from injury not discharged by mere passage of ordinance regulating speed of bicycles; Lenzen v. New Braunfels, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 363, 35 S. W. 341, holding city liable for negligence in failure to supply water to extinguish fire.

27 L. R. A. 733, SEEVERS v. GABEL, 94 Iowa, 75, 58 Am. St. Rep. 381, 62 N. W. 669.

Who must bear loss of destruction of property by fire.

Cited in Norton v. Melick, 97 Iowa, 567, 66 N. W. 780, denying liability of agent not negligent, for destruction of property in his possession by fire.

Distinguished in Butterick Pub. Co. v. Bailey, 105 Iowa, 335, 75 N. W. 189, holding vendee under contract providing for return of goods, liable for their destruction by fire.

27 L. R. A. 735, GREENSTREET v. THORNTON, 60 Ark. 369, 30 S. W. 347.

Effect of judgment against dead person.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 154, 170) on effect of judgment entered against dead person.

27 L. R. A. 737, STATE ex rel. RICHARDS v. CINCINNATI, 52 Ohio St. 419, 40 N. E. 508.

Amendments as to statutes.

Cited in Walsh v. State, 142 Ind. 361, 33 L. R. A. 393, footnote p. 392, 41 N. E. 65, authorizing removal of constitutional objections to statute by subsequent amendments; Miller v. Hixson, 64 Ohio St. 50, 59 N. E. 749, holding amendment to statute extending time during which special tax for constructing road could be levied, retroactive as to roads built before its enactment; English & S.-A. Mortg. & Invest. Co. v. Hardy, 93 Tex. 300, 55 S. W. 169, holding valid amendment to unconstitutional act not invalidated by unconstitutionality of former legislation.

Power to change boundary lines of municipalities.

Cited in State ex rel. Hildreth v. Cincinnati, 3 Ohio N. P. 128, upholding ordinance making annexed territory, containing small number of voters, part of existing ward; Taggart v. Claypool, 145 Ind. 596, 32 L. R. A. 588, footnote p. 586. 44 N. E. 18, holding annexation to city not taking of property; Woolverton v. Albany, 152 Ind. 79, 52 N. E. 455, holding courts without jurisdiction to entertain action to disannex territory; South Morgantown v. Morgantown, 49 W. Va. 731, 40 S. E. 15, upholding power of legislature to consolidate municipalities.

Cited in footnotes to Kuhn v. Port Townsend, 29 L. R. A. 445, which holds mere irregularities no ground for attack on annexation of territory to city; Denver v. Coulehan, 27 L. R. A. 751, which denies legislative power to annex noncontiguous territory to city; Forsyth v. Hammond, 30 L. R. A. 576, which denies jurisdiction of city council to annex lands on petition of nonadjacent land-owners; State ex rel. West v. Des Moines, 31 L. R. A. 186, which refuses to disturb jurisdiction of city over territory annexed under void statute, after undisputed exercise of authority for several years; Re North Milwaukee, 33 L. R. A. 638, which holds void, act requiring court to determine whether or not territory should be incorporated as village; Kansas City v. Clark, 52 L. R. A. 321, which sustains exemption of agricultural lands from statute extending city boundaries.

Cited in notes (34 L. R. A. 196) on municipal taxation of rural lands within limits of corporation; (60 L. R. A. 565) on power to cure unconstitutional statute by amendment.

Classification of cities.

Cited in State ex rel. Monnett v. Baker, 55 Ohio St. 10, 44 N. E. 516, upholding constitutionality of classification of cities, based on population, permitting cities to become members of particular class without additional legislation; Re Brown, 6 Ohio N. P. 181, upholding as proper classification, act failing to require public auditors of cities of first class to verify their reports.

Quo warranto.

Cited in State ex rel. Strimple v. Bingham, 14 Ohio C. C. 247, upholding jurisdiction in quo warranto to oust municipal corporation assuming to exercise franchise not conferred by law.

27 L. R. A. 751, DENVER v. COULEHAN, 20 Colo. 471, 39 Pac. 425.

Powers of legislature.

Cited in Meskeu v. Highlands, 9 Colo. App. 257, 47 Pac. 846, upholding power of legislature to authorize cities and towns to prohibit sales of liquor within, and for distance of mile beyond, their limits.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 849) on power of legislature to enact code or compilation of laws, or amend many or designated sections thereof by a single statute.

Boundaries of municipalities.

Cited in Montclair v. Thomas, 31 Colo. 329, 73 Pac. 48, holding town discontinued by constitutional amendment consolidating it with city.

Cited in footnote to Kansas City v. Clark, 52 L. R. A. 321, which sustains exemption of agricultural lands from statute extending city boundaries.

27 L. R. A. 757, AMERICAN SUGAR REF. CO. v. FANCHER, 145 N. Y. 552, 65 N. Y. S. R. 506, 40 N. E. 206.

Equity jurisdiction in actions to recover property.

Cited in Missouri Broom Mfg. Co. v. Guymon, 53 C. C. A. 21, 115 Fed. 117, holding action maintainable in equity for recovery of property sold by reason of false representation of vendee.

Recovery of property wrongfully obtained.

Cited in Bird v. Lanphear, 92 Hun, 571, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1069, holding action maintainable by vendees to recover commissions paid by vendors on false representation by defendant that no commissions were to be paid; Converse v. Sickles, 146 N. Y. 206, 48 Am. St. Rep. 790, 40 N. E. 777, Reversing 16 App. Div. 51, 44 N. Y. Supp. 1080, upholding right of vendor to disaffirm fraudulent sale and follow proceeds in hands of sheriff; Bird v. Lanphear, 11 App. Div. 614, 42 N. Y. Supp. 623, holding complaint demanding accounting for moneys fraudulently obtained in purchase of real estate, sufficient; Deitz v. Field, 10 App. Div. 427, 41 N. Y. Supp. 1087, Affirming 17 Misc. 27, 39 N. Y. Supp. 257, denying right to recover possession of securities after recovery in action for conversion; Sheffield v. Mitchell, 31 App. Div. 270, 52 N. Y. Supp. 925, upholding right of vendor of property obtained by vendee by fraud, to follow identified proceeds into hands of fraudulent transferee; Seitz v. Seitz, 59 App. Div. 153, 69 N. Y. Supp. 170, holding that constructive ex maleficio or ex delicto trust arises to enable equity to follow proceeds of dishonest dealing; Phelan v. Downes, 59 App. Div. 285, 69 N. Y. Supp. 375, Affirming 31 Misc. 522, 64 N. Y. Supp. 737, holding funds of company, used without its consent for cash payment on foreclosure sale, recoverable from referee; Dayton v. H. B. Claffin Co. 41 N. Y. Supp. 849, upholding right of firm to proceeds of insurance policy payable to widow of employee, premiums having been paid with money stolen from employers; Whitehead v. O'Sullivan, 12 Misc. 582, 33 N. Y. Supp. 1098, upholding right to satisfaction of attorney's lien out of identified proceeds in receiver's hands of sale of property to which it attached; Walsh v. National Broadway Bank, 13 Misc. 5, 33 N. Y. Supp. 998, holding action maintainable against bank by principal for money wrongfully deposited by agent in his own name; Hallahan v. Webber, 15 Misc. 332, 37 N. Y. Supp. 613, upholding right of vendor, rescinding sale for fraud, to recover proceeds of goods subsequently sold by assignee of vendee; Howell v. Berger, 19 Misc. 316, 44 N. Y. Supp. 259, upholding right of vendor to follow proceeds of goods obtained by fraud in hands of vendee's administrators; Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 364, 85 N. W. 300, holding plaintiff entitled to proceeds of sale of mortgaged property by bank with knowledge of plaintiff's lien; Bank Comrs. v. Security Trust Co. 70 N. H. 548, 49 Atl. 113, holding beneficial owner not entitled to preference over general creditors of insolvent, unless he can trace property into specific property in hands of representative.

Cited in footnote to Drovers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Roller, 36 L. R. A. 767, which holds that money collected by trustees of insolvent for sales by him as commission merchant belong to consignor when capable of identification.

Distinguished in Hatch v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 147 N. Y. 193, 41 N. E. 403, holding bank not liable to refund to third person proceeds of collateral securities unlawfully pledged by customer in regular course of business; Newburgh Sav. Bank v. Woodbury, 173 N. Y. 58, 65 N. E. 858, holding money paid drafted men under void conscription act not recoverable from them.

— Estoppel.

Cited in National Bank of Deposit v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 390, 59 N. E. 922, holding firm and assignee estopped from asserting, because of nonpossession, invalidity of lien for money borrowed to pay duties on goods.

Constructive trusts in funds.

Cited in footnote to Anglo-American Sav. & Loan Asso. v. Campbell, 43 L. R. A. 622, which sustains constructive trust in favor of persons contributing labor or materials for building, in full amount agreed to be advanced by third person.

Title of goods obtained by false pretenses.

Cited in W. H. Sawyer Lumber Co. v. Boston & A. R. Co. 173 Mass. 506, 53 N. E. 912, holding that, apparently, under New York law, obtaining of goods under false pretenses does not prevent passing of title.

27 L. R. A. 762, KANSAS CITY, M. & B. R. CO. v. SMITH, 72 Miss. 677, 48 Am. St. Rep. 579, 17 So. 78.

Interference with surface waters.

Cited in Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Davis, 73 Miss. 689, 32 L. R. A. 263, 55 Am. St. Rep. 562, 19 So. 487, denying liability of railroad company for obstruction of flow of water by properly constructed embankment; Jordan v. Benwood, 42 W. Va. 317, 36 L. R. A. 521, 57 Am. St. Rep. 859, 26 S. E. 266, denying liability of city for injury to land by surface water by reason of change of grade of street; Frisbie v. Cowen, 18 App. D. C. 391, denying right of railroad company to accumulate surface water and cast it upon adjacent lands.

27 L. R. A. 766, PENNSYLVANIA R. CO. v. MONTGOMERY COUNTY PASS. R. CO. 167 Pa. 62, 46 Am. St. Rep. 659, 31 Atl. 468.

Railways on country roads.

Cited in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Greensburg & H. Electric Street R. Co. 176 Pa. 576, 36 L. R. A. 846, 35 Atl. 122, holding right of street car companies to build tracks along "streets or highways" not limited strictly to those called streets; Willis v. Erie City Pass. R. Co. 188 Pa. 66, 41 Atl. 307, denying right to construct practically double track railway on road, under guise of building switches.

Cited in footnote to Baltimore v. Baltimore, C. & E. M. Pass. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 503, which holds local passenger railway on turnpike road not "street railway."

Construction and operation of street railway; consents.

Cited in Thompson v. Citizens Traction Co. 181 Pa. 137, 40 W. N. C. 249, 37 Atl. 205, holding action maintainable by abutting owners for damages for construction, without consent, of street railway on public road; Osborne v. Delaware County & P. Electric R. Co. 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 636, 44 W. N. C. 200, Reversing 7 Del. Co. Rep. 376, holding trolley road having been laid, abutting owner's remedy is action for damages; Collins v. Carbondale Traction Co. 5 Pa. Dist. R. 19, holding operation of street railway on side of highway, without consent of municipal authorities, a nuisance; Trenton Cut-Off R. Co. v. Newton Electric Street R. Co. 8 Pa. Dist. R. 552, denying right of street railway without consent, to cross tracks of steam railway at point other than highway; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Turtle Creek Valley Electric R. Co. 179 Pa. 590, 36 Atl. 348; Rahn Twp. v. Tamaqua & L. Street R. Co. 167 Pa. 89, 31 Atl. 472; Reading Co. v. Schuylkill Valley Traction Co. 14 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 12; Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. v. Inter-County Street R. Co. 167 Pa. 84, 31 Atl. 471,—holding, under charter authorizing construction of street railway through several townships, consent of all is necessary before beginning work of building; Tamaqua & L. Street R. Co. v. Inter-County Street R. Co. 167 Pa. 100, 31 Atl. 473, holding consent of supervisor to use of roads for street railway, obtained by threats and bribery, invalid; Scranton & P. Traction Co. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 1 Pa. Super. Ct. 412, holding that none but abutting owners can question right of street railway to lay tracks in township road, with consent of municipal authorities; Pennsylvania Canal Co. v. Lewisburg, M. & W. Pass. R. Co. 203 Pa. 287, 52 Atl. 1135, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 421, Which Reversed 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 551, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 245, denying right of street railway, authorized to occupy highway, to cross, without consent, canal highway bridge owned by canal company; Middletown, H. & S. Street R. Co. v. Middletown Electric R. Co. 2 Dauphin Co. Rep. 324, holding consent of local authorities and abutting property owners indispensable to right to build street railroad in highway; Upper Providence Twp. v. Trappe & L. Electric Street R. Co. 17 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 171, and Upper Providence Twp. v. Trappe & L. Electric Street R. Co. 8 Northampton Co. Rep. 97, holding stipulation as to limit of beginning of construction complied with where work was begun in any of townships of route; Philadelphia & T. R. Co. v. Philadelphia & B. Pass. R. Co. 6 Pa. Dist. R. 491, holding failure to obtain continuous route would authorize abutting owner to withdraw consent; Van Voorhis v. Pittsburg & C. Street R. Co. 34 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 153, holding franchise granted by municipal authorities to street railway company to construct feed line on street not named in charter, void; North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Inland Traction Co. 205 Pa. 582, 55 Atl. 774, Affirming 18 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 135, upholding right of railroad company to lay tracks on side of township road for which it has consent of abutting owners; Dempster v. United Traction Co. 205 Pa. 76, 54 Atl. 501, holding that street railways cannot be constructed in townships of first class without consent of abutting property owners; Perkiomen R. Co. v. Collegeville Electric Street R. Co. 14 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 19, holding that construction of street railways in cities and boroughs should meet with more favor than in country districts.

— Right to injunctive relief.

Cited in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Glenwood & D. Electric Street R. Co. 184 Pa. 234, 41 W. N. C. 445, 39 Atl. 80, denying injunction to restrain building of overhead crossing, after street railway had adopted complainant's suggestion at large cost; Bradford City v. Pennsylvania & N. Y. Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 26 Pa. Co. Ct. 345, refusing injunction on ground that abutting owner was estopped from objecting by acquiescence; Loyalsock Twp. v. Montoursville Pass. R. Co. 7 Pa. Dist. R. 292, denying temporary injunction to prevent railway company from running cars in highway, pending hearing on merits; Minnich v. Lancaster, M. & N. H. R. Co. 6 Lack. Legal News, 278, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 315, 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 308, 17 Lanc. L. Rev. 386, upholding right of abutting owner to restrain construction of street railway on his half of turnpike; Canastota Knife Co. v. Newington Tramway Co. 69 Conn. 161, 36 Atl. 1107, holding railway company may be enjoined from building road not substantially following chartered route; Shimer v. Easton & N. Street Co. 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 250, holding abutting owner's right to injunctive relief waived by verbal consent and knowledge of progress of building of road; Meixell v. Northampton Central Street R. Co. 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 276, denying injunction at suit of abutting owner to restrain operation of street railway in highway, where complainant claimed he had not given valid consent; Canton Twp. v. Washington & C. R. Co. 24 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 145, holding right to injunctive relief against construction of railway lost by acquiescence therein until expenditure of large sums by company.

Distinguished in Heilman v. Lebanon & A. Street R. Co. 175 Pa. 191, 34 Atl. 647, and Becker v. Lebanon & M. Street R. Co. 188 Pa. 495, 43 W. N. C. 231, 41 Atl. 612, refusing to enjoin operation of railway on tardy application of abutting owner, where injury to complainant was slight and readily compensable; Messner v. Lykens & W. Valley Street R. Co. 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 435, refusing injunction to restrain completion of railway where complainant was actuated by improper motives.

— Street railways as additional servitude.

Cited in Jaynes v. Omaha Street R. Co. 53 Neb. 649, 39 L. R. A. 757, footnote p. 751, 74 N. W. 67, and Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Philadelphia & B. Pass. R. Co. 6 Pa. Dist. R. 738, holding trolley railway additional burden on street; Ehret v. Camden & T. R. Co. 60 N. J. Eq. 248, 46 Atl. 578, holding question whether construction of "trolley" upon country highway imposes additional servitude, unsettled; Ehret v. Camden & T. R. Co. 61 N. J. Eq. 174, 47 Atl. 562, holding construction of "trolley" railway on country highway does not impose additional servitude; Merrick v. Intramontaine R. Co. 118 N. C. 1083, 24 S. E. 667, holding additional servitude not imposed by construction of street passenger railway on street; Zehren v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. 99 Wis. 97, 41 L. R. A. 580, footnote p. 575, 67 Am. St. Rep. 844, 74 N. W. 538, holding electric passenger railroad on country highway, additional burden; Valley Forge Park Commission v. Phoenixville & B. Electric R. Co. 27 Pa. Co. Ct. 111, 18 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 144, holding additional servitude imposed by occupancy of country road by railway.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Roebing v. Trenton Pass. R. Co. 33 L. R. A.

129, which holds substitution of trolley system for horses does not create additional burden; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, E. & K. Electric R. Co. 37 L. R. A. 856, which holds electric railway in village street, additional servitude.

Poles for electric wires in highway.

Cited in Zanziger v. Wayne Electric Light Co. 6 Pa. Dist. R. 578, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 11, holding action to enjoin erection of electric wire poles until payment of damages maintainable by abutting owner; Bucks County Light, H. & P. Co. v. Philadelphia & T. R. Co. 27 Pa. Co. Ct. 2, restraining railway company, as abutting owner, from tearing down electric company's poles in highway; Bradford v. New York & P. Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 206 Pa. 586, 56 Atl. 41, holding that city cannot compel removal of telegraph poles and wires from streets after delaying action for more than twenty-one years.

Distinguished in Brown v. Radnor Twp. Electric Light Co. 208 Pa. 457, 57 Atl. 904, holding that abutting owner cannot enjoin erection of poles for electric wires on turnpike, where power to erect them given by legislature.

Action of public bodies in official character.

Cited in Mitchell v. Kearns, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 360, continuing temporary injunction to restrain school board from carrying out contract for purchase of books, made without consulting all members of board; American Road Mach. Co. v. Washington Twp. 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 108, 43 W. N. C. 280, holding township not bound by individual signatures of its supervisors to contract; Climax Road Mach. Co. v. Allegheny Twp. 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 441, holding lack of minutes not fatal to contract authorized at meeting of road commissioners; Logan v. Rochester Twp. 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 117, holding one of two supervisors not authorized to bind town for reconstruction of road, where the other merely told him to go ahead and put it in good repair.

27 L. R. A. 769, SALENO v. NEOSHO, 127 Mo. 627, 48 Am. St. Rep. 653, 30 S. W. 190.

Municipal contracts.

Cited in Neosho City Water Co. v. Neosho, 136 Mo. 507, 38 S. W. 80, reaffirming validity of ordinances relating to water supply of city of Neosho; Webb City & C. Waterworks Co. v. Webb City, 78 Mo. App. 430, holding city of fourth class liable on contract for fire hydrant rents.

Cited in footnotes to Westminster Water Co. v. Westminster, 64 L. R. A. 630, which denies city's power to contract to pay water company specified percentage of assessed valuation in perpetuity for water supply; Indianapolis v. Wann, 31 L. R. A. 743, which holds contract for street lights for five years, payable monthly, void.

Formalities in execution of contracts.

Cited in McShane v. School Dist. No. 5, 70 Mo. App. 628, holding execution in duplicate not essential to validity of teacher's contract with district board; Aurora Water Co. v. Aurora, 129 Mo. 578, 31 S. W. 946, holding acceptance of ordinance legally passed, relating to construction of water works by contractors, valid contract; Verdin v. St. Louis, 131 Mo. 135, 33 S. W. 480 (dissenting opinion by Sherwood, J.), who holds failure to indorse estimate of maintenance on ordinance not fatal omission; Perkins v. Independent School Dist. 99 Mo. App. 486, 74 S. W. 122, holding written offer of services at stated compensation, and resolution of board accepting at different figure, not written contract signed by parties.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 64) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply, as to form of contract.

Formalities in passage of ordinances.

Cited in Moore v. Perry, 119 Iowa, 429, 93 N. W. 510, holding ordinance signed by officers of council in absence of mayor, invalid.

Municipal indebtedness within meaning of Constitution.

Cited in Lamar Water & Electric Light Co. v. Lamar, 128 Mo. 223, 32 L. R. A. 166, footnote p. 157, 31 S. W. 756, and Denver v. Hubbard, 17 Colo. App. 352, 68 Pac. 993, holding contract for term of years, with annual payments, creates indebtedness for only amount falling due yearly; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 20, 43 L. ed. 349, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77, upholding right of city to stipulate for supply of water for twenty-five years at yearly rental, notwithstanding aggregate rentals may exceed debt limit; Cain v. Wyoming, 104 Ill. App. 543, and Herman v. Oconto, 110 Wis. 673, 86 N. W. 681, holding contracts for services, payable annually, not to be computed for entire period in estimating municipal indebtedness; Swanson v. Ottumwa, 118 Iowa, 172, 59 L. R. A. 625, 91 N. W. 1048, holding water supply bonds, payable out of sinking fund raised by special tax, not municipal indebtedness within meaning of Constitution.

Cited in footnotes to Kelly v. Minneapolis, 30 L. R. A. 281, which requires deduction of amount of sinking fund from total apparent debt to ascertain actual debt; McBean v. Fresno, 31 L. R. A. 794, which holds limitation of city indebtedness not violated by contract to pay annual sum for term of years, if such annual sum within limit; Brashear v. Madison, 33 L. R. A. 474, which holds constitutional limit of indebtedness not violated by appropriation to buy fire alarm apparatus, when sufficient on hand appropriated for fire purposes; La Porte v. Gamewell Fire Alarm Teleg. Co. 35 L. R. A. 686, which holds city contract for water or light does not create indebtedness for aggregate sum of all instalments; South Bend v. Reynolds, 49 L. R. A. 795, which holds limitation of city debt not exceeded by contract for erection of city hall for which yearly rent to be paid, with option to purchase; State ex rel. Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena, 55 L. R. A. 336, which holds contract for water supply for term of years within provision as to limitation of city indebtedness.

27 L. R. A. 773, VAN OSDELL v. CHAMPION, 89 Wis. 661, 46 Am. St. Rep. 864, 62 N. W. 539.

Conditions annexed to devises and conveyances.

Cited in Zillmer v. Landguth, 94 Wis. 609, 69 N. W. 563, holding condition annexed to devise in fee, restraining power of alienation for certain period, void; Danforth v. Oshkosh, 119 Wis. 279, 97 N. W. 258, holding that conveyance of land to city, to be used perpetually for library, subject to revert to heirs in case not so used, passes title in fee.

Spendthrift trusts.

Cited in footnotes to Murphy v. Delano, 55 L. R. A. 727, which holds income of spendthrift trust not within reach of creditors by void agreement of trustee to pay certain portion of income absolutely to beneficiary; Re Qua v. Graham, 52 L. R. A. 641, which holds annuity in wife's will in lieu of other interests, accepted by husband, not trust beyond reach of creditors; Hutchinson v. Maxwell, 57 L. R. A. 384, which denies power to create equitable life estate, free from debts of beneficiary.

27 L. R. A. 776, STATE ex rel. DUNN v. NOYES, 87 Wis. 340, 41 Am. St. Rep. 45, 58 N. W. 386.

Grand juries; validity of indictment.

Cited in People v. Thompson, 122 Mich. 415, 81 N. W. 344, holding indictment found by grand jury of twenty-one jurors valid; State v. Brewster, 70 Vt. 350, 42 L. R. A. 448, 40 Atl. 1037, holding indictment not invalidated because of presence of state attorney's stenographer in room for purpose of taking testimony of witnesses; People v. Reigel, 120 Mich. 86, 78 N. W. 1017, refusing to quash indictment for irregularity in drawing grand jury.

Cited in footnote to Zanone v. State, 35 L. R. A. 556, which holds illegal, jury summoned from country districts to exclusion of city residents.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 852) on number of grand jurors necessary or proper to act; (28 L. R. A. 205) on qualification of grand jurors.

Habeas corpus.

Cited in Re Roszcynialla, 90 Wis. 536, 75 N. W. 167, holding that writ of habeas corpus only raises question of jurisdiction of court or officer to issue process upon which prisoner is held; State ex rel. Isenring v. Polacheck, 101 Wis. 433, 77 N. W. 708, holding habeas corpus not proper way to procure discharge of legislator arrested during recess of legislature; State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 222, 62 L. R. A. 730, 85 N. W. 1046, upholding right of public attorney to employ assistant counsel in habeas corpus proceeding; State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 240, 62 L. R. A. 737, 85 N. W. 1046, holding court on habeas corpus may examine proceedings before magistrate committing defendant for trial.

27 L. R. A. 791, LONG v. HESS, 154 Ill. 482, 40 N. E. 335.

Release of inheritance.

Distinguished in Stolenburg v. Diercks, 117 Iowa, 31, 90 N. W. 525, holding release of inheritance not limited to estate of the ancestors in their own country, where release was made.

27 L. R. A. 797, HOLLAND v. SILVER BOW COUNTY, 15 Mont. 460, 39 Pac. 575.

Taxation of property of nonresident.

Cited in Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 431, 42 L. ed. 806, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, upholding constitutionality of state act taxing mortgages of land held by nonresident mortgagees.

Cited in footnotes to Re Whiting, 34 L. R. A. 232, which holds bonds of foreign corporation within state, though owned by nonresident, subject to transfer tax; Buck v. Miller, 37 L. R. A. 384, which holds money and securities retained in state in business of buying and selling property, taxable there though owner domiciled elsewhere; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 45 L. R. A. 524, which holds situs of debt due nonresident to be at creditor's domicile for purpose of taxation; Allen v. National State Bank, 52 L. R. A.

sustains right of sta.

apply municipality.

ances require.

v. Diehl, 21

to be recd

Co. v. Tacoma, 47 L. R. A. 214, r works after granting franchise

t, 168 Mass. 554, 47 N. E. ue of water works system, n past; Gloucester Water upholding allowance for ication; Spring Valley of franchise and businsideration, in addi-ec Water Dist. v. ual cost of plant lusive, evidence husband to

Brownell v. Briggs, 11.

husband to niece, without con

r his death, void as against his widow;

S. W. 881, holding action maintainable in eq.

husband's property conveyed before his death in .

v. Leonard, 181 Mass. 460, 92 Am. St. Rep. 426, 63

by husband reserving life interest, given for care bestow.

against his widow; Redmond v. Redmond, 112 Ky. 766, 66 widow entitled to dower in land conveyed by husband to son to de.

therein; Cook v. Lee, 72 N. H. 571, 58 Atl. 511, holding action main.

widow to set aside conveyance by husband in fraud of her rights.

Cited in footnotes to Small v. Small, 30 L. R. A. 243, which upholds children of bulk of estate consisting of personalty, as against widow; Smith

Smith, 34 L. R. A. 49, which holds delivery by husband just before death, of deed of all realty, made years before, fraudulent as to wife.

530, 22 C.

of extendefense

Co. v.

ater

ary

What constitutes sufficient delivery to complete gift.

Cited in footnote to King v. Smith, 54 L. R. A. 708, which sustains delivery of gift to donee by third person after donor's final loss of consciousness.

27 L. R. A. 802, FRAME v. FELIX, 167 Pa. 47, 31 Atl. 375.

Public contracts.

Cited in Deysher v. Reading, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 611, holding that board of health may bind municipality by contract; Moran v. Thompson, 20 Wash. 537, 56 Pac.
29, denying validity of contract where no opportunity was afforded for competitive bidding.

Cited in footnotes to Mulnix v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 33 L. R. A. 827, which denies legislative right to authorize secretary of state to purchase in open market, instead of from lowest bidder; Colorado Paving Co. v. Murphy, 37 L.
R. A. 630, which denies absolute right of lowest responsible bidder to city contract.

Actions by taxpayers.

Cited in Graeff v. Felix, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 659, upholding right of taxpayer to injunction to restrain city water department from acquiring land for park purposes.

27 L. R. A. 808, PUGET SOUND DRESSED BEEF & PACKING CO. v. JEFFS, 11 Wash. 466, 48 Am. St. Rep. 885, 39 Pac. 962.

Property exempt from levy.

Cited in Winsor v. McLachlan, 12 Wash. 156, 40 Pac. 727, denying exemption of proceeds of insurance policy from garnishment, record not showing insured property was exempt; Traders' Nat. Bank v. Schorr, 20 Wash. 8, 72 Am. St. Rep. 17, 54 Pac. 543, holding proceeds of exempt property also exempt from execution; Wabash R. Co. v. Bowring, 103 Mo. App. 163, 77 S. W. 106, holding hog of abnormal size, used for exhibition purposes, not within statute exempting ten head of hogs for use of family for food.

27 L. R. A. 811, VANBEBBER v. PLUNKETT, 26 Or. 562, 38 Pac. 707.

Account stated.

Cited in Voight v. Brooks, 19 Mont. 375, 48 Pac. 549, holding action maintainable on account stated on implied promise to pay balance.

Proper questions for jury.

Approved in Barr v. Rader, 33 Or. 376, 54 Pac. 210, and Perkins v. McCullough, 36 Or. 148, 59 Pac. 182, holding refusal of nonsuit proper where there is any evidence tending to prove issues; Rose v. Wollenberg, 31 Or. 285, 39 L. R. A. 384, 65 Am. St. Rep. 826 44 Pac. 382, holding relative liability of sureties between themselves under parol agreement question for jury; Serles v. Serles, 35 Or. 293, 57 Pac. 634, holding that if there is any evidence tending to prove a given fact, it should go to jury; Haines v. McKinnon, 35 Or. 582, 57 Pac. 903 (dissenting opinion), majority holding good faith of purported sale of unmatured crop under ambiguous bill of sale, question for jury; First Nat. Bank v. Fire Asso. 33 Or. 188, 53 Pac. 8, holding circumstantial evidence tending to connect owners of burned stock with incendiary fire sufficient to take case to jury.

Cited in footnote to Miller v. Freeman, 51 L. R. A. 504, which denies right of one partner to sue another at law, for damages for breach of contract, without dissolution of firm.

27 L. R. A. 827, NATIONAL WATERWORKS CO. v. KANSAS CITY, 10 C. A. 653, 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 853.

Exceptions to sufficiency of conveyances of waterworks system in 65 Fed. 692.

Application of interveners for portion of money paid for waterworks system by city in 78 Fed. 429.

Rights arising at termination of franchise or lease.

Cited in Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 124 Cal. 382, 57 Pac. 210, and Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 734, denying right of city to reduce water rates after contract term with water company, until city had tendered payment for improvements as required by contract; Stein v. McGrath, 128 Ala. 180, 30 So. 792, holding water works franchise remains in grantee until right of repurchase under contract is exercised by grantor; Swift v. Sheehy, 88 Fed. 926, holding implied lien upon premises for value of improvements by lessee, under lease providing for payment for same by lessor, enforceable in equity.

Purchase of water works by municipality.

Cited in footnotes to Citizens' Gaslight Co. v. Wakefield, 31 L. R. A. 457, which requires town electing to establish electric light plant to purchase one already established; Bristol v. Bristol & W. Waterworks, 32 L. R. A. 740, which holds enforceable, contract by town to purchase water works.

Right of existing water company to supply municipality.

Cited in footnote to North Springs Water Co. v. Tacoma, 47 L. R. A. 214, which sustains city's right to build own water works after granting franchise to water company.

Value of water works system.

Cited in Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 168 Mass. 554, 47 N. E. 533, refusing to recommit to commission to find value of water works system, because of exclusion of testimony as to net earnings in past; Gloucester Water Supply Co. v. Gloucester, 179 Mass. 382, 60 N. E. 977, upholding allowance for "fair value" of water plant in addition to cost of duplication; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 595 holding value of franchise and business of going water works company is to be taken into consideration, in addition to cost of duplication, in fixing compensation; Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 97 Me. 207, 60 L. R. A. 864, 54 Atl. 6, holding actual cost of plant with proper allowances for depreciation competent, but not conclusive, evidence of value.

Estoppel by acceptance.

Cited in Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 530, 22 C. C. A. 192, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 292, holding acceptance by city of extensions and additions to water works system and use of hydrants, fatal to defense in action for rentals that pipe laid was too small; Cherryvale Water Co. v. Cherryvale, 65 Kan. 229, 69 Pac. 176, holding city acquiescing in source of water supply for many years estopped from ousting company on ground of unsanitary condition of water.

Establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 46, 48, 49, 71, 107) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

27 L. R. A. 840, PITTSBURGH, C. C. & ST. L. R. CO. v. SULLIVAN, 141 Ind. 83, 50 Am. St. Rep. 313, 40 N. E. 138.

Pleading.

Cited in Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Stewart, 24 Ind. App. 378, 56 N. E. 917; Tibbet v. Zurbuch, 22 Ind. App. 361, 52 N. E. 815; Moon v. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. 24 Ind. App. 41, 56 N. E. 108 (dissenting opinion by Henley, J.); Dull v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 21 Ind. App. 575, 52 N. E. 1013, — holding that complaint must be construed upon theory most apparent and clearly outlined by facts alleged; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dugan, 18 Ind. App. 438, 48 N. E. 238, holding complaint must be maintained, if at all, upon definite theory.

Liability of master for acts of servant or agent.

Cited in footnotes to Nelson Business College Co. v. Lloyd, 46 L. R. A. 314, which holds employer liable for servant's wilful or malicious acts in course of employment; Lamb v. Littman, 53 L. R. A. 852, which holds employer liable for assault by cruel overseer on minor employee; Lynch v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 54 L. R. A. 810, which denies company's liability for assault by station agent as result of personal quarrel; Guille v. Campbell, 55 L. R. A. 111, which denies master's liability for injury to bystander by slipping of hook from servant's hand, while pretending to throw at boys playing on cotton bales.

Voluntary medical and surgical attendance.

Cited in Wabash R. Co. v. Kelley, 153 Ind. 131, 52 N. E. 152 holding railroad company deducting portion of employee's wages for maintenance of hospital liable for malpractice of its surgeon; American Tin-Plate Co. v. Guy, 25 Ind. App. 591, 58 N. E. 738, holding corporation deducting portion of employee's wages for medical services liable for negligence in furnishing same; Texas & P. Coal Co. v. Connaughten, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 645, 50 S. W. 173, holding railway company making compulsory reduction in employee's wages for medical and surgical attendance liable for negligence of physician employed; Haggerty v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 100 Mo. App. 450, 74 S. W. 456, holding master not liable for malpractice of its relief department surgeon, selected with due care.

Cited in footnote to Hearns v. Waterbury Hospital, 31 L. R. A. 224, which denies liability of charitable hospital for wrongful neglect of its servants.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 549) on duty of master to furnish medical aid to servant.

27 L. R. A. 843, LEAVELL v. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. 116 N. C. 211, 47 Am. St. Rep. 798, 21 S. E. 391.

Power of legislature to regulate freight and tolls.

Cited in Corporation Commission v. Seaboard Air Line System, 127 N. C. 288, 37 S. E. 266, upholding power of corporation commission to fix reasonable freight rate.

Cited in note (33 L. R. A. 181) on legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices.

Railroad commission, an administrative court.

Cited in State ex rel. Pate v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 122 N. C. 881, 29 S. E. 334, and State ex rel. Caldwell v. Wilson, 121 N. C. 474, 28 S. E. 554 (dissenting opinion), majority holding railroad commission created by statute, an administrative court.

27 L. R. A. 844, SOUTHERN HOME BLDG. & LOAN ASSO. v. HOME INS. CO. 94 Ga. 167, 47 Am. St. Rep. 147, 21 S. E. 375.

Insurance contracts.

Cited in Graham v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 106 Ga. 842, 32 S. E. 579, holding stipulations in policy as to statement of loss and time for suit, conditions precedent to recovery; Graham v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 106 Ga. 844, 32 S. E. 579, holding local agent without authority to restore insured's forfeited right of action, by waiver of conditions; Cannon v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 110 Ga. 566, 78 Am. St. Rep. 124, 35 S. E. 775, holding stipulation in policy as to time and manner of making proofs of loss, condition precedent to recovery; Southern F. Ins. Co. v. Knight, 111 Ga. 627, 52 L. R. A. 72, footnote p. 70, 78 Am. St. Rep. 216, 36 S. E. 821, holding policy not avoided by failure to furnish proofs of loss within time specified.

Cited in footnotes to Oakland Home Ins. Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 36 L. R. A. 673, which holds policy not avoided as to mortgagee's interest by insured's violation of provision against transfer of property without consent; Peabody v. Satterlee, 52 L. R. A. 956, which requires reception, not mere mailing, of statement as to time and origin of fire within time specified; Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Byers, 55 L. R. A. 291, which holds failure to give notice of injury excused by derangement of insured; Delaware Ins. Co. v. Greer, 61 L. R. A. 137, which holds mortgagee's indemnity placed at risk of every act and omission of mortgagor which would avoid latter's interest.

Distinguished in Queen Ins. Co. v. Dearborn Sav. L. & Bldg. Asso. 175 Ill. 118, 51 N. E. 717, holding mortgagee, under terms of policy, not bound to make proof of loss.

27 L. R. A. 846, STATE v. BELVEL, 89 Iowa, 405, 56 N. W. 545.

Objections to juries, jurors, and irregular indictments.

Cited in State v. Kouhns, 103 Iowa, 726, 73 N. W. 353, holding irregularity in drawing of grand jury waived by plea of not guilty; State v. Pickett, 103 Iowa, 720, 39 L. R. A. 304, 73 N. W. 246, holding objection that juror in criminal case is unable to read or write English language waived by failure to examine him; People v. Reigel, 120 Mich. 87, 78 N. W. 1017, holding statutory objections to grand jury only, available on motion to quash indictment; State ex rel. Dunn v. Noyes, 87 Wis. 347, 27 L. R. A. 791, 41 Am. St. Rep. 45, 58 N. W. 386, holding indictments by grand jury holding over beyond term for which summoned not subject to collateral attack.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Caldwell, 41 L. R. A. 718, which holds changes in number of grand jurors, and in number necessary to agree on verdict by petit jury, not ex post facto law; State v. Vincent, 52 L. R. A. 83, which holds indictment found by less than twenty-three grand jurors demurrable.

Cited in notes (27 L. R. A. 783, 790) on organization of grand jury; (23 L. R. A. 33, 38) on number of grand jurors necessary to concur in finding indictment; (43 L. R. A. 33) on number and agreement of jurors necessary to constitute valid verdict.

Application for continuance.

Cited in Lane v. State, 67 Ark. 293, 54 S. W. 870, holding affidavits as to diligence and good faith in efforts to secure testimony of absent witness admissible, on application for continuance.

Change of venue.

Cited in State v. Helm, 92 Iowa, 543, 61 N. W. 246, refusing to interfere with court's discretion in refusing change of venue on conflicting affidavits.

Cruel and unusual punishments.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 573) on cruel and unusual punishments.

27 L. R. A. 854, GLOBE PUB. CO. v. STATE BANK, 41 Neb. 175, 59 N. W. 683.

Action to set aside judgment as to certain defendants in Perry v. Johnston, 95 Fed. 323.

Effect of repeal of statute on suit pending thereunder.

Distinguished in Omaha Coal, Coke & Lime Co. v. Suess, 54 Neb. 382, 74 N. W. 620, holding repeal of statute before judgment rendered thereunder, no defense to creditor's bill to enforce such judgment.

Penal statutes.

Cited in Ashley v. Frame, 4 Kan. App. 272, 45 Pac. 927, holding action to enforce statutory liability of bank officers, penal; Seaton v. Grimm, 110 Iowa, 151, 81 N. W. 225, holding statutes relating to individual liability of stockholders for failure to comply with statutory requirements, penal; Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 450, 80 Am. St. Rep. 153, 64 Pac. 692 (dissenting opinion by McFarland, J.), who holds statute imposing liability on corporate officials for amounts embezzled by officers of corporation, penal.

De facto corporations.

Cited in Hogue v. Capital Nat. Bank, 47 Neb. 933, 66 N. W. 1036, denying individual liability of stockholders of de facto corporation for technical defects in organization; Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 189, 63 N. W. 469, holding persons contracting with de facto corporation estopped from denying its corporate existence.

Judicial ascertainment of indebtedness.

Followed in Ball v. Wicks, 45 Neb. 368, 63 N. W. 806, holding action to enforce statutory liability against stockholders not maintainable until after judgment against corporation.

Cited in German Nat. Bank v. Farmers & M. Bank, 54 Neb. 595, 74 N. W. 1086; Hastings v. Barnd, 55 Neb. 97, 75 N. W. 49; State v. German Sav. Bank, 50 Neb. 742, 70 N. W. 221; Farmers Loan & T. Co. v. Funk, 49 Neb. 357, 68 N. W. 520,—holding indebtedness of banking corporation must be judicially ascertained before enforcement of individual liability of stockholders; Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 706, 74 N. W. 1083, holding individual liability of stockholders accrues on return unsatisfied of execution against corporation; Wehn v. Fall, 55 Neb. 552, 70 Am. St. Rep. 397, 76 N. W. 13, holding remedy against dissolved corporation must be exhausted before proceeding against stockholder.

Distinguished in Wyman v. Williams, 53 Neb. 673, 74 N. W. 48, upholding right of receiver to maintain action for unpaid assessment on stock as asset of corporation; New Hampshire Sav. Bank v. Richey, 58 C. C. A. 300, 121 Fed. 962, holding that creditor of corporation can only maintain suit against stockholders, under Nebraska statute, after he has reduced claim to judgment.

27 L. R. A. 862, MORGAN v. HUDNELL, 52 Ohio St. 552, 49 Am. St. Rep. 741, 40 N. E. 716.

Damages by domestic animals.

Cited in footnotes to Briscoe v. Alfrey, 30 L. R. A. 607, which denies liability of owner of jack which escaped without his negligence, for filly killed by it; May v. Poindexter, 47 L. R. A. 588, which holds owner liable for trespass of animals turned loose by him on unfenced lands.

Animals straying upon uninclosed land.

Cited in Ferguson v. Miami Powder Co. 9 Ohio C. C. 448, denying liability of owner of uninclosed land for death of cattle straying thereon and eating poison lawfully used in his business.

Grant of right of pasturage.

Cited in Gilland v. Union P. R. Co. 6 Wyo. 198, 43 Pac. 508, holding no interest in land conveyed by mere granting by lessee to another, right of joint pasturage.

J

3 6105 063 243 989

